Two Students Give Recital

Smith, Aughenbaugh Plan Program Thursday

Margaret Smith, organist, and Betty Ruth Aughenbaugh, mezzo-soprano, will present the first certificate recital of the year Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the Woman's auditorium.

In this performance, which is open to the public Margaret and Betty will alternate as the different parts of the program are presented.

At the opening of the recital, Margaret will play "Toccata and Fugue in D Minor" by Bach. Following this Betty will sing "Aria di Pollissena" "Radamisto" by Handel, "Le Portune," by Scarlatti, "Rist du bei mir" by Bach, and "Aria—Prepare thyself, Zion" (Christmas Oratorio) by Bach, as the second part of the program.

Of the five parts of the program Betty will give the fourth slot which will include "Tr' vader l'amata Stanza" "Gavotte" from Mignon" by Thomas, "Ah! Lotus Flower" by Bowers, "Night Wish" by Nash, "Life's Paradise" by Brown.

Margaret will play "Noel" by D'aquin-Watters and "The Bells of St' Anne de Beaupre" by Russell. In the third part.

"Second Symphony" "Allegro Vivace) by Widor will be played by Margaret as the final part of the program.

Betty is a pupil of Mrs Mary M Meginniss, instructor in voice, and margaret studied under Mrs Ramona Board, associate professor of organ, piano, and theory.

Both girls belong to many musical and other organizations on campus. This year Margaret is the president of glee club, and Betty is business manager. In the Wesley Foundation on campus, Betty is president and Margaret is music chairman.

Both are members of the college orchestra music club, and swing band. Betty is business manager of the latter. Together with the above mentioned, Margaret is the organist at the Presbyterian Church of Tallahassee and vice regent of the Tallahassee branch of the American Guild or Organist.

Rogers Speaks To Alpha Lambda Delta

Dr W H Rogers, professor of English, was the guest speaker at the monthly program meeting of Alpha Lambda Delta which was held Thursday afternoon in the small club room of the Student Alumna building. Dr Rogers read a Christmas story "Crisp New Dollar Bills for Mr Tresip".

After the meeting was called to order and the minutes read and approved a letter from the president of the national chapter was read by Robin Hill president of the chapter on this campus. The program was then turned over to the program chairman Martha Abbott. The members sang "Silent Night" and "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear" after which Dr Rogers was introduced.

The meeting adjourned with the singing of the Alpha Lambda Delta song.

Miami High Girls Lead Official List

This years freshman class accounts for 1016 of Florida State College's record enrollment of 2266. Of this number 756 are new freshmen from Florida high schools according to Registrar's office figures.

Miami High School leads the list with a total of 49 graduates at FSC. Robert E Lee of Jacksonville is second with a total of 41. Leon High School of Tallahassee is third, accounting for 38 new freshmen. Two Tampa high schools—H B Plant with 36 and Hillsborough with 25—are the next in line. Landon High School of Jacksonville with 21 and Andrew Jackson of Jacksonville with 18 run close behind them. Ponce de Leon High School of Coral Gables is next with 17, while Orlando and Pensacola tied with 16 each.

There are 42 new freshmen from high schools in other states.

Chorus to Be Here

Following the theme this year, "The New South," the monthly meeting of the American Association of University Women, to be held Tuesday night at 8:15 in Conge Hall will consist of a musical program presented by the women's glee club of Florida A&M college. The program will be under the direction of Mr J H Tiedtke, head of the music department at that college.

Spirogira's And Esteren's Speak Well of Each Other

Flambeau reporters assigned to cover Spirogyra and Esteren activities were, for some unknown reason, it seems, confused about their assignment.

For Marjorie Philraw was asked about Esteren happenings in spite of the fact that she is president of Spirogira. And, on the other hand, Sarah Bennett, president of Esteren was asked about Spirogira's doings.

It is to the credit of both presidents that they did not give bad reports of the activities of the rival organization.

Annual Boys' Recital To Be Held Saturday

Students Are From Various Tallahassee Schools

Violin and piano solos will be played by 17 boys at the annual Boys' Recital in the recital hall of the Music Annex on Saturday evening at 8:15.

The boys are members of the various high schools in Tallahassee and are registered in the piano and violin normal departments of Florida State College.

The normal department was organized to provide majors in piano and violin with chances for observation and practice teaching with children" stated Miss Mary E Reeder, director in piano and piano methods.

For the eight successive boys' recital this year, one of the boys, Warren Dixon, who is in the fifth grade in the Florida high school, has made drawings illustrating some of different pieces on the program, which have been on exhibit in the entrance to the recital hall.

David Lee Temberton, Blair Boggs, Murray Wadsworth, and Drew Boggs, piano beginners; Byron Hoolet and Charles Mayo, violin beginners; David Pichard, Edwin Jones, Richard West, Donald Brown, Gene Sellers, Warren Dixon, Murphy Hinson, Ben Phipps, and Bobby Leslie, more advanced in piano; Donald Shangvelle, and Earnest Jones, more advanced in violin, will be the participants in the recital.

Donald Brown and Bobby Leslie will also act as accompanists.

The program will be directed by Miss Reeder, Miss Rebecca Rodenbour, instructor in piano and Miss Olga Ertner, associate professor of violin and theory.

Former Student Has Professional Lead

Cherie Stevens, who graduated from FSC last year has the lead in "Ladies in Retirement" which is being produced by a stock company in Portland, Maine, this week. This is Cherie's first professional performance.

Charie, a FSC speech major, has been in New York City only two months. Before going to Portland, she was a mannequin in a New York wholesale establishment. She modelled chinchilla furs priced at $30,000 wholesale which were purchased by the best shops.

The Portland stock company is one of Norman Bzas's a New York theatrical producer. They produce a play a week and rehearse all day for the coming week. The program is strenuous but is a way to get int Equity, the actors union as there are Equity professionals in the cast and company. Many actresses, including Betty Davis and Margaret Sullivan, got their start this same way.

The campous has asked Cherie for all the vital statistics for the program and will have a picture of her out in front. Cherie has the same role, "Ellen" in "Ladies in Retirement" when it was premiered here last year.

Distaff to Appear After Christmas

Mildred Zindler, co-editor of the Distaff, announces that the college literary magazine will make its first appearance of the year after Christmas.

The writing clinics that will be held by Winifred Meldrim, Mildred Zindler, Marianne Snyder and Peggy Lu Thompson will take place Wednesday and Saturday nights at 8 o'clock and Saturday afternoons at 2 o'clock in the Distaff office.

Other members of the staff include Elizabeth McFarland, other co-editor; Ellen Whitman and Sarah Calhoun, copy editors; Jeanne Isaacs, "People on These Pages;" Louise Simpson, humorous material; Elizabeth Hunter and Lucille Luce, exchange editors; Dorothy Lancaster, Darley Lorimer and Shirley Glover, "reviewers" of material, and Claire St John, Edith Grider and Anne Fielding.

Correspondent Warns Against Over-Optimism

J Norman Lodge Predicts Long Road Ahead In Pacific

Speaker Describes Japanese As Brutal Enemies

"The fate of the war will be settled not on the battle front," warned Norman Lodge, Associated Press War Correspondent, recently returned from the Pacific area.

"Old Sarge" gave a stinging rebuke to the American people for their over-confidence about the outcome and end of the war. He explained that arm-chair generals know nothing about the war and yet they have told the American people that the war will be over within a year.

"No one told us that at Bataan or Corregidor. Field," Mr. Lodge said. "So to neglect on the part of the administration, the people do not know the true facts and that over-optimism has been built up. The counter-offensive in Europe is helped to knock some of this over-confidence out of the people.

"The opinion here is that as soon as the war in Europe is over all the materiel and supplies will be transferred to the Pacific war." he then explained that it would be seven months after the armistice and 34 days to load the material if the ships and 640 cargo ships not now available, then trained officers and men assembled and all the fuel necessary for the voyage.

"There is no doubt about the ships in big time as believed," he explained. "Japan is one of the few campaigns like those in the last war than one in the Pacific war. The Japs are brutal enemies and will commit time suicide if necessary. The type of our fighting men has to be to kill or be killed."

Mr Lodge went on to explain the manner of the fighting men are young boys, 17 or 18 years old who have been brought up to serve in a certain standard of living. They have been thrown into a jungle against Japs who have had to forget all their ideas of conventional warfare to live and have not had the training or information for such fighting.

"We lost 22 per cent or 3777 of 16 men fighting on New Georgia, which number could be replaced. We went for 37 days without a hot meal, coffee, or change of clothes. They had to face an enemy constantly screaming and fight on the belief that they had to listen to a voice saying over and over again, 'American, you die.' This is enough to drive anyone insane" Col Knox declared.

The boys slugged it out and fought 36 or 25 yards a day and 30 people out of some front formation because they do not have enough men to attack. Mr. Lodge explained that all the time he was at the front he did not hear one complaint. Only ask is that they have enough supplies to fight the foe. Mentioning the part he played, he seldom asked about the authenticity of any statement but always quoted excerpts from the diary of a Japanese soldier to show the treatment of American prisoners. He said that these were very rare and that there

Social Standards To Hold Musicals

A musical program by students of the school of music, the first of a series of Sunday afternoon entertainments sponsored by the social standards committee, will be held at 4:30 p.m. this coming Sunday, in the Student Alumnae Building auditorium. On the program are Betsy Martin, piano, playing by Schumann and Valse Triste by Sibelius; Dorothy Smith Carmichael, voice, Ah! Lolas Have to Beware, Nevin; Ruth Ingram, flute, and Lo! a Paradise by Rowe, Rachel Crotwell, violin, Betty Brandon, harmonium, and Ann Brower, piano, Syncopation by Kruser and Nina by Pergolesi.

This series, which will continue for the rest of this year, will present a varied kind of program from week to week. Members of the social standards committee would appreciate all suggestions concerning the type of programs that would be given, and these should be given or sent to Diana Hudson, 230 Landis.

Band Participates In Inauguration

Students Shorten Vacation To Give Band Program

Sixty-four band students returned to Florida State College two days before the end of Christmas vacation to take part in the inaugural ceremony of Florida's governor, Millard F. Caldwell, on January 2.

The band, under the direction of Mr. Frank Sykora, associate professor of music, played martial music from a special platform at the capitol steps. They also accompanied the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" and "God Bless America" before the capitol.

After the inauguration ceremony, the FSC band led the Florida State Guard in their parade down Monroe street past the reviewing stand at Park street where Governor-elect Millard F. Caldwell and other inauguration executives sat.

The parade was the first time that the garrot and gold flag of Florida State College was carried.

The flag was carried by Geraldine Parnsworth. Margaret Smith carried the national flag and Lucile Mathews bore the Florida state flag. Following these were the color guard which marched as a part of the band were Betsy Bird, Dorothea Belcher, Eugenia Footit, and Aileen Boyett.

"The girls showed their loyalty to the school and to the state when 64 of the 74 band members returned early for the ceremony," Mr Sykora stated.

Ann Richardson, drum major, led the band assisted by Lois Byrd, and Lo! a Paradise by Rowe, Rachel Crotwell, violin, Betty Brandon, harmonium, and Ann Brower, piano, Syncopation by Kruser and Nina by Pergolesi.

Campbell Speaks

Dr Doak S Campbell chose "Contributions of Women to Our Present World Situation" his topic when he spoke before the Kiwanis Club at Lake Ella Saturday at noon. Dr and Mrs Campbell were the guest of the club at their annual installation of officers.

Earl Halifax

Earl Halifax To Be Guest

British Ambassador Talks In Westcott Building

Earl Halifax, British ambassador to the United States, will be the guest of the Chamber of Commerce of Florida January 24 when he will speak to members of the chamber of commerce and their wives in the Westcott building here on that date.

The earl and his wife Countess Halifax will also be entertained at an afternoon coffee as guests of President Doak S Campbell and Mrs Campbell of Florida State College. During the day the two honored guests will visit Wakulla springs, the governor and his wife, and the commanding officer, Col C C Scott and Mrs Scott, of Dale Mabry Field.

Earl Halifax, 6 feet, 5 inches tall, came to the country aboard the brand-new battleship King George V as the new British ambassador to the United States.

President Roosevelt disregarded protocol and in a speed boat motored to Annapolis, Md. to greet the British peer instead of awaiting him at the usual presentation of credentials at the White House.

Tizzy plunged into conferences at once concerning Russian affairs said to Britain. The United States was not put at war and the British ambassador had to feel his way, urging material aid to the beleaguered empire and yet avoiding pitfalls open to a foreign statesman in a nation with far less than unanimity of opinion on the war question.

Pre-Med Club Makes Plans

Sponsors Outside Speakers On Medical Subjects

Proposing to better inform its members about the field of medicine, the Pre-Med club of FSCW, an association of students on campus studying pre-medicine, nursing, dentistry, or physiotherapy courses, was approved by the council on Dec. 5 by a unanimous vote.

Plans were discussed at the regular meeting held in October with Dr Enda Devlney, head of the zoology department, as faculty advisors, the club, composed of 19 members, has adopted a constitution and by-laws to that end.

The organization intends to have local doctors and authorities in related fields speak on medical discussions at the regular meetings of the club. Plans tentatively set for the first Monday in every month, according to Marianne Bryan, club president. Other officers are: Sue Beaver, vice-president; Peggy Caldwell, on January 2.

Many balls about five of the incoming upperclassmen are transfers.

Floridian Wins Liar's Fame In World Champion Contest

Ex-Florida Staters have distinguished themselves by doing some outstanding and amazing things in this world, but Hope Harrin probably seized the most unique way to make the spotlight.

Hope, now a WAC captain serving overseas, has been crowned by the "Burlington, Wisconsin, Liars' Club" as the 1944 World Champion Liar. Her recipe for thoroughly drained dizzies and shipping them to soldiers overseas as they judged the biggest whopper of 1944 and Captain Harrin became the first female world's champion liar in the past eight years.

The joke, as well as the lie, was on the Liars' Club, though, when the members discovered that Capt Hope Harrin was a curly haired brunette WAC instead of the GI Joe whom they had described as their winner.

The biggest joke of all, according to Hope, was that her winning lie was "just an anecdote her father told me." She explained that her father, Arthur Harrin, is a teacher at Arkansas college, Batesville, Arkansas, had written the story to the Liars' Club, which "he missed his grit so much that he had to be drafted and shipped to England." Hope thought it was such a good lie that she entered it in the liars' contest in her own name.

Captain Harrin's colossal whopper was entitled "Pardon My Accent" her: "I wrote my gal, a petite blonde, in the U.S. that the food processes fresh vegetables for overseas shipment, and set herself dehydrated. She did. Immediately her mother put her in an envelope and sent her to me air mail. When the letter arrived, I took her out, poured water over her, and half an hour later she was as good as ever—and here with me."

Formerly Hope taught in the Demonstration school here in Tallahassee and also in a Conway, Arkansas, school.

Now with the quartermasters corps in Paris, Capt Harrin said that she has been overseas since April. She served in England until November, when she was transferred to the Paris office.

Although Capt Harrin, 1944 champion liar, will wear the gold-plated medal, symbolic of the world championship, she claims "I'm naturally truthful, I couldn't be more amused!!"

Ida Lee Rentz Frosh Leader

Kennedy, Rogers, Sharer, M'Carthy, Thompson Win

Ida Lee Rentz, new president of the freshman class, defeated Jo Anne Whitaker in the final elections held before the Christmas holidays, Frances Gardner in the final election were: Betty Kennedy over Winnie LaPard for vice president; Jeanette Rogers over Betty Shirley for secretary; Babs McCarthy over Jean Sharer for treasurer; Amarene Thompson over Rosa Lee Dare for athletic manager; Jean Sharer over Roberta Perkins for parliamentarian.

Those who will represent their class in Student Council are Long, Martha Peacock, Jean Ann Ramsdale, Beth Fuhrer, and Irma Lee Shepard. Alternates elected were Adrianne Blumberg, Lucy Peden LaPern Quinn, Janice Richey and Franklin Smith for Senate.

During the week of freshman campaign and election, the freshman day initiation was held on "vote for me" signs. These signs were worn around the campus. Some were even full size replicas of the candidate themselves.

Floyd Withington Applauded Friday

Program Included Passages From Shakespeare

Appearing for the second of the Artist Series of Florida State College was Floyd Worthington, American lecturer in a concert which was climaxed by an eight-encore ending, last Friday, January 5, in Westcott auditorium.

His program of selections, unlike those in many such concerts, was a combination of dramatic readings and songs, including his own experimental presentation of passages from Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, throughout which Worthington demonstrated his dramatic, as well as his singing ability. Mr Worthington's selections included the following:

"The Lord Worketh Wonders" from Judas Maccabaeus by Handel, "Tis He, Who All Alone" from God Go'th Up by Bach, Elegy by Duparc, Columbine by Poldowski, Chanson Triste by Duparc, Fleur Jete by Faure, Au Fraem Tay-Tang-Hellos by Marschner, Il Music Be the Food of Love, Play On, by Clifton, She'N'ever Told Her Love by Haydn, When That I Was a Little Tiny Boy by Hatton, readings and songs by Shakespeare. The Inn by Toye, Ain't Away to Glory, Rashi's Dream of the Road by Williams and Schadrack by MacOlmoy.

Conference Plans Made

Theme and Speakers For Youth Meeting Chosen

Classes to Begin

The training classes for prospective candidates will be held February 5-10. The officers of the various campus organizations will conduct discussion groups in which they will explain the duties of their respective offices of the information of the prospective candidates. The schedule of these classes will be posted on the College Government Association bulletin board.

The student must be a bona fide member of her class for the year in which she will hold office. The grade qualifications are found in the 1944-45 Gold Book. The petitions for candidates are due February 13-20.

The CGA elections are to be held March 6-13.

Civil War Issue of Vicksburg Daily Citizen Is on Display

By LOLA ROSE

Printed on wall paper by Union troops while they were under siege set by Confederate men, a copy of the Vicksburg Daily Citizen, The Daily Citizen, of Vicksburg, Mississippi, July 2, 1863, was on display in the journalism department at the first of the week at Florida State College and is now in the "Freedom's Ye Press" exhibit in the main lobby of the library.

The yellowed newspaper, a little less than one foot wide and about one and one-half feet long, is printed on the back of flowery wall paper which is obtained by the class of journalism from the other side.

The paper which had been set into type on July 2, 1863, two days before the siege of Vicksburg by General Grant was printed the day of the capture of the city by Union men who added in the lower right hand corner the following note describing the changes in the war status of the town and the purpose of the publication of the paper for the opposing forces.

"Two days bring about great changes. The banner of the Union floats over Vicksburg. General Grant has 'caught the rabbit;' he has dined in Vicksburg, and he did bring his dinner with him. The 'Citizen' lives to see it. For the last time it appears on Wall Paper. No more will it eulogize the luxury of mule meat and fricassed kitten—urge Southern women to adopt this diet nevermore. This is the last wall-paper edition, and is excerpted this time from the types as we found them. It will be valuable hereafter."

The one copy of the paper in response to a short section of the paper called "On Dit" which reads, "That the great Ulysses—the Yankee Generalissimo, surnamed Grant—has expressed his intention of dining in Vicksburg on Saturday next—glorious anniversary the 4th of July by a grand dinner and so forth. When asked if he would invite Gen Joe Johnston to join he said, 'No! for fear there will be a row at the table.' Ulysses must get into the city before he dines in it. The way to cook a rabbit is 'First to catch the rabbit,' etc."

With no advertisements, the paper was a source of information to the people of Vicksburg, which had been besieged by General Grant from May 18, 1863 until July 4, 1863. The one page included news of the people of the town, elaborating many deaths and telling of many who were going away their excess food. There is also a plea to the townsmen to place a social brand upon the persons who were charging absorbent prices such as the price of flour—five dollars per pound, molasses, ten dollars per gallon, and corn, ten dollars per bushel.

The proprietor of the paper, J M Swords, is the only one mentioned who might be considered the writer. The writing is such as to give a victory the Confederate men and the people of the town, although it is one of many noticeable attempts of morale building.

The language is colorful, as evidenced by a writer who speaks of "a pink nosed, snub-sided, loud eating Yankee, who is a liberal descendant of Judas Iscariot." The historical and Biblical background of the writer is evident by the many references used in describing the people and the battles. The speedy advances of General Robert E Lee are compared to the advancements made as Ab Del Kader and Scottish Chiefs. Contrary to present newspaper style the local news was written in the first person with the editorial use of we.

Even though one paper is strictly a Southern paper it has one and a half of its four columns filled with "Yankee News from all Points," which included "all the news of interest in the Washington Star of Philadelphia as of June 20th." There is also a report on the news from other points such as Washington, Harrisburg, New York, and Baltimore.

The Yankee news is a rather detailed description of the battle line ups of the latter part of June, including the advancements and retreats, accounts of capture, and in many instances the number of men involved. Much of the foreign news must have been copies from the other papers for it is less colored with opinion than the remainder of the paper.

The copy of this Civil War paper is now the property of Mr and Mrs O W Waller of Tallahassee.

Helen Traubel, American Opera Singer, to Perform At FSC on Saturday Night

Students Holding "S" Series Ticket Will Hear Metropolitan Opera Star in One First Performances of New Year

Helen Traubel, well known Metropolitan Opera soprano, will sing at Florida State College tomorrow night at 8:15 in Westcott auditorium.

Her concert here, which is the opening number of the S series season tickets, comes in the midst of a full winter of appearances in concert, opera, and radio.

After taking her first vacation in three years, she began her 1944-45 season on October 1 with a concert in Madison Square Garden, New York, at which time she speared with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra. Since then Miss Traubel has appeared with the Chicago Opera Company, the Cleveland Orchestra, and the Washington National Symphony. She rejoined the Metropolitan Opera at the end of November.

Now on her way to Havana, Cuba for a brief vacation Miss Traubel will be in Tallahassee as one of FSC from Monday afternoon until Sunday afternoon.

In her concert tomorrow night, Miss Traubel will sing a mixed program consisting of "God Is Gone" (Gluck-Mack), and "Vorsehung"), "Joy of Sorrow" (Strauss), "Morgen" (Strauss), "I Love You' (Ich liebe Dich) by Beethoven.

Next will be sung "Well You Know" (Vol lo sapete), an aria from "Cavalleria Rusticana" by Mascagni. In the third division now a Lieder group will be sung "Aufenthalt," "Cradle Song" (Wiegenlied), and "Ecstasy" (Seligkeit) by Richard Strauss. "Does My Soul" (Ruhe meine Seele) and "Lorelie" by Liszt.

During intermission Comraad V Bos, Miss Traubel's accompanist will play Rhelig's "Rachmaninoff and "Song Without Words" ('Dust In A flat) by Mendelssohn, after which Miss Traubel will return to sing another aria, "Isolde's Liebestod" (Love Song) by Wagner, followed by the Negro spirituals "Deep River" and "Swing Low Sweet Chariot."

Concluding numbers will be "Ave Shei" by Carl Hahn, "A Memory" by Blair Fairchild, and "Blow, Blow, Thou Winter Wind" by Walter Kramrisch.

Because Miss Traubel's appearance here is considered by the music department as being the most important of the Artist Series concerts, together with the blue series season tickets who did not obtain seats should may obtain these reservations by presenting their season tickets at the box office Saturday night from 7:15 until 8:15. Students holding S series tickets will be admitted through the graduate division telling of the history and its purpose. This organization is one of Garnet and Gold Radio programs begun before Christmas and featured the band of each college division.

Mr Frank Sykora, assistant professor of the music department, was the music editor. He played two choice selections, "Nocturne," by Von Mulert, who was Mr Sykora's teacher at the Imperial Conservatory at Kiev, Russia, and "Minute," composed by his brother, Rogumil Sykora. Miss Mary Winslow, assistant professor of piano, accompanied him on the piano.

Other features on the program were the weekly news announcements made by Miss Bertha H Bloodworth, publicity secretary.

Paper Backs Coeducation

Alligator Features News, Editorial Comment

"Students at the University of Florida are not merely taking a passive attitude in the coeducation question, but are showing an active interest in promoting the idea," according to the Florida Alligator, student newspaper, of December 8.

Some 600 students showed in a poll taken by the Florida Alligator in November that they favor University coeducation.

Bill Rion, president of the student body there, has suggested that the campus organizations go on record as favoring coeducation there.

"Only if the general public is aroused to action on this question and knows the stand we are taking, will the bill have any chance of success." Rion said in a statement in the Alligator.

Suggestions for arousing the public action included talking to local and getting clubs to pass resolutions favoring coeducation and to forward those resolutions to Tallahassee.

Representative Holmes Melton, now a University student, is said to be one of the sponsors of the bill making the University coeducational. He suggested that next spring when the legislature is in session, a delegation of students headed by a student body officer journey to the capital to present their case. Melton, who commented, would have a great effect

Jeanette Zetrover Wins 4-H Contest

Freshman Receives War Bond Award of Chicago Trip

Jeanette Zetrouer, a freshman at Florida State college, has been awarded first place in Florida for the National 4-H Health Record contest. The winner of this contest is usually given a trip to Chicago to the International 4-H Congress, but because of transportation difficulties a $25.00 war bond prize has been substituted.

Jeanette, who is from Shiloh, has been 4-H club work since 1938. Since that time she has completed 12 projects, with a grand value of $2,172.49. She has been given $332.25 in prize money. The monetary value of her work adds up to almost $2,500.

Her projects have varied from canning, sanitation, clothing and food preparation to cattle raising. Jeanette has a small herd of cattle. Her grandfather gave her one of his steers to fatten. She made a profit on the sale of the steer with which she bought two calves. The next year she bought four calves. Several of her animals have won prizes in various fairs and shows.

Jeanette was president of her local chapter of 4-H club work for five several years she has been the oldest member of her club. She has taken part in many district and short courses held at Florida State, to Camp McQuarrie, and other 4-H activities.

Swing Band to Be Busy Next Semester

The swing band of Florida State College is going to be very busy next semester according to Mr Frank Sykora, associate professor of music. "They have already played for two weekend dances this year and are signed up for several others in the coming semesters," said Mr Sykora.

Last Sunday afternoon the band played for the soldiers in the hospital of Camp Gordon Johnston as a part of the Mortar Board projects.

Three of the dances which the swing band has been scheduled to play for are the Sophomore Hop, Jennie Murphree formal, and the Delta Delta Delta formal.

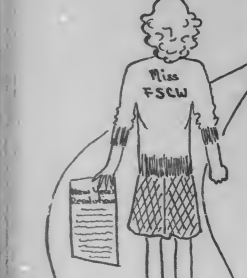
Books to Be Bought

During the week of semester examinations for students through 27, the college book store will buy all text books that will be used next semester, next semester or during this year's summer school. A price of one-half of the original cost will be paid for any book in good condition. Damaged books will be paid for according to their amounts of defacement. A second-hand book agent, who will be in the book store for the duration of this period, will buy all books that the book store will not be able to buy.

Hinson Is Speaker On Radio Program

Dr M R Hinson, director of the graduate division, was guest speaker on the Garnet and Gold program held last evening at 7:30. He gave a review relative to history of the graduate division, telling of its history and its purpose. This program, sponsored by Garnet and Gold Radio programs began before Christmas and featured the band of each college division.



Mr Frank Sykora, assistant professor of the music department, was the music editor. He played two choice selections, "Nocturne," by Von Mulert, who was Mr Sykora's teacher at the Imperial Conservatory at Kiev, Russia, and "Minute," composed by his brother, Rogumil Sykora. Miss Mary Winslow, assistant professor of piano, accompanied him on the piano.

Other features on the program were the weekly news announcements made by Miss Bertha H Bloodworth, publicity secretary.

Helen Traubel will appear on the Artist Series program Saturday night.

Spirit of the Week

● CHECKING SYSTEM

Perhaps the most widely accepted reason on this campus against a democratic student government has been based on the supposition that college students are immature and incapable of governing themselves without some form of faculty advice to aid them in their problems.

And will this factor in mind the college council has been set up in order to represent the union of both students and faculty in one governing body. As a body it has the power "to perform such legislative and executive duties as may be assigned to it." This law-making group is composed then of the faculty committee on student affairs and the student executive council.

These student representatives, however, not only function with the faculty group in the college council, but act in the student senate as well, assisting in the formulation of all policies that are later submitted to the College Government Association. Therefore, it is plain to see that these ten students, by virtue of their offices, have invested in them a great deal of power—the power to help plan and vote on all problems that may arise in student senate as well as the power to represent the entire student body in college council when voting on these same plans.

It is upon this overlapping of responsibilities of these few student officers that attention should be focused at this time. For it seems unreasonable that one group, even though it may represent the executive body of the student organization, should have the power to plan, submit, and finally to vote on student issues. Like any fool-proof legislative system this executive council of the student senate and college council needs some definite check other than its own.

It might be wise to compare this student executive council with the president and his cabinet in the United States Government. The latter acts in an advisory capacity, planning and submitting, but the right to vote is not granted it. This has been done so that the representative senate and house may always have a check on the executive body, thus carrying out the principle of the democratic check and balance system.

If the right to vote in student senate would be taken away from the ten executive student officers, this would leave place for two senators from each class and thus continue the recent trend of enlarging class representatives in the legislative body.

In conclusion on may see how this new plan would improve upon the system of government here on the campus in three ways: It would halt some of the overlapping of responsibilities, it would be a definite checking system on the student executive body of the school, and it would help to increase senate membership.

● NO LOVE AT LSU

Another Southern university is in the limelight again for a violation of educational freedom. The January 1, 1945 issue of Time gives a resume of the current problem at Louisiana State University.

"A Louisiana State University student comic miscellany (the Whangdoodle) printed a story of a fictitious visit by a Baton rouge telegrapher to a professor's wife while the professor was away. Its undergraduate author was promptly expelled. The governor asked the university's president to reinstate him. The president refused. Soon the university had a new president. Such was freedom of the college press in Louisiana under the late Huey Pierce Long. (The new president he installed, Dr James Monroe Smith, is now in the sixth year of an 8 to 24-year sentence to the state penitentiary for embezzlement.) read Time.

"Last week another LSU controversy raged over the issue of campus kissing. Tall, leonine President William Bass (William the Conqueror) Hatcher had frowned on good-night kisses. Pretty sophomore Gloria Jeanne Heller, 18, issued a rebellious manifesto. "We are meant and taught to be robots," she declared.

"She was promptly expelled. Fellow students vainly clamored protest. Remarked an alumnus, mindful also of LSU's slipping cultural standards, "It looks like the old school is headed for the cow-college status," declared Time.

Several outstanding examples of restricting the freedom of both students and faculty members have attracted nation-wide publicity to Southern colleges and universities in the past few years.

Governor Eugene Talmadge's tampering with the policies of the University of Georgia put that school in national disrepute and according to many authorities has seriously retarded the development of the university.

The University of Texas has recently lost its president, Dr Homer P Rainey, who was dismissed by the Board of Regents of the University. This action evoked storms of protest from students at Texas, as well as from educational associations throughout the country.

Now it is Louisiana State University that has violated the principles of educational freedom. It is certainly to be regretted that Southern universities have furnished these examples to the nation.

● ALLIGATOR TAKES STAND

The University of Florida students, according to the December 8 issue of the Alligator, student publication, are showing an active interest in promoting the idea of coeducation in the University.

A front page editorial declared, "If there was ever a chance for the University of Florida to become coeducational, it was this fall. Florida State College for Women was overcrowded and the University accommodated only about 20% of its normal enrollment. Many supporters of University coeducation gave up their objective when all attempts at that time failed.

"Soon this Alligator does not believe the cause is lost. Today this paper goes on record as being solidly behind a normal way of life for Florida students. The University's monastic system, paralleled by only one other state, Virginia, should be abandoned.

"Soon six hundred students showed in an Alligator poll two years ago they favor University coeducation. That means six hundred minds to think and six hundred individuals to act on a plan to bring coeds to this campus."

Columnists on the front page discussed the issue also. One stated, "While social issues are usually cited in defense of the present system, the problem is basically an economic one. The forces who oppose coeducation do not take their stand because they are afraid that you as a student will be distracted by the presence of women, but because they fear the economic and political consequences to themselves."

The progress of coeducation cannot be a question many years ago. Coeducational colleges are the rule, not the exception, in higher education today.

An editorial in the Clearwater Sun September 3, 1944, declared that it should not be assumed that the people of Florida were opposed to coeducation when the two state institutions were established 20 years ago. It also stated, "The separation of the college for women from the University was due not to opposition to co-education but to the inability of the founders to agree on a location for the proposed seat of higher learning.

"Both East Florida and West Florida wanted the co-educational university. They deadlocked and it began to look as if Florida were to have no university at all. The deadlock was broken by a compromise which split the proposed university in two—women to Tallahassee, men to Gainesville."

The deadlock was continued until today. It will be interesting to see if the students of the University can bear any weight to swing the program they plan. Of coeducation at this college, they have made no mention. It seems that if coeducation is to be had at all, the change should not be on only an emergency war-time basis, but on a long-term program planned for both state colleges.

● WOMEN'S PLACE

The president's announcement of the need of more nurses in the armed services, and his suggestion of drafting women in his radio speech this week, is just one more in the long list of reminders of the role women must and are expected to play in the world today. Obviously, all of us are not nurses nor can we serve in other war capacities such as WACs, WAVES, SPARS, or Women Marines. Neither can more than a few of us help as Red Cross workers or voluntary aids in other fields, but there is one position which every young woman in the United States can fill—and that is one of preparing for future ones.

Upon college women especially does this burden lie, for it is we who will be expected to lead in our communities when we graduate. A few years ago college men alone were the potential leaders to whom the older generation looked. But the war has of necessity modified that perspective. In the first place, there are relatively few college men of our age who have been able to complete their education before going into service. And of those who have obtained their degrees, or who will soon ,under the GI Bill of Rights, there is still the problem of how actual combat—bestiality, hate, cruelty, and passionate rage—has affected the outlook and philosophy of these men returned from battle.

Naturally, it would be foolish to assume that it will be woman's job to take over the reins from men and control business, politics, and economics. That this will happen even to a slight degree is mere speculation. But the fact remains that women certainly will have to do a great deal to assist in the readjustment of men of this country and other nations as well, and to do so properly, women must make themselves alert, vitally interested in world events, and tolerant of ideas which do not coincide with their own.

In years not too far distant, women will be called upon to do and understand things which will require previous preparation and knowledge. It is the right of those who are defending us to expect women at home to keep in touch with what is going on in places other than their own backyards; to be cognizant of the problems which will arise, and probably, to have some opinions as to possible solutions of these questions. It is the duty of girls who remain safely at home to prepare themselves for just such situations.

Political issues are, and have been rising in importance recently, and no one has the right—particularly a college student—to remain aloof from developments in this field. Florida State College students have an opportunity on this campus to practice the machinery of politics, to run for office, to vote in elections, and to campaign for reforms. Now that one semester is almost over, plans are being made for second semester elections. Each student can learn for the future as well as the present by taking advantage of this coming event. She can learn to judge candidates on the basis of merit, rather than on the basis of popularity alone: she can investigate backgrounds, and she can exercise the joint privileges of free choice and voting. To neglect such a vital action is to fail to defend our future life.

We do not have to wait for an election on campus to stir us into action. We can be as courant if we read newspapers, listen to the radio, talk with other students and professors about interesting and important topics, take courses which will give a broad perspective and which can be used as a sound basis for judgment by comparison, and, above all, keep alive and encourage a healthful questioning spirit to see good and bad and to offer reforms.

The Students Speak . . .

By MURIEL COPINUS

The New Year is with us at last—bringing with it many hopes and dreams, exams (who said that?), and the usual crop of resolutions of people all over the world and at FSC. Our students, too, have outdone themselves across with several. This week's column will be devoted to some of them.

I made my two yearly ones — to study a running event and so much and to study harder. Also, to get to bed before the wee small hours

Lois Dunham, junior.

Mine were to refrain from going to the movies as often as I have been and, to take more part in school activities.

My main resolution is to let cats be catty. I won't.

Jeanne Schaefer, senior.

I just didn't make any 'cause I always break them.

Josephine Maniscl, senior.

To go to church very Sunday

Gay Sanders, freshman.

I shall try to be on time to all classes so I won't get teased. But the most important one is to turn over a new leaf in an attempt to achieve more fully my ideals.

Margaret Owen, senior.

To write more letters home and to buy my roommate a powder-puff.

Marie Wood, sophomore.

I made lots; to keep track of my money better, to write more and longer letters, and to refrain from talking too much.

Ondino Lomsardero, sophomore

Mine—to stop all my nervous habits and to learn to be calm and steady.

Jean Wilson, senior.

I resolved to eat as much as I want to and the devil with my figure.

Lucy Felden, freshman.

College Comments

FLAMBEAU College comments is back into swing, giving you the latest dope on other universities and colleges of the United States.

Campus in the Crisis

Who said crusaders were dead and students were out of the fight? There are 5000 students at the University of Texas who are not content just to sit by and do nothing—they do something! In November these young future citizens of the nation rallied to accept the threat to their academic freedom by slamming defiance in the governments. They marched to the state capitol en masse, shouting "We're Behind Rainey" (the ousted college president). They presented a request for specific action to Governor Coke R Stevenson.

These students accused the Board of Regents of action according to Fascist principles because of their strong-arm methods in dismissing Dr Rainey, Presidents Rainey because of his defense of academic democracy.

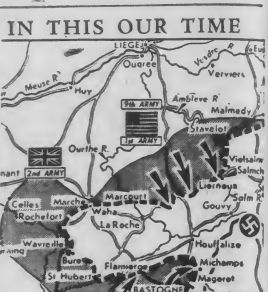
Traditions Broken



The Navy has brought some griefs as well as joys to the University of Wisconsin. The fact that the Navy Radio school graduation dance was held in the traditional Memorial Union on the night set for the annual Pre-Prom affair has caused general campus alarm. But the Pre-Prom was staged nevertheless, in the Crystal ballroom of the Edgewater Beach hotel in Chicago.

Light on the Subject

The Daily Cardinal reporter who raved and ranted about the rule requiring their lights to be out at 11:15 here complained with turning them out at 11:30 p m. Now he can't understand why they were first forbidden to keep lights on after 11:15. The considerations made the rule seem advisable. The first was the request of the government officials that natural gas be conserved in order to insure the new war plants and camps in Texas having enough. The second consideration was the poor condition of the machinery in the power plant on which they depend for developing this current.

Allied Armies Fight Big Nazi Offensive

By BETTY WEAVER

Concentrated efforts against the forty-mile wide German bulge highlights the Allied attack against the shocking German offensive which was inaugurated on December 16. The Germans have gained a salient which extended westward for fifty-one miles at its deepest spearhead position and about forty miles at its widest point.

The course of the Nazi offensive stretched westward from the Reich into Luxemburg and Belgium thus cutting off the Allied drive toward the Cologne Plain and driving south to halt the Allies on their way to the Rhine and the Ruhr and Saar Basins.

The main objective of the Allied armies is to split the German bulge before the main German forces can be withdrawn; this would cause the Germans to lose some of its best armored strength and thereby weaken it for future battles. Field Marshal von Rundstedt seeks to keep his perimeter of defense intact and gradually retreat after having damaged Allied positions.

Since the Nazi break-through the battle lines far has been in three phases. First was the same "Schwerpunkt und Anfrollen" style which was successfully used in 1940 — to breakthrough and fan-out. This beginning of the offensive made rapid gains in the north, south and west. The second phase saw the smartest Allied forces trying to stop the advancing Nazis in any manner and with surprising ther could. They succeeded in stopping the drive in strategic positions at the Meuse River, Liege and Luxembourg.

In the third phase, the Allies were finally able to launch an organized counter-attack against the oncoming Wehrmacht. The complex problem of realignment faced the Allied commanders and new supply arrangements for food, fuel and fuel had to be set up.

The region which the Allies must cross to get at the Germans is dotted with hilly country. It is made up of valleys and steep hills and because of the trees the tanks can travel only by roads which have naturally been plotted by the Germans.

On the eve of the Allied attack, as if ordered by the Nazi command, the weather took a turn for the worse. Heavy clouds surrounded all airplanes, sleet froze uniforms and weapons, and vehicles traveling along the roads skidded and slid into ditches, at times breaking communication lines as they fell. The weather became a battle second only to the Battle of the Bulge.

Glancing far into the future some observers believe that the German expenditure in their counter-attack might be a definite weakening factor. Germany is in a position to make her steel a long one, but at the end the Allies will be able to make a definite thrust directly into the Reich: a movement that was advancing with little progress prior to the German attack on December 16th.

However, the keen - minded Nazi leaders may have more in mind than military victories. They have begun their attack at a time when the Allied Nations are not in full political agreement. Forming governments for newly liberated countries will bring political stress on the Allied governments. Recent controversy has developed among England, Russia and the United States. Even the South American countries are meeting to reach an agreement on the United States world affairs policy. Germany knows of this and United Nations political troubles and differences, and we know the world is growing weary of the war and that we soon can tend to weaken unconditional surrender policies. Germans hope to defend to the last battle if she can finally win in default.

The Alligator featured a front page editorial on the question, two regular columns discussing the problem, a reprint of an editorial giving coeducation history which appeared in the Clearwater Sun in September, and a featured news story headed 'Campus Leaders Say Students Can Put Coeducation Over."

The mention was made of the question of coeducation at Florida State college for women.

Wedding and Holiday Bells Ring Together at FSCW

By DARLEY LOCHNER

New Year and Christmas bells served as wedding bells for two Florida State teachers and 14 students.

Both of the teachers were in the modern language department, Miss Mary Roney, an instructor in Spanish, was a Christmas bride in San Diego, California. She will return to Florida State, but will stay with her husband, Lieut Ivy Winton.

Mrs Ralph Bush, the former Miss Clara Jardine, instructor in Commerce, will teach the rest of the year since her husband is stationed at Dale Mabry. Mrs Bush originally came from Brazil to this country to attend her sister's wedding. She was married, however, on December 31 in the First Christ Church of Tallahassee.

Susan Frye became Mrs Fred Rockdale in Jacksonville on January 6. She returned to FSC last Sunday. Susan's home is in Tampa.

Ex-Washington, D C. Priscilla Fowler of New Smyrna Beach became the bride of Erwin L A Young on December 6. Priscilla is now in Washington and plans to join with her husband until he is discharged overseas. She then will return to Florida State.

Miss Mary Ellis is Gloria Dupont, president of Sigma Kappa who married Lieut Preston Woods Campbell in Pensacola on December 27. Gloria will graduate in January.

Miss Virginia Updike of Lake Wales chose the Army, becoming the bride of Lieut Horace Herndon of Lake Wales on the Tuesday before Christmas. Jinny has returned to FSC.

The ceremony was performed in the bride's brother whom Jean Curry, president of Alpha Delta, married Lieut Lamar Munroe on December 21. Her maid of honor was Doris Curry, FSC sophomore, and her matron of honor was Virginia Fulmer Corry, last year's president of Panhellenic. The marriage took place in the Episcopal Church of Quincy.

Mrs Arthur Owens, the former Persis Miles, is able to see her husband almost every weekend since he is a technical sergeant in Waycross, Georgia. They were married in the Methodist parsonage in Waycross on January 3. Persis plans to stay at FSC until she graduates in June.

The chapel at Fort Benning, Georgia, was the scene of Emmie Dean's marriage to Lieut Earl D Walden on December 22. Geneva, who is from Daytona Beach, plans to join her husband at the end of January.

Her future father-in-law tied the knot for Lovina Truby and Lieut John B Metcalf in a handsoon ceremony in the First Congressional Church of Tampa, on December 24. Although she is leaving at semesters, Lovina plans to come back to summer school.

Janice Sanborne became Mrs Donald DeLong in Jacksonville the Friday before Christmas. She plans to be with her husband who is stationed at the Naval Air Base in Jacksonville as soon as she finishes her examinations.

Ex-Navy, ex-Freshman, is now the wife of T Sgt Bonnie Wahlsdorf. They said their vows on December 22 in Clearwater. Lois plans to finish this year at Florida State.

A romance which began last year when she met him here in Tallahassee was culminated on December 26 at the wedding of Medora Yon Fleetwood Critton B Brown in the Presbyterian Church of Auburndale. Medora plans to finish this year at Florida State.

Pauline Janes did not return to Tallahassee after her wedding to Earnest L Currie, pharmacist's mate in the Navy, in Everglades City on December 23. Mr and Mrs Currie are living in Miami, where he is stationed.

Sue Williams also did not return to FSC after her marriage on December 23 in Arcadia to Lieut Bobby Bevis. Her roommate, Patty Leavell, sang before the ceremony was performed.

The former Betty Marshall is able to be with her husband and go to school also. Since her marriage to Major Wilson Childers in the base chapel at Dale Mabry on December 17 she has been living with her husband in Tallahassee.

Gilchrist Holds Pin-up Boy Contest

Private Ray C Martz, Jr, Rosalie Manz's husband, won the pin-up boy contest held at the Gilchrist tea Wednesday afternoon.

It started when Mrs Melanie Turner, assistant counselor at Gilchrist, and several students found two pictures that some one had left in the parlor. On the spur of the moment they decided to have a pin-up boy contest for the girls in Gilchrist.

Small slips were put up Wednesday at noon and each girl was allowed three votes.

Private Ray C Martz, Jr, stationed at Camp Beale, California, was voted as the best looking man among 27 pictures entered in the contest. The picture, a 8"x10", and tinted, shows Ray smoking a pipe and looking very much at ease.

Board Meets

The annual monthly meeting of the Board of Control of the College was held last night in their offices in the Education Building. They will meet today with the state Budget Commission to study budgets of various institutions under their control. Later these budgets will be presented to the state Legislature.

Committee Chairmen For Soph Hop Named

Organizing plans for the annual Sophomore Hop which will be held on February 10, Nell Clark, general chairman, this week appointed her committees for the dance.

Committee chairmen met informally at the first organization meeting which was held Wednesday night. As appointed by Nell, the chairmen are: Barbara Mann, tickets; Bobbie Whidden, refreshments; Vicki Mott, chaperons; Mary Grover Holland, hostesses; Eugenia Avant, finance; Enyl Kitchen, news publicity; Frances Traxler, poster publicity; and Rosetta Carver, Nell Clark, and Bo Peep Shell, decorations.

Tickets for Sophomore Hop, one of the biggest social functions of the school year, will be sold in lower Westcott building the week preceding the dance.

Baptist Students Stress Life Work

"Life Commitment Week," or a week dedicated to life vocations, began Monday at the Baptist Student House and will run through tomorrow. "I Have Chosen You" has been the main these for the whole week.

Speakers for each day were chosen from various occupations and professions, each talking on the relation of Christianity with their particular occupation. Subject of the program so far included: Maximum Christianity to My Profession, Maximum Christianity in My Business, Maximum Christianity in Definite Christian Service, Maximum Christian Homebuilding, and Christian Citizenship. Activities for the week will be concluded tomorrow morning with a discussion on Study and Divine Guidance.

Scholastic Honors Go to A D Pi's

Alpha Delta Pi rates highest in the scholarship report for sororities with an average of 1.72, according to an announcement issued by the Panhellenic association for the semester ending May 29, 1944.

Other averages were: Chi Omega, 1.67; Alpha Gamma Delta, 1.62; Delta Delta Delta, 1.62; Pi Beta Phi, 1.60; Phi Mu, 1.58; Sigma Kappa, 1.56; Kappa Delta, 1.53; Zeta Tau Alpha, 1.52; Kappa Alpha Theta, 1.42; Alpha Chi Omega, 1.40; Alpha Xi Delta, 1.44; Delta Zeta, 1.33; Delta Phi Epsilon, 1.28.

secretary of the YMCA; Arthur T Mosher, expert on Indian agriculture ;the Rev Blake Smith, pastor of the University Baptist Church in Austin, Texas; the Rev Winburn T Thomas; resident of Japan for several years; and Miss Eleanor Wilson, recently the only American woman in the Marshall and Caroline Islands.

Plans by which each of these resourceful persons could be used to the fullest were sketched. Some of the leaders will make addresses, others will lead seminars, and all of the panel members will be available for personal conference.

Seminars upon the subject of American reconstruction, understanding the Japanese philosophy, Indian problems, Mexican problems in Christian citizenship, and religious problems on the college campus will be led by adult speakers, but will allow students a chance to express their own opinions about the problems and their solution. Tentative plans for study courses to prepare students for the seminars were discussed.

Village Vamps and Cotillion Club Tap New Members at College Formal

Tapping of new members by Cotillion and Village Vamps highlighted the formal dance held in the gymnasium last Saturday night. Candles made a effective background and proved very useful when part of the city electric system failed and gave the campus a 15-minute blackout.

Those tapped by Cotillion were Ina Jo Wrench, Jane Wooten, Claire Cashen, Dottie Young, Martha Wright, Evelyn Howell Franklin Smith, Doris Brow, Mary Alice Ray, Marian McEwen Jean Oldfather, Ann Michel, Sally Whitehead, Sis Myers, Carol Claus, Nancy Gleston, Cleona Usher, Betty Keen, Janice Bowler, Betty Wisenbaker, Marilyn Ward, Margaret Morgan, Lillian Brown, Carolyn Butler, and Pat Sellers.

Village Vamps tapped Barbara Covington, Nancy Clark, Margaret Sparrow, Betty Jo Wilson, Carolyn Keen, Rosemary Crockett, Montine Jurann, Ann Holtin, Mrs Jane Carter, Jeanne Brough, Jo Ann Hamner, Jean Harris, Barbara Ames, and Ann Dodd.

During Intermission Cotillion had a party for their taps, members and dates in Landis Recreation hall. Chris Morrison was in charge. Cake and punch were served.

Village Vamps held a breakfast in honor of their taps Sunday morning at the Alpha Delta Pi house. Dr and Mrs Coyle E Moore were guests. Dr Moore read the traditional poems for the taps.

Members of Cotillion and Village Vamps worked with the Saturday night dance committee in making the dance a success. The gym was decorated in the respective colors of the clubs, green and white and black and white. A huge Cotillion hound was trimmed with top hats and hearts. The Village Vamps effect of which Carol Sherman is chairman secured the College Swing Band to furnish the music.

Chaperones were Dr and Mrs Ralph Rosenstiel, Dr and Mrs Frank Sykes, Cpl and Mrs Lawrence, Miss Sarah Herndon, Miss Ann Lewis, Miss Mary Alfred H Davis, and Miss Celia Segerman. Special guests were Lieut Mrs Dean S Campbell and Mr and Mrs John G Kellum.

Last Minute Celebrations Are Held By Sororities Before Dead Week

Parties, dances, breakfasts and a weiner roast have been taking place since the girls came back from vacation. The usual lull during exams will be preceded by parties this week-end and revived by sorority formals.

A surprise party by pledges of Alpha Delta Pi was given last night in honor of Jean Curry Munroe, who was married during the Christmas vacation. Tomorrow night sorority sisters are giving a coffee, to which actives, pledges and guests are invited.

The Alpha Gams are giving an informal party tomorrow night for actives, pledges, and friends. Gloria Jamieson and Betty Jane Fox are in charge. Sunday morning pledges will fix breakfast for members, with Jayma Betz in charge.

Informality will be the keynote of the party Alpha Xi's are giving tomorrow night for actives, pledges and their friends. Former Alpha Xi Delta member, Janet Wimpleburg, was inducted into Woman's Army Corps January 4, as a medical technician. Her father, a major at Dale Mabry Army Air field, swore her in.

Last Saturday night Chi Omega had an informal weiner roast. A pledge party in the form of a Mother Goose nursery tale was held on Tuesday. Each pledge took part by characterizing one rhyme for each of the 13 other sororities, whose pledges were their guests. Jane Wooten was in charge. Punch and cookies were served.

Irish and Young Talk On Status of Women

Economic and Legal Status Discussed By AAUW

"The Economic and Legal Status of Women" was discussed Tuesday night at the monthly meeting of the Tallahassee branch of the American Association of University Women by Dr Marion Irish, professor of political science, and Miss Sadie Young, associate professor of economics.

Following an important business meeting concerned with a legislative program for 1945-47, Dr Irish pointed out the development of women's legal rights in Florida. She stated that until 1943 women's rights in Florida were based on old English common law and that it was not till this time that Florida women were accorded many rights that had been previously granted in many other states. In her talk entitled, "The Legal Status of Women in Florida", the speaker told of the little protective legislation limiting hours of women's work and that there is no minimum wage law for them. Criminal and civil laws in Florida, Dr Irish said, make no distinction between men and women.

Miss Young, directing her talk on the economic status of women in the United States, presented three questions to the group: "Do women have the right to work?", "Can women earn a living wage?" and "What responsibility do women take in regard to their income and the spending of it?" In view o fthe increased employment of women since the war, Miss Young pointed out that unless women recognize their economic responsibilities as well as their rights, they may lose gains they have made into the economic world.

Civic Music Sponsors Quartet

The national operatic quartet will be presented in the second of a series of concerts sponsored by the Tallahassee Civic Music Association Monday night, January 15, at the Leon County High school auditorium.

Members of the association, including several hundred Florida State College students, will hear the celebrated artists of the National Operatic Quartet. Members of this quartet, formerly individual artists, have joined together to give a program of quartets and duets. Accompanied by

Stressing that freshman as well as upperclassmen are eligible, Martanne has said, "All students enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences who are pursuing pre-medical, physiotherapy, or laboratory technology studies are urged to join."

Aims of the Pre-Medical club, as stated in its constitution, include: "To foster a stronger association of pre-medical students on this campus so that they may reach their goals by collective striving, and to provide opportunities of contact with members of the medical profession and related scientific fields (also to provide opportunities for the members) to broaden the scope of their scientific knowledge by sponsoring programs, discussions and lectures designed for this purpose."

Dr Popper Attends Historical Meeting

Courses in Area Study Are Subject of Discussion

Dr Annie M Popper, associate professor of history, attended the American Historical association meeting in Chicago which was held in the Stevens Hotel, December 28-30.

Of the many meeting there, she said one of the most interesting speeches she heard was on area studies of the Far East. In this it was stated that some large universities such as Yale, Chicago, and Cornell have introduced courses in area study. The courses have been open to members of the armed forces as well as to civilian undergraduates. The students study a given area from different angles, economic, social, political, cultural, and if possible, strive for a mastering of the language.

The idea for these courses has mainly grown out of the service men's experiences in foreign countries.

Dr Popper said that one of the most illuminating speeches she heard was given by Professor Carl Jansi of Overland College who spoke on Central Europe and Russia. He expressed his doubt that Stalin had changed his orginal Bolshevists' aims but he thought that Stalin was making the necessary concessions to circumstances lest as Lenin did in his case, this however, the speaker trusted, would not necessarily prevent co-operation of the Allied Nations with Russia in the next few decades.

Students Go To GJ Hospital

Even Dam and Swing Band Entertain Soldiers

The College Swing Band and part of the entertainment from Even Demonstration entertained at Gordon Johnston hospital last Sunday afternoon under the sponsorship of Mortar Board.

The group left the campus early in the afternoon in a special GI bus. With only one flat tire during the trip they arrived at the field in mid-afternoon. They were conducted directly to the hospital where the patients had prepared to them on moving furniture and soon started to make a snack and e.

The group of 24 girls sang "Minnie Weather," Emma Mae Hughes played accordion and "Deep River," Mary Louise Perry and Rose Daniels danced, Calista Holmes sang "Nobody and "There Goes That Song Again" and the College Swing Band played several numbers.

The girls were served dinner in the hospital, and after the meal the dance band played again, while they chatted with the boys.

Those scheduled to make the trip were Ellen Sapp, Allene Tryon, Jean Carr, Monroe, Carolyn Bailey, Sidney Cooper, Jean Lew-

Registrar Notice

Due to the increased enrollment and interest in PSC, the supply of 1944 catalogues has been exhausted. The new 1945 catalogue will not be to press for approximately two months, and it is not within the college budget to reprint the old catalogue.

To meet this demand for catalogues, the Registrar's office is requesting that all students who have finished using their 1944 catalogues and do not need them any more to bring them to his front office on the second floor of Westcott.

Five Linguists Attenr Meeting

Language Professors Of Florida Convene

Five members of the modern language department will attend a meeting in Gainesville of the Spanish, Portuguese, and French teachers of Florida today and tomorrow.

Dr Arthur R Seymour, professor of modern languages; Dr Dorothy L Hoffman, associate professor of Spanish and French Miss Margaret V Campbell, instructor in modern languages Mrs Clara Jardim Bush assistant instructor in Portuguese, and Dr Myra L Yancey associate professor of education, will be the attending members of Florida State College.

The main speakers of the conference will be Henry Grattan Doyle, professor of romance language at George Washington University, who is also editor of Hispania, and Gustavo Bern Hernandez, a Cuban who is instructor of Spanish at the University of North Carolina and who has been in charge of the army and navy program of Spanish at the university.

The conference sponsored by the National Education Association will include such topics as concentrated language courses for army and navy, the teaching of Spanish in the lower grades with Dr Yancey as speaker, the teaching of Portuguese in college with Mrs Bush as speaker, college placement tests as a collaboration of high school and college with Dr Seymour as speaker. Other topics will be the teaching of Spanish in the army, the teaching of Spanish in the army language, and army education in Spanish. The members of the various sections will have their meetings and speakers will take part in the discussions.

Dr Yancey will be in charge of an exhibit of The Spanish Language in the Countries of the South of Us sent from the United States office of Education in Washington, D C.

In connection with the conference there will be a meeting of the Florida Chapter of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish and a meeting of the Florida chapter of the American Association of Teachers of French.

Press Exhibit Is Displayed

Sophomore Journalism Is In Charge of Display

Freedom of the press is the subject of the current display at the Information Center in the library. The exhibit was arranged by the sophomore journalism class under the direction of Beryl Kitchen.

The purpose of the display on one of the bulletin boards is to show that the fight for freedom of the press is not a new thing, but has been going on for centuries. There are copies of several court cases which reveal this dating as far back as 1798. Article I of the Constitution of the United States, which declares that there shall be freedom of the press shows that ability to have freedom of expression is one of the principles on which the government of this country is established. There are two articles by Kent Cooper, head of the Associated Press bureau discussing the need for the world news to be unhampered by censorship.

The prize-winning essay Four Losses of Freedom" by Ruth Williams Rice is presented in pamphlet form. Three articles on freedom of the press which were written in response to the contest run in the Atlantic Monthly last year are on display. Is are excerpts from books on the press in Russia and Germany. Other books exhibited are on every phase of censorship, the method of working, the operation of a newspaper, the interpreting of news autobiographies of newspapermen, and selgnd- he-scene events.

On the other bulletin board are famous quotations of Dair, Milton Voltaire and Homer on free speech. Editorials of the World's Fair of new democracy, as a Christian Science Monitor, Pathfinder, Chicago Daily Tribune and Omaha Gazette are hung from cards bearing data about the name place of publication circulation and date of founding.

The circulation of a newspaper is depicted in a street scene of paper leaner figures. The negro selling papers to the man on the street shows the simple method of part of the distribution of newspapers.

here many more that had been told.

General MacArthur is one of the greatest military strategists of the war according to Lodge. He explained that the so-called island-hopping in the south Pacific was a carefully executed plan to secure advance airfields. These islands were won only after bloody battles for Yank soldiers. Lodge also stated that MacArthur had to return to the Philippines to save face, which is the most important factor in the Orient.

Lodge has seen action on every Pacific front, in Finland, Norway, the London blitz of 1940, Africa the English Channel, the North Sea and the Atlantic in Mexico and in World War I. He has been machine-gunned, bombed, torpedoed and shot down in a B-17.

War Council Meets

The War Council composed of representatives from the twenty seven organizations on campus met to plan an overall war activities program for the second semester, the birthdate of which will be an oratorical contest. The subject of this contest, which will be one dealing with post war problems of peace, will be chosen tomorrow. The contest is open to every student on campus and is sponsored in by the Hillel Foundation in cooperation with the War Council. Finals are to be held the week of April 25, the semifinals the week before.

Juniors Superior In Culture Tests

Students who took the junior culture exams before Christmas have received cards on which test grades, their ratings in relationship to the class, and the national percentage rating has been included.

"On the whole, the junior class this year is simifirantly superior to the national group in all respects of the tests," Dr Mark Draff professor in the department of education, announced today.

Students who took the exam at the designated time may come to see their papers any time the next week in Dr DeGraff's office in the Education building.

Displays Missing

There will soon be an acute shortage of bulletin display storage in the school, if students don't cease removing posters, letters of information, and announcements on the various bulletin boards in school buildings.

Students are asked to refrain from taking such notices and displays from the bulletin boards and to acquire at the personnel office duplicates or other information that they might be interested in.

Marjorie Moffett to Give Monologue Sketches at FSC Tonight at 8:15 in Westcott

Diseuse to Act Here on First Coast to Coast Tour; Presentation Will Be Second Event Of B Series Season Tickets

Marjorie Moffett, diseuse who is now making her first coast to coast tour of this country, will appear in Westcott auditorium tonight at 8:15. Her performance will be the second event on the B series season tickets. Students who have a B series ticket and have not yet claimed their reserved seats may do so at 7:15 at the box office.

Critics have acclaimed this monologuist as one of the finest solo actresses of recent years. While she has no copyright on the form of drama, she has done much for its development, it is stated.

Miss Moffett acts on a bare stage without accomplices or scenery. By her presence, voice, and actions, she is able to bring before the audience various imaginary characters.

Since the beginning of World War II Miss Moffett has written and added to her repertoire several war numbers which represent each of the 13 warring nations. Some of these sketches have been broadcast to the respective countries. The sketch on Germany was transmitted by short wave to the German people. The English have had the opportunity of hearing the sketch on England. Two more of the sketches have been broadcast in this country on fitting occasions. The one on China was used for the benefit of United China relief and the one on Norway marked the invasion of that country.

Twelve of the sketches have been published in a book entitled That Play I in One Person Many People. In the forward the late Daniel Frohman said. "Marjorie Moffett is a young artist, whom I esteem as a genius. She lifts the monologue to the field of art. She is popularly known as a diseuse but that is not correct. A diseuse is a person who talks alone and Marjorie Moffett does not play alone. She plays with many people, whom she creates by magic, for they are all imaginary. I regard her as one of our greatest exponents of a rare and difficult art."

The One-Woman Show, another book by Miss Moffett, is a selection of 15 monodramas ranging from light farce to serious drama.

Miss Moffett's present tour will last for nearly three and a half months and take her to over 80 cities. Her appearance here is the only non-musical dramatic concert on this year's Artist Series schedule.

Blue series season tickets will be distributed to new students as well as old students who have not been called for same this afternoon from 4 to 6 p m on the second floor of the Student Alumnae building. Season tickets will not be given out later than today.

Spanish Is Radio Feature

FSC Sponsors WTAL Skit, "Let's Learn Spanish"

Let's Learn Spanish, a radio program that carries the endorsement of eight ambassadors and the testimonials of Americans who have learned by listening, will go on the air at 7:30 Monday night, February 12, over WTAL, under the sponsorship of Florida State College.

Then every Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday night at 7:30 for 13 weeks the programs will continue. The transcribed series was prepared and produced by Time and Life magazines and made available to the college through the efforts of Dr A R Seymour head of the department of modern languages. It is radio's first major attempt to teach a foreign language, and its success when presented over other stations has been phenomenal.

So far, at least 63 stations in 31 states have presented the programs. In an easy-going style devoid of the ivory-tower approach, "Joe Bishop," a man who wants to learn Spanish, talks to "Pepe Obispo," a Spanish-speaking American, and the radio audience can listen and learn with Joe.

A special room will be set aside by Dr Seymour's department for students listening to the programs on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nigths. Word lists to accompany the programs are on sale at a moderate cost at the college bookstore.

The addition of the "Let's Learn Spanish" series to the college broadcasting schedule marks the first expansion of the schedule, which began on October 26 and has included one weekly program—the Garnet and Gold quarter-hour — each Thursday night at 730. Garnet and Gold will continue on Thursday nights; the "Let's Learn Spanish" program will occupy the quarter-hour on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; and it is hoped that still further expansion on the schedule will soon take place.

Comparison Shows FSCW Rated Second

According to the latest comparison of figures, Florida State College is the second largest state woman's college in America, and has beeo since 1942.

North Carolina State College for Women, which was formerly larger, has now dropped behind; and Texas State College for Women is the only state - supported woman's college in the country which exceeds FSC enrollment. The figures show also that Florida State College has made a substantial gain on TSCW during the past three years.

The total enrollment for this year at FSC will have exceeded 2400 when registration for the second semester is completed.

Orientation Begins For New FSC Girls

Conferences, Meetings Are Directed by Trieste

The orientation of about 60 new freshman and 20 transfers from other colleges began Monday at Florida State College for Women.

The new registrants for the second semester, which began today, are being given a somewhat shorter orientation program than is given to the large freshman class at the beginning of the fall term. The concentrated program will last through Thursday and will include conferences and meetings to explain campus customs and regulations of the new girls.

Aleze Trieste, of Tampa and Jackson, the freshman adviser of the College Government Association, has appointed counselors from the junior class in every dormitory to conduct the orientation program for the new arrivals to the campus.

Students Hear Informal Talk By Halifax

Ambassador Wishes FSC Student Body Luck On Exams

British Policy Is Subject Of His Second Talk

Earl Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, who has represented the United Kingdom since the pre-Pearl Harbor days of 1941 was guest of Tallahassee and Florida State College January 24. He addressed the student body at 5 o'clock and members of the city Chamber of Commerce that night at 8 o'clock in Westcott auditorium. Halifax was accompanied by his wife, Lady Halifax and his son, Captain Richard Wood.

Earl Halifax gave what he termed "an informal chat" to an auditorium filled to capacity with FSC students, saying, "It is a privilege to meet the student body and to wish you luck."

In stating two reasons for being glad to appear here, he told of baving had the office of Chancellor of Oxford University, and said that it was an inspiration to see a sister institution of learning. He emphasized that girls need to be future citizens with good judgment in order to exercise the responsibility of citizenship and to be able to judge the questions that will confront them in later years.

Stresses Understanding

His second reason was that, as British Ambassador to this country, he wanted the students to realize how important it is that the two countries, England and he United States, respect each other, learn and work together for the good of the world. On this, he believes, will depend the future of the world in the next 30 or 40 years.

Stressing that the young people should grow to be good citizens, Earl Halifax said that it was not only a debt the girls of FSC owed to their country, but a debt to the college itself, and that they should constantly seek to discharge that debt.

Accompanying Earl Halifax and his wife and son, were H M Vice Consul J D B Robey and British Vice Consul Francis J White.

Speaks to Townspeople

Speaking to the Chamber of Commerce that evening Earl Halifax said that his nation's sole policy in liberated countries is to help them establish the form of government they want. Referring to misunderstandings arising in this country over Britain's foreign policy, he declared that it is "just folly" to suppose "that merely because the population of Greece

Governor Talks on Coeducation In Interview With Reporters

Coeducation in Florida schools should be determined by the needs of education, and not by the desires of any community to profit by it, Florida's new Governor, Millard F Caldwell, has stated in a recent interview by Flambeau reporters. The governor's friendly manner was apparent during the whole of the informal conversation, which featured discussion of topics ranging from state plans to hobbies.

On the subject of co-education, Governor Caldwell continued that 'the ends of education, instead of expediency," should be the deciding factor.

Expenditure of public school funds has occupied the attention of the state budget committee recently, and Caldwell has spent much time planning the use of the $6,000,000 to be added to school funds. The Governor has added a statement that he will accept federal aid for education only so far as it is given "without strings."

A definite "Yes!" was Governor Caldwell's answer to the question whether or not federal loans sometimes entail bureaucratic control. He holds a strong belief in local self-government, and bases it on the theory that "people have the right and the ability to control their own affairs." Close association between state governments is urged as a way of securing funds without accompanying restrictions. Under the new administration state control of county affairs will not be increased, he added.

"Women have loaned to politics ideals that men have lacked," the governor stated when questioned. "But in many cases, they have not proven themselves to be as practical as men."

Although the number of women active in state politics is not changing rapidly, he states there is much room for them in certain fields, such as public education, public health, and probation work. As for the desirability of women in politics, the governor says be does not differentiate between men and women.

Hunting is the favorite sport of the governor, with fishing a close second. He enjoys hunting turkey in South Florida, deer in West Florida, and quail and dove in North Florida. He casts his line for fresh water fish in Florida's inland rivers and streams.

"But," he added with a smile, "I'm sadly behind in both sports."

Creative Arts Contest Opens

Deadline Is March Third; Rules Are Announced

Specifications for the creative writing and music composition divisions of the creative arts contest, which is sponsored by the American Association of University Women, have been released by committee heads, Miss Mildred Henry and Miss Gladys Koch.

Rules for arts and crafts, and dance, the other two divisions of this year's contest, were announced in the Flambeau of December 8, and will appear with the full information about the contest to be posted on dormitory bulletin boards.

Though the deadline for all entries is not till March 3, it is stressed by Dr Carmen Rogers, creative arts chairman of the AAUW, that students interested in competing in any field should begin work immediately in order to produce the quality of work that is expected. Prospective contestants may obtain a copy of the rules from Miss Margaret Rogers, counselor of Landis, who is in charge of distributing the information, or from any of the commitee members.

The types of writing which will be acceptable in the contest this year are: the essay, short story, one-act play and poetry. Those who are planning to compete in the drama are asked to notify Miss Henry as soon as possible so that arrangements for production may be made.

The general regulations concerned with the creative writing division are:

1. The contest is open to all registered students of Florida State College.
2. Original material previ-

Coeducation Is JCC Topic

Town Group Holds Forum On School Changes

That co-education at the University of Florida is good, provided that Florida State College is also made co-educational and put on an equal footing, was the informal conclusion of the Tallahassee Junior Chamber of Commerce's forum held January 18.

In discussion preceding the informal concensus reached, presiding officer Mr Leo Foster told of the attitude of Gainesville people who told him "bluntly" that they were going to use every influence to get co-education for the University of Florida.

"We in Tallahassee must act, too," Foster said. "We must discuss this thing and arrive at a conclusion, so our legislators will know what action we want them to take."

Foster said that Gainesville people are out for "the whole hog or the status quo". The idea of moving the law school to Tallahassee in event both institutions were to be co-educational is hardly acceptable town there, he said, and the university backers would

33 Students Get Diplomas

Midyear Graduates Given Degrees Informally

No solemn strains of organ music and no formal dignity of academic procession heralded the graduation of 33 students at Florida State College last Saturday morning, when they received their college degrees, but a spontaneous gathering of fellow students at the entrance to President Doak S Campbell's office made the granting of degrees a gala occasion.

The graduates, who called for their degrees at Dr Campbell's office Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, were handed their diplomas with the personal congratulations of the president. Then, as each left the office, she walked through a triumphal arcade formed by the crossed fountain pens of students whose chanting of Pomp and Circumstance swelled anew for each graduate.

The small midyear class experienced no casualties during examination week, and every candidate successfully completed the requirements for graduation. Although oeprived of formal commencement exercises, the class was honored in a number of ways impossible to the large end-of-the- year graduating class. Before graduation, they had been entertained at an informal supper party in the bome of Dr and Mrs Campbell, and the Garnet and Gold radio program from the campus that week dedicated its feature section to the midyear class.

The graduates are:

Bachelor of Arts: Nell Idalene Bryant, Jean Constance Corry, Gloria Ouida Dubus, Patricia Halloran, Sarah Anne Hirleman, Elizabeth Jane Lottich, Elizabeth Carlisle Page.

Bahelor of Science: Katherine McKay Boney, Linnie Lou Draughan, Francine Fisher, Virginia Ruth Kinner, Mrs Virginia Evans Morgan, Lillian M Musgrove, Betty Jean Neel, Marjorie Philyaw, Adele Shingler.

B S in Commerce: Charlotte Anne Bennett, Martha Jean Bishop, Mrs Alice Snyder Chambers, Cecelia McColpin, Gloria Maria Shuman.

A B in Education: Alma Chalker, Elizabeth Moore Ellis, Frances Catherine Farrior, Lenore Frances Malakoff, Mildred Ann Williams, Lula Janet Young.

B S in Nursing: Olive Galloway, Mary Frances Morse.

B S in Home Economics: Dorothy Bollek, Doris Chamberlain, Nancy Orleman, Mabel Wells.

Student Senate Will Discuss Action on Midnight Ruling At Session on Wednesday

Senate's Recommendation to Discontinue Ruling Is Passed to Executive Council Without Comment of College Council

Discussion of official college action on the rule concerning midnight returns from overnight absences before resuming classes is scheduled for the coming Student Senate meeting Wednesday.

In its last pre-Christmas meeting Senate appointed a special committee vested with full authority to compose a recommendation eliminating the present rule. Marjorie Philyaw was named chairman.

Committee Suggests

The committee formulated a statement of the disadvantages of the present rule, and instead suggested that it be discontinued, implying that no rule govern time of weekend returns. The proposal was submitted as a challenge whose success would be determined by the cooperation of the student body.

The recommendation was given to College Council, which passed it on without comment to the college Executive Council, composed of the president, academic deans, and administrative officers. The Executive Council did not approve the recommendation in its present form. Its decision will be sent to the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs. If drastic changes are not suggested, it will be forwarded to Student Senate this week.

Disadvantages Listed

Disadvantages of the present rule listed by the committee are:

1. Facility with which students circumvent the rule ereates undesirable attitudes and actions.

2. Many students cut classes the day of their return to avoid court action.

3. Lack of consideration for local students who could remain home overnight without harm to health or academic work.

4. Difficulties of securing transportation which will enable the student to return by midnight.

In opinion of the committee, the recommendation has the advantage of giving the student an increased sense of responsibility and of taking part in community living. It would eliminate much time spent in enforcing present rule. It would also give the student the opportunity to attain a maturity by allowing her to use her own judgment to decide what might be best for her own welfare and that of others.

The Senate Committee included Rosetta Carver, Elizabeth Brown, Mary Lucy Mendenhall, Madelyn King, and Cordelia Barclay.

Stettinius's Name Takes a Beating In Recent Quizzes

Secretary of State Edward Stettinius probably has suffered from chronic misspelling of his surname all his life, but students taking a recent social studies examination thought up some new variations.

"Who is cur Secretary of State? was the question sociology professor Raymond Bellamy had written in the test. The better informed among his students evidently knew the sound of the name, but on paper it came out Statinius, Stetinius, Stetinious, Stettinus, Stephineous, Stitenious, and Stetinius. Somewhat wilder guesses included the names of Cordell Hull, Ferguson, Knox, and Stimson (spelled Stempson and Stimpson). Wider of the mark were answers of Thortenos, Watkins, Happins, and Henry Hull.

Dr Bellamy drew another amusing answer to a question asking definition of the difference between insanity and feeblemindedness. According to one student, the insane are "crazy", and the feebleminded are "dumb and ignorant."

4-H Club Sponsors Series of Movies

"Survival of the Fittest," Ecuador Movies Shown

Beginning Saturday, February 3, a series of movies sponsored by the War Activities Committee of the FSC will be shown in the Augusta Conradi theater, the first to be sponsored this week by the college 4-H club.

Two movies, entitled "Survival of the Fittest" and "This Is Ecuador" will be shown February 3 at 8 p m and February 4 at 5 p m. The purpose of the first film is to give an overall picture of the physical training and physical fitness program of the Army Air Forces. The story deals with two American fighter pilots who are forced to parachute from disabled planes, are wounded, and go through untold hardships in reaching safety. Due to their excellent physical conditions, both men finally reach safety. The second film emphasizes the strategic importance of Ecuador and its possessions and displays its principal exports, imports and the products of the industries therein.

The committee for arranging the Saturday night film are: Muriel Beck, Clarice Journigan, Marguerite Rish and Jeanette Zetrouer. The Sunday afternoon committee consists of Lois Sny-

Language Teachers Attend Conference

State Language Meeting Is Held in Gainesville

The importance of more years of language study, smaller language classes, and an earlier beginning in language study was stressed at the conference of teachers of Spanish and Portuguese attended by five Florida State College language professors in Oainesville recently.

The conference, called by the National Education association, was attended by teachers from Florida colleges and high schools, as well as important persons in the language world outside the state. Among the out-of-state participants were Dr Henry Orattan-Doyle, of George Washington University, who is chairman of the National Advisory Committee of the Army and Navy Spanish Course, and Gustavo Rena Hernandez, in charge of the Spanish instruction in the Navy V-12 program at the University of North Carolina.

Frantic Schedule Days Prove Trying to Exam-Weary Pupils

Monday and Tuesday, during the two-day period of registration for new semester classes, the campus of Florida State was abounding in a gay, holiday spirit as girls completed new class schedules and then completed their recovery from last week's examinations.

Highlighting the activities those two days on the second and third floors of Westcott were the long lines of students at the tables in the halls and adjoining rooms. . . . the signs, suspended in midair by cords, which indicated where certain subjects could be found . . . faculty members, quickly filling sheet after sheet of class sections . . . girls, hoping for a 2-point average, eagerly standing in the line at the Registrar's Office (some seeking permission to carry an overload; others wishing to be told that they had made the coveted "unlimited") . . . more girls, less hopeful, standing in the same line for reassurance that they didn't flunk "that certain subject" . . . the appreciative faculty members, thoroughly enjoying the cookies sent around by Mrs Milton Carothers . . lengthy consultations between friends, advising each other about "hard" teachers, "easy" graders, and "crip" courses. . .

Here was the sinking feeling experienced by many who found that the schedule (which took hours to work out!) was ruined in one minute because "that class is already filled, I'm sorry!" . . the freshmen, almost as confused and bewildered by the schedule-making procedure as they were in September—and still invariably trying to sign up for senior courses . . . the sophomores, with three previous efforts to their credit, breezing through the lines with a great show of confidence . . . juniors, frantically carrying overloads in an effort to build op hours toward their majors . . . seniors, with only

Foreign Student Compares Life In Tallahassee and China Area

Lula On Smith, whose real Chinese name is Chow Suey-Lond, is the Chinese-American girl who has become a familiar student figure to many on the campus of Florida State College. That Lula is just as much American as she is Chinese results from her many interesting and varied experiences in both the United States, where she has lived for 12 to 13 years, and China where she was born.

In December, 1925, Lula was born in Canton City, which is located in Kwang-Tung province in southern China. For two years, like any other little well-to-do Chinese girl, she played about her father's large brick house with its iron grill work and in the garden surrounded by a high compound. On feast days she dressed in her bright red jacket and trousers and joined the villagers in their local ceremonies.

At the age of two years, Lula sailed on the President Wilson from China to the United States. Here began the intermingling of Oriental and Occidental customs and habits of thought that has given Lula an international outlook. When asked whether she preferred the Eastern or Western culture, she answered that she sees great value in them both; and rather than live entirely by one or the other, she finds it more satifying to pick out the highest ideals of both and to live toward them.

After arriving in the United States, Lula stayed in San Francisco, California, where she visited her father's parents. Then she came on to Tallahassee where her father had already established a business.

As a child, Lula was popular among the townspeople of Tallahassee. But her Chinese name was often found too difficult for western tongues to pronounce. For this reason, Mrs Miltin Smith, a resident of Tallahassee, rechristened the little Chinese girl with her own name, Lula Smith. Her middle name, On, was her father's first name when he came to the United States, it was often thought to be her last name by Americans who did not know that in China the last or family name is given first. However, Lula knew only that her new English name was the same as her godmother's, Mrs Smith's. Whenever asked who she was, she would inevitably reply "Lula Mrs Smith."

When Lula was ten years old, her father had to return to his native land because of his health. And he took his family with him, crossing the Pacific on the Empress of Asia. To continue her education already begun in the United States, Lula entered a Chinese - American missionary school, called the True Light school. Here she studied Chinese thus adding this language to the Japanese which she learned through friends in China and her own Hol - Ping local dialect.

Graduate Now Active in Social Juvenile Work of Tallahassee

Among the many Florida State College graduates who are active in the social work of their communities is Mrs Jack May, graduate of 1938. At present the former Mattie Lou Love is the social director of Tallyoco, local youth center in Tallahassee.

Ever since she can remember Mrs May has wanted to do social work in Leon county. A close friendship with the daughter of Dr Ralph Bellamy, professor of sociology, brought her to the Bellamy's home often, and increased her interest in social work. Her A B degree is in social work, with a minor in psychology.

Equipped with a diploma, Mrs May was accepted as a teacher at the Girls Industrial School in Ocala. She was in charge of recreation, physical education, and taught the first, second, third and eighth grades. After two years she taught the eighth and ninth grades in one of tha Leon county schools.

Her experience at Ocala, which had helped her understand children and circumstances under which they became delinquent, led to her appointment as the juvenile delinquent worker in the county. She held this job until her marriage to Jack May, when she resigned from her work. More personal is the problem of being a mother to a ten-month old son.

Before she had left delinquency work Mrs May had tried to persuade the city and county officials that a recreation center for young people was necessary. After a few years, however, the boys and girls themselves realized this and asked that the city officials help finance a "home" for them where they might dance and play ping pong chess, cards, and checkers. The city officials, the townspeople, and the teen-agers finally suceeded by mutual cooperation in their desire to get "Someone called her a bad name."

● NEEDED: A DEFINITION

For several years, students observant of changing campus regulations have noted that student representatives seem to enact only a rather small portion of new rules. Investigation of the college constitution in relation to this fact points out that student powers seem to be definitely limited by several constitutional provisions. Not only are students unable to legislate in many fields, but also decisions of Student Senate and all serious sentences given by student Judiciary must be approved by the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs.

In this past year, as well as two years ago, outstanding examples of our lack of real student power in government have occurred. Seniors will remember that during their freshman year improper signing out for absences from campus did not automatically carry threat of expulsion. But changes were made during the summer of '42—not by the student representatives, nor by Student Senate—and the Gold Book carried a paragraph informing the unwary that improper arrangements for leaving campus laid them liable for suspension.

Another example of the limitation of student powers was evident this past year. Last March nearly 400 students came to Senate to protest the recommendation that FSC girls be required to return to campus by midnight the day before resuming classes. Senate members energetically turned down the proposed law by a vote of 25 to 8, to the cheers of the gallery.

However, during the whole Senate meeting it was emphasized that the ruling was not within the jurisdiction of the students. It had been recommended for approval of the college Executive Council. Recommending the ruling was the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs.

Although Student Senate turned down the ruling, it was passed and put into effect during the summer. Senate discussion this fall resulted in a revision of the rule, which has been sent to college council, composed of the major CGA officers and the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs, which must review all legislative proposals.

College Council has referred the suggestion to Executive Council, which met yesterday. Executive Council did not approve it in its present form. Presentation of the substitute action of Executive Council will occur in Student Senate Wednesday.

Both the signing out rule and the weekend return regulation were not designed nor approved by the student legislative body. Rather, they were originated by extra-student groups. The legal authority for their actions is found in the broad, inclusive second part of our constitution, found on page 13 of the Gold Book. It states, "The authorities of the college reserve for themselves the regulation of the following:

"All matters pertaining to the public health and public safety of the students . . ."

Analysis, then, reveals that much of the blame for the actions, which evidently run contrary to reasonable student desires, lies in the too-liberal interpretation of this rather vague clause.

The analysis points out a problem student legislators might do well to heed. Until the exact limits and implications of "health and safety of the students" is defined, disagreements are likely to continue. The elastic clause can be made to cover all phases of student social life, and when interpreted in some lights renders student legislators and jurors powerless.

One solution to the question might include the appointment of a Senate committee to meet with the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs to clear up the confusion, and define what field the vague clause must cover.

● WOMEN IN A DEMOCRACY

Both the Democratic and Republican platforms last November included proposals for an Equal Rights amendment as a means for obtaining equality for women.

But such a measure is opposed by many women's groups such as the American Association of University Women as not the proper method by which to obtain the desired opportunity to participate fully in the intellectual, social, economic and political life of the nation according to ability as persons without restriction because of sex or marital relations.

The AAUW, in legislative principles voted by the 1941 Biennial Convention urged continuation of work to achieve equality without impairing social efforts to safeguard the health, safety, and economic welfare of women workers; continued support of the principle of equality for women; and continued opposition to the proposed Equal Rights amendment.

Opposition to equal rights for women is not merely an opposition in theory, but an opposition in actual practice. Wage and salary differentiation as well as legal discrimination in many states are evidences of this practice. Opposition to equality of women has long been based on the idea of "women's place is in the home" and current opposition has pointed to the problem of juvenile delinquency, arbitrarily attributing it to women's leaving the home and neglecting their domestic responsibilities.

Exploding this idea was Dr Leslie B Hoffman, associate in psychiatry, John Hopkins University, in the January, 1944, Ladies Home Journal.

He wrote: "I am aware that cases of neglect of children by working mothers have been reported in war-boom areas. In all such cases that I have been able to learn about directly, the fault was in the crowded living conditions and the social and economic upheavals of war rather than the mere fact that the mothers were working."

Through a program of adult education and childhood education the AAUW lays great stress upon the responsibility for family life and the care of children. This program and the status of women program do not conflict, they believe, because it is assumed that women will reconsider their primary duty to their children and will not accept outside employment unless proper arrangements can be made for their home and family, except in cases of actual emergency.

The unfortunate examples of some women who do go to work to the actual neglect and delinquency of their children should be taken for what they are—individual cases needing the care of social education—not evidence warranting the imposition of a country-wide, compulsory "return of women to the home."

● COUNT US IN

Two efforts have been made during the past four years to create a student curriculum committee which would give students an official channel through which to voice opinion and submit suggestions concerning the curriculum at FSC.

Although a majority of students, as compared with faculty members, have not the broad educational or technical background necessary to plan a curriculum in its entirety, we believe student opinion in the matter would prove of considerable value to the faculty, since it would enable them to see what students consider their curriculum needs to be.

A student committee would discuss various curriculum projects and problems and would weigh suggestions concerning required subjects and necessary new courses. From time to time the students would present faculty suggestions which relevance, in these instances, should enable them to see what students consider their curriculum needs to be.

Such a plan was presented in detail to the Student Senate in May, 1943, by a committee which had been appointed to study the possibilities. Senate unanimously adopted the report and presented it as a recommendation to College Council. The recommendation was made just before the school year ended, and the matter is not referred to again in senate minutes. However, a note, attached to the recommendation states, "Recommended to College Council, College Council placed on President's desk—no jurisdiction in curriculum."

According to the senate plan, membership of the committee would be composed of 24 students, one from each of the departments offering majors. Department heads would suggest student to serve, and names would have to be approved by the student senate. The chairman, a member of the junior class, would be elected by senate at the first meeting after the spring CGA elections. She would be one of the students suggested by the department heads, and upon election, according to the plan, she would automatically become a member of Senate.

Student curriculum committees exist in a number of leading schools, the women's colleges of Smith, Vassar, and Randolph-Macon being listed among them. President McCracken of Vassar once remarked that his school could not do without its student curriculum committee. These projects have for years been a topic of discussion at conventions of the National Student Federation of America.

In 1941 at FSC the president of the student body and the freshman advisor conducted a brief survey to determine campus opinions about a student committee on curriculum in hopes of establishing one here; however, no direct steps were taken.

It would seem that past efforts on the part of students have not been followed through as carefully as they would merit. The present is an ideal time for student action on the idea because numerous changes in curriculum are being worked out. Other than being informed that the school shall henceforth operate on a quarter rather than a semester system, students have received little information about current changes which vitally concern them. An informed student group could make worth while contributions to the committee on curriculum.

By MURIEL COPINUS

With the thought of the war uppermost in the minds of everyone at this time, this week's sample of student opinion was to find out how intimately people on this campus keep up with current problems. The questions asked were: "Do you feel well enough informed about the war? Do you listen regularly to radio broadcasts and have access to a daily newspaper? Also, would you suggest more extensive program on the part of the college to keep the students aware of current happenings?

I don't feel that I am well enough informed about the war. Having no radio, I do not listen to any similar news broadcast but I listen as often as it is possible and usually read at least one newspaper a day in the library.

The Bulletin has access to the papers in the library and I believe that it is up to the individual to determine her awareness of current events. However, I think that if the important events could be posted regularly and often, it would help even the less interested person to know a little of current affairs.

As a whole, students are not well informed about the war. Most girls, like myself, do not have enough time to read the papers and read the newspaper daily. I think everyone has an interest in knowing what is going on about her but there just isn't enough time during the evenings for getting the news to us.

Marguerite Ross, junior.

A knowledge of the war affects practically every student on campus since all of us have friends and relatives serving either in he States or overseas. We don't have time to sit down and listen to radio broadcasts; neither have I access to a daily paper. I have no definite suggestions for a more there should be one.

Most girls are less informed about world events here than they are at home. I think they have access to newspapers and probably enter into family discussions; here, at school, they have less time and may go for a week or more without knowing about the news. The radio is the best means of keeping up with the war if you don't get your home town paper.

Anne Rice, freshman.

Personally, I feel that I and the rest of the girls are not well enough informed about the war. FSCW seems to me to be an isolated spot where no outside influence, such as a small world war, ever penetrates. I feel that some few of us know what is happening but the majority of students prefer to speak with head anytime the subject of war comes up without knowing what they are talking about. Maybe more interest could be gained from our college radio station. Perhaps part of its time could be devoted to a news summary which would prove helpful. I do know that something should be done.

Betty Jo Kacinski, senior.

Being a first semester freshman, I don't see much about it as I've only been here a week. However, I do have a radio and I listen to the news broadcasts regularly. I couldn't get along without it. I also feel that a more extensive program would be helpful not to one only college girls, but the American public as a whole, is far from well informed.

Margaret Johnson, freshman.

No indeed, I am not up on the war as much as I should be or would like to be. I think although we students just don't seem to get around to the periodical room where we could look over the papers. Why doesn't each dorm subscribe to a paper and have it in the parlor? If it could be arranged, daily bulletins could be posted in each dorm. I like to work for someone but we would be more apt to work for someone than attend war news lectures.

Ruth Rice, senior

I feel we should have a more extensive program because we have a tendency to become complacent about the war. I enjoy Cecil Brown's 7 p m newscast every day.

Carolyn Keen, sophomore.

Language Teachers Attend Conference

—ere on the program for the conference, which was also attended by Miss Margaret Cathey bell and Dorothy Hoffman.

The linguistic inspiration given to the language teaching world by the Army and Navy programs were extolled as Hermanden explained the method by which the Navy students at the University of Maryland were taught to speak Spanish "better than many speak English." Small classes were of primary importance there, where the method was almost exhaustingly intensive because of the emergency nature of the course—but small classes are preferable at any time in teaching a language successfully, he pointed out.

The panel discussion in which Dr Mina Yanez, associate professor of education here, was involved, was on the subject of teachin the Spanish in the elementary schools. In this discussion it was emphasized that at an early, more flexible age students learn a language more successfully and easily than they do if the begin to learn when they are almost adults. Representatives from schools which are teaching Spanish in the lower grades were on the panel, to explain their methods and their results.

The Florida State College demonstration school is one of the few schools in Florida which have introduced the language into the elementary grades, under the direction of Dr Yanez, the study of Spanish is begun in the fifth grade. at the time the social studies unit on Mexico and Latin America is being made. The Iaruage study is then integrated with the study of the background of the people who speak it.

In connection with this discussion, Mr Thomas Morrow of the State Department of Public Instruction distributed copies of a bulletin on Spanish prepared by Dr Yanezr, and published by the State Department.

RUSSIANS NEAR BERLIN

In their mighty sweep across the Polish plains, the Russians have now advanced to the Oder valley city of Kustrin with only 39 miles remaining to cover to Berlin. In all they have moved more than two hundred miles across German-held land into the very homeland of Germany.

While the roar of the fast moving Red Army is heard in Berlin, on the Western front parts of the First division pushed to within sight of the Siegfried line and received no challenge from the quiet Germans, indicating that they have withdrawn their troops from the Rhine bridgehead north of Strasbourg. The Allies have been waiting for the German to withdraw troops from either the Hungarian, Italian or Western fronts, and at each of these points they have been ready to exploit any sign of weakening.

The advance of the Russians has been a steady and complete one; not a giant and single spearhead but a broad German offensive against the Allies on the Western front which had started the week but a short month before.

The offensive of the Red Army covers a winding front of about 300 miles stretching from the Baltic to the Carpathians, and is backed by six armies totaling approximately 3,000,000 men.

As the Russians beam their offensive toward Berlin, forces in the South along the foothills of the Carpathians that protecting the Red flank against possible Nazi counterattacks. In the South they are reported to be nearing the Le Reich's economically important Industrial region of Silesia.

In the North the Second and Third White Russian Armies have pocketed the remaining East Prussia and are fanning out toward the port of Danzig at the head of the Polish Corridor.

The crucial drive through the center of the line which is now drawing so close to Berlin was made possible by the gains at the northern and southern ends of the line.

Briefly, the Russian strategy has been to isolate East Prussia and then advance to the Baltic line Silesia breaking the frontier defenses and flank the German line. In accomplishing these two objectives they got the coal and iron mines, the foundries and factories, the synthetic oil plants which are the most important to the German defenses. Since the Allies have steadily bombed the Ruhr.

AMERICANS ESCAPE

The new landing on the Zambales coast of Luzon and the southern drive of Lt General MacArthur's troops from Lingayen Gulf took a background position when the long awaited news of the escape of American prisoners from One-hundred and twenty-six American rangers and 256 Filipinos who had combined their operations in engineering a water prison break which released from Japanese brutality 513 early war heroes of Bataan and Corregidor. Their attack came at night and struck with such fierceness and success that the Japanese guards were demolished and all the prisoners were safely removed. Two of them died on the return trip.

In the medieval theater actors were expected to suffer for their parts and actually were known so violently on stage that they occasionally fainted.

Alumna Back From Pacific

Did Red Cross Work For Over Two Years There

Meta Helms, a 1941 graduate of FSC, who appeared on the Garnet and Gold radio broadcast January 4, has been in the South Pacific for 14 months as a Red Cross recreation worker, and is now in Tallahassee on leave for three months before going into another overseas area.

Miss started out in the early part of 1943—landing in Sydney, Australia and was stationed for short periods of time in Melbourne Sydney, Brisbane, Mackay.

After leaving Australia, she went to the Dutch and Australian bases of New Guinea, the New Hebrides, the Admiralties, the Solomons and the Netherlands East Indies.

After the American troops had captured New Guinea, it was over two months before she was sent to Hollandia in Dutch New Guinea, and as Meta put it, "There were still Jap parties there then."

During a couple of a day's activities, Meta said, "An American Red Cross worker may be anything from a night's slinger to a club director, directing a wide variety of activities. The day usually starts out with clean up detail in the morning prior to serving the nine cold drinks issued 10 o'clock. After this the rec rums along with the usual business of doing odd jobs, issuing equipment and making arrangements for the evening's entertainment—with the Clubs remaining open, of course from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. with short three workers on call. The activities are varied in participation in dancing, table games, darts, cards, ping pong, checkers, table games, reading and writing letters, playing piano, and carrying on bull sessions. To most people this may seem like a rather dull way to spend any time off, but in New Guinea one's leisure is a precious commodity and no corner drug store or newspaper stand; the Red Cross building is the only recreation-military haunt where they go to relax and enjoy a semblance of normalcy in civilian activities.

"For first time we had iced drinks in the Club, the fellows came in to get a drink and looked under ammunition boxes and ration cases for features at the idea of getting a cold drink—for some hadn't had any for as long as over two years. Everyone it was a great satisfaction, too, to see a real good result of "finagling" to secure the use from a local hospital, unit," the Red Cross worker said.

Meta is one of 21 former FSC students who are serving in the Red Cross in the South Pacific, Australia, and the South Pacific.

Moore Attends Social Work Meet

Undergraduate Training At FSC Causes Discussion

Dr Coyle E Moore, professor of social science and director of field work, attended a joint meeting of the A m e r i c a n Association of Schools of Social Work and the National Association of Schools of Social Administration in Cleveland, Ohio, January 25-27, where he was on a panel discussion of the function and roll of undergraduate training for social work.

Dr. Moore, who has been interest upon the part of members schools in the program of undergraduate training, has worked out at Florida State College for some time. stated Dr. Moore, who is a member of the executive committee of the National Association of Schools of Social Administration.

It is noteworthy that the University of Wisconsin and Florida State College have done much farther than other institutions in the country in working out their programs of undergraduate training, he pointed out.

The experiences of the two institutions provoked a great deal of questioning and discussion from those in attendance at the meeting.

Among the guest speakers was Dr Karl De Schweinitz of the American Association for Social Security who spoke on the Roll of the Federal government and university training for the public service.

Alumna Is Working In War Department

Mrs Hans Johansen, the former Mildred Williams of the class of '35 at Florida State, is now working in Washington as an information specialist with the War department. In a recent letter to Miss Louise Gehan, alumnae secretary, Mrs Johansen described her job in wartime Washington. Before coming to the War department WTAU, in Tallahassee last summer, she has been doing both historical and current writing involving Army activities. Her husband, who had been in the Army as a newspaperman in Japan, has recently returned from the Pacific theater where he served as a combat correspondent.

Enclosed in the letter was a clipping from the Washington newspaper published for War Department personnel, describing Mrs Ann Johnson, who graduated from FSC in last June, was featured in a composite interview concerning the postwar ambitions of War Department employees.

Personnel Office Aids New Students

The Personnel Office is ready at all times to help freshmen and transfer students, according to Miss Elizabeth Andrews, director of personnel.

Senior interviewers will interview all new students. The interview will take a half hour and the interviewers will help the students arrange a study schedule. The purpose of the interviews is to help students with difficulties and to obtain a history of the student for the files in counseling. The interviews are also used for the permanent graduation files record of college activities and achievements.

Faculty advisor for transfers is Miss Marguerite R Dressler, assistant director of personnel.

Transfers and freshmen may make appointments for interviews concerning any problem they may have.

Social Work Study Urged by Professors

Miss Sarah Benedict of the University of Louisville, Ky. and Professor R Clyde White of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio, are on campus now to confer with the sociology staff and with the graduate students concerning graduate work.

Miss Benedict is conferring with the sociology department and sociology majors relative to some of them pursuing their work on the graduate level at the University of Louisville next year.

Today and Saturday Professor White will be on campus to confer with the members of the sociology staff relative to social work in Florida.

In addition he will talk with students who are interested in continuing their education on a graduate level. It is quite likely that he may be able to offer some scholarships for graduate work at Western Reserve University, stated Dr Coyle E Moore, director of sociology and director of social work.

Dr Moore said that the visits of these people indicate the high regard in which social work and allied majors are held by graduate schools of social work.

Work Shop Begins

The Huge Hall work shop, a plan whereby students may help prepare themselves during the inclement weather of the summer, is now in session. This is the fourth year of the work shop. According to Robin Hill, chairman of the work shop, this comes-ter's program has been greatly contributed invaluable service in the church and school. The student is not only invited but urged to attend the work shop meetings on Saturday.

Outing Scheduled

The date of the next outing will be February 10, it was announced yesterday by Ann Lowerman, chairman of the Outing committee.

Those who wish to participate in this outing, which is to be a hike to the Ranger, should sign up at the table in lower Westcott as soon as possible. Since only a limited number can be allowed to go, the first to sign up will be the ones to attend.

The hiking gate to meet in front of the gymnasium at 3 o'clock on the day of the hike will be 35 cents per person for food.

Coeducation Is JCC Topic

rather have things as they are than allow coeducation in the school.

The plan suggested by the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce would provide for arts and sciences and law colleges here with a veterinary, agriculture, and allied courses in Gainesville.

Al Black, Lowerman, brought up the possibility, in view of recent legislative action authorizing a University of South Florida, that the University of Miami would offer to FSC for the establishment of a progressive coeducational university in that area. Such an institution was seen as a threat to both existing schools if they embark on that are. A solution, Block mentioned, is to make the southern institution a medical school.

Porter pointed out that estimate by Dr. John Tigert, president of the U of F, and Dr Doak S Campbell, of FSC, set the cost of making both institutions coeducational at between $5,000,000 and $7,000,000.

But the expense would be justified, said one member, if improvements permanent resulted — not just a wa: measure.

Casual Acquaintanc Gains Prominence

Many years ago, two small children, a girl and a boy, picked apples together in an Indiana apple orchard. They had not met before, and their talk was casual. They exchanged names, picked the apples, and went on their separate ways, never to meet again.

The girl is now professor of Spanish in Florida State College for Women's Freshman class and in the years since her childhood she has never again met her casual mate; but she has seen his name and picture many times. Newspapers of recent years have carried in bold headlines the stormy career of John Dillinger, notorious gangster.

Foreign Student Makes Comparison of China And Tallahassee Life

After, her return in 1938 to the United States, she studied French, Spanish and learned most of the English that she now speaks.

During her long stay in China, Lula learned the ancient and social restrictions, ideas of relationship, and religion of the Chinese people. For instance, a youth Chinese girl of a reputable family must never go into a store and purchase anything. Instead, she must send her maid. Should she go to the store herself she would forfeit her good reputation. Used to the personal freedom in the United States, Lula found it difficult to restrain herself from buying something she wanted rather than sending her maid after it.

Another difference from the Western culture is the Chinese ideal of matrimony. Lula learned that according to Chinese belief, a son or daughter is considered to be one of the greatest blessings that can be bestowed upon a family. Marriage is the ideal to which all of their girls aspire.

The bridegroom is selected by his or her father's side of the family. He is not the bride's choice. The idea evolves from the idea that when a girl marries, she automatically becomes a member of her husband's household and must fit relations with her father's household. Hence, all the children of that marriage have little or no connection with the mother's family. When speaking of a relative, the Chinese must designate to which side of the family the relatives belongs. For example, the grandmother on the mother's side is called a "pawl". While her husband is called a "goang." The father's father's title is "yean," and his wife is called "yea". The same is also true for aunts and uncles according to their lineage.

Lula and h r family are Methodist, but the people of her native land still worship their ancestors on their father's side. On the birthday of some ancestor, the relatives gather at the ancestral altar where they light torches, burn incense, and pray. After bowing at the altar, the entire household feasts upon delicacies of cake and sweet drinks.

As the war approached Hot Ping prospered greatly and the people of the section knew that they couldn't hold off the invader very long. Immediately the True Light school moved their equipment into the mountains and continued their work there. Lula couldn't leave her family and friends, so she remained with the school and, with her mother, followed her father to the United States.

Lula's father is now in the grocery business in Jacksonville and she is living with her friend, Mrs Shi n.

Since h r return to Tallahassee Lula has received both cablegrams and letters telling of the brutal destruction of her own house, also the $3000 worth of clothing and furnishings from the family house stolen and burned. She has also been informed of the forced work and final starvation of her 74 year-old grandmother by the Japanese soldiers.

It is Lula's hope that after her education in the United States, she may return to China as a teacher in a university and help build the modern post- war China.

China Establishes Scholarships in U S

Purpose Is to Strengthen Cultural Relationships

Scholarships have been established by the Chinese government in six American universities for the advancement of Chinese culture to those who are eligible.

The funds will be open to all students, except those of Chinese nationality, who have shown merit in at least one year's study in Chinese history, language, literature, art, geography, or social sciences, or who have contributed meritious writing on any of these subjects.

The five scholarships carrying a $1000 annual stipend will be given to each of six American universities, Chicago, Yale, Columbia, Michigan, Yale, California. The scholarships will be given for one year, renewable upon expiration, but no one will be permitted to hold the scholarships continuously for more than three years.

The scholarships were proposed by the Chinese Ministry of Education for the purpose of promoting cultural interchange and cultural relations between China and the United States.

Dr Annie R Popper, associate professor of history at Florida State College for Women, who first realized the present importance of the Far East and has heretofore made it possible for many students to take the course in the Far East, is now allowing them for the first time to enter it at the second semester.

Graduate Now Active In Social Juvenile Work

Tallycoo. The city sare the house, the men and women of the community helped in the establishment, and the boys and girls worked together to construct their play-house. Then Mrs May was asked to be the social director of Tallycoo.

Amiable, well liked and energetic Mrs May is a real "pal" to the girls and boys there. She may be seen anytime that the club is open teaching some dance to dance, telling fortunes, directing minor repairs, or just talking informally to the boys and girls. Since she has been there she has taught over 30 youngsters to dance.

"Tallycoo is not a cure for delinquency, but it does relieve a preventative measure against future delinquency." The boys and girls were interviewed especially glad that there was a place they could go and it is "the one place where soldiers can't go". The girls are glad that there no have to call for them or go to the movies for recreation but can meet their school acquaintance in a real way. Many of the children who appeared before Mrs May in the juvenile court participate in Tallycoo activities and take pride in their citizenship of that community.

There are yet many problems confronting Mrs May. For example: better parent-children relations are being stressed through the medium of active parent participation. The fact is also being stressed that since Tallycoo became the site and was open from 14 to 20. they must assume responsibility for the transportation must be provided for other county children to be able to attend festivities at Tallycoo.

Alumna in WAC Is Married While on Overseas Duty

Frors Allied Force Headquarters in Italy comes word that Sgt Nan S Clark, alumna of Florida State college was married to Staff Sgt Julian S Foster of San Bernardino, California, on December 6.

The wedding took place in the day room of the bride's company in Italy and was performed by candlelight and enlisted friends of the bridal couple.

The bride's gown of white net over crepe had a floor length veil and carried a bouquet of roses. She was given in marriage by her brother Capt R W Clark, who is also stationed in Italy.

A reception followed the ceremony, and the newly wedded pair left their home-made on the Isle of Capri

The bride is the daughter of Lt Col and Mrs R W Clark of Sarasota. Besides graduating from FSC Sgt Foster was affiliated with Rinaling Art School, taught for a while, and, at the time of her enlistment in the Women's Army Corps was chief clerk of Adjutant General's Publications unit at Eighth Service Command at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

She was inducted in January, 1943, with the first company of WACs to be shipped for foreign service. She was stationed in Atlantic at a time when it was a dangerous place to be. She arrived they lived under nightly raids and underwent depredations. But Nan and her husband have the satisfaction of knowing that their pioneering has paved the way for other WAC companies to follow them across the high seas to all far corners of the earth.

Laboratory Method Is Being Tried In Freshman Composition This Semester

A new experiment in freshman composition is being conducted at FSC this semester

Two freshman English classes will participate in this course. They are Miss Mildred Henry's 10:10 class and Mrs. Bernice Mc-Lin's 10:10 class. Instructors in charge of the experiment are Mrs. Frank Miller's advanced group. By such distribution it will be possible to compare with every type of student and with both semesters' work.

Adherents to the plan drawn up by the English department the essence of the new English course is to remain virtually the same as that of the present composition course except for additional emphasis upon oral composition and the purpose of the experiment is to ascertain whether or not oral training is necessary for the freshman English. The sections will be scheduled for two consecutive periods and one two-hour laboratory period instead of the regular three hours. The credit value of the course will be unchanged.

The additional class hour during the place of student preparation outside of class. Throughout these laboratory classes the instructor will be free to help individual students with problems which arise in the actual process of writing. Each student's work will be kept in the files available for reference at any time.

The classes will be conducted in a room especially equipped for writing purposes, with tables to accommodate typewriters, dictionaries, and other reference aids to be provided by the experimenters for creative composition.

Students are encouraged to use the laboratory at any time they wish to do so. If this experiment proves successful, the laboratory procedure will be used in other sections of freshman composition course and the room will be open all day every day of the week. Instructors will be on duty three each hour so that students may seek advice whenever they wish to write.

Portuguese Instructor Recalls Her First Impression of America

By BETTY DOWD

When Mrs Ralph Bush, the former Miss Clara Jardim, assistant instructor of Portuguese in the department of modern languages at Florida State College, came to the United States in 1941, she came in a unique mission Mrs Bush is from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, she explained. Mrs Bush was delegated by her family to accompany her parents on the trip. She has been in this country ever since.

Recalling her impression of New York the day the ship docked, Mrs Bush told of the subway trip to Pittsburgh by way of train and, in missing connections, had to take a taxi from Pennsylvania town. Her ability at speaking English was limited at that time when she came to New York. Tired and hungry, in broken English she finally managed after an hour or so to explain her predicament to one of the townspeople. It was arranged with the engineer of a passing mail train to add a coach to the train, and she eventually reached her destination to her great relief.

Mrs Bush transferred at seventeen to 42 to Pennsylvania College for Women in Pittsburgh. While there she visited Washington, D C, where she was awed at the many wonderful and beautiful things that can be seen in one city of world buildings.

Since transferring from P C W in late '42 Mrs Bush has been student and teacher at FSC.

This past summer she was a counselor at a Y W C A camp at Harrisburg, where she learned and taught at the same time the games associated with the United States.

During World War I, typhoid killed 9,000 people in six months in Siberia.

Earl Discusses War Mistakes

Halifax Sees Trade, Labor Openings After War

At a press conference on the day of his arrival, Earl Halifax, British ambassador to the United States, discussed the mistakes of the United States and Great Britain in the 1918-1939 period. He emphasized that these countries must not repeat their "many very bad mistakes" after this war.

Commenting on economic and political problems after the war, he said that the Allies shouldn't "go about the matter in such a manner they ought to have our particular way of government." He further remarked that a good neighbor era should be the aim with the various countries working out their government for themselves

As to economic opportunities, Earl Halifax said that H Is necessary for the United States, Great Britain and Russia to join hands and that the U S develop its export trade. Pull understanding and cooperation between England and this country will prove a helping factor in bringing about the future relations of these two countries. Earl Halifax concluded.

The mistakes made in the last war, he said, were primarily "Our failure to keep on the right course and thinking that other countries would automatically do the bad plan. The German mind and the Japanese mind didn't think that way."

Warmest assistant expectation of an early end to the war, Earl Halifax said Russia would have an "immense task of reconstruction."

He stated that many opportunities for the expansion of trade with the Soviet. He added that great markets for consumers goods and raw material should open up after the war.

Miniature Organ Grinder Amuses College Students

Free of charge, a modern, miniature organ grinder peddled his tunes to the amusement of the students in front of Bryan hall last week.

Followed by a marble bench a solemn brown eyed, black haired little boy, who looked about six, played his tune for the hits as they came from their 12 o'clock keys.

The all red juke was a megaphone with a needle at the bottom. From the megaphone was attached to a wooden base on which rested the records. Over the records was placed a little round box with a handle to turn the records.

The young proprietor, Frankie Blount, busily turned the handle which revolved the records while the girls listened to "Ta Yuu Is or Is You Ain't," "Hot Time in the Town of Berlin," "Don't Fence Me In," and "Walks Down the Street," and "Come Out, Wherever You Are."

Very reserved with his speech Frankie only said that he had had more records at home, that the player came from out of town and that he did not get it for Christmas.

Red Cross Praises FSC Dance Band

Musical Program Given At Gordon Johnston

The Florida State College dance band under the direction of Frank Sykora, received a letter of thanks and appreciation from the American Red Cross for the musical program it presented recently at the Camp Gordon Johnston station hospital.

The patients enjoyed it very much and hope to have them on your visit. . . . They join us in saying thank you and please come again soon," the letter said in part.

The recent program presented at the Gordon Johnston hospital was the first appearance of the local band. It has become an important campus organization.

Fraternity Honors Two Graduates

Phi Kappa Phi, national honorary fraternity, has invited to membership Miss Ruth Dunstan, graduate.

Miss Dunstan, Morse, and Betty Jane Lotlich have been asked to join the fraternity, in recognition of their outstanding scholastic records. Phi Kappa Phi recognizes outstanding scholarship and leadership in every branch of knowledge.

Mary Frances received her B S degree in Nursing Saturday morning, January 27, at the office of the president of the college, and Betty Jane was given a Bachelor of Arts degree. Both girls will go immediately into their chosen professions. Mary Frances having completed the course in Public Nurse Corps and Betty Jane having completed the course in State Welfare Board social worker in Tallahassee

Seniors Intern In Capital Offices

Six Florida State College seniors are to intern this semester in state capital offices, as part of the college's work in public service, according to Dr Marian Irish, professor of political science.

The seniors will receive personal supervision in each of their offices, and are expected to gain understanding of administrative processes.

Those interning are Janet Pannell, Dorothy Lanzenier, in the office of the State Planning Board under Dewey Hooten; Ann Gaines, in the office of John Kilgore editor of the magazine of the State Road Department; Jean Schlichting in the office of Ben Watson the Attorney General; Jane Bass in the office of R A Gray the Secretary of State; and Juanita Gibson, to the office of Robert Ramspeck, executive officer of the Industrial Commission.

Registration

Information from the college registrar's office reveals that the total registration figure for the new semester is not final and will not be known until the latter part of next week. On January 29 and 30, 2,002 students registered, but because of the influx of students after the registration the registrar's office expects the number to go up considerably.

Dr Yancey Writes Bulletin on Spanish

Dem School Offers Spanish To 5th and 6th Graders

A bulletin on the teaching of Spanish in Florida elementary schools, written by Dr Myra L Yancey, associate professor of education, has just been published by the State Department of Public Instruction and will be distributed to the schools of Florida.

The bulletin, written by Dr Yancey as the result of work done in the Polk County educational workshop last summer, was compiled in collaboration with Mr Thomas Morgan, of the State Department of Public Instruction It sets forth the purposes and objectives of teaching Spanish to elementary school children, and gives in some detail suggested methods of teaching the language.

Dr Yancey, as critic teacher for Spanish courses in the FSC demonstration school, is supervising a program of Spanish teaching in the fifth and sixth grades of that school. She is assisted by Delia Perez The demonstration school is the only school in Florida pioneering in the field. Others are the P K Yonge laboratory school of the University of Florida, the Polk county school and at Jacksonville elementary school.

Purposes of the program are to develop in children, as in Dewey see an understanding and appreciation of the Spanish-speaking people, to help them to speak correctly the language of the Spanish-Americans, and to furnish them with a functional Spanish vocabulary and the ability to understand simple Spanish. The study of the language is integrated with their social studies, especially and history, so that it has meaning for them found the more learning of words and sounds.

YWCA Elects Three To Hold Office

Second Membership Drive Begins Today in Westcott

Margaret Cockwell, junior, was recently elected vice-president of the YWCA on the campus, according to her election, she worked with the creative activities committee. She was also appointed by Mary Ann McClure is the new chairman of the social relations committee, taking over the duties of Mary Ann Cameron who has left college to join the WAVES. Ruth Hall, Mary Sturrock is the new YWCA office manager.

Following the election YWCA is having its second membership drive this week, starting tomorrow morning for new students and old students who have not yet joined the group for this year. There is a membership booth in Westcott today.

After the drive there will be a membership meeting Monday at 5:00 in the Student Alumnae auditorium. At this time, a program dealing with world brotherhood, the annual presentation of candles, and finally cooperation for February, will be presented. After following the program the members will discuss plans for a student organization for religious activities on campus.

Double Coincidence Surprises Students

A freshman and a junior, sitting at adjoining tables in the dining hall one morning recently found that they were both wearing the same insignia—paratrooper wings.

They did not know each other but on comparing APO's discovered that they both belonged to the same unit.

The strangest thing of all is that they are buddies and have been together since they were stationed in the States.

Heat tablets, which look like peppermint candy, are impressed with a blister package, and prevent soldiers from eating them by mistake.

Library Gets New Volumes

Biographies, Music, And Caricatures Starred

A number of new books have come into the library. In order to stimulate interest in these books a new display has been put up. On the bulletin board are the many-colored jackets from these books, and in the show cases are caricatures of some of the best known writers.

Among the new books are several biographies: "Against Oblivion," the life of Joseph Severn by Sheila Birkenhead; "John C Calhoun. Nationalist 1782-1828" by Charles M Wiltse, and "The World of Washington Irving" by Van Wyck Brooks. There is Le There Be Sculpture," the autobiography of Jacob Epstein, "Immortal Wife," a biographical novel of Jessie Benton Fremont by Caroline Miller, "Lebanon."

Also among these news books a "A Treasury of American Folklore, edited by B A Botkin with a foreword by Carl Sandburg. This book gives the stories, legends, tall tales, traditions, ballads, and songs of the American people.

"The Best of American Short Stories," as edited by Martha Foley and Whit Burnett. There is also selected and arranged by Ellie Nesbitt "Famous Modern Humor of America. "The Concerto" which is a history and analysis of the concerto from Bach to Bartok by Paul Henry Lang.

Another book dealing with music is "The Challenge of Listening" by Howard D McKinney and W R Anderson. There is "Dominion of the North" by Donald Grant Creighton, while in social studies, recently added are E Meyer pictures America's home front.

"My Lives in Russia" is a story of the unique personal experiences of Fanina Halle, wife of Maximilian Wolff, wife of Louis Fischer in music. America journalists. The experience in Russia under both Czarist and Soviet regimes culminate in her decision to stay in life in the United States.

The caricatures on display are of writers and persons of interest. There is one of Lord Byron shaking the hand of Edgar Allan Poe and another of Walt Whitman litigating the bild of freedom to sing. There is a caricature of Dickens and Carlyle and one of Samuel Johnson in his "Hebridean Dress" and one of Mark Twain and Charles Darwin and one of Thomas Henry Huxley.

Constitutionality of Rule On Weekend Returns Debated In Senate Session Monday

Council Rejection of No-Rule Proposal Discussed; Lack of Jurisdiction Charged on Basis That Health Not Involved

The constitutioaolity of the ruling of the college Executive Council that students may not return to the campus between 11 p m and 7 a m from overnight absences was the focus of heated debate in Student Senate Monday afternoon.

Final action came when Senate, generally seeming to agree that the matter was within its own jurisdiction, voted to appoint a committee to investigate the idea of a trial period without a ruling oo student's return. Senate meets Wednesday for final discussion.

Committee Recommends

A committee, vested with authority by Senate, sent on February 11 to college Council a recommendation that the former 12 o'clock' rule passed by Executive Council this past summer be discontinued. It pointed out in the statement of the facts, and recommended instead that no rule govern weekend returns. The proposal was submitted to Senate for whose success would be determined by the cooperation of the student body.

The proposal was sent as a recommendation only, since authority to hold the rule rested with the health of students, and as such was outside the jurisdiction of student senate. The OGA constitution specifices that "all matters pertaining to the welfare, health and public safety of the students" are regulated by the authorities of the college.

In the statement from Executive Council to Student Senate, committee its decision to deny the student recommendation, read to Senate Monday by Jean Addison, senate president) Executive Council said:

"After considerable discussion by College Council recommended to the Executive Council that the existing regulation be modified to eliminate the present disparities between the College Council was not in favor of the recommendation of senate. However, in order to negotiate altogether the suggestions for modification were made: (1) that the regulation be suspended for a period of time during which an experiment should be conducted to investigate causes of students' return to campus between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.; and (2) that students be permitted to return at any time except between the hours of seven-eight flash and 7 a.m."

Council Votes

The Executive Council met unanimously to modify the regulation by deleting the provisions of the original regulation, namely the consideration of the effect of all night travel on the next day's academic achievement, and adopting the following petition: Students are expected to return to their residence halls by 11 p.m. and remain there during the hours of seven-eight flash and 7 a.m. Any student entering or leaving the campus during the hours of second flash and 7 a.m. will be subject to the action of the Dean of Women."

This measure will permit students to stay out all night at their own risk and discretion, and to arrive at any time during the day or evening. Hours are to be observed with the restriction of the hours from second flash through 7 a.m. for students to return to their residence halls was adopted to protect the authority of the college during

The topic of the evening will be "Organ Music in the Community," and the ministers and their wives of the ministers and their wives of the Guild play have been invited. Dr Rita Sloshe Opperman, dean emerita of the School of Music, will act as toastmistress.

A joint project of a choral vesper is being planned by the Guild with the cooperation of the choirmasters of the various churches to take place March 25 at 4:30 in the afternoon in the Westcott auditorium.

Political Science Exam Answers Shock Teachers

Of the approximately 100 students taking the course, according to Dr Irish, a surprising percentage of students made freak

Fellowship Awarded Delia Perez by CIA

FSC Senior of Spanish Origin Wins Year of Study

A fellowship for study at the New York School of Social Work has been warded to FSC senior, Delia Perez. The fellowship, offered to students of Spanish-speaking origin by the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs and awarded through the Institute of International Education, is for one academic year of study and carries with it a fund of $1300 for purposes incidental to the course of study.

In informing here of the award, the Institute explained, "The purpose of the fellowships is to provide advanced training in certain fields for promising young men and women of the United States of Spanish-American origin, who plan to apply their training for the benefit of the Spanish-speaking groups."

Miss Perez, Delia's parents are Spanish, she herself is an native American. On campus, she has been active in the International Relations Club and is a member of Sigma Delta Pi, national Spanish honorary. She expects to receive her bachelor's degree in sociology in May.

Picturesque Mexico Is Part Of Art Teacher's Background

By BOBBIE BELL

In the sleepy village of Tasco, Mexico, not far from the shadow of the mighty Popocatepetl, Miss Kirn of the art department of Florida State College sat on her balcony in the summer of '43, and sketched the last ruffle of the Mexican highlands.

The balcony projected from the hotel wing that a party of which Miss Kirn was a member, had leased for the summer. They had converted it into a picturesque outdoor studio from which they strolled each every day down into the village to visit the ancient silversmith shops. Miss Kirn spent the summer studying jewelry from some of the skilled artisans of Taxco's famous art. Painting and sketching occupied the remainder of her time.

"I loved it in Mexico," she said, and emphasized that that trip, although not the first, is one of the best she has.

Miss Kirn, a tall Missouri-born brunette, is an artist to the tip of her classic fingers. In her soft southern accent which has grown cosmopolitan with traveling, she spoke of her work at the Brandeis-Matthew theater in New York where she worked on the stage-craft, ever under the wing of Dr Smith. This stage work was in connection with her study at Columbia University where she obtained her degree last year. She also studied at Fontainebleau, Paris college, the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, and St. Louis Art school years, she made plans to study in Mexico because of the art and language. During the summer of 1942 she made a trip to Cuba with her family, and from that trip she developed a desire to return some day to study at the University.

The University of Havana, a large school has about 13 buildings. Interesting feature of the campus was the 30 days' outing up to the main building.

Classes are "cosmopolitan," said Frances. "My conversational classmates included eight or nine Catholic nuns, many college graduates, two or three business men, an Army captain, a Negro woman, the regular college students, and a few high school students."

While at the university Frances witnessed a strike by the law students on the campus during which the students took over but by she said no one was killed. The reason for the strike was the objection of the law students to long examinations. Instead of setting aside a week or two as most of the United States colleges and universities, Cuban exams covered a period of several months, usually from May to October. "My exams weren't too hard, though," said Frances. She had morning classes only, so she was able to observe the customs of the people in their daily lives.

Aside from life at the university, the Americans have enjoyed many interesting pastimes. Most of them had honorary memberships at the various beach clubs in Havana. Frances had a membership at the Havana Yacht club where she "dined, danced and swam."

Following entertainment also, were excursions to Varadero beach, which is Cuba's Atlantic City. Here were enjoyed sailing and moonlight turtle hunting trips. Also, there were golf and several concerts at the university at which Cuban artists were played. While there she saw the opera "Rigoletto."

Another "hangout" for the American students at the university was the Hotel Nacional where they could enjoy milk and cup cakes and "the only place." added Frances, "where we could get any American food."

One of the most interesting highlights of the trip was a dance which the American students attended at the Cuban Country Club in Air Base at Mendoza. This dance was sponsored by the university and chaperoned by university officials. For the occasion a U S army band was flown from Key West.

While the Cuban sense of humor is much like ours, said Frances, there was one time she had difficulty finding the American joke to a Cuban boy. Wanting to try the old trick of pointing upward at the sky as if there were something alarming there, Frances tried to explain to her escort the humor of the situation, but to no avail. "The boy could see nothing funny; so Frances led him to a busy street, started pointing

Improvement Plans To Be Considered

Plans are being considered by the administration to beautify the grounds around the new dormitory and other buildings and the part in front of Landis. Mr J G Kellum, business manager, announced.

If labor can be obtained, work will be started on the grounds near the new dormitory and the other buildings so that they will match the campus. It was also said then they would look as though they were more a section of the campus.

A walk is going to be built from the park from before Landis to where the new walk will be. Mr Kellum said that plans are not yet completed and the project cannot be started until next year, Mr Kellum said.

Alumnae of FSC Write Letters From All Parts of the World

Organ Breakdown Complicates Music Recitals, Program

An "out-of-order" pedal board confronted Miss Ramona Beard, instructor of piano, organ, and theory, after she had made last minute preparations for her formal faculty recital.

The recital which was to have been given in the Westcott auditorium February 1 will be presented May 6. Since the program have already been printed, she said that they would be saved until that date.

There have been some difficulties with the organ for months, but the music department had hoped to get along with it until a possible construction of a new music hall, at which time the organ would be transferred, but after installation. With the breakdown of the organ last June and the prospects of the n a building far away because of the war, the relay until of the old.

"We believe it imperative that the University of Florida should catch up with the rest of the country and provide educational facilities for the service women and the ex-GI's who return who want to go to school with their husbands," organizational Commander Earl Parnell concluded.

Freshman Spanish Major Relates Summer's Experiences in Cuba

By BURMA COX

Beautiful meadows and plains, royal palms, rolling hillsides, flourishing vegetation, and picturesque sunsets are only part of the memories Frances Moffett has of a trip to Cuba she made last summer.

Frances, a freshman at FSC, spent July and August of last summer with a friend and attended the University of Havana where she took courses in Spanish conversation and grammar.

Spanish has been a chief interest with Frances since she was in the ninth grade in Miami. Throughout the rest of her high school years, she made plans to study in Mexico because of the art and language. During the summer of 1942 she made a trip to Cuba with her family, and from that trip she developed a desire to return some day to study at the University.

The University of Havana, a large school has about 13 buildings. Interesting feature of the campus was the 30 days' outing up to the main building.

Moffett Has Varied Acts

Sketches Include Comedy, Tragedies of War

A portrayal of many and varied characters caught the imagination of all who saw Miss Marjorie Moffett's appearance as a solo actress last Friday night.

Miss Moffett, a pseudonymous Miss Moffett peopled the stage with many imaginary characters. These characterizations were brought about by her expression and action. It was evident from the ability that the late Daniel Frohman acclaimed her a genius in her field.

She opened her program with an impersonation of a Chinese guerrilla fighter's wife writing a letter to her husband after the Japanese invasion of her village. In it she told of the death of her child and the murder of all she ravaged city, climaxing these with her feelings that "they could only kill and burn. They could not conquer."

In contrast to the first sketch, she presented Mona Morel Star's Life is Very Tviste, or Is All This Profanity necessary?"

The characterization of an old busybody and a new emotion of whom she was calling for the purpose of raising the mother's spirits were included in the next presentation.

Portrayal of a salesgirl introduced Bert and breakfast food was a humorous number. In "Pandemonium" she dramatically depicted a German mother's emotions in viewing from heaven her son, a German pilot, as he dies in battle. This work, because of its great emotional power, has been

Home Economics Teacher Here Travels 1800 Miles in Florida

By LOLA ROSE

A new member of the Florida State College faculty, Dr Dorothy Lee Leahy, will teach home economics education and head teacher training in home economics, has traveled close to 1800 miles in Florida since her arrival here at the beginning of the school year. She did this traveling in connection with work done under the direction of the State Department of Education.

In January of this year she went to a work shop in home economics education at Alabama College for Women in Montevallo.

Her traveling, done in order to visit schools for the purpose of gaining an insight into some of the needs, particularly those that pertain to home economics, and to secure information of the physical facilities and program in Florida.

During these trips she has been in touch with many of the conferences for teachers of home economics which have been held in the state.

Dr Leahy arrived in Florida at the beginning of this school year from the University of Connecticut in Storrs, Conn., where she was associate professor of home economics education and in charge of teacher education for home economics students.

Traveling is of great interest to

In keeping with the theme of the programs given this year by the AAUW on the New South, Dr Carleton's topic will be, "In Re That Conservative South."

Conference Plans Begun

Groups Prepare Programs; Committees Named

Preparations for Youth Conference to be held the weekend of March 2, are going forward.

Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Student-Alumnae building the first discussion group in preparation for the conference will be held. Peggy Lou Thomas and Margaret Smith are student leaders of the group which is discussing the topic. Miss Margaret Rogers, director of Landis hall and teacher in the Sunday school, will be the adult leader.

At the Youth Conference meeting in the auditorium of the Union it was decided that it would be possible to get much more from the seminars if there were advance preparation. Therefore, on February 18, there will be a discussion group on India. Plans for resource experts have not yet been completed. Doris Corry and Diana Washbon are in charge of this meeting.

On February 25 South America will be the main topic. Robin Hill and Thelma Cuyler are making the arrangements for this program.

Youth Conference will begin the weekend of March 2. Among the leaders who will come to the campus will be the Rev Winburn T Thomas, secretary of the student volunteer movement of America. He will serve as dean of the conference.

Those who will lead the seminars for which the youth conference is making advance preparation are Mr Arthur T Mosher ,who has lived in India as an agricultural expert for many years. Miss Eleanor Wilson, the last white woman to leave the Caroline and Marianne Islands, will lead the group studying Japan. Miss Wilson is an old friend of Miss Margaret Rogers. Students who have not yet received their grade slips should look over at the Office of the Registrar to see if they owe any books to the library or convocation fines. If grades will be given to any student having a card.

'World Citizenship' Is Contest Theme

Hillel, Council Sponsor Oratorial Competition

"World Citizenship: Challenge to Complacency" will be the theme of a school wide oratorical contest officially opened here this week. The contest, fin i s of which will be held on the 19th, is sponsored jointly by the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation and the newly-formed World Student Affairs Council, composed of the heads of the 27 main campus organizations.

All students are urged to prepare speeches for the contest, according to Co-ordi chairman Cordelia Barclay. The talks may be on any subject related to the general theme, and are to be approximately 800 words or 8 minutes long. The grand prize here to be awarded publicly in an evening program on April 25. Judges will be announced later and out-of-state officials. Grand prizes will be three sterling silver cups, to be engraved with the names of the winners.

All organizations will be contacted, and their members are asked to participate, both as competitors and audience in individuals.

Semi-finals will be held April 17 and 18, with faculty members as judges. Deadline for entries will be April 16. Applications and information may be had from Cordelia Barclay or Virginia Holmes.

Spirit of the Week

● ARE WE EDUCATED?

WE have often heard it said that college students were to be trained in their schools to become leaders in their nation, whether at the local, state, or national level. But whether students are educated to serve as leaders or only for their own personal advantage, it remains the duty of educators and students themselves to turn out well-informed, well-rounded personalities.

Certainly in these days of global warfare no person ignorant of current events and the more basic causative factors of the world can be called educated. Certainly he cannot make much of a contribution to any community, and less still on a state or national level.

Yet even surface inspection will reveal that a strange paradox exists at FSC. We claim to be "educated" when we graduate, and expect to assume leading positions. In the same breath we admit we haven't read newspapers for days or weeks, that our reading matter is too often academically specialistic, that we could not carry on an intelligent discussion of current basic problems.

SOMETHING definitely seems wrong. Undoubtedly, it is true that fundamentally students may not be to blame. Seeking and interpreting information is a habit which must be formed. Habits are not formed without practice and encouragement.

Therefore it may seem pertinent to survey what is done at FSC to further knowledge of current events, not to mention the understanding of what occurs.

The library has an assortment of newspapers and periodicals, but few are the people who voluntarily use them regularly. The courses in current events seem well populated—but about 100 out of 2,400 is a small proportion. The Defense Forum on current issues has been discontinued. There is no news bulletin board. Discussion groups hear lectures and have talks on specialized subjects. A campus news commentator briefly reviews happenings in fairly infrequent convocations. The Flambeau has a weekly world news column, which we fear is far from the most popular item of the paper.

WHAT most of us learn in our classrooms does not seem to make us eager to know what the world is doing, even in this most critical of world periods. Professors seem to fail somewhere along the line, if their instructing does not sent us out interested in events beyond our daily lives. Professors seem to have failed if we do not realize that plans for world security, economic problems, post-war reconversion has a vital meaning for each of us.

Our lack of information reflects itself in our lack of concern for war activities on campus. Appeals for funds fail, scrap paper drives call in vain for workers, cooperation with local army authorities in solving their problems is lacking.

A somewhat hopeful sign in a gloomy picture is the recent creation of the Student World Affairs Council, composed of heads of 27 campus organizations. Their purpose is to unify all campus war effort plans, to encourage spread of world information, to increase participation in war activities by filtering down information about needs from organization heads to members.

AS yet the Council is young. It has attempted to urge all organization chairmen to cut down time wasted in unessential meetings, to substitute informational discussions, to ask for informed speakers. It will suggest that all club projects be closely related to the war effort. It will sponsor dissemination of war information through current events debates and quizzes, the first in a series of which was given in all house meetings Tuesday night. It will cooperate with plans for sale of war bonds and stamps, and will help in contribution campaigns. It will contact local War Council authorities to find out what the campus can do to help the broader community war effort.

As an organization, the Council has been long overdue. There was a need for it in 1941, at the outbreak of war. There was a need for it even long before that, for any college with strong "ivy tower" inclinations needs a group to stimulate it to wider interests.

BUT one organization cannot fill the gap between what is expected of college students, and what so far we have given. Until we are conscious that this is "One World," we cannot lay claim to the title of "educated." Roots of the problem lie with the teachers, with parents, with local schools; we can attempt to solve it here, though—and it is long past time that we started.

● BREAKING THE FENCE AROUND TEXAS

Students of the University of Texas are still fighting against the violation of academic freedom involved in the dismissal of the University's president, Dr Homer P Rainey, by action of the Board of Regents.

Many educational associations throughout the country, including the American Association of University Professors, have expressed concern about the action of the Texas Regents.

The Committee for Academic Freedom of the University of Texas Students Association is conducting a survey to disprove the claim that the English Department of the University was guilty of a grave offense in using John Dos Passos' novel, The Big Money on a class reading list.

Stating that "this effort to punish the president and faculty members smacks of repression," they feel that the attack can best be met by showing that many institutions have found this novel a legitimate text for the study of contemporary American literature.

Students of the University have supported Dr Rainey since the first news of his dismissal. After the decision was made by the Board of Regents, students and student body officers marched to the state capitol in Austin to protest to Governor Coke Stevenson. The Daily Texan, the college newspaper, has demanded a statement of explanation from the Board. Students have also held mass meetings and attended Senate Investigation Committee meetings.

● SENATE DEBATES CONSTITUTIONALITY

Into the regular Senate meeting Monday loomed the question of constitutionality. The Executive Council report of its action on the regulation governing the return of students to the campus following over-night absences included the statement that "they voted unanimously to modify the regulation by disregarding the basis of the original regulation, namely, the considerations of the effect of all night travel on health and academic achievement."

Nevertheless, Executive Council adopted a new regulation, making it now a lower court offense to return to the college between the hours of 11 and 7 at night.

Senators immediately questioned if succeeding legislation of the executive council in question would be in their hands. Members of Executive Council of CGA expressed the opinion that it would.

Then the action of the Executive Council of the college was discussed, and a senator questioned the authority of that body to legislate on a matter from which they had abdicated responsibility by disregarding the only basis upon which they might claim jurisdiction.

Astute legislators consulted constitutions, both that of the college and that of the College Government Association. The constitution of the college president as recited in Article IV, Section II, paragraph I, were quoted from the college constitution: "He shall be finally responsible for the maintenance of discipline in the college, and in this responsibility shall have the active assistance of the deans, Executive Council, Committee on Student Affairs and such other officers and organizations as he may require."

Gold books were brought forth to quote the agreement between the faculty and students of Florida State College concerning the College Government Association, in which the "management of affairs concerning the conduct of students in their college life that are not academic in nature, except such matters as are herein reserved from the jurisdiction of the association" is entrusted to the association.

The reservation of powers includes all matters pertaining to the public health and public safety of the students, to the household management, and to the use of college property and equipment.

The majority of the Senate members seemed to accept the idea that legislation concerning the overnight rule is in their hands henceforth, and motions were made to modify further the over-night Executive Council regulation in this field.

The motion that was finally approved provides for a committee to investigate the possibilities of a trial period during which the absence of any regulation on this matter could be adequately tested by determining the cause of late returns.

YWCA to Hear Talk By Dr Liddell Today

The membership meeting of the YWCA was opened Monday evening with a worship program by Dora Hill entitled World Brotherhood.

Members discussed the value of a campus religious association and the possibility of coordinating campus religious activities in such an organization.

Friday, February 9, the group will meet in the Student Alumnae Building at 5 o'clock at which time Dr Anna F Liddell will give a talk to help members think through the possible value and function of the local campus YWCA in an effort to serve on the campus.

Dancing to Start

Dancing will start in Reynolds recreation hall Thursday under the direction of the Cotillion club, Betty Lou Christian, president of Cotillion, said. The dancing will begin immediately after dinner and will last until 8:15 every Thursday night.

There will also be a Cotillion "tap," wearing a green jacket, every month, the Student Alumnae building game room to help students.

Jap Cigarettes Taste Like Ours

"And I don't even smoke!" exclaimed a Florida State student after she had sampled a late Christmas present containing six packages of Japanese cigarettes sent to her by a friend stationed in the south Pacific.

The six packages, containing ten cigarettes each, are made of a light cardboard. The front of each package is decorated with the picture of a bird printed in green ink. Above the bird are Japanese characters which translated mean "Golden Bird."

On the back of the package are characters which say "Always buy Golden Bird cigarettes. Approved by the emperor."

Those who have smoked the cigarettes themselves have commented upon the bitter strong taste, but say that they taste remarkably like American brands.

"Stardusters" Play

The college dance band, which henceforth will be called the "Stardusters," will provide the music for the Jennie Murphree formal dance this Saturday.

The Stardusters have been working on a distinctive "theme" new music student body officers are secret, but they say it will be something special.

The Students Speak . . .

This week's column deals withnight, set in at 7 a m, and attends classes when she is all worn out. I don't approve of any set time for students to arrive because we are up here to make our own decisions—supposedly.

Virginia Drake,
Sophomore

The new rule is easier on us, even though we do lose an hour, because we may now attend classes the following day. However, concerning the rule about the bus station; it seems to me that if we arrive in the morning hours, fairly near 7 o'clock. It would be much wiser to remain in the bus station than to return alone in a cab.

Naomi Vought,
Junior

Although I think the fact that the rule allows us to attend classes the following day is an advantage, it doesn't seem to help the health of the students any—which is what we've been hearing so much about.

Eleanor Bayer,
Sophomore

I like the 11 o'clock one better, I think it especially helps those girls who live far away since they can now rule all night, set some sleep on the bus, and attend classes the next day instead of losing cuts.

Pinkey Stewart,
Sophomore

The new one is much better than the original because then those girls who live close by. Also, nearly everyone can travel all night now, which, under the old ruling, they had to travel by day.

Onalee Hosier,
Senior

In my opinion, the present rule is much fairer. Living on the fourth floor of Gilchrist, I realize that it means a considerable time-saving through late at night, and I therefore feel that the extra second light flash until 7 a m should be reserved for sleep.

Betty Bedford,
Sophomore

I'm in favor of no rule at all, except after special holidays. We go home for week-ends anyway, so those of us who live long distance from Tally, I believe we should be allowed to arrive any time we want to since all of us do not go home, and arrive at the same time; and, since the bus and train schedules are so irregular.

Mary Lee Johnson,
Sophomore

Russian Army Advances On the Road to Berlin

By BETTY WEAVER

The roar of the Russian Army in the Battle for Berlin this week sounded more loudly than ever before in the ears of the German troops rushing eastward toward the front and the refugees running westward.

While the world waits to find out whether the Oder River can successfully be used by the Germans as a barrier guarding the capital and the North German plans, people of Berlin are preparing to protect their city against a Russian attack which may come either as a direct attack or siege.

The Oder River is not wide enough to make a strategic barrier as is the Rhine, but it could be used to advantage in covering flanks, counter-attacks and it might possibly keep the Russians from having complete freedom of movement across the great German plains.

Before the war Berlin was the fifth largest city in the world with a population of 4,330,000. Her administration center is surrounded by sprawling suburbs, slums and industrial areas which the Russians can easily circle or attack from almost any position.

The Russians astonished not only the Germans but the entire world with their fantastic advance of both armies and supplies. They apparently used the technique of letting one unit attack an allotted time, when another unit followed them closely, but not further then the units would chance places thus keeping fresh troops on the front lines. Supplies were probably advanced in the same way which allowed truck convoys to be loaded and ready to advance as far as the offensive. Using this method the Russian advance did not have to halt while they waited for fresh troops and supplies to catch up with them.

It is the choosing of the Russians that will decide the fate of Berlin. Even in the event that Berlin is put out of the war and the Nazis capitulate, their administration system cut off it will not necessarily mean the immediate defeat of Germany.

It is already reported that tremendous new stocks of supplies are being transferred into the mountain strongholds in the Munich area which may become the German inner fortress where Hitler will make his last defense after Berlin and norther Germany are conquered.

The area stretches from Strasbourg on the Rhine nearby to Vienna in the east and from the Italian border in the south to the area near Prague in the north. Hitler's famous Berchtesgaden and Munich might become German headquarters. The fanatical Germans are far from beaten even in the darkest hour of their six years of war.

Two Sociologists Visit FSC Campus

Miss Sarah Benedict, who graduated from Florida State College in 1926, and Dr R Clyde White of Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio, were here on campus this past weekend to confer with staff members and majors in the department of sociology and social work. Miss Benedict, who is doing family welfare work in Louisville, Kentucky, and teaching part time in the school of social work at the University of Louisville was on vacation here in Florida but held conferences here at FSC at the request of the university.

Dr White, who is the author of several sociology text books used here on campus was here on the tour he is making for the purpose of studying welfare administration in the Southeast and examining those students desiring to do graduate work in the field of social work. Before joining the faculty of Western Reserve University, he taught in the school of social sciences at the University of Chicago at the same time Margaret Bristol, assistant professor of sociology at FSC, was a member of that faculty. Dr White has also made two trips to Europe for the purpose of studying social conditions.

Press Club Meets

Annual election of officers for the Press club will be held tomorrow night when the club will meet at 5 o'clock in the Flambeau office, according to Rachael Ball, past president of the club.

Plans for the meetings to be held during the rest of this school year will also be completed.

Former FSC Student Publishes New Book

Miami Muse' Features Poems By Vianne Bloodworth

"The Miami Muse," a weekly column in the Miami Daily News, issued to Florida's poets, set apart in rather unique fashion in the rotunda of Vianne Shelton Bloodworth, former Florida State college student. Miss Bloodworth is recently published a book of poetry, "Full Wing," which is a memory of a friend killed in an airplane accident. The "Muse" solicited poets from the book and featured about its stark simplicity.

Two years ago at the age of twelve Miss Bloodworth won first place in a national poetry contest conducted by the Happy Page editors of the News and she wrote the traditional song for the Ada Merritt junior high school in Miami. She was a member of the Journal Honor Society while attending senior high and was one of the editors of the Distaff during the three years at FSC.

She also served as vice president of Delta Delta Delta sorority and secretary of the Cotillion club.

By P L THOMSON

Summing up her activities of the past few years, Mildred Zindler, co-editor of the Distaff, said, "I came here to FSC in February of 1940, and left in February of 1942, and have thought about around ever since."

In qualifying her statement, Mildred, now back at FSC as a senior, explained that among the places where she had "flitted" were Tampa, Miami, New York, and Washington, D. C. During this time she had had many experiences, the most interesting of which, she said, were connected with her life as an artist in Greenwich Village and with her stay in Washington as a photographer third - class in the WAVES, into which she went as the first recruit from Tampa.

Immediately after leaving FSC in 1940, Mildred went to Tampa where she lived with an aunt and had a working scholarship at Tampa University.

"Then," she said, "I got the scholarship." From Tampa she went to New York, where she had been born.

In New York, Mildred did "everything", in the way of jobs. Her first job, a bookkeeping one lasted a week, a fact of which Mildred, who knows nothing of bookkeeping, is rather proud.

While in New York, Mildred whose chief interest is art, lived a "quiet life" in Greenwich Village, around the corner from two night clubs. The environment had a large, low window near which

Students to Assist Filing of Incomes

Summer Workers May Claim Refund from Salaries

Miss Luella Richey, associate professor of accounting, announces that the members of the class that studied the income tax course first semester are available to assist students who should make out income tax returns. In most cases the purpose will be to claim a refund.

Many students worked during the summer and their employers withheld a portion of their salary as tax. But if a person earned less than $500 she is not required to pay a tax, and may therefore claim a refund from the government. That is all that is withheld. If a student worked a longer time, and received more than $500 her employer probably withheld more than she is actually required to pay, and she also has a right to claim a refund.

These returns and claims must be in before March 15. Refer to Marian Lambeth, chairman, room 239 Landis, who will assign students to a member of the class.

Odd-Even Hockey Practice Begins

Odd-Even hockey practice started last Monday when the opposites of the third sports season.

Both groups will take up individual techniques and fundamentals, the Evens on Mondays, and Wednesdays and the Odds on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5 o'clock. / the same time on Fridays both groups will practice.

Alice Trisler is the leader of Odds, and Evelyn Stuckey, the leader of the Evens. Evelyn said that it is not too late for students who are interested to come out and participate, and she urged them to do so.

"We're going to get even with Odds this season," she said, because the Odds won last year."

Tarpon Club Holds Minnow Tryouts

First tryouts for Minnows were held yesterday afternoon from five to six o'clock in the pool and Minnow practices will be held on Monday, February 12, at the same time.

A practice period will be held this afternoon with Tarpon members helping those who need help on strokes and form.

Betty Jane Gilliland, vice-president and minnow trainer, announced that the May Day performance will be the first one for the minnows who will be selected after these tryouts.

"Anyone can try out for Tarpon and the more the better," Betty Jane said. "Only you can fulfill the swimming standards of Tarpon will be selected."

IRC Acquires Books

The International Relation Club held its weekly meeting at 8 o'clock Thursday in the Student Alumnae clubroom. Separate committees were chosen to sponsor defense more and to work on the library display.

New books acquired by the club are: Beyond Victory, by Ruth Anshen; Ten Years in Japan, by Joseph Grew; United States Occupation Northwest, by Benjamin Kizer; Conquest of the World by Weisert and Stefanson; Pioneers in World Order, by Harriet Davis; Peoples of Southeast Asia, by Bruno Lasker.

Organ Students Will Give Program

A program of selections chosen and prepared by some of the organ students as semester projects will be presented to all the organ students in Westcott Vesper room Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mrs Ramona Beard, associate professor of organ, piano, and theory, stated that this will be the third such meeting of her students. Later in the year programs similar to this will be open to the public and will be broadcast, she also said.

Alumnae of FSC Write Letters

Capt. James Cook of Knoxville brought news of Lieutenant Fox, USNC, who graduated in 1936. He was the novelty of wearing a pure feathered duck pancho-lopion.

Washington, D C, is the temporary home for two of the FSC girls in the service. Eileen Arnold Bell is working with the Red Cross, awaiting a transfer to Washington to accept a position as overseas secretary with the American Red Cross. After completing a training period she will be assigned to a hospital in a foreign country. Eileen graduated from FSC in 1937.

Betty Lou Hall, last year, Margie Lambert, now seaman second class in the WAVES, February 1 graduated at Washington, writes that she had dinner one night recently with Ruby Wells, Jane Wood Crowe, Paulette Nolan and Jeanne Herman. They had a trip to Boston to see Vicki Lewis—"all fine Esterens," Margie terms it. After reading in the Alumnae paper about the FSC alumnae meeting to be held February 17 in Washington, Margie says she certainly plans to attend.

"I have been in England since August 1, 1944, and am so glad I came," says Emilie Blackburn who graduated in 1939. She is now attached to a hospital through the American Red Cross. She, with four other workers, carry on a recreational program for the patients and care for their personal and social problems. She says, "the boys on the 'Queen' are raising ——. We really hear of some experiences and see the results of what they have been through. The hardest part is to see them have to go back over there again. Everyone at home should put forth every effort to help all she can."

Somewhere in England also is Lt. Eleanor Wilson, 1941 graduate, dietitian at the fifty-third general hospital. Lt Shuman, having completed her first year there, said that "the past year has certainly been filled with many pleasures. We had the experience of setting up our own hospital, which is much nicer than moving into a hospital some other unit has been using. Since D-day, we have been almost filled up all the time." Her crowd has been lucky though, she says, as they have a nice Officer's Club and beach right at their station. The operation was also defeated.

A new motion to vote on the basis of no further a trial period, with a committee appointed to work out details later was made. It was stated that it would

30 Methodist Girls Lead City Programs

Deputation Work Is Planned For Rural Churches

Over 30 Methodist college girls are participating in a program of deputation work under the joint leadership of Miss Alpheretta Leeper, director of the Methodist student organization, and Miss Florence Jones, rural worker for the Tallahassee district of the church.

Each girl will go into a Methodist church near Tallahassee to lead a youth program on one or more weekends between now and the end of the semester.

As it is now planned, four girls will go out as a team under the supervision of Miss Jones, for a weekend. They will lead a recreation program and training class on Saturday night. On Sunday the team will be in charge of worship and will probably Lave another class session. The weekend deputation is planned as a spur to increase the church interest of Methodist youth in the churches visited.

There will be a training class tomorrow for all girls who wish to participate in the deputation, afternoon and evening, at the Methodist student house.

Soccer and Hockey Sport Season Open

Many members of last year's Even and Odd sports teams are out again this year as the third sports season opened this week.

Babe Evans, leader of the Evens, will be aided by Miss Grace I Fox, instructor now, that senate can send the original no-rule recommendation back to College Council as a law, to be approved by them without referral to Executive Council (as is necessary in case of a recommendation). The motion was seconded.

Discussion continued. One representative asked for the reason why the mid-semester blackout rule had been rolled out, and was told that possibly health was involved there, and that students coming through the halls later than eleven missed disturbance.

It was also suggested that Executive Council might have had reasons for the rule and powers to make it that Student Senate had not thought of. The president's powers to discipline were again mentioned.

Several senators asked the purpose of sending the original rule back to College Council, since it had not supported the senate recommendation when first submitted.

In reply, a senior senator rose to say that Executive has been enough constitutional rights, and that they need to stand behind their rights when authorities infringe upon them. She added that she attended and would be above the Student Senate's will if the original proposal is insisted upon and sent through legislative channels again.

Senate voted down the re-sending of the original recommendation. A substitute motion was made that the proposal be sent back through the legislative channels to have a trial period of perhaps a year during which statistics should be gathered. This motion was also defeated.

A new motion to vote on the basis of no further a trial period, with a committee appointed to work out details later was made. It was stated that it would the night of students and staff in the residence halls."

Debate began with the reading of the authorities' decision.

It was immedia'ely pointed out that if the decision was not based on considerations of student health or academic pursuits, it en the action was unconstitutional and was an infringement of student powers.

Isabel Rogers offered an explanation of the council's action by reading from the College Constitution that the president of the college is empowered to take any action to regulate student discipline, and is given general powers.

Janet Pancost objected that in the faculty-student agreement known as the CGA constitution the president had delegated all powers to the students not including supervision of matters of health, safety, academic matters and household management.

Cordella Barclay moved since the matter was within student jurisdiction now, that senate so send the original no-rule recommendation back to College Council as a law, to be approved by them without referral to Executive Council (as is necessary in case of a recommendation). The motion was seconded.

Discussion continued. One representative asked for the reason why the mid-semester blackout rule had been rolled out, and was told that possibly health was involved there, and that students coming through the halls later than eleven missed disturbance.

It was also suggested that Executive Council might have had reasons for the rule and powers to make it that Student Senate had not thought of. The president's powers to discipline were again mentioned.

Camp Parties, Informal Suppers Sorority Activities This Week

Week-end party at camp and informal suppers constitute the main activities of the campus sororities this week.

Alpha Chi Omega pledges and active are to be entertained Sunday morning at nine o'clock at a breakfast given by the pledges. Jessie McCalla is chairman of the committee in charge. The chapter has also elected two new activities chairmen, Helen Ross and Jean Ann Graham.

Last week-end the members and pledges of Alpha Gamma Delta spent Saturday and Sunday at camp. Betty Jo Mcarter, Carolyn Haston, and Katherine Rogers were in charge of all arrangements.

Mrs Frank Bixby, financial advisor of the chapter from Jacksonville is now visiting at the Delta Delta Delta house. Sunday morning the pledges will give a breakfast for the actives, and Sunday night there will be a supper.

Merrill Lonz, chairman of the Delta Zeta pledges is planning an evening of games and skits for the actives next Saturday night. Gene McGoglin, former president of Pan Hellenic and member of Delta Zeta, graduated from PEP yesterday.

Sunday, the eighteenth, the actives and pledges of Chi Omega are planning a supper to be cooked outside on the new grill.

Delta Pi Epsilon entertained last Saturday night at a formal dance, the theme of which was "A Night to Remember." The dance contest of which Dr. and Mrs H P Oross were the judges, was won by Lean Bevan and Roy Baker, who were crowned King and Queen of the dance. The house was decorated in blue and white with stars to give the effect of heaven. Sylvia Moncrief was in charge of refreshments. Next Saturday the pledges are to be entertained by the actives at a pop corn party.

Kappa Alpha Theta members an pledges will spend the weekend at camp, going out Saturday and coming back Sunday afternoon. Peggy Barker, Secretary to Dean Olivia N Norman and alumna of the local chapter will accompany the group. Jennie Hammond, president of the chapter is interning in Fort Lauderdale this semester and Peggy Barker is acting president during her absence.

Three alumnae of Phi Mu, Mary Anna Boardman Hankins, president of the local council, Mrs. Edgar Lee, Eleanor King, and Tina Warnock, visited here last week-end.

Three of Kappa Kappa Gamma's new officers were installed Monday night. Betty Hunter is the new president. Charlotte Thorpe, first vice president, and Doris Dunaway, second vice president.

Queen Unveiled At J M Annual Dance

A queen of hearts will be unveiled at the Jennie Murphree annual dance tomorrow night in the Student Alumnae building. The theme of the dance will be Valentines and this idea will be carried out in the decorations.

The queen has been chosen by the vote of the students of the dormitory from girls nominated from each floor and will be kept secret until the night. The girls nominated were: Enid Krouse alphabet floor; Laura Bishop, unit 1 floor; Jane Whitfield and Betty LaRue, first floor; Connie McCall and Betty Jo Mcarter, second floor; and Elouise Moore and Dorothy Bower, third floor. The girls not elected queen will act as attendants.

The dance will be held from 8:30 until 11:30 p m and the music will be furnished by the college swing band. There will be a program of stunts and dancing.

Guests of the hall at the dance will be Dr. and Mrs. H M Ivins, K E Gulick, Mr and Mrs Frank Sykora, Miss Enid Krouse, Miss Marjorie Judy, Mrs. Zona Irick, and Mrs Melanie Turner.

Students Present Music Recital

Twelve students presented a student recital Wednesday afternoon in the Recital Hall of the Music building.

Miss Lucile Wagner, assistant professor of piano and in charge of the program, gave a sketch of each composer before his compositions were played.

Those who took part in the formal department under Miss Mary Elizabeth Cawthon in Part Music and piano methods, began the program by playing Jensen's Reigen.

Other students who participated were Florida State College students who are in the school of music. Ann Lowe Ward played a bassoon solo, Concerto in F. Mary Ann Hall played third movements by Mozart with Wilda Hayes as accompanist; Rosetta Leonard played Allegro by Mozart; Mary McCormack, piano, Scrollo by Alberni; Frances Blackburn, piano, Prelude in G minor by Monteverdi and Rapson tempre by Gluck; Mary Hall, with Gladys Koch as accompanist.

The four last selections on the program were taken from Professor Erick Chopin's compositions. Sidney Lanier played a saxophone, E flat alto, solo, Nocturne in E flat, accompanied by Margaret Hamilton; Jeanne Hunter played Polonoise C minor; Ann Townsend played Waltz in A flat major; and Eleanor Bragg, piano, Ballade F major

Betty McCallum Weds Captain R A Emmons

Betty Love McCallum became the bride of Capt Richard A Emmons of the Army Air Corps at noon Tuesday of last week in the Baptist church in Cuplley, where she has been living for the past year.

Betty Love, who was a senior at FSC before her marriage, graduated, were the traditional white bride's dress and carried a bouquet of white orchids and fern in white orchid in the center of the bouquet.

A member of Alpha Delta Pi, social sorority, and of Village Vamps, Miss McCallum was her only attendant. Dolly Ann Sisk a sorority sister. Dolly Ann wore a pale blue dress and carried a bouquet of gold carnations.

The bride and groom, who first met in Tallahassee when Betty Love was a freshman, left immediately following the ceremony for Yuma, Arizona, where Capt Emmons is stationed.

Dunstan Recital

Miss Ruby Dunstan, pianist, will present a recital tonight at 8:15 in Westcott auditorium.

Her program will include Partita by Bach, Sonata, Opus 2 No 2 by Beethoven, Scherzo, Opus 39 by Chopin, and Prelude, Chorale and Fugue by Franck.

Miss Dunstan is a graduate of Florida State College and has attended the Juilliard School of Music in New York City.

She is now an instructor in the school of music here

Herring to Teach

Mrs Helen Sharp Herring, a new faculty member of the history department, acted as substitute teacher for the last part of the past semester and the whole of this semester in the place of the late Dr Wallace M True

A graduate of the University of Wisconsin, Mrs Herring received her master of arts in history at Florida State College in 1940. She then taught in the public schools until her marriage to Mr Charles K Herring on January 3, 1942. Mr Herring is a lieutenant in the air corps in the South Pacific. When last heard from she was living in Atlanta, Georgia

FSC Graduate Newspaperwoman Flies Here on Assignment

A old graduate flew back to town last Tuesday.

What's more she flew back on an official assignment for her newspaper.

Sarah Worth, journalism graduate of 1942, was sent up to Tallahassee by her paper, the Tampa Times, to cover a meeting of the State Board of Administration at the Lake Ella Hotel while there she found a few hours visit to the campus.

When she was a student here, Sarah was active in student activities, having been associate editor of the Flambeau and chairman of the local chapter of the National Student Federation of America, which, at that time, was active on campus.

As shown by copies of the Flambeau editorials published during the year Sarah was editor, Sarah was also a leader in numerous changes on the campus, taking a leading part particularly in efforts to change Senior Hall. When asked whether or not she had changed her mind about these things since leaving college, Sarah said she emphatically had not.

Following her graduation, Sarah was chosen as one of eight journalism students in the United States to be awarded a fellowship for journalistic research in New York. where she spent one year. She then joined the staff of the Tampa Times and has been with that paper ever since.

Also on the staff of the Tampa Times is another FSC journalism graduate, the former Frances Brunson and until recently still a third, Harriett Benson Grimes, has a reporter on the Times. Harriet, at the present time, publishes a weekly school paper.

English Teacher Publishes Article

Mrs Lou W Miller, instructor in English here at Florida State College, has published an article in issue of the News Letter of the College English Association which is on a somewhat study project one of her freshmen English classes did last semester. In the article Mrs Miller told how the project had materialized from from a dictionary study assignment.

What Can Be Learned from a Dictionary" was the title of the article to the original project which began with the development of a one-page newspaper with a column, each student of the small class chose one topic on which to write a paragraph. In class the paragraphs were fitted together to make one composite account of the topic. Pro-fessor Miller read the paragraph immediately preceding and following the one finished, transition was gained in this way and the finished paper was typed for the publication made for all members of the class.

Party Is Planned For Day Students

At a meeting of the Day Students yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, plans were discussed for a party to be held Friday night at which time a loving cup will be presented to the outstanding freshman day student. This cup which is awarded annually was won by Jeanne Rowe last year, who will retain it until presentation to the new freshman. The student receiving the cup has her name placed upon it.

Another Co-Ed Boy contest is to be held by this group on Feb 20 and 21. The most popular boy on the campus, as determined from the most votes, by the amount of war bonds that he purchases, will be awarded the title.

A picnic lunch is to be held at the Day Students on February 15. Mary Geiger, president, said, "We enjoyed the picnic we had last year so much that we decided to have another this year." Visitor of honor at the picnic will be Mrs Lou Miller, the day student advisor and Nancy Miller, who was president last year.

On February 27, the Day Students will entertain with a dance in connection, an officer from Dale Mabry who will relate his experiences while overseas.

Films to Be Shown On Sunday Night

Kodachrome films taken by Professor Frank Sykora will be shown Sunday night from 8 to 8:30 in the Student Alumnae auditorium This program is sponsored by the Social Standards Council and is one of the regular bi-monthly programs which will be one Sunday a month by the Council.

Thus Sunday's program has been changed from the regular 4 o'clock hour to 8 o'clock because of the nature of the event.

Those who saw the travel films of Dr C P Haskins shown between semesters will recall his mention of these films of Mr Sykora's. The latter has been fortunate in securing Mr Sykora to show these films from his private collection. Doi Boardman, president of the Social Standards Council stated.

Spirit, Unity Is Topic of Meeting

An open discussion on class spirit highlighted the meeting of the sophomore class Tuesday afternoon in the Augusta Conradi theater, under the direction of Bo Peep Shell, class president.

In addition to conducting the open discussion in which various class members suggested devices to promote more class unity, Bo Peep reminded the sophomores about the forthcoming Sophomore-Senior breakfast, of which Harriet Kirk is chairman, and the class and College Government Association elections.

The meeting was then turned over to Nell Clark, chairman of Sophomore Hop, who announced that the formal will be held from 8 to 11:45 on Saturday night, February 10. Accordine to Nell, it will be "$50 star or drag."

Nell asked the sophomores to sign up on the bulletin board in the Student Alumnae building so on one of the many committees she stressed the need of help on Virginia Reel, the dance ending the decorations. She added that the work would begin immediately after the Valentine dance afternoon, and that all help would be greatly appreciated.

Health, Recreation Topic of PEA Talks

The regular monthly meeting of the Physical Education Association was held Wednesday night in the auditorium. The meeting was called to order by the president, Margie Platt, and a discussion of Health, Recreation and Physical Education for girls after the war was held. Miss Papazian and Babe Evans spoke about physical education. Miss Papazian discussed health and Miss Greenberg talked on recreation after which her remarks led to a panel discussion of this subject.

After the new physical education majors and minors were introduced to the members, Dr Hollis Caswell spoke about plans for summer camping and the connection of recreation with the war effort.

Announcements were made for the Co-Ed Volley-ball game the direction of Marion Welch.

Seniors Learn of Map-Making Division

The seniors held their class meeting yesterday afternoon in 303 Westcott.

During the meeting Mrs Olive Cross made an announcement concerning the re-scheduling of a room of the war department. She explained the opportunities offered by the map-making division to the students. These advantages included payment during training for map-makers at a salary of $2100 a year. The map-making course has been offered this year, she explained, but previous training is not necessary.

Betty Lewis conducted the nomination for a senate representative. Those nominated were Rachael Ball, Froggy Pemble, Mary Lee Walker, Virginia Ann. A senate position will be held Tuesday and finals will be Thursday in lower Westcott.

The three senior members for the prom court of the coming Pi-Kap Prom were voted for during the meeting.

Parker to Teach

Beginning this new semester Miss Edna Parker of Stuart, Florida will become the second grade teacher at the demonstration school.

Before taking this position Miss Parker was the elementary supervisor of Martin County, Florida.

She received her master's degree in elementary education at Duke University in North Carolina.

Practices Start

Extracurricular modern dance practices have begun. Those students who have had modern dance previously and who are interested in dancing in the Spring Concert on April 6, are asked to contact Miss Margaret Clements, instructor in physical education

Wednesday Begins '45 Lenten Season

The Canterbury Club will begin the 1945 Lenten season with the celebration on Holy Communion on Ash Wednesday, February 14, at 7:45. The Rev Allin Bullen will be the celebrant.

Special Lenten forums will be held at Ruge Hall, with members of the clergy in Florida taking part during this season which lasts for 40 days preceding Easter.

The Right Rev Arthur Lea of St Paul's by the Sea, Jacksonville Beach, will be the first guest speaker on February 14 at 8 o'clock. His topic will be "If God Be Man."

The Young People's Service League is planning a Pancake Supper at Ruge Hall on Shrove Tuesday, February 13. Price of the supper is 50 cents. All students and faculty of Florida State College are invited to attend.

Modern Dance Will Be Competitive

Odd-Even modern dance will be a sport this year in which the dance groups will be selected on a competitive basis.

Miss Margaret L Clements, instructor in physical education, will be the faculty advisor to the Odds and Evens, with Margie Platt, leader of the Odds and Ann Wingate, leader of the Evens.

Tentative plans are to present the dance in Doak Campbell, May 10. Part of the program will consist of a series of dance techniques in which all who have their practice participate. This will be equivalent to class games in other sports and will require 11 practice points as the other sports of this season.

The Odd-Even dances each team will decide on a theme which will be developed in a group or a series of shorter dances.

To judge the dances there will be selected by the faculty staff and possibly alumnae.

No previous experience in dance is required and the sport is open to everyone, stated the leaders. The Evens will practice on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, and the Odds on Tuesday's Thursdays and Fridays.

History Group Sees Floridiana Library

Pi Alpha Theta history honorary society, met Thursday evening at the home of Dr Mark Boyd, head of the Rockefeller Foundation in this section, to see his library of Floridiana.

The group has valuable maps, pamphlets, oriinal water colors and sketches of early Florida history. His is the most extensive collection in Florida.

Miss Daisy Parker had charge of the meeting and those attending were Dr Frank Sykora, Cleo Sapp, Frances Hines, Marry Nell Pinholster and Mary Florence Fox.

Moon Speaks On Education

Reasons Given for Trend To General Education

Dr Robert C Moon, director of curriculum, spoke before the Faculty Study Group on Curriculum Modification Tuesday evening in the lounge of the Student-Alumnae building. He presented some ideas and conclusions reached by a group of educators who recently met in Washington, D C Chicago to discuss and analyze problems of modern education.

Dr Moon chose as the subject for discussion General Education, which he said, "like ancient Gaul would be treated under three heads." Reasons for the trends towards General Education, definition of General Education and the valid objectives of General Education.

He gave as some reasons for the trend toward General Education such factors as changes in the student body changes in social economic conditions and changes in the needs of students.

Defining General Education Dr Moon suggested that there might be two ways of interpreting it: first, as education made available to all without universal need, and second, to a type of education universally valid for all the students in general. The individual possessed of general education should be, said Dr Moon, effectively eqlipped for living. Inherent in the idea of general education is that of specific discipline as in subject matter whereby the individual acquires the qualities of precision, appreciation, opinionation the habits for constructing coherent patterns of thought and reflective synthesis of all patterns built in the learning process.

The objectives of general education as presented by Dr Moon are the self-realization of the individual, the development of the individual in human relationship the development of the individual as a free winner, and the development of the individual as a citizen.

In the discussion which followed Dr Moon's talk, several interesting ideas were brought out. Dr Barrow while agreeing with many points was made for religious teaching for character building in the program. Dr Pitner suggested that before more was done in regard to the curriculum there might be wise to examine the results of that already participated in by students and faculty. Dr Heinlein stated his belief that the curriculum of the general education would be faced in terms of student needs.

Dean Sandels presented the constructive idea that each student should be allowed to chose the field or area of knowledge best suited to his tastes and talents and that the field of area to choose electives.

The general conclusions were that there are certain areas of education giving enrichment to life and that there is no conflicting professional or vocational training. The function of the faculty members within these areas is to provide the best instruction possible therein.

Party Plans Made

Playshift committee is making plans for a George Washington Birthday Party for February 17.

Tentative plans for the program include Jerry Halpern, singing Ida Lee Senis, giving a reading and the tap dancing class giving a dance.

Student Senate to Continue Discussion of Trial Period In Meeting This Afternoon

Legislative Representatives Accept Committee Report Abolishing 12 O'Clock Rule Putting Students on Honor

Student Senate will continue discussion of having a trial period without a rule governing students' return from overnight absences when it meets this afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The principle of the trial period was approved by Senate members at the meeting Monday. The assistance came after discussion of a three-point proposal submitted by the Senate-appointed committee, headed by Mary L. White. The committee suggested the following three points:

1. That there should be a trial period without a rule governing students' return from overnight absences for one college year, winter session.

2. That the Student Senate should elect a person in each housing unit to keep the record of the girls returning between the hours of 11 p.m and 7 a.m and the reasons for their returned at this time.

3. That at the end of the trial period, a report should be made to Student Senate which will include the records kept during that year. This information would be compiled and presented to Student Senate at the first quarter of the following winter session. The report would then be used by the Legislative Council for its decision. College Council would use this report in their decision to the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs for approval.

Senator, during the discussion, brought out another principle rather than regulation, asked what principle the student body would be living under the trial period. It was decided the trial period would have the college to get away from.

Campbell Expresses Opinion on System

Senator Idea Divides Year, Enables Students

In a recent interview on the system, Dr. Doak S Campbell, president of Florida State College, stated that the system is a desirable one from the standpoint of students. He added that the way which it divides the school year examinations for the first time would come at the beginning of the Christmas holidays, during summer holidays; and under the plan, the summer quarter would be the most like the others, the quarter system saves a great deal of money in the matter of transfer of credits.

The one disadvantage of the University Administration, there are some advantages but the main one is that the university is in school the year round, all else should be administered under the same plan. Many have developed a plan of seven to a quarter, but president Doak S. Campbell discarded such as undesirable.

Dr. Campbell stated that each of the objections raised to the system are based on objection to change rather than to the system itself. He does not thought that there is any disadvantage of the system in having to register more

Wilgus to Lecture Here February 22

Dr. A Curtis Wilgus, professor of Latin American history at George Washington University, is consultant for the division of information of the office of coordinator of Inter-American affairs and will speak here February 22 and 23. He will lecture on "The New Pan-American Policy in Transition," at 8 on February 22.

The next day Dr Wilgus will talk to various classes and other groups on the following topics: Democracy and Dictatorships in the Americas; Cultural Cooperation with Latin America; What Is the Teacher of Spanish to Know About Latin America; How to Develop Proper Attitudes?; Social Backgrounds of Latin America and Understanding the Americas.

2383 Students Enrol at FSCW

Large Registration Places College Second in U S

A total enrollment of 2383 students at Florida State College this semester exceeds that of last semester by 143, placing Florida State College second in enrollment among all other state colleges in the country, according to the latest statistics received from the Registrar's office. Now as State College for Women is rated first, but Florida State College has been claiming standby on them for the past three years.

The College of Arts and Sciences has the largest number of students enrolled with 1454 as compared to 1322 of last semester. An increase of 56 more students is enrolled in the School of Education, making a total of 510 this semester, while the School of Home Economics has a slight decrease in student enrollment amounting to 8 students less than the 283 students enrolled last semester. Increasing their total this semester is the School of Music with 114 students having entered.

According to the statistics stat-

Brotherhood Week Will Be Observed

Rabbi Goldman Reveals Plans For February 18 to 25

Brotherhood week, February 18 through 25, will be observed by Florida State College as well as the city of Tallahassee, according to Rabbi Alex Goldman, partial director of the week's activities. In keeping with Tallahassee's progressive spirit, the college will observe week which is in its twelfth year of sponsorship by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Plans for observing the week include a convocation address by Dr Doak S Campbell, president of the college, as to the purposes and ideals of the week.

A special radio program to be presented from the college studio in celebration of National Brotherhood Week has been scheduled for Thursday, February 22, at 8:30. Rabbi Goldman, and Isabel Rogers are the speakers. Leah Setzer, pianist, will play the accompaniment for the program.

Space on the editorial pages of the Flambeau will be given over to editorials by three staff members of varied faiths, and news space will be used for publicity purposes.

Various denominational groups will hold discussions and have been asked to invite other groups to attend their religious services. Every college group among the dormitories is asked by Rabbi Goldman to discuss some particular phase of the spirit of the week. The topic is "The Place of Religion Today in a Lasting Peace" has been suggested.

Distoff Delayed

The Distaff which was scheduled to appear last Saturday will not appear until the week-end, according to Elizabeth McFarland, editor. The delay was due to printing difficulties.

Plans for the next issue will be immediately, and the deadline will be announced later. Elizabeth stressed the need for more student contributions to the magazine in the future. She also stated that there are some exchange of magazines with other colleges, a practice not in the past, but that from now on this will be a regular custom.

Time Marches On— But FSCW Clocks Are Out of Step

Time marches on here at Florida State College, but the clocks on campus are not in step.

Assuming that the clock in Westcott is correct, the Science building clock is three minutes behind time. Thinking the Science building clock by four minutes is the clock in the recreation room of the Student Alumnae building which is followed three later by the Education building's timepiece.

Over in Landis Hall the clocks in the rooms differ even though there is a big electric clock in each floor. According to her clock, Isabel Rogers is about 20 minutes early to class and in keeping her appointments, while Margaret Pridy is probably ten minutes late

College Paper Is Suspended

Editor Faces Expulsion For Race Editorial

An editorial dealing with the race question this week brought down temporary suspension of the Flat Hat, student newspaper of William and Mary college, and may bring expulsion of its co-ed writer.

According to Associated Press dispatch of Wednesday, suspension still loomed that Marilyn Kasimirsie, student editor, might be reinstated for the publication.

President John Pomfret, has said that a statement of administrative policy regarding the recently uncensored publication would be given soon, following a faculty meeting. Pomfret said that with the suspension of the student writer he did not think a part of the matter I am studying."

"There will be no Flat Hat this week," he continued, saying that it had been temporarily suspended.

"It is possible that the paper would be more concerned with setting up some editorial supervision of the paper," he added, inviting else

The college board of trustees, meeting Saturday in Richmond, expressed "thorough disapproval and condemnation" of the editorial of the college administration and faculty to take corrective and disciplinary measures.

At a mass meeting Monday, Dr.

Mortar Board Plans To Entertain Army

Mortar Board plans a trip to Camp Gordon Johnson next Sunday afternoon for the purpose of entertaining the Army personnel stationed there.

Betty Lou Metz, Mortar Board member in charge, states that although the plans are not definite as yet, a general idea has been outlined.

Costume jewelry will serve as mistress of ceremonies, and a musical trio, a dance trio, and accordian selection will be featured. "It is hoped," Betty said, "that we will be able to have a community sing following the regular program."

Zeta Phi Eta, speech honorary, will accompany Mortar Board to the camp and present a series of one-act plays, it was announced.

Ten members of Senior hall will be excused from dinner Sunday and take the trip with them.

Bicycling and "Hair-Do's" Concerned FSC Girl of 1930

PATRICIA HILL

A survey of campus affairs in 1930 would result in a display of problems and occurrences similar to those we experience today. This can probably be blamed on the fact that, perhaps unfortunately, girls always have been and undoubtedly always will be girls.

One month there was a startling rumor that a sleepwalker was making the rounds every night,

Tickets Will Be Available

Mia Slavenska and Partner Appear Here March 7

Reserved tickets on the blue series for the forthcoming Artist Series program may be obtained February 22 through 28, with the exception of Saturday and Sunday, from 4 to 5 o'clock in the Student-Alumnae building, according to Mr Karl O Kuerstiener, dean of the school of music.

Appearing on the program of March 7, which will be held at 8:15 in Westcott auditorium ,are Mia Slavenska, Yugoslavian ballet dancer, and her partner, David Tihmar, a native Floridian.

Born in Yugoslavia at the crossroads of Occidental and Oriental culture, Mia Slavenska is typically Slavic. Having won the Dance Olympia in 1936, competing with representatives of 14 other nations, Mia Slavenska became known around the continent as "the dancer of the era." She was introduced to the United States and Canada in 1938 in conjunction with her French film "Ballerina."

"My wish to become a dancer must have been planted in me by my mother and father in the theater . Still, my father permitted me to take my dancing lessons only because it was an ugly and delicate that a form of exercise proved to be very necessary. I took my first lesson when I was four years old and I cried all night many times because my mother was so fat, I couldn't believe it was possible to reach a fat person to be a dancer," Mia Slavenska declared. When asked about her favorite role, she will answer "Odile" as her choice.

Her partner, David Tihmar, has danced in numerous and varied American productions and in 1942-1943 played the leading role de Monte Carlo as they toured North and South America. Mr Tihmar's debut took place at the Hollywood Bowl in Adolph Bohm's ballet, "Bronze Horseman" and in summers of 1943 and 1944 he had the dancing lead in the Broadway hit out of the Hollywood "Oklahoma." He has starred in numerous Jerome Kern musical features, some of the more famous being "One Night of Love," "Lady Dance Music," "Firefly" and "Universal" with Jeannette MacDonald, "The Great Waltz" with Miliza Korjus; "Pride and Prejudice" with Greer Garson; and "Broadway Melody," with Eleanor Powel. Mr Tihmar states that he is interested in all forms of dance, and also excels in track and swimming.

Seniors Apply

Seniors must make applications for their degrees and return them by February 24 to the Registrar's office. No diplomas can be issued until this is done. Orders for invitations to graduation must be placed in the Book Store by March 10. These invitations are expected to arrive approximately two weeks before graduation.

Liberalism of the South Is Affirmed By Carleton In Address Tuesday Night

"In Re That Conservative South" Is Speaker's Topic; Audience Composed of AAUW Members, Guests, Students Hear Talk

Regardless of all the weapons which the conservatives are able to employ they have never been able to detach the South from the popular front which is slowly and surely bringing social democracy to the United States. So said Dr William G Carleton, from the University of Florida, Gainesville, at the February meeting of the American Association of University Women held Tuesday evening in the auditorium of the Student-Alumnae building.

In speaking of his topic, which was termed "In Re That Conservative South", Dr Carleton said that he felt some trepidation because of the sensitiveness of native Southerners, but that he had been in the South for over twenty years and had obtained first hand information from traveling over much of the South. Dr Carleton, who is professor of political science at the University as well as chairman of the social science of the General College, recently toured the army camps lecturing under Armorship of the Special Department.

Limiting his speech to the political aspects of the conservative South, Dr Carleton related facts to show that during presidential campaigns, speculations of a revolt in the conservative South are heard. These speculations have fallen through and the South has always given Democratic except on one occasion, the election of 1928. The real cause for these false prophecies he declared, comes from a wide spread misconception of Southern politics. It was the South that fought longest, and hardest against industrial capitalism and today is most conscious of monopolistic capitalism. Fundamentalist liberalism began in the South as an agrarian movement. It was the spirit of Bryanism which made possible the Democratic victory of Theodore Roosevelt and the New

Petitions Are Due Sunday

Qualifications, Snapshot Also to Be Given

Petitions for candidacy to College Government offices must be handed in by 11 p m Sunday, February 18, according to Isabel Rogers, chairman of the nominations committee. They should be turned in to Isabel at 229 Landis.

Together with these petitions, which must have the signatures of 25 students for a major office and ten for a minor office, prospective officers should submit a statement of their qualifications and a snapshot.

The blanks for these statements can be obtained from Isabel. Stressing that no student may endorse more than one petition for the same office, Isabel said, "A qualified student may submit a petition for a major and a minor office, both of which should be accompanied by a statement of qualifications and a snapshot. If defeated for the major office, she automatically becomes a candidate for the minor office."

Petitions will be filed in the office of the dean of students within two days after the nominations committee has received them. Data concerning the candidates will be submitted to the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs February 20 and considered by the following Sunday.

Upon recommendation of the Faculty Committee, the nominations committee will ask for further petitions from the students or will request that those bodies best acquainted with persons eligible present additional nominations. When approval has been accorded by the Faculty Committee, nominations for office will be announced.

Elections will begin March 15, March 20 respectively and will span two hours during the period March 7-13 in a candidates' booth in order to answer questions concerning her platform and opinions.

Officials Are Asked To Judge Contest

World Citizenship Is Theme Of Oratorical Contest

Five prominent state and out-of-state officials have been asked to be judges in the finals of oratorical contest announced last week by the campus chapter of World Activities Council. The contest, sponsored jointly by the WAC and the Florida Union Student Foundation, is open to all students and will hold finals April 25.

Judges asked are Senator Claude Pepper, Tallahassee; State Rep. Gray H. Shapman, Court Chief Justice R H Chapman, Judge Oscar D Caphart, and President Doak S Campbell of FSC.

"World Citizenship: Challenge to Complacency" is the general theme of the contest. Talks may be on any subject related to the general theme, and are to be approximately 600 words or 8 minutes long.

Grand prizes will be awarded finalists in an oratorical program on April 25. Prizes are to be three sterling silver cups, to be engraved with the names of the winners.

All campus organizations will be contacted, and their members asked to participate, both as orators and audience, in all public individuals. Semi-finals will be held in lower Westcott. Any student in Tallahassee is eligible for the contest.

Information may be obtained through Cordella Barclay, WAC chairman, or Virginia Holmes, secretary.

French Commondante To Talk Wednesday

The commandante will speak in English at 8 p m in the Augusta Conrad theatre. He will speak in French to all French students at a time to be announced at a later date.

Lt Varr-Nason will discuss the effect of the German invasion of France and the resistance of the French people to the military and diplomatic

"I think he will have a real story to tell," commented Dr A R Sey, of modern languages, who arranged for the commandante to speak. "It should be interesting."

Miss Andrews Watches Beginnings of FSC Traditions Including College Government, Dance Steps, and Sports

By DOLORES PAPY

In her association with Florida State College and its students for 32 years, Miss Mamie Andrews, former director of Reynolds and East Hall before its burning in 1926, has many cherished memories of her experiences at the college. Living now in Reynolds Annex, Miss Andrews enjoys visiting and sharing these memories of the days "when we girls"

On first coming here in February of 1913, Miss Andrews was the only member of the faculty in the first dormitories to be built on campus, located on the site of the present Science building.

During her first year at FSC many campus organizations were beginning to form, among them the Student Government Association with Miss Hallie Deason, now Mrs John Choate of Tallahassee, as its first president.

A church service on a certain chilly Sunday morning stands out in the memory of Miss Andrews. At the close of the service, when whispered cries spread throughout the church as the closing of the service that East Hall was afire.

Hurrying to the scene of disaster she was relieved to find that no one had been injured, but the situation was serious. With complete loss of personal belongings by 30 girls, and many of her own possessions were burned, too.

After the fire Miss Andrews, with the assistance, moved temporarily to a home on Jefferson street, now occupied by Mrs Smith lie" Williams, until further accommodations could be made.

After moving to Reynolds Hall in 1921, Miss Andrews has noted many changes that have taken place in the gradual laxity of house rules and restrictions, and the changes made in the daily routine and life of the students.

In giving a brief overall picture of the time of midday blouses and skirts for sports and dressy clothes would start at the sound of the 9 o'clock whistle when it would probable to breakfast. Chapel at 8 a m was attended by everyone and classes began at 8:10.

"Hines" was then the Spic and Span or the Sweet Shop of 1914. Here girls spent drinks and chatted between classes," said Miss Andrews, as she compared now and with the students of today.

A typical dinner composed of fried chicken, mashed potatoes, beef, rice, and greens was served every Sunday noon. Following dinner the girls adjourned to class meetings summoned by their heads by the 7:15 study bell, all was supposedly deep concentration until the signal was given at 10 o'clock for "lights out."

Large groups of girls and a chaperon were necessary factors for a shopping tour or trip to the movies in the afternoons. Only entering rooms, walking about a bit, and then silently leaving. Many of the freshmen frantically barricaded their doors with trunks and chairs, as locking them was against regulations. But the supposed nambulist finally turned out to be purely mythical.

That week before an important prom, the Flambeau in all seriousness offered several shall helpful hints to the girls. "To be popular at a dance a girl must: Always begin conversation with story when she sees a boy coming her break so that she can stop them coming back: Compliment the boy about anything—his clothes, his dancing, diamond ring on his nose, the gentle way he steps on her feet, anything."

The article had made its appearance late in 1930 when a group of seven girls made a "daring expedition" to the woods on these "two-wheeled apparatuses." Their adventure was lead by all. After this initial thrust "velocipede outings" were quite popular. Many of the girls earned money

Memorial Service To Be Held Tuesday

Classes Will Pay Respects To President-Emeritus

In commemoration of the late President Emeritus Edwin Conrad's birthday, a short devotional service will be held in convocation Tuesday, February 20, Afterwards, Frances Myers, secretary of the Student Government Association Council, announced that all classes will be dismissed.

Dr. Conrad, who died December 1 of this year, served as head of the college for 25 years prior to his retirement in 1930. Until 1941 he served as president of the school and later as president emeritus during the war years. Among other honorarles, he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi.

Plans for the devotional were made by the student council this week and all members of the student body are asked to attend the special service in convocation next Tuesday.

FSC Professor Receives Mail from Friend in Spain

When the American battleship, Oklahoma, weighed anchor at 4 o'clock on a morning in August, 1936, and steamed out of the choppy waters of the Bay of Biscay, she carried in addition to her crew a number of passengers, including Pilar Bravo Barkis, professor of Spanish, and a young Canadian man, William Gibbon, whose departure from warring Spain she had helped to arrange.

Back at the University in Santander where Dr Burks had been studying remained her friend, Miss Carlda Rodriaez Castellano, from whom she received a letter this fall. Miss Castellano was formerly a teacher of Spanish at Barnard and incidentally the subject of one of the authors of the first-rate Spanish grammar studied last year at Florida State College.

During the early part of the civil war, Miss Castellano came to America, and when though a citizen she returned to Spain, by way of France, when the war was at its worst in the hope that she could be of some help to her people. Last summer, with a letter from Spain which reached Dr Burks after being censored, stamped, and shaped a number of ways, she received a letter from the latter:

"I don't know where to begin to tell you about my life nor what to tell you because it lacks interest, and it is not prudent to write that which is interesting, and about the chances which have taken place since the summer you were here. This is natural, given the circumstances and considering the effects of the bloody civil war that Spain has suffered.

"I spent two very agreeable years in France and came to Spain when the after effects of the war were not anything to be felt. The first year here was neither easy nor agreeable, sickness, and necessities, etc. It was like fumigate from the frying pan into the fire. But as most I longed to be living in France, but I have become accustomed to it and and it is besides very agreeable to be able to visit the family and friends from their beloved country.

"For more than a year I have been working in the library of the Embassy of the United States, and I assure you that I could not ask for work that pleases me more. I am enchanged to be again with the Americans, to speak English with them, to read books and magazines from that beloved country.

"Besides I have two Spanish children for I have not forgotten my profession entirely. These kids are very agreeable because I give them in the same building where the library is, in an annex of the Embassy, and the pupils are young American's who work at the Office of War Information.

"At times I think that I have neither the right nor the desire to enjoy so many blessings, such as my job and my classes in addition to my tiny apartment and my good aunt who lives with me and makes life easy and pleasant. . .

"It will please you, doubtless, to hear something of the literary and cultural life at this time. Of the former there is little or nothing to be said; it seems that we are in a period of decadence. As to the cultural side it can be said that we are very well off because culture is all controlled by the church (Catholic) in all phases of education. . . Religious education is obligatory from the kindergarten through the last year of the University. . . "

Dr Burks was in Spain twice during the life of the Spanish Republic. It was established April 14, 1931, and Dr Burks and her mother went to Spain in August of the same year. While they were in San Juan de Cumpes Tila, which is in Galicia in the northwestern part of Spain, they began to notice social changes which had taken place since the overthrow of the monarchy.

It was customary for the "paseo" to be held at the hour of day when the most people could put on their best clothes and stroll around chatting with friends unmindful of the band playing. When Dr Burks was there in the last time, it had been the aristocrats and people of the middle class who patronized the "paseo." But in 1931 it seemed to her that the "paseo" was the property of the people of the middle class and aristocracy absent. Later she discovered that they had merely been pushed up the hill further away from the band. The Spanish people themselves didn't seem to be very aware of the change, for Dr Burks' friends told her that there were "no difference."

In June, 1936, Dr Burks and Miss Bravo, junior professor of French, returned to Spain to find the country in the pre-Revolution states. That year 19 nations met at the Non-Intervention Conference and resolved not to interfere with the Spanish civil war. Italy and Germany, however, elected to send troops and ammunition to aid the forces of Franco, while the Russians favored the Republicans although they were severely handicapped in aiding them because everything they sent had to be flown over the mountains.

In Spain that year Dr Burks witnessed examples of the depression which was being felt in many parts of the world at that time. A friend of hers in Madrid invited her to one of the more aristocratic clubs. They sat down at the sidewalk cafe and ordered dishs refreshments. Immediately they were surrounded by beggars—a sight so depressing that they left the restaurant at once.

The Spanish Revolution began in July, 1936, at which time Dr Burks was in the University in Santander. Shortly after the fighting started, she received a letter from the American consul at Bilbao. The letter went on to say and not sending money through the mail, but the real purpose was to send the last paragraph which told her that she was in his district, that if she ever had trouble she was to notify the police. If they did not help, she was to notify the civil governor, and as a last resort to notify the consul.

Although there was no fighting in the city of Santander, Dr Burks was anxious to leave before she was trapped in the country; so she wrote the consul that she had a ticket to France. He replied that she couldn't go by land because the train left Spain between Santander and the French frontier were in the hands of the insurgents. She then left on a German boat would be in port on August 2. Dr Burks immediately telephoned the German steamship line to get a reservation. The agent told her that when she went down to get her ticket, the clerks wouldn't speak English to her. When she succeeded in finding someone to speak English to her, she was told that they had no record of her reservation. Deciding next that she should have a little decoy on hand no matter what happened, she telephoned up with all to-gether $85 in Spanish money, $11 in American, and $3.50 in French. Her decoy arrived, but before she could do, she went back to the university. From the university, she went to the American consulate in Bilbao. It was possible to see the consul, for the fighting had begun coming and going in the harbor. In a little while the Annapolis naval officer called her to explain that an American battleship, the Oklahoma, was expected. He would communicate with her later. A short time after, Commander Murphree called at the Chiloma called her to ask her if she knew anything about a woman and 12 American girls who were motoring through the Pyrnees. Dr Burks answered positively but explained that she and a young Canadian would like to go on the Oklahoma. The commander told her that he could go, but the Canadian could not. She was to go down to the port immediately and to take a small tender to the Oklahoma. She took the Canadian with her. Down at the port she found a man and a woman and their baby, and the Annapolis naval officer and his wife who incidentally had forgotten about Dr Burks.

Commander Murphrey insisted that the Canadian could not go, but the naval officer said that according to international law it would be all right to take a British subject aboard an American battleship. When the little tender reached the battleship, the water was so rough that it was necessary to jump the gapping foot of water to the platform at exactly the right moment when the ships were level.

The passengers were taken off the Oklahoma by a small landing craft sent out from Bayona France. From there Dr Burks went to Bordeaux where she obtained passage to America.

The young Canadian, William Gibbon, is now an altitude test pilot in the Royal Air Force. He had not been with Dr Burks' kindness and sends her a Christmas card every year.

Plays to Be Given On Southern Theme

Hunt, Norman to Cast And Direct Plays for AAUW

In conjunction with the Tallahassee branch of the American Association of University Women's program theme, "The South Today," the Florida State College speech department will present two one-act plays on March 8 for AAUW members and their guests, according to Miss Evelyn F Bowman, assistant professor of speech.

Carrying out the theme these two plays, "Pink and Patches" and "No 'Count Boy", for which the casts will be announced next week, will be directed by Hunter, Bonnie Hunt and Sarah Norman, respectively. The former, written by Margaret Mitchell, portrays the life of the Tennessee mountain people; while the latter by Paul Green uses a colored cast and takes as its setting North Carolina.

Although there was no fighting in the city of Santander, Dr Burks was anxious to leave before she was trapped in the country; so she wrote the consul that she had a ticket to France. Liberalism of the South Is Affirmed

Deal of Franklin Roosevelt.

"The liberalism of the South who made possible the elections of Woodrow Wilson, Andrew Jackson, and Thomas Jefferson and the ideas for which they stood, the spirit is still there.

Thomas Jefferson was for his day a liberal, emphasized Dr Carleton. "His faith in the common man and hatred for any form of entrenched aristocratic classes. He built a philosophy to fit the thing he wanted to do and that was to help the common man. At that time he believed that civil rights and liberty were rights and individualism.

"If Jefferson were here today his first words would be directed to the progress of the industrial and technological world of the past century had made necessary a change of means to meet the new conditions created by the advancement of the common man. He would be among the first to recognize the need to bring the vast financial and industrial resources of today under political control. Jefferson would find himself in his fundamental purposes, and today he would be an advocate of more government," he said.

Jefferson, he pointed out, would be amused if he could see conservative industrialists drinking toasts in his name. Jefferson, the friend of the French Revolution of Tom Paine and of the oppressed and exploited and bankbooted."

The idea of conservatism in the South the speaker said was after reconstruction. It was a reaction to the old order which was feeling inclined toward conservatism, he said, and especially did the Southerners choose to follow safe leaders because they lived in fear of negro rule or the return of the carpet-baggers. The period immediately after the reconstruction was one of "Bourbon" rule in the south. When it came to an end in 1896 the populist movement which could no longer be silenced, spread rapidly. Since then there have been two distinct wings in the democratic party, the liberal wing with progressive, emotional demi-gods like Ben Tillman of South Carolina in contrast to the pig-tempered but more conventional men like Charles Arok, also of South Carolina; and the conservative wing which for the past 50 years has carried only a minority faction.

Why these conservatives remain in the Democratic party according to Dr Carleton is "because they know that the moment they secede they would diminish their political influence. They cannot carry a sizeable following with them." He added that "Many liberal Democrats in the South would actually like to see these conservatives go over to the Republican party. This would sharpen the issues. This would decrease conservative influence and make it easier for real Democrats' to win in the primaries."

Professor's Son Owns Miniature Towns, Constructed in Five Years By Father

Eleven year old Donald Shankleiter has already a land owner like a Fur possessor of two miniature towns—a city and a country—which has been constructed over a period of almost five years by his father Dr P W Shankleiter, associate professor of geology.

Lionel City, which rests on a platform approximately 5 1-2 feet by 8 1-2 feet, is built around a complicated electric train system. On the numerous tracks runs the electric train which can be made to run forward or backward or changed by switches from one track to another. The powerful little engine with its revolving wheels has a tiny bright headlight and a shrill whistle. When it nears the crossing with the highway the bell begins to ring, the red light blinks, and the gate descends across the front of the road. Beside the tracks is the usual railroad crossing sign with its warning "Watch for the Cars." Further down the tracks at a junction of rails is the electric train station and a lighted switch blink as the train nears the junction.

Various cars such as passenger, observation, freight cars, and a derrick can be attached to the train. There is a coal car which will dump its contents when a button is pushed and a gasoline tank car with "SHELL" printed on its side.

Near the tracks at one point are the gasoline storage tanks. Further along the run is a waiting station covered with advertisements. Here stands the lady waiting for the train. On the other side of town is the real depot with a lady stand in front of it. And of course near the station is the depot cafe while in the opposite direction, between two tracks, is a lunch car. Also near the station are the leading watch tower above the tracks and the town water tower with its hanging spout.

City Has Terminal

The train, however, is not the only means of travel to Lionel City. Not far from the depot is a modernistic bus terminal—a copy of the terminal in Tallahassee. On the street below the bus station is a Greyhound bus headed toward Miami. On other streets in the city there are various trucks and cars. Under the streets are very artificial streets of hundreds of tiny wires. In addition to the electrical apparatus of the railroad system every home and building in the city is lighted. Viewed in a darkened room Lionel City is a cozy and well illuminated metropolis.

One of the first buildings that was made is the city hall and police station which is modeled after the one in Gainesville. However, the majority of the buildings and homes are replicas of Dr Shankleiter's residence, although the plan of the city itself is original. Lionel City has everything from the church with its tall steeple, designed after the Presbyterian church of Tallahassee, to a slender skyscraper. In the bank building are doctors, lawyers, and dentist offices with the names neatly printed on the tiny windows. The doors of the fire station stand open with the little red trucks ready to dash out. Over at the Rize Theatre are two billboards which display the pictures of actresses. The theatre stage, at A & M fashion like it is probably a super market. The postoffice, which is also a part of the postoffice in Tallahassee, has a clock on the tower. It is situated about 1 1-2 ft. close to the railroad tracks and

Former FSC Girl Experiences Plane Trip With Actor

When Cary Grant flew to Tallahassee from New Orleans last week, the hostess on the plane was Miss Jeanne Ingram, a student at FSC college last year. Mr Grant was on his way to Thomasville to visit his parents.

In relating the trip later, Gloria said that she was surprised that Mr Grant seemed so calm with such a celebrity aboard. She had how friendly Mr Grant had been and how he was not at all self-centered or conceited. On the first off the plane, before he was mobbed by the girls who had heard of his arrival, he said that he hoped they would fly together again and if they were on the West Coast not to fail to look him up.

Miss Ingram obtained a position as hostess for National Airlines the first of last year. Since that time she has met several other celebrities on the plane.

from the gymnasium outside by requiring a more mature performance on the part of the students.

It was suggested that a provision be made for gathering statistics on how many people are disturbed by the noise at night. It was also made that the persons disturbed file a complaint to the person gathering the statistics. A question arose as to whether the noise was being made by girls returning from overnight absences or by others who live in Dorm Hall or from out of their rooms for various other reasons. It was thought that by filing complaints, the sources of the noise could be determined.

If approved by Collete Council, the trial period will begin at the beginning of the winter session of next year and will continue for a year or longer, pending the action of College Council and the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs.

Montgomery Visits Five FSC Internees

Physical Education Majors Teach Over State

Dr Katherine Montgomery, director of physical education, left last Saturday on a visit to five physical education majors who, for the first time in the history of the department, are doing intern teaching in Florida High schools . The purpose of the visit was the coordination of all physical education internees.

All of the internees are seniors, Dr Montgomery announced. Carolyn Forehand is at Plant High, Tampa; Hester Hammond, at Fort Lauderdale High; Jessie Durden at Sanford High; Evelyn Berry, at Robert Fulton, Jacksonville; and Aline Fountain, at Andrew Jackson, Jacksonville. Also interning, but allowed to remain in Tallahassee because of her campus duties, is Tedy Parker, teaching at the demonstration high school.

Two of the girls, Carolyn Forehand and Aline Fountain, are in schools in which former FSC students are physical educators. Among them are Burnell Mobley, at Plant High and Tampa; Ruth Smith, and Bernice "Bernie" Watson, at Andrew Jackson. According to Dr Montgomery, Bernie Walton is the person directly responsible for the first-time internship of physical education majors in actual schools.

The physical education majors' class this year takes another "first," in the fact that it is the largest class ever enrolled in the department, Dr Montgomery added. There are now 118 in the class, including approximately 80 freshmen, as compared with a class of 65 last year.

Students Try Out Flambeau Positions

Worried gals, tapping typewriters, and busy copy readers made more than the general confusion this week when putting out the Flambeau under sophomore, and junior writers for the issue are trying out for special positions on the paper.

Wrinkled brows and worried looks of deep thought and the appearance of the industrious workers as old editors and managers of the paper are watching with a smile and offer practical suggestions to the girls trying out.

As editor this week was Judy Pepper who had working under her Peggy Sue, managing editor; May Alexander and Peggy Lou Thompson, news editors; Eudora Papy, feature editor; Betty Dowd, sports editor; and Shirley Rodgers, society editor. Marshall Ball and Janet Pancoast retained their old positions of associate editors.

WTAL Present Time Spanish Program

Last Monday night at 7:30 "Let's Learn Spanish" went on the air for the first time.

This is the new radio program presented over WTAL on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights at 7:30 by Time, sponsored by the modern language department of Florida State College. The purpose of this program is to provide the radio public with an opportunity to learn Spanish at home.

The instructor of this radio audience class is Senor Pepe Olona. Joe Bishop, who is surprised to know that his name in Spanish is also Pepe Opiabo, is the representative pupil of the class.

To accompany the spoken Spanish, booklets are published by Time; these booklets contain complete vocabularies and grammar explanations given on the program. They may be obtained in the college bookstore, or by writing to station WTAL.

The programs will continue for a period of 13 weeks.

If wishes were horses...

"If wishes were horses, beggars would ride" goes the old rhyme.

Which is just another way of pointing out that wishing, by itself, isn't a very effective way to get what you want.

You're going to want a lot of things a few years from now. And when it comes to getting them, nobody so far has discovered anything more useful than a nice, big pocketful of good hard cash.

Put every single cent you can spare into War Bonds now. Hang on to those War Bonds. Let them bring you back $4 for every $3 you put in.

There's no way to equal that process for getting what you want a few years from now—and for getting what we all want most of all today: VICTORY!

...enicillin Display...ade

...rocessing, Use of Drug Told to Visitors

In order to familiarize students with the widely-used drug, penicillin, a display was arranged in Dr. Wentworth Sterling Westcott by the pathogenic bacteriology class, under the direction of Miss Jean Thacher instructor of bacteriology.

Miss Thacher and her student assistants explained the history, processing, and uses of penicillin to students and teachers who attended the display last Friday and Saturday. The display was arranged on six tables, each one devoted to a different phase in the production of penicillin.

Its first table dealt with the story of the drug. It was first discovered in 1929 by Dr Alexander Fleming, an Englishman, but when the sulfa drugs were extolled in the early thirties, penicillin was forgotten. It was not until 1940-41 that it was used at Oxford began retrivestigating it.

At the second table it was explained that the mold, penicillium notatum, produces the drug as a waste product and that this mold could be grown in ...ge vats—Pints, in which the spore growth on a medium of malt sugar, corn steep liquor, and the spores on a mallow peptone agar, and third a surface growth...ed on bran. The production of a ...ge amount of penicillin is dependent on the third table where the other members of the penicillium genus, the green mold on bread and the mold that produces the Camembert cheese, Microscopes were set up at this table so that visitors could see the unlike arrangement of the spores of these molds. This arrangement of spores is responsible for the genus name penicillium (little brush).

The compound used in extracting the drug from the mold was the subject of the fourth table, and the older extraction method surface growth was contrasted with the improved method of filtration. The guides stated that according to a recent figures, a ...ge amount of the drug could be extracted from 10,000 gallons of the material a penicillium notatum. These figures also show that in April of 1943 only nine ...ctories of penicillin were being produced annually in America. The amount has been greatly increased since that time.

The biochemic bacteriology class attracted much attention with the mold cultures which they had themselves.

The final processes of standardizing the drug were shown at the fifth table. The class pointed out that penicillin was a crystalline filtrate because it inhibited the growth of gram-positive organisms.

At the last table the uses of penicillin were discussed. Miss Thacher stated that although "Most of the drug is used in experimental stage and not ready to be released, it is known that it has been successfully used on...ble wounds and infections.

Work Abandoned

Retreitis has decided to abandon all thoughts of work and studies from 11 o'clock to 1 every Tuesday night, according to Nancy Parker, president.

The meeting was held, will start at the Spink and Span at three hours to eat and sing, and discuss plans for the future activities years."

Retreitis and members will be the guests of Esteran at a "Bunko" party to be held in the Lands Recreation hall from 7:30 to 9:30 tonight.

Minnows Chosen

Final tryouts for Minnows for the Tarpon Club were held Monday afternoon. From the twenty candidates, for new Minnows were selected, B J Singleton, vice-president and Minnow trainer announced. They were: Anna Lou Green, Morla Loy, Jo Gutherie, Barbara Lindsey, and Jean Harvin.

Johnny Stops Here To Give Cigarettes To College Girls

When the well-known "Call for Phillip Morris" resounded through lower Westcott in mid-afternoon Wednesday, excited students rushed to the front door of "Johnny," of radio fame. Discovered by his fans on the campus bootstore, "Johnny" was, in reality, designed by requests for autographs, sample packages of cigarettes and repeat performances of his famous "call."

Standing on an elevated platform behind the main counter in the bookstore, the good-natured midget captured the attention and had satisfied all demands and, in a 10-minute period, handed out more than 1,000 packages of cigarettes, packaged in miniature boxes.

Then, jumping down from his raised platform, "Johnny" gaily said "good-bye, ladies," and after giving a final rendition of his famous call "Call for Phillip Morris," started off down the hall.

"Johnny," who named himself as Johnny Marks, is a Phillip Morris State College amiably said that he was the "school and girls are grand."

Dressed in his conventional red coat and cap, the page-boy patted, "Johnny" was accompanied by Mr Carlton Smith, representative of Phillip Morris. While in Tallahassee, "Johnny" and his manager stayed at the Leon hotel in Tallahassee, "Johnny" and his manager stayed at the Leon hotel in Okeke hotel. Their tour includes other important cities in the state.

Series of Forums To Be Held at Ruge

Beginning February 16 and continuing through March 23, Ruge Hall, Rawlings Memorial Dormitory, has planned a series of five weekly forums. These forums which are to be held every Friday night will have as their subject "The Life and Teachings of St Paul."

The Rt Rev Arthur Lee of St Paul's by the Sea, Jacksonville Beach, will be the first speaker of the Lenten forums tonight at 7 o'clock. Lee will present a description of St Paul's personality and the important factors in making St Paul the person that he was.

On February 23, the Rev Alan Chalmers from All Saints Church, Jacksonville, will discuss what effect St Paul's background had on his conception of the individual and how he changed the relation between men and women, under the title of "St Paul and the Status of Women." The founder of Leon county, B A Mecginnis, will speak on March 2 on "St Paul and the State, in the light of a person's relationship to the civil authorities."

The Rev James Stirling, student chaplain at the University of Florida, with his topic as "St Paul and the Church", will ask on St Paul's relationship to the church is. The final forum will be led by the Rev Valentine Lee, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Jacksonville. He will discuss "St Paul's Word and Peace" with such questions as: What is St Paul's attitude to war? what should our attitude be toward enemies?

In supervision of the Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church, The Most Rev Henry St. George Tucker, "Apostolic Succession of God" will be a subject of special study next week. Harold Alvin, chaplain at Ruge Hall, will devote the Sunday night Vespers to this topic. Following the way in which Christians can apply the truth of that doctrine.

The Rt Rev Frank A Juhan, Bishop of Florida will be in Tallahassee April 23 to confirm those who have been attending Confirmation classes. These classes will begin next Wednesday at 5 o'clock.

Canterbury club holds its regular monday meeting next Tuesday at 5 o'clock with Betty Lewis, president of the Vestry Committee, in charge.

Tests to Be Given

Gold Book test will be given Saturday, February 17, at 2 p m in the Student Activities Building room for all freshmen and transfers who entered college at the beginning of the semester.

The test will cover restrictions and procedures of the college. Penalty for failure will be campusment for one week, said "Tedy" Parker, chairman of Judiciary. Those who do not pass will be required to take the test again, she announced.

FSC Graduate Now Is Base Officer

Hearon Heads WAC Command At Dow Field, Maine

First Lt Mildred Hearon, daughter of Mrs W W Masters of DeSoto City, who took over her first command at the age of 22, is now commanding officer of the WAC stationed at Dow Field, Air Transport Base at Bangor, Maine. She is a resident of Florida and a graduate of Florida State College.

Mildred enlisted in the WAC on July 31, 1942 and attended OCS at Fort Des Moines. She stayed at Fort Des Moines for the next nine months and was then transferred to Monticello, Arkansas where the 5th WAC training center was located. After a couple of weeks in Intermediate Officers' school at Fort Des Moines, she was assigned to the Troops Carrier Command, Sedalia, Missouri as commanding officer of the WAC Catchment. In September Lt Hearon was transferred to headquarters in Indiana. She spent seven months in this city recruiting work in Ohio and Indiana.

In May, 1944, she was transferred to the Air Transport Command, Gravely Point, Virginia and 36th Street Airport in Miami where she remained until December 1, 1944 when she was promoted to first lieutenant on April 1, 1945.

Lt Hearon graduated from Florida State College in 1940, receiving a BS degree, with a major in physical education instructor in charge at Shorter college in Rome, Georgia, and at the Junior high school and high school at Daytona Beach as a physical education and health instructor.

Dow Field, where Lt Hearon is stationed, is the base of the Northern Atlantic Division of the Air Transport Command.

Alumna in WAVES Talks to Students

Ensign Betty Ann Taylor, former graduate of Florida State College, spoke yesterday to members of the public opinion class and to Dr Carl Rollins, associate professor of journalism.

Miss Taylor told briefly about her Navy training at Smith College, Northampton, Massachusetts, during the scenery, clothes of Smith girls, and living conditions in that northern college. She compared the dormitories with those on this campus, explaining that they were similar. She described the clothes of Smith girls as slacks and wool or shirts in the winter and cotton and no shoes in the summertime. During the Navy training conditions she admitted that Negro students are interspersed in the same dormitories but while public students.

Miss Taylor has been in the Navy approximately a year and received her ensign's commission at Smith college. Miss Ann was a graduate in 1942 and while here was editor of the Florida Flambeau, was on Mortar Board, and was a member of Tau Kappa Phi. Betty Ann, who is from Tallahassee, is a sister of Sara Jane Taylor, now a senior at this college.

When asked the best policy in obtaining a position on a newspaper, Betty Ann suggested that all beginning reporters work on a small newspaper first. She explained her reasons for this and stating the reporter a more thorough idea of how the paper should be run. She went on to affirm that a newspaper reporter has a long drudge with dull routine work before actually getting a position that holds a great deal of interest and is well paying. Sheadded, however, that the mere experience of knowing the people one meets in a newspaper office is sufficient reason enough for any amount of hard work.

Before joining the WAVES a year ago, Betty Ann spent two years in Miami working in the U S Censorship department. She hopes to continue newspaper work, however, after the war is over.

In these days of mechanism, army divisions require about 3000 vehicles, including guns, tanks, tractors and trucks.

AAW Correction

March 31, 1945 will be the deadline for submission of contributions to the Creative Arts contest being sponsored by the American Association of University Women. The deadline was erroneously published in the Flambeau as March 3.

Those who plan to enter the contest are requested to send their name and field of entry to Dr Carmen Rogers, Box 1077.

Valentine's Day Comes to Campus Despite Shortages

Mr Cupid played his trumpet again and this time they were hearts.

In spite of war shortages, boxes of candy were well represented. One proud freshman had three boxes to compare,—which means she was "sitting 'em up."

Cards were numerous, and even though they were smaller than last year, they warened many hearts that might have been left cold. Many were comic billets with a sarcastic approach, and witticisms took the place of sentiment.

Orchids were also seen on campus. A freshman walked proudly for several days with shoulder high, displaying a beautiful orchid for public view.

"Lucky," who is overseas, sent his fraternity brothers candy with his heart enclosed. It was quite a showy display of masculine immunity.

Special trips to the post office were not in vain for those who received gifts from as far the bon friend's latest poem, a compact, and a sparkling necklace.

Another student was the proud possessor of two boxes of candy and a dainty corsage. All these ostentations all from the same certain cast. Cupid must have played the ace that time.

Defense Forum Needs Chairman

The Defense Forum, which has functioned for the past three years, was discontinued after the first of this year because of the lack of a chairman, according to Miss Lucy Lenar, former head of the Defense Council, which sponsored the Forum.

When the Defense Council itself was disbanded, three committees were retained: the Emergency Finance under the chairmanship of Dr Beverly Becker; the Information Center, which has now become an extension part of the library, under the direction of Miss Frances Haynes; and the Defense Forum, formerly under the chairmanship of Dr Marian Irish. As soon as a chairman is found, the Forum will again begin to function.

Freshmen Trek To Game's Woods

Approximately 40 new freshmen discovered for themselves one of the best kept secrets surrounding here when hiked to Game's woods for wiener roast last Friday afternoon.

The outing was planned by officers of the freshman class which include the following: Ida Lee Rents, president; Babs McCarthy vice-president; Babs McCarthy treasurer; Anne Sharer, parliamentarian; Betty Kennedy, vice-president; and Jimmy Rogers, secretary.

The outing was planned in order that new freshmen might become better acquainted. Ida Lee Rents said that all present appeared to enjoy the outdoor recreation afforded them by the picnic.

Senate Election

Rachel Ball and Peggy Pemble are the two candidates in today's election for senior representative in Senate.

In yesterday's primary election, Rachel Ball received 45 votes, and 38 votes were cast for Pete Pemble. Mary Lee Withers, candidate in the primary race, was eliminated by a vote of 44.

The election is being held in lower Westcott building, and all seniors are urged to cast their votes for the girl who they wish to represent them in Senate

FSC Teachers Help Plan State Program

At a recent meeting of the Florida, Sixth School Athletic Association, in Orlando, Dr Katherine Montgomery, physical education director, and Miss Grace Fox, physical education instructor, attended a plan was proposed concerning the athletic program for Florida high school girls. The meeting followed the appointment of a committee by the Executive Secretary of the Florida High School Athletic Association.

The plan, a summary, would provide for a girl's division in the State Athletic Association and would arrange sports days for high school girls in the various districts, counties, and cities of Florida. It would set the standards for the program for inter-school sports in the city, counties and cities. State competition is not approved of, the committee decided.

The plan, tentative as yet, would replace the present program in tennis and swimming. It will be presented to the Florida High School Athletic Association at its next annual meeting, announced Dr Montgomery.

Students 'Get Hep' As 1945 Language Invades the Campus

"What a breezer, she would beat her gums all night long." This and other quaint talk is due if failure to hear on campus these days. Never use a good English word if there is a good slang substitute. Why, that just isn't done. Such expressions as "solid sender," "lays the breeze", "boogie woogie", "beating one's gums", "crumb", "solid seat", "Let's make the show on the road", or "Let's blow this joint" and hundreds others have been introduced into the English language of today until it is pretty nonsensical.

Slang varies with generations, or perhaps it would be better to say generations vary their slang. Not so very long ago if one said he was "peeved," he was "miffed," he was really "in the doldrums". But times change, slang and was looked up to by all his associates.

Then such a phrase is obsolete, and the phrase "tear the town wide open" is substituted. One never feels like a gentleman if she gets "hep". Boomps-a-daisy and the Lindy were the world's favorite dances not so many years ago; nothing so tame for today's modern youth. They have the "boogie woogie" complete with a "beat jazz."

Give with the gab fellow floozies, who know, maybe you too will be able to have a hangage all your own.

Alert Girls Stop Dormitory Fire

Three alert Jennie Murphree girls helped to prevent what might have been a catastrophe recently, during the afternoon, they smelled smoke, and upon investigation found that an iron had been left on. A scorch had burned the cloth from the board, flames shot up, but there was no damage done other than to the ironing board and the iron.

Auditions Planned

Radio auditions for talented students and faculty will be given every Tuesday afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock, announced Miss Bertha Bloodworth, radio co-ordinator.

The auditions will take place in Miss Bloodworth's office in the Student Alumnae building. A record of these auditions will be kept on file for future use of the radio department. All interested persons should contact Miss Bloodworth during the given hours.

Transformer Made By Student Workers

Langston and Cockrell Aid Electricity Classes

"It was a long hard fight, but we finished it," said Teeny Langston and Margaret Cockrell, speaking of the transformer they spent many days in the laboratory constructing for the advanced electrical class.

"Although it was no new discovery, the transformer represents excellent work on the part of the two students", said Dr Harold F Richards, professor of physics.

The transformer is now being used to break glass tubing an inch in diameter, but later, because of the work of Teeny and Margaret, it is to be used in spot welding and other experimental purposes.

Many interesting and numerous incidents occurred during their construction of the instrument. One night the lights went off in Jennie Murphree and Teeny is a Junior Counselor, and naturally her freshmen attributed the source of the blown fuse to the transformer they had been hearing so much about. Teeny claims she was nowhere near.

Before Christmas the two girls went to see Colonel Tigert, District Attorney," as the transformer is called because of the radio program the expression "step down" is continuously used and the instrument is a step-down transformer.

One day a number of freshmen were taken over to see the marvelous piece of work their counselors had been telling them about. Impressed, Margaret decided never again to do that because the freshmen were not half as interested in the transformer as they were charmed by the persons who made it. Miss Pauline Peterson, it proved a good soliciting agent for the physics department.

During their construction neither Mrs Cockrell nor Mrs Langston received very many letters from their daughters, but when they did, they have been completed they hope a transformation in the girls will occur.

Proud Cook Paints Her Perfect Pastry

An item for the "Stranger than Fiction" department is the new art work of Florida State College. Florida State College has found its self-pastry artistry.

When the experimental food chemistry and cookery class recently made pie crust, one of the girls, feeling that hers was the most perfect product she had turned out this year, took it home. Planning to preserve this masterpiece for posterity, the young lady student then added a coat of silver paint. The finishes product is reading Alpha Chi Omega Wednesday afternoon.

Chi Omega vanquished by Alpha Gamma Delta with a 10 to 9 score in the first game of the day. Alpha Delta Pi games was 16 to 13, in A D Pi's favor. Bryan Hall and Jenkins battled to a 32 to 22 score.

According to Louise Fernandez, intramural manager, the games will continue until one team reaches the top of the ladder.

concerning the consequences of over-eating.

Included in the skit were a trio of Chi Omega Sophomore Council's girls who sang original songs concerning convocation attendance.

Carleton Expresses Favorable View On Co-ed Controversy

"Florida would do well to follow the example of North Carolina in having a coed university and a women's college," commented Dr William O Carleton professor of political science at the University of Florida, and a recent guest speaker before the meeting of the American Association of University Women. He favors opening the last two years of college work at Gainesville to women students. In this way Dr Carleton feels girls taking postgraduate work will have the same opportunities as the men.

Dr Carleton believes that many people feel the presence of women at the college will help in the readjustment of some of our war veterans. The veterans here at Florida University are medical discharges, and prior to return to as completely a normal life as possible is very desirable. The veterans at the University present vividly one of the problems we will face after the war.

However, as they gradually become acclimated the need for a more normal atmosphere is met. The "Gator veterans" organization at Gainesville is open to the public for co-education, not only for the boys who are back now but for the boys overseas and those who will come back to college after the war. Mary Ann Walls stated that he thought some of these boys would want to continue college in the company of their wives.

Press Club Plans Discussion Programs

Plans for programs for faculty-student discussions was the main topic at a meeting held last night at 8 o'clock of the Press Club. This club which consists of a monthly is composed of a group of students interested in journalism and is open to all who wish to attend.

It was decided that these discussions be held monthly with the rest of the school year and that they would concern are vital problems that might be at hand. They will be of an informal nature and will last about two hours. The date of the next forum will be announced in the near future.

Doris Pepper was elected president of the group with Betty Ann Taylor as vice president. Pepper will also serve as group chairman in charge of selecting the topics of forum forums.

Bart-ara Beas was appointed as corre...sta...ting for the Press Club to Defense Forum.

"Convorola" Given By Soph Council

Heralded long in advance by posters and a poetry sequence posted on dormitory bulletin boards, "Convorola" echoed in the halls, and by the "grape vine" system, "Convorola," a skit sponsored by Sophomore Council, was presented at convocation Tuesday.

The skit was presented in order to stress the importance of convocation attendance, according to Jean Cole, chairman of Sophomore Council. Announced by Roneta Carver as having only an acclimatization period, the picture, "Casablanca," the scene was laid in a "honky-tonk" where there were reserved tables for CGA officers and the Flambeau staff.

While Eleanor Bragg as "Sam" played "As Time Goes By." Nell Clark, "Convorola" a Sophomore Council boy, and Betty Hahn as "Ivy Bergman," an FSC student, dramatized a "tragedy"

Swim Meet Will Be Held This Month

Annual Telegraphic Meet Is To Be February 23, 27

That the annual telegraphic swimming meet will be held here on February 23 and 27 was announced today by B J Singleton, student manager of the Florida State College swimming team. The best results of these two meets are to be sent to Duke University, where headquarters for this years' tourney in the south will be held with Mary Washington College, in Fredricksburg, Virginia, taking charge of the nationals. Last year FSC was the headquarters for the Southern meet.

According to the records, FSC has won first place on three of the ten of last years team remaining, she thinks FSC will win first place in both the Southern and nationals this year.

Mary Ann Walls, freshman and Florida swimmer, will probably be one of the participants in the meet. Mary Ann last year was chosen as one of the ten outstanding swimmers in America.

Events of the meet include the 40 yard dash, 100 yard dash, 75 yard medley relay, 100 yard freestyle, relay, and the 75 yard individual medley.

Forty-cents for the team have not yet beaun.

FREEDOM OF PRESS FOR WHOM?

National reperussions and publicity have followed the ctions of the administration of William and Mary college, ho this week suspended its student newspaper and threat- ned expulsion of its editor for an editorial advocating future uality of the white and black races.

Much of the discussion has centered on whether such opinions are valid or unwisely radical. In general the tenor or the article seems definitely to clash with the majority of white Southern opinion on the race problem, and has provoked indignant opposition.

Reflecting this indignant opposition is the attitude of President John Pomfret, of the college, who has made press statements that the faculty is concerned with "letting it some editorial supervision of the newspaper," hertofore uncensored.

Also in indignant protest is the college Board of Trustees, who expressed "thorough disapproval and condemnation", and instructed the college faculty and administration to take corrective and disciplinary action.

It has remained for the student body of William and Mary to take action nearer to the heart of the matter. In a Monday mass meeting, about 1000 students went on record opposing faculty supervision of the newspaper, and said that they had rather not have any newspaper, than have one under censorship.

For the main issue at stake in the college controversy is not whether or not future race equality should be achieved. Far more important is the issue that the student body saw—that freedom of the press is not the privilege of commercial newspapers alone, but of student publications also. Simply because student writers are students does not deny them the right to express their opinions.

Numbers of the students did not agree with the ideas of race equality suggested by the editor. However, they did agree on her right to say them.

Exemplified in the whole controversy is the common misunderstanding in America of what freedom of speech really means. Many of us repeat the slogans of democracy glibly, but fail to comprehend its essentials.

Freedom of speech fundamentally means that citizens must guarantee the right of others to express unpopular opinions. Freedom to say only what others want to hear is no freedom at all. Freedom meaning compulsory agreement with the majority is not the concept of our Bill of Rights.

Therefore we feel that the student body of William and Mary is to be congratulated for its courageous stand. Censorship, whether in commercial or college newspapers, is a rung of the ladder to Fascism. Free expression of controversial opinions is a necessity in a democracy.

OUR GREAT EXPERIMENT

Many experiments in education for living have been attempted in this country during the last 20 years. At Florida State College Senior Hall has been established as a certain senior students training for leadership. Three successful experiments in progressive education have been undertaken at St John's College, Bennington College, and Black Mountain College.

St John's College at Annapolis, Maryland, began in 1937 to apply the educational ideas of Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, who is a trustee of St John's. The policy at St John's is to educate students from the books produced by the greatest minds of history.

Students learn mathematics from the great mathematicians, Euclid, Descartes, Newton, Russell; science from Galen, Ptolehm, Faraday, Pasteur andothers; literature from Homer, Aristophanes, Virgil, Dante, Shakespeare, Milton, Tolstoi, and Ibsen. This idea is carried into every field of learning. It has created a keenly interested, cooperating body of faculty members and students.

Another well-known experiment in progressive education is Bennington College, Vermont. Bennington was established in 1932. The president and faculty at Bennington believes that the test of education is preparation for continued learning through life. Each student has the opportunity to decide what courses she is to take; there are no required studies. All student regulations are made by the students, who also have a "Student Educational Policies Committee," named hy the students. This committee advises the faculty on curriculum and educational methods and makes regular periodical reports on the quality of instruction given by the individual teachers.

Black Mountain College, North Carolina, started in 1933 by John Rice is a working experiment in progressive education.

President Rice believes that "the job of the college is to bring young people to intellectual and emotional maturity; to intelligence, which is a subtle balance between the intellect and the emotions; not merely an arhitrarily selected amount of cramming."

Black Mountain is interested in the growth of the individual as a person, and believes that this can best be achieved hy group influence. There are no rules at Black Mountain; the individual is given the opportunity to determine his own behavior.

President Rice aims "to develop the idea and feeling that knowledge, truth, art, education, effort, action, experience, life are all of on piece, or at least that they can be synchronized."

Senior Hall is the effort made by Florida State College to educate students for living. Senior Hall is, according to the statement of the selections committee, "one of the highest honors bestowed by your Alma Mater and is based on past citizenship, sense of responsibility, good judgment, academic and health reports." However, the college saw fit to bestow this honor last year on only approximately two-thirds of the present senior class.

Although the neglected third will graduate with the rest of the senior class, they will not have had the experience of this self-styled experiment in cooperative and group living. They will become citizens of this state and the country without having had the uplifting experience of being free of a few of the restrictions that govern every phase of the daily lives of the girls at FSC. They will leave the ivy-clad halls of our Alma Mater without enjoying the privilege of staying out until 12 o'clock on week nights., or 12:30 on Friday and Saturday.

The basis for giving two-thirds of the seniors "one of the highest honors" is not the student's desire for an education, or the effort to prepare the student for life, as it is in the experiments in progressive education mentioned above. Senior Hall is based on the rules of the membership that Hall is stated in words for which no actual referent can be found. Stuart Chase, in his "Tyranny of Words," insists that words without a referent, a specific object which the word represents, should be deleted and the sound "blab" be inserted.

Senior Hall will follow this principle in judging the basis of the selections for Senior Hall, most interesting results would be obtained. Phrases such as "comprehension and acceptance of group responsibility. alertness to see what is best for the general good and the courage to work for the benefit of the whole", "ability to contribute to group life", leadership by taking the lead in moulding public opinion, fostering desirable movements, and wielding good influence through example and precept," are full of words which have no direct referents.

Most of the words in these phrases have as many interpretations as there are persons who use them. Substituting the "blab" for the words which have no direct referent, the statement would read "blab and blab of group blab, blab to see what is blab for the blab blab and the blab to work for the blab of the whole;" and "blab to blab to blab blab by taking the lead in moulding blab blab, fostering blab movements and wielding blab blab through blab and blab."

Perhaps an organization based on the selection of some students by ambiguous phrases is the answer to education for living at Florida State College—we think it is not.

student body in supporting approximately 1000 young men and women went on record opposing supervision of the newspaper by the college faculty. Furthermore, they said they would rather have no newspaper at all than one under censorship.

At a mass meeting the following day the student body of approximately 1000 young men and women went on record as saying that a majority of them did not wish to endorse the editor's views, but were determined to defend her right to express them.

Editor of the Flat Hat and the Student Union meeting February 11 passed a resolution "voting the paper out of existence rather than have it run by a supervised publication."

Miss Kaemmerle told reporters that her editorial had been misunderstood and misinterpreted. Lines were taken out of context, she said, to make her appear to suggest "that Negroes should attend William and Mary . . . go to our classes . . . join the same clubs . . . and marry among us."

"They missed the entire point," she protested to reporters. "The editorial simply stated the fact that if we are to achieve complete democracy in the world as a whole it had to be done through education . . . that it couldn't be done today or tomorrow, perhaps not for generations or centuries."

The editor declared that the ideas expressed were her own and not those of the student body or of the Flat Hat. She explained that the last fall when she was elected editor she stated on the editorial page that she would be the author of any unsigned editorials that appeared in the paper. She stated that she still believes that her contention is correct—that complete equality of Negroes and whites is possible some day.

duction, it is said, to the American continent in 1933.

Inspired by the American public's reception, Mr Meier became a citizen and established a permanent home for the Passion Play in the Black Hills near Spearfish, South Dakota. During the summer months the play is given there in a natural amphitheater seating 8,000 people.

The Black Hills Passion Play is historically and Biblically correct. Dramatized into 22 scenes portraying the life of the man of Galilee, the production has been acclaimed by critics from the Chicago Daily News, and labeled "magnificent in its concept, spiritually moving and in its presentation vibrant in color and sound," by The Charlotte Observer.

Time Marches On But Clocks Are Out of Step

in getting places. Perhaps Tody Parker's clock is always ten minutes fast to allow her plenty of time to overcome obstacles that might encounter on the way to Judiciary meeting and still get there in time. Without a doubt, Jo Guthrie's clock is on the dot, because she keeps "Even time."

At any rate the difference in the time of clocks on the campus has caused quite a few embarrassing incidents. One girl came to the Dining Hall at 7 o'clock one morning last week for breakfast. Two other girls reported to the Dining Hall for work only to find it was five minutes to six. When the other girls arrived at 6:30 they woke the two "early birds" from their rest on the couch.

The question is: Why isn't the campus clock-wise?

The Students Speak . . .

With the advent of second semester many questions concerning interning have arisen in the minds of Florida State College students. For this reason this week's column giving the opinions of girls who have already completed their internship, deals with the question: What do you consider to be the advantages and disadvantages of interning?

While you are interning, you are in school all day long and are treated more like a teacher than you are when you practice teach. Interning was "real life" teaching, not model or perfection teaching. You are there at the beginning of school and are able to see how the school operates at the first of the year. If you should teach in the same school later, you will "know the ropes."

RUTH RICE.

When you are interning you can see the whole school program. You get to do everything from participating in school carnivals to meeting the children's parents. You see the students outside of school in more natural situations than you do when you practice teach. The only disadvantage I can think of is that you have to make up work in addition to your interning. However, I think this disadvantage will be eliminated under the quarter system.

FAY LIMBAUGH

You are not distracted with other classes and college activities in which you would like to participate but don't have time to do. You concentrate on one thing—your teaching.

I found that the ideals of democracy which we study in theory classes can be worked in beautifully with the school program. Here the children should be given these ideals, many older tes ners fail to teach them, using the democratic way as a means of making money.

ANGEL FAIN.

Interning is a wonderful course to have because it gives you a good picture of what a teacher will have to do and to put up with. You can see the good and bad sides of teaching. You can observe the things go "right" and when they go "wrong." Throughout college you take courses on theory. When you interne, you get to apply this theory.

You teach from eight to ten weeks. I'm sorry it wasn't longer, for the more you do the more experience you have.

ELIONNE HOSFORD.

You get the whole set-up of the school. You are treated like a member of the faculty and learn what a teacher's responsibilities are. You learn how to mix with the children and discover how to get along with them. You also learn what they like and what they dislike, through your responsibility of being a chaperone and through meeting them in situations outside of school.

JOHNNIE THOMAS.

Just being in a real school lasty is an advantage. It's the closest you can get to the real thing until you teach professionally. You see the functions of the whole school, not necessarily under the immediate direction of the college. You don't teach until you feel confident that you are sufficiently prepared to "step into" your work. You teach as much or as little as you like, knowing that this will be "the" experience before you actually teach.

ROBERTA JAMISON.

While you are interning, you have no other school work to divert your attention from your main object. You learn the whole school system, seeing it as the real need is. You learn to adapt yourself to the little bit of everything including teaching, working in the office, and handling the recreation program of the school.

Tis said that civilization becomes static when conflict ceases. Such static conditions seem to be rising on many of our universities, one can gather from the editorials that aren't going to let civilization become static.

While Texas is still wrangling over the Rainey case, the students at the University of Kentucky are quibbling over their activity program. It seems that the board of control recently has placed a ban on dancing in Lexington restaurants. The argument is being made that food, not dancing don't mix and that detrimental effects will be the students argue that if their dancing privileges are taken away that no other recreation provided that delinquency is bound to increase.

Editorial Trouble

And then there is the little ole' editorial written by the editor of the William and Mary paper. Students in favor of the State complain of not being treated as adults. The editor thinks of it as capable of doing serious thinking. Yet, a study made in 10 college papers is caused such a commotion that the paper is temporarily suspended. The students must pay more attention to student opinions than they themselves will admit.

Absentee Troubles

"Absenteeism is one of the chief causes of failure," declared a statement was issued by the Committee on Scholarship and Standing of Degrees at the Creighton University.

"It is rather nonsensical," say officials, "to pay tuition and then lose 50 cents a day, plus the approximate cost of each class—cut the window. Furthermore, being unaccounted for in class only makes it doubly hard on the student by keeping him doing little as much work in an effort to catch up on what he missed because of an absence."

When College Women Worry

"We of the WEEKLY, a bunch of old maids, view with bewilderment the shocking and unwarranted finers that always return from Christmas vacation. We are proud of them and also of the high percentage of alumnae with M's decorating them.

Married life has unbounded opportunities for the development of one's life. It should be every girl's ambition to make a lovely home for her husband and children. Yet beyond that is her duty to stay alive in the world as it progresses.

A true wife can give a lot to her husband in the way of service by helping him understand some of the beauties of life that he does not have time for in the business world. Perchhaps this is ideal- ism, but women's thoughts are to be a little starry-eyed. If we as women fail to live up to it we are beyond the routine of housewifely cares we will become narrow and lose our charm.

Bond Support

Oklahoma Colleges won't settle for less than 100 per cent student participation in the purchase of War Bonds and Stamps. When purchases fell below 90 per cent at Oklahoma College for Women, Chickasha, members of the faculty assembled around the flag pole and stood at attention while a bugler sounded taps and the flag was lowered. More than 90 per cent participation has been recorded every month since.

Educational opportunities for women war veterans are offered at New Jersey College for Women in a special course developed by the College and made available by the "GI Bill of Rights."

Because many of the usual requirements and conditions of admission to college would not fit 17-year-old high school graduates still not eligible for service, each applicant will be considered in the light of her individual qualifications. There will be open only a few simple conditions of admission to the course.—The applicant must have a serious purpose; 2—The program she desires must be suited to her. She must be capable of doing college work. Full information will be given to any educational experience she may have had in the service, especially when this is validated by tests given by the U S Armed Forces Institute.

Hold Your Peace

In a recent meeting of the sophomore class, the question was raised as to why class spirit and unity is lacking. Class officers, who wonder why so few of the so-called "little people" don't contribute more to the class activities, asked for suggestions.

Several trite suggestions were made, but they are not the Solution to the problem. We are rather inclined to agree with the opinion voiced by Betty Swarts at the meeting when she pointed out that the same few always undertake the responsibility by heading committees for all the sophomore activities.

Is it possible that the five or six "big people" in the class feel that they are the only ones capable? Surely there are many others who would work equally as efficiently it only given the chance.

Could it be that the reason there is such an appaling lack of spirit and unity that the majority of sophomores have no active voice in the plans and arrangements, and feel that it is useless to buck such overwhelming odds.

How about some sincere concern for the "little people" and some action?

In This Our Time

BY BETTY WEAVER

The Allies on the Western front have begun a full-fledged offensive against the German Reich after a lull which was begun months ago when 20 German divisions were thrown against the American First Army and its sectors around it.

As the Russians continue their advance into Germany with Berlin as their ultimate goal, Allied planes are aiding in the destruction of the Germans by bombing cities and communications to help the Allied and the Russian armies.

Great activity is taking place along the entire 450-mile Western front. In the Netherlands, the British and Canadian troops are driving to outflank the Siegfried line and move into the relatively undefended region of the South German Plains, which are considered the best approach to Berlin. This area is a combination of ground on which was begun months ago at Nijhe Fatmore Airborne landing and battle for Arnhem. The American Ninth Army is working in close cooperation with the British and the Canadians under the command of Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery.

American First and Third Armies together with the mighty industries of the Ruhr and moving toward the Cologne Plain and the Rhine. Cologne and Cologne the latter being an important communication center for the Germans in the Rhineland area.

The American Seventh Army on the right flank of Patton's Third is joining in the advance with the economically important Saar Basin.

The Allied Air Force is playing an important part in helping to clear the way for the Allies in the west and the Russians on the east. In summing up its achievements in the growing air power during the past year, Lieutenant General Carl Spaatz, the commander of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force said it had: (1) Reduced the German air force to the importance; (2) cut down German supply of fuel and forced the Nazis to deliver the minimum requirements of German industry; (3) played a decisive part in breaking the U-boat campaign; (4) "tremendously depreaded" Hitler's European defenses; and (5) "ungeared" the war economy by destroying the Germans' transportation, workers' homes and forcing the Nazis to divert crucial manpower to manning anti-aircraft defenses.

hose, silk "from top to bottom" for one dollar a pair. Another offered "guaranteed" nylons to be free of charge while satin slipper bought from them.

Typical of the wet morning dining halls across the land, were those who were interrupted by giggles as seemed pajama leg drops down from under a coat, or pajama shielding less leg maneuvers away from the piercing glances of campus social committee members.

It seems there was a very rich born litter under the Republican which was more often than not decorated with a little sign which read "GI Bill of Rights Junior run." After months of struggle a new one was finally discovered and the girls were so grateful that they had a regular little carnival over it. A huge mechanical bull was made by one of the freshmen as she removed from the defenseless animal's head a tin cloth of a senior clown. The whole affair was a big splash of ginger ale, said "In the spirit of Reynolds hall I shriiten the Oasis," and crashed down the bottle. They swept up the pieces and swabbed up the ginger ale and had a hilarious time even in cleaning up the mess.

Sorority Social Calendars Bulge As Members Plan Varied Activities

Suppers, parties, teas and after dinner coffees top the list in engagement for the sorority members and their weekend visitors this week.

Mrs Ellen Barret, the house mother at the Alpha Phi house is giving a coffee Sunday night for the chapter. Last week-end while their pledgeing president Mrs Hazzard, was here, the girls had a welnie roast.

Carolyn Barr, Betty Jean Spencer, and Mary Hopson were hostesses to the Xi Delts Thursday afternoon.

The Omega pledges will present a skit at the out-door supper which members are having Sunday night. Last week their pledges and as their guest Barbara Constants, an alumnae.

Last Sunday night the Delta Delta Delta pledges gave the members and their guests a snowball supper. After which they all around the fire starthe songs for their formal dance which will be held February 24 are being completed.

A new idea was tried out this week by Delta Phi Epsilon members, at their Wednesday afternoon tea, each member invited a girl from the dorm according Sylvia Moscovitch, who was in charge of the tea, announced that this was done in an attempt to further inter-sorority relations.

Saturday night the actives and pledges of Delta Zeta will get together at the "Night Club Delta Zeta". The main entertainment of the evening will be a Hula dance given by the pledges.

Marjorie Woodberry, social chairman, had charge of the informal supper party which was given at the Kappa Delta house. Pledges sang their "goat" songs after supper.

Sigma Kappa members, pledges, rushees, and their dates will be entertained tomorrow night at a delayed Valentine party.

Delta Delta Delta Plans Annual Dance

The annual formal dance of Delta Delta Delta which will be held February 24 at the Governor's mansion will take as its theme "Delta Heaven and the Den of Iniquity" with appropriate decorations planned.

The all girl orchestra of Florida State will play for the dance under the direction of Mr Frank Sykora, who will provide the music. Punch will be served at the dance by Mrs Ellen Barret.

The invited guests for the dance are the Delta Delta Delta patronesses and patronesses, Governor and Mrs Millard Caldwell, Deans of the Florida Supreme Court, Alto Adams, Mrs Adams, Mr and Mrs Carl Weiss, Dr C Mayo Greene of sociology at Florida State College for Women and Mrs Carrie Landis Hall was named.

The committees for the dance are Ruth L'Engle, Virginia Colley and Miss Lucy Jane Gholston, decorations; Edith Hawkins and Rosetta Carver, program; Betty Tring and Miss Lucy Jane Gholston, Mac Brass, refreshments; Elaine Hall, Carolyn Ann Gilbert, and Tom Whitehurst, invitations.

Bo Peep Shell, music.

On Saturday afternoon, February 24, there will be an informal dance at the Delta Delta Delta Delta house will honor all active members, pledges, and their dates. Refreshments will be given and bows in addition to dancing, will help decorate the house.

Sunday morning an informal breakfast will be given for active members, pledges and dates.

Following this, a skit under the direction of Betty Jean Spencer, will be put on for the entertainment of the guests.

Drift and Dream Revived by YWCA

"Drift and Dream," a twenty-year old tradition of Florida State poetry, has been revived again.

This program is presented by the faculty committee of the Young Women's Christian Association and will be given at 7:30 Last Friday night the program was in the hands of the publicity committee Minnie Lou Crum as chairman assisted by Bobbie Perkins in the role of "Blue Rain" "I Dream of Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair" "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi", and "Temperance" and the poems read by Doris Hill, Virginia Sewell, Winnie LeePard were "My Bo I Love Your" and "Oh Promise Me" by Elizabeth Berrett "Dreaming Dreams," and "To Helen" by Richard Lovelace. "My Love Is Like a Red, Red Rose" by Robert Burns, and a prose selection, "Love's Definition."

The creative groups plans to vary the programs to fit the interests of all the students, and is encouraging members to use original poetry, music and prose on their programs to give real meaning to the name of the group.

Spirogira Guests At Esteren Party

Esteren club will entertain members of Spiragira at a Bunko party tonight, announced Sarah Shiver, president of the Esteren group. Hostesses in Landis recreation hall from 4:30 to 9:30 o'clock.

Miss Shiver announced that the Esteren program was announced in order to stimulate interest on the campus in current world affairs. They plan to accomplish this through posters, action boards, and other means not yet decided.

That plans for Skit-night to be held in the last of April, have already begun in the Esteren group, Sarah Bennett confirmed. She also added that "Esteren is out to win."

Tom Hoorovary alumnae who attended the meeting were: Miss Paulette Nolan '42, and Mrs. Rives and Martha Twitty, '44 of the class of '44.

Pi Phi's Plan Busy Weekend

A busy weekend is being planned for all Pi Phi actives and pledges this week with pledging. Pi Phi night, and victory garden.

Frances Pease, freshman from Ft. Lauderdale, will be pledged tonight in the usual traditional pledging ceremony. Edwina Wiggins, junior who has recently returned from Mexico and is attending FSC this term, will act as toastmaster at Rushees' call initiation next fall.

Dr Ralph Cowles, professor of psychology and director of orchestra, will be the honored guest at the traditional Pi Phi night this Saturday evening when he will give a special program of classical music. While playing records he will give a brief description of the composition and its composer. Cowles will also play some selections on the piano.

Members of Pi Beta Phi and patrons of the campus fraternity will also be guests. Following the program coffee and cakes will be served. Sara Ann Davis and Jane Ann Gardner are in charge of refreshments.

A new project is being started by an active Pi Phi's at the house this week—the cultivation of a "victory" garden. Harriet Young and Louise Brown are chief "farmers" although each member will have a hand, and also a certain amount of time and energy.

Carrots, squash, radishes, onions, and spinach are some of the vegetables that will be planted. The garden will be in the back yard of the sorority house. When ever they feel like suddenly desires no energetic and planned to work, volunteers will aid, and will give us some good exercise and I hope some good snack food."

Pi Sigma Pi Holds Initiation Picnic

Natural Bridge, near Wakulla Springs, was the scene two weeks ago of the annual picnic of the Pi Sigma Pi club, and also for the initiation of new members into Pi Sigma Pi, local botany honorary.

Members of the department and students also attended the picnic selecting specimen planks. After this initiation ceremonies, the group enjoyed a picnic supper of steaks, potatoes, and coffee over an open fire.

New initiates in the honorary are Miss Mildred Henry, state seed analyst, Mrs. Herman Cowles who was made an honorary member in the club, Miss Gladys Crawford, Ulchrist residence hall counsellors.

Playnight Presents Patriotic Program

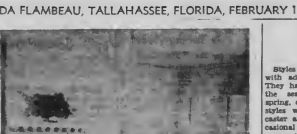
Stories of the famed Cherry Tree episode were the only reminders of the birthday of George Washington here on the campus, as the students were invited to attend a special George Washington Birthday party and Playnight tomorrow night in the physical education building, beginning at 7 o'clock.

Corinne Johnston, mistress of ceremonies, announced the start of the program which will include songs by Gerry Halpern, two dance numbers by the girls tumbling class, and a reading by Ida Lee Bentz.

The tap dancing class will feature a soft shoe tap, "Blue Boogie" and a dance entitled "Hillbillies", under the direction of Mrs Lavelle W. Dickens, instructor in physical education.

Red and white columns at the entrance of the playnight program will carry out the "Father of Our Country" theme. Twisted red, white, and blue crepe paper streamer will be connected around the balcony with hop hats. Along the side walls downstairs will be stars inset among the red and white scalloped paper.

Chairmen of the committees, appointed by Betty Lou Boynton, chairman of playnight committee, are Grace Lindsey, decorations; Lavelle Dickens, program; Mott, chaperon; Rachel Chambers, coca cola sale; and Dr vrei Peay, publicity.



Miss Bertha E Bloodworth, publicity secretary of Florida State College, and Miss Louise Gehan, secretary of the alumnae association, will be chaperones for the evening.

Playday Planned

Sometime during March, the physical education majors will conduct a "Play-day" here on campus, in which the various schools of Leon county will participate, according to Dr Kelsher, the Monument, physical education director.

Boys and girls from the fourth grade up will engage in a full day of games and sports. In the morning, a play-period of games will take place with teams to be selected at random. In the afternoon teams from the various schools will participate in a program of sports. Singing and stunts will also take place, and a picnic lunch will be held on the grass in the vicinity of the gymnasium.

Sophomores "Hop" at Annual Formal; Decorations Feature Merry-Go-Round

Five hundred sophomores and their dates celebrated Valentine's day four days ahead of time when they attended Florida State College's annual sophomore hop held in the college gymnasium last Saturday night. Paraphernalia around a "merry-go-round" to the music of Camp Gordon Johnston's band, situated on a octagonal platform with red and white streamers reaching to the ceiling formed the center piece of the floor galloped little cardboard horses and at the entrance to the gymnasium a large wishing well decorations labeled "Love is Just a Merry-Go-Round."

Neil Clark was general chairman of the hop, with Eugenia Bene assisting as business manager.

Rainbow Is Theme Of Reynolds Dance

A rainbow room will be the theme of the Reynolds formal, which will be held in the Reynolds parlor February 24 from 8 until 12 p m. according to Sara Sexton, chairman of the dance committee.

Carrying out the theme, a huge rainbow will be displayed at one end of the room. Multi-colored streamers will adorn the room and a crepe paper lattice-work with flowers interwoven will cover the windows. Alice Comstock and Pat Harrison are acting as co-chairmen of this decorations committee.

Vivian Collins, who is in charge of the music, announced that twelve new records will be purchased for the occasion.

Punch will be served by members of the refreshments committee, under the direction of Beverly Watkin, chairman.

Guests, invited for the evening are: Professor and Mrs Henry F Becker, Miss Helen Gray, Miss Grace Fox, Mrs Beverly Stevens, and Miss Lois Allen.

Sarah Jane McKelvy and Emma Jeanne Hackle, will act as advisers of the decorations and refreshment committee.

Dormitories Plan Social Activities

Entertainment has been planned for the dormitory this semester by the dormitory social committees, beginning with a formal for Reynolds Hall on February 24. On the same night a Progressive Games Party will be held for residents of Landis, Gilchrist, Broward, and New Hall. Various games will be played and refreshments will be served in Landis. The party will be climaxed by a square dance for girls only.

Bryan's social committee has enlarged its program for this semester. Their formal will be April 7, but in the meantime, Bryan girls will dance in their recreation room every Monday and Tuesday evenings with instructors on hand to teach those who are interested in learning to dance. Bridge parties will be held on Friday nights, and Saturday night's entertainment will be of interest to those who play Liverpool Rummy. Pop corn parties will be featured on Sunday evenings.

Engagement Tea Honors AGD Senior

When Mrs A C Fox of Tampa gave an engagement tea at the home Saturday afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'c ock last Wednesday afternoon for her daughter, Betty Jane, one of the spring brides, she was carried out in the decorations.

Betty Jane's engagement to Harry Hazan of Atlanta was made public at the party, the setting of the wedding date as May 28. The couple will be married in the sorority house in the afternoon day with her sorority sisters staying over for the event.

Mrs Fox had been visiting her daughter since the previous week-end. Mrs Hazan is a resident of Tampa.

Red and white azaleas, red camellias, and red and white streamers carried out the valentine theme. Small red hearts with the wedding date written on them were placed about the large cake in the center of the room.

Guests who dropped in during the afternoon included Dr Jennie Till, Miss Isabel McKinnell, Miss Elizabeth Lynn Dr L Lewis, Mrs Katherine Northrop, Miss Mary Clabrooke, and other invited guests.

Bellamy Speaks

Dr Raymond Bellamy, professor of sociology, spoke before the Methodist men's supper club at 8 o'clock Monday evening in Havana, Florida.

Addressing the group on "Role of the Church in Postwar America," he stressed the importance of the church in the reconstruction period.

Fashion Flashes

Styles have long been discussed with acclamation or disapproval. They have come and gone with the seasons; winter, summer, spring, or fall. But what of the styles when the weather freezes one season and the occasional showers"? Fashion runs rampant on the campus of FSC on a rainy day. The apparel, head dress, and accessories of the college students are a fine example of variety and contrast.

Perhaps the mostly widely-used piece of equipment during a cloudburst is the umbrella. There are umbrellas of all kinds and hues, some dark and somber, some gaily striped or checked, some marely collapsible. Still others fold neatly after the storm is over.

Those who find umbrellas a liability rather than an asset might consider the head dresses, adorning some of the co-eds on the campus, which might amuse even Dame Fashion herself. Pixie chiefs, and scarves in myriad colors. Some lasses go patriotic and wear scarves in plaids that originate with an army camp or denote a large red heart with a white star. The regulation rainy-day head wear of the WAVES is not an uncommon sight, and one never knows you may see a fireman's helmet. There is also the bandana which whose hair simply curls lighter and then others whose hair merely "droops" with the wind and the rain.

Only after the protection of her hair has been considered does the average college girl think of raincoats. These are mainly a matter of color, style, length, and saddle and rubber to oilskin. They also come in many colors and styles.

Lastly, foot gear found on the campus is of the most varied and versatile style and design. There is the girl who braves the elements and rain puddles in an open-toed sandals while others wear galoshes, boots of either ankle or knee height. There have even been a few pairs of snowshoes seen around the co-ed colony and it is not at all surprising when one sees the barefoot lassie trudging on some bare-footed, ration-conscious member of the student body.

Cotillion Renews Dancing Classes

Cotillion president, Betty Lou Christian, announced that last night in the Student Alumnae building dancing classes were held for the first time this year. Classes will be given every night from 7:30 till 9 o'clock except on Cotillion club until the end of the year, Betty Lou also said.

Dancing classes have been the main project of the honorary dance club here on the campus for many years. Each Cotillion member donates some time in instructing and helping out in the interested in learning to ball room dance.

Wednesday at the Chi Omega house members and taps of the dancing classes discussed plans for a special defense dance. Announcements concerning this will be made at a later date.

Besides the usual hostessing in the game room of the Alumnae building every Tuesday night during dancing classes, the group plans to sponsor a defense film next month. They will also participate in the annual skit-night program, Betty Lou asserted.

Alumnae News of the Week Consists Of Promotions and New Positions Accepted

Hazel Bowman, graduate of Florida State College and former Flambeau editor, is now doing Red Cross recreational work in Italy, according to a letter received by Mr Earl Vance, head of the Journalism Department, before being sent to India, Hazel was employed by the government in confidential work in Washington, D C. Hazel's sister, Eudora, also FSC student, is now in nurse's training at John Hopkin's Hospital.

National Exam Is Final Test

Chemical Society Prepares Exams for Students

A national examination was given in January by the chemistry department of Florida State College to the final semester students for all general chemistry students. According to the office staff of the department, this examination is the culmination of eight years of study and work which the American Chemical Society has done through the committee on examinations of the Division of Chemical Education in an effort to provide the teaching profession with satisfactory chemistry examinations for world-wide use. Yearly, this committee has revised and improved these objective tests which are being used by the University of Florida as well as Florida State College.

The annual results of the testing program will not be available until next summer but the chemistry department has ascertained that the scores made by FSC students have compared very favorably with the reports of previous years.

Dr L J Lewis, professor of chemistry, said that the department was well pleased with the grades of the students on the examination and hoped that the appraisal of the scores from this test would be effective as a partial guide in determining the achievement and progress of the students.

The Journal of Chemical Education announced that at a conference held in Chicago in June 1941, the Committee on Examinations recommended the using of these comprehensive tests and summarized the functions as follows: to provide nation-wide, comprehensive, and reliable standards for the purpose of comparison of individuals with other members of their class or with national standards; comparison of classes from year to year, thus helping to maintain or improve standards; and for the comparison of instruction in the same school or school system, to provide an instrument to measure the achievements of individuals, groups in schools, further more objective information on the relative difficulty of the various aspects of chemistry; to stimulate research in the clarification of the objectives behind chemistry instruction, aid in the study of educational problems, by providing a more accurate instrument by which achievement may be measured.

The Journal further stated that the records attempt to appraise the entire program and to suggest ways in which it may be improved so that it may become increasingly useful to a growing number of chemistry teachers. The statistics from these tests have been published in the Journal for several years and they show that on the average as indicated by the 50 percentile scores men students obtain higher scores than women; those who have studied high school chemistry are more competent students in engineering schools are best prepared for this test and students in liberal arts colleges do least well. The scores are also affected by factors such as the hours of attendance in the laboratory, hours of lecture and the previous credit hours of chemistry.

The program of the committee is continually expanding and it is hoped that this work will prove

Youth Conference to Uphold Tradition of Outstanding Guests

During the nine years which the Youth Conference has been held on the campus of Florida State College, there have been a great number of speakers from foreign lands. This year's conference will be no exception.

An Indian princess from Oklahoma was one of the first Youth Conference speakers. In 1938, the year following Princess Atalea's appearance, an Indian from India was one of three citizens from other countries who led the conference. Besides Dr Bhaskarao Pandurang Hivale, who was the professor of philosophy in Wilson College, Bombay, India, there was Dr Robert MacGowan, who was born in Scotland and who is now an instructor at Florida Southern College in Lakeland, and Miss Yoko Sato, a Japanese coloratura soprano.

The following year a Chinese soloist, Miss Louise I-Huien Kwan, sang to the conference audience. She was a student of Mme Shkolnikoff, Russian operatic star, and a graduate of the Shanghai Conservatory of Music. A fellow countryman, Chwen Kiang Djang, came with Miss Kwan in 1939. Mr Djang was Baptist Young People's secretary for China.

Another native Indian to the 1939 conference was Bishop Jashwant Rao Chitambar, the first Indian elected superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal church. Miss Ila Romola Sircar, also a native of India, came the next year. Miss Sircar, a graduate of Punjab University, was general secretary of the student Christian movement in India and one of the youngest delegates to the missionary conference held in Madras several years ago. In the same team with Miss Sircar, Dr McGowan returned to speak again in 1941. Robert Baird McClure was the first Canadian to be a conference spokesman. His experience as a Red Cross doctor in China made him familiar with the Burma Road section which was being discussed at that time.

War forced the 1942 Youth Conference to use talent mostly from our own country. Mr Max Brauer was the only native of a foreign country on that team. He, in former times had been mayor of a large German city and a member of the Prussian Senate. Although he had been offered posts in Hitler's government several times, he was finally forced to flee from Germany because of his opposition to the Nazi party. At one time the League of Nations sent Mr Brauer to China as an adviser on municipal government.

The 1943 conference had three nationals. John Williams Hughes was a young Welshman who won the Genera scholarship for distinguished service in the cause of peace and international cooperation. During the Spanish Revolution he commanded a medical unit on the front lines and broadcasted from besieged Madrid.

Mr Hypatia Vras, graduated from the University of Lithuania and was a delegate to the Amsterdam World Conference of Christian Youth in 1938. He was also a refugee from the German government. The Rev George P Howard was an Argentine citizen although he was born of American parents. He had been an official translator at several Pan-American conferences.

Besides the citizens of foreign countries over 50 Americans outstanding in religious and educational fields have taken part in the conference during the nine years in which it has been held. Leaders of last year's meeting were all Americans. Students who attended conference sessions will recall Dr Walter Van Rick, the Rev Ernest W Riggs, Miss Gloria Werner, Dr Hugh C Stuntz, the Rev Stanton Lautenschlager, Dr Mark Dawber and Dr Charles T Leber.

Miss Louise Woodford state director of the Chain of Missions has promised that this year's leaders will uphold the standards set by their predecessors. This year's group will feature an agricultural expert, a London problems, a leader from Latin America, two experts on the Far East, a Mexican missionary, a pastor of a college church, and several home mission workers.

Vocational Guidance Lectures to Begin

Programs to Aid Students In Selecting Vocations

The Personnel department has announced a series of vocational guidance lectures to begin February 19 at 8:15 p m in the club room of the Student Alumnae building. The purpose of these programs is to provide information for students who are undecided as to the type vocation they wish to follow after leaving college.

The theme of the semester's program will be "Laboratory Technicians in Civilian and Military life." WAC Lt Melba Hutchinson graduate of FSC and director of Tallahassee Clinical laboratory, will speak concerning the civilian phase of the field. Lt Melba Schaeffer, a laboratory technician before entering the WACs, will speak on the military phase. Both of these officers are stationed at Dale Mabry Field.

The second program will be held early in March for the benefit of those interested in work dealing with people. Dr Elizabeth Andrews will be the speaker and the title of her lecture is "Person ne. Work. New Field for Women.

Announcements of other programs to be held during this semester will be made at a later date.

to be of increasing service to the profession. The committee believes that the greatest progress can be made in this direction by the cooperation of large colleges and universities in this country and the recognition on the part of the educational administrators that sound research and constructive effort in the fields of chemical pedagogy is as valuable as corresponding work in chemistry proper.

Liddell Speaks To FSC 'Y' Members

A meeting to investigate the value functions and continuation of the Young Women's Christian association on this campus was held February 9, with Dr Anna Forbes Liddell advisor, as speaker.

A united campus religious program for the purpose of increasing student leadership was the outstanding suggestion made. This organization would be composed of presidents of each religious group, and a member from each committee in these groups would be sect as a representative to the meetings of the United Campus Religious organization.

In her talk Dr Liddell pointed out the values of YWCA on the FSC campus. The organization started Sophomore council helped with the planning of CCA, assisted in the selection of the Gold books, and promoted a recreational program in the city of Tallahassee.

YWCA ventured into new fields as these duties were taken over by other organizations. Dr Liddell pointed out

Day of Prayer

World Student Christian Federation Day of Prayer will be held February 18 and a program has been planned for 3:30 Sunday afternoon in the Student-Alumnae conference room.

The program will be a directed meditation and fellowship with students all over the world. The worship committee of YWCA, with Margaret Clayton as chairman, will be in charge.

Casting for Play Is Taking Place

Casting for the "Yellow Jacket," a full length play to be presented in the Augusta Conradi theater April 11, 12, and 13, is now taking place and will be completed this week according to Miss Evelyn Bowman, assistant professor of speech.

"Yellow Jacket" a Chinese fantasy by George Hazelton Bennimo, will be presented in the regular Chinese manner, using the conventional chorus and property man.

In charge of designing and constructing the scenery for this production are Miss Ann Kirn, instructor in art, and members of stage craft art class 207. They also will handle the lighting effects.

Any speech student who is interested in participating in this production is requested by Miss Bowman to see her immediately.

"Love Will Find A Way"—Sometimes!

One Florida State junior has reason to doubt the truth of that old proverb. "Love will find a way."

Her lieutenant, whom she had not seen in two years, arrived at her home just before she left to come back to FSC at the end of the Christmas holidays. He drove her back to college, but they were not able to talk because it was necessary to drive very fast in order that the girl would arrive at the college before the 12 o'clock deadline.

They could not be together the next morning, because she had classes. When he saw her that afternoon, he was very ill, and on his way to Dale Mabry hospital.

The girl has only one statement to make. "Two years overseas without a scratch, and he gets sick in Tallahassee!"

Hillel Group Hears Brotherhood Talks

With the theme of the evening, "A True Faith a Brotherhood," the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation has arranged a brotherhood evening at Temple Israel, Copeland and St Augustine Streets, Thursday night at 8:00.

The speakers of the evening will be Dr Raymond Bellamy, professor of sociology who will address the assemblage on the subject "Good Will — How to Attract It," and Mr Earl L Vance, associate professor of English and journalism who will discuss the theme, " Good Will — How to Act About It."

Arrangements are being made for suitable movies for the evening. Refreshments will follow the conclusion of the discussions.

All the religious denominations on campus as well as all college girls are cordially invited to participate.

Fire Alarm Catches FSC Girls Unaware

Girls with their hair in curlers or wrapped in towels poured forth from the dormitories last Friday afternoon at five thirty in response to the fire alarm in such attire as kimonas, bathrobes, shorts, and other scanty apparel.

The fire drill, the first this semester, caught the students napping, taking showers and shampooing hair. Many of them held fast to the path of duty, torn between obeying the instructions and rescuing from them in regard to fire drills and the disgrace of appearing in public informally.

The girls in Nes Hall remained undisturbed as they have no fire alarm system as yet.

Walrus, in early days, were plentiful in the Gulf of St Lawrence.

Bellamy Conducts Tour in Museum

Science classes received first-hand information on the Ina collection in the museum located on the top floor of the Student Alumnae building, when Dr Raymond Bellamy, professor of sociology, conducted a one-hour tour through the museum last Friday morning.

Students viewed the shrunken head of an Indian woman from which still flows long black hair and which is now less than four inches in diameter. The eyelashes and eyebrows remained intact. Colorful Inca pottery, jewelry costumes, and blankets were other objects of interest under observation.

Classes of Dr Leland J Lewis, professor of chemistry, and Miss Isabel McKinnell, assistant professor of chemistry, took part.

Youth Conference Will Open Weekend Session on Friday; First Meeting Is Held in SAB

Specialized Speakers Will Discuss Various Topics At Seminars and Open Meetings; Social Functions Are Also Planned

The schedule for this year's Youth Conference which will begin next Friday afternoon with registration at the Baptist Student House, includes time for a banquet and party, seminars, addresses, and personal conferences with the ambassadors.

Dr Winburn Thomas, secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement of America and former missionary to Japan, will preside at all meetings of the conference. Dorothy Caswell, co-student chairman with Margaret Smith, will introduce him to the members of the conference at the opening session in the Student Alumnae building auditorium Friday night.

Isabel Rogers will lead a short worship service before Dr Thomas introduces the rest of the conference speakers.

Leaders to Preview

Each of the leaders will give a preview of their chosen field of discussion during the conference in Raymond B Drukker, director of mountain work in Jackson County, Kentucky, will discuss Christian citizenship during the weekend. Latin America will be covered by Dr Charles W Hinston, former rector of an Episcopal church in Mexico City, and Mr Charles D Hurrey, former professional secretary of the YMCA. Mr Hurrey has had charge of prison camp work since he began it in Japan in 1939 and prepared to tell of the conditions under which American prisoners of war are living.

Dr Blake Smith, pastor of the University Baptist Church of Austin Texas, has been closely associated with college student work for the past 20 years. He has been a close observer of the recent unrest in the Texas educational system and is prepared to give first hand information to those who are interested.

Orient Represented

The Orient will be represented by two women and one man. Mrs. Leonard L Archer was a Methodist missionary in Shanghai, Iwa and Malaya, until she was forced to flee from the Japanese invasion. Miss Eleanor Wilson is considered to be the last woman to leave the Celebes and Borneo islands before the Japanese arrived there. Because of her knowledge of that region she has been asked by the government to help in the training of officers going to that section. Dr Arthur T Moseley is an expert in agriculture and the social problems of India. At the present time he is on furlough from Allahabad Christian College where he is a professor.

Miss B Louise Woodford of St Hilarion is state secretary of the Florida Chain of Missions, a church in the Episcopal diocese of college section. She has been in charge of preliminary plans for Youth Conference and will act for it.

Saturday morning sessions will open at 9 o'clock with worship led by Dr Thomas. Miss Eleanor Wilson will also preside over this session before the business meeting at which time the conference officers will be elected. Dr Thomas will again speak immediately following the business meeting.

Seminar Begins

Seminars will begin at 11 o'clock. The group will divide into four sections, each interested in a particular subject. Discussion about Mexico will be led by Dr Hinston. Dr Hurrey will be in charge of the group studying the student movement in South America. Dr Archer and Dr Moseley have interested in India. Dr Thomas, Miss Wilson, and Dr Thomas will be joint leaders of the group studying the philosophy of the Japanese. Luncheon seminars will be repeated in the afternoon with the exception of the one investigating the people of Mexico. Dr Hinston will lead a discussion of the implications in its place in the world. Dr Hurrey will conduct a definite time for personal conferences with the ambassadors. Those desiring to discuss a problem privately with the ambassadors will find that there is time allotted for that immediately after lunch Saturday.

Banquet to Be Held

Coughlin Is Speaker Here

Public Health in Wartime Discussed in Convo

Dr Paul Coughlin spoke on public health in wartime and the importance of health education in convocation Tuesday.

Dr Coughlin, sponsored by Senior hall as a part of the program instituted by the Student World Affairs organization, formed of representatives from campus organizations for the purpose of keeping students better informed on current events.

Dr Coughlin emphasized the importance of the control of health, both in peacetime and wartime for accomplishment of the objectives and functions of the board of health in all its branches, both rural and military. He illustrated the value of public health service, by way of example, examples of the work of the local board of health, which includes inspection of milk and water, checking of

Films to Be Shown Sponsored by VV's

Villare Vamps are sponsoring three defense films which will be presented in the Auguste Conradi Theater tomorrow night at 8 o'clock and Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, stated Ann Jackson, president.

The films, as announced by Nell McNeil in convocation Tuesday will include "Winning Your Wings," a technicolor movie starring James Stewart. "Talk about Children" and "Where Are the Fighting Marines, and "Mission Accomplished."

Jeanne Leech was responsible for the posters concerning the showing of the films.

Ann also announced that in the meeting held last Thursday at 5 o'clock at the Kappa Delta house, Betsy Golden was elected vice-president and Henrilee Christmann, treasurer. They were elected to fill offices left vacant by Ann Jackson Collins and Betty Love McCallum.

Meginniss Presents Minutes Of Platonic Debating Society

Minutes of the Platonic Debating Society of The State College for Women, West of the Suwannee river were read by Florida Meginniss, a predecessor of Florida Meginniss of the present day, last week to the college library by Judge Ben A Meginniss, a former member of The State Seminary and member of the Debating Society.

The charter was co-educational but the Debating Society had only male members during its first few years. The constitution, by-laws and minutes of the meetings before 1897 were written by male secretaries in longhand in a large, four somerset cloth bound ledger which appears to have survived fire and water.

Problems of misconduct subject to fines are enumerated in the by-laws among them are: Unchaperone or indecorous language in the hall—50c; talking so as to disturb the house—15c; spitting on floor or furniture—25c; action in an ungentlemanly manner—10c to 50c.

In May, of 1900 there was a motion to "ask young ladies in school to attend the next debate," when the question was to be "Resolved: That Women Should Vote." The judges "after a long and tedious discussion" decided in the negative but in the records' discussion which followed, in which the women

Tickets For Mia Slavenska Are Available

William Primrose, Violist, Scheduled March 14 Concert Series

Dance Ensemble Appears On Campus March 7

Reserved seat tickets are still available for Mia Slavenska and her dance ensemble, the next Artist Series event scheduled for 8 series on March 7, stated Mr Karl O Kenzenberg, dean of the School of Music.

The tickets are being given out every day through February 28, except on Saturday and Sunday, in the Student Alumnae building from 4 to 6 p m.

"One person may take as many as four blue tickets to claim the reserved seat tickets for herself and friends," said Dean Kuerstener.

For the benefit of those who will be unable to secure tickets to see the Slavenska ensemble Dean Kuerstener announced that William Primrose, who has been called "the world's greatest violinist," will appear the following week, March 14, in Westcott Auditorium. Tickets for this event which will be given to students who have either the blue or the red tickets.

Tickets for the appearance of Mr Primrose will be distributed every day from March 1 to 7, from 4 Saturday and Sunday, from 4 to 6 p m.

The dancing troupe is made up of Miss Slavenska, her husband David Thimar, and other well-known dancers including Miss Audrey Krane, Norma Vasilevia, and Joseph A Harris.

"The ballet expression is achieved by the two duo-pianists who are with the group, Frederic Schatzkamer and Mary Bray. Among the musical compositions to be presented are "Bolero" and the Bumblebee" by Rimsky-Korsakoff; "Polka" by Glazounov; "Balkan Sketches" by Tajkevitch; and Special American arrangements among which is "The American Ballade" based on the music of Stephen Foster. Another dance is built around the southern spirituals "Both of the latter will especially please the southern audience," said Dean Kuerstener.

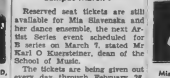
Dean Kuerstener said that Miss Ann Kirn and Miss Evelyn Bowman of the art department, are cooperating with Miss Slavenska's special lighting director, Jean Rosenthal, in the lecture and lighting effective. He also mentioned that Miss Bowman has designed many of the costumes worn by Miss Slavenska, the other members of her ensemble.

Newspapers from many countries have said that Miss Slavenska and her company have great sensural vitality, grace and precise but exhuberant characterization through the exceptional rendering of traditional ballet.

Geo Washington's Grandniece Sleeps Here Everlastingly

During the season of Georgc Washington's birthday many Tallahasseans boast that the grandniece of the Father of Our Country formerly slept here and is now sleeping in the Episcopal cemetery on Park ave.

In 1824, Prince Achille Murat, nephew of Napoleon, and future husband of Georgc Washington's grand niece, Catherine Willis, settled on a plantation near Tallahassee. Murat had been exiled once bore the title of Prince of Two Sicilies, added lustre to the politics of Tallahassee. He was alderman in 1824, mayor in 1825, and postmaster in 1826.



Any astonishment that Prince Murat felt in regard to the custom of his Florida neighbors must have been equalled by their amazement at his huge appetite. It is reported that he would eat anything that crawled, swam ,or flew.

Shortly after settling in Leon county he met and married Mrs Catherine Willis Gray.

Riding two miles from Tallahassee on the old Cchlockonee road one can see the Murat residence. It is a story-and-a-half frame structure with twin brick chimneys built in the early 1800's by Prince Murat and his wife, sheltered by a grove of live oaks. it stands on a plantation named "Belle Vue" by Princess Murat.

The Rev Winburn T Thomas, PhD, foreign missionary to Japan, will preside at the Youth Conference beginning March 2.

Mia Slavenska and her dancing troupe will appear on the 8 Artist Series March 7.

Trial Period Passes Senate

Three Point Program to Be Carried Out

Student Senate approved the three-point program governing the trial period of the new ruling regarding students' return after an overnight absence, voted to extend Senior automatic late permission to one hour after second light flash, and tabled a motion that a resolution be sent to College Council recommending the extension of Senior Hall privileges to all seniors.

Last Friday at a call meeting Senate approved the first two points of the three-point program and approved the third point at the regular Senate meeting the following Wednesday. At the meeting Wednesday it was announced that the committee the reading of the gold book on Senior Automatic from, "A senior may have this permission until 11:30 p m on the average of once a month ..." to read, "A senior may have this permission until one hour after second light flash on the average of once a month."

This change is also designed to eliminate confused interpretation on the privilege which is granted. It seems that a senior may not have the privilege on Friday and Saturday nights. Both the three-point program and the legislation on senior automatic late permission

Campbell Addresses AAUP Tuesday Nite

"Workshop Idea in Higher Education" Is Subject

The Workshop Idea in Higher Education" was the topic of an address by Dr Doak S Campbell, president of Florida State College given before the American Association of University Professors Tuesday night. Outlining the characteristics of workshop, Dr Campbell stated that the effectiveness of the work is determined by the ability of the workshop.

After outlining a brief history of its development, Dr Campbell listed some of the problem and the method of attacking the question in determining the group. He also said that the responsibility for different phases of the problem is carried by different individuals and that the workshop is not rigid as to a time schedule.

"Often the group does not get a new method of teaching, Dr Campbell said. Professors and lecturers under other names have been widely used for a long time. However, in recent years the workshop has developed rather widely."

FSC Observes Brotherhood Week in Speeches, Program

A radio program consisting of speeches by college students representing the various religious and a program at Temple Israel are features of Brotherhood week on the campus of Florida State College, which is being observed throughout the country February 18 through 25.

The week, which is sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, proposes to further a spirit of cooperation between the various faiths.

Referring to participation by the college in this observance, Dr Frank B Chamberlain, president of Florida State College, said, "We are glad to cooperate in recognition of National Brotherhood week. It is our hope that all students and faculty members will participate in some of the activities of this nationwide observance."

The program, which appeared over Garnet and Gold Tuesday night, included talks by Isabel Rogers, Geraldine Halpern and Ann Parker, representing the Protestant, Jewish and Catholic faiths, respectively and appealed for fair play and brotherhood among the three religions.

Stating that loyal Americans of all religious faiths are united in the war effort, Isabel said that brotherhood will guarantee a lasting peace as nothing else can.

Geraldine Halpern, speaker for the Jewish faith, commented as a motto for Brotherhood work, "In Peace as in War—Teamwork."

Ann Parker, Catholic speaker, stressed that we are fighting the present war in defense of the ideals exemplified by the spirit of Brotherhood week.

Temple Israel was host to college girls and members of the Tallahassee community Thursday night after the invocation by Rev Jeffrey Alfriend, Dr Raymond Bellamy, head of the history Department spoke on "Good Will—How to Get It, Spread It, and Mr Earl Vance, associate professor of English and journalism, spoke on "Getting Along With and About It." An hour of discussion followed.

Copies of the poem, "Pure Race Meets Mixed-Blood Boys" by H I Phillips and "One Hundred Intolerable" by Berton Braley, which are about world brotherhood, can be obtained by college students at the Flambeau distribution center in lower ▼escicot.

Dr A C Wilgus Speaks Here

Topic Is Transition Of Pan American Policy

By telling of the slow transition of the Pan-American policy into the Good Neighbor policy of today even at the present aiding the countries of the Western Hemisphere in the present world conflict, Dr A Curtis Wilgus, professor of Hispanic American history at George Washington University, Washington, D C, gave a clear picture of the changes that this organization is built on and of the antecedents it had.

The Good-Neighbor Policy was based on four separate policies dating from 1823, with Monroism, which was the pleasing rhetoric to the Latin American countries. A Religious problem in 1870 this was between Mexico and the United States in 1848. The Roosevelt Corollary in 1904 was developed into an imperialistic one, which the U S was prone to call "The ma n kind" because of that which came to an end in 1921. Then came the "the stick diplomacy" in the war with Spain in 1891, when the U S put Marines in the Boulevard and attached Cuba to the possessions.

With the coming of the fourth policy, Pan-Americanism, and the first international meeting of the American states in 1889 Dr Wilgus said, "The idea was to jolly them along and to get the United States trade." The Secretary of State James G Blaine led the delegates and Latin Americans were given free tours to all the industrial centers. A second meeting was held, a Commission Bureau of American Republics was created in 1890 in the United States instead of Latin America.

Another Statement Raises Director's Approval On Some Functions

Daytime Riding Golfing, Fairs Are Included

Two statements were issued this week which allow students increased freedom and responsibility.

All second semester juniors who have an academic average of "C" for the past 2½ years and are not in the "mature student" classification will be eligible for membership in next year's Senior Hall.

Approval of the residence hall director is no longer required for daytime riding in cars or on horses, for golfing, hiking, or picnics, for circuses, fairs, or horse-shows approved by the college, for dining at approved places, for anything which requires a chaperon provided that the chaperon is present, or for a first date with a young man. Girls are expected, however, to introduce the young man to the residence hall director even though an approval signature is not needed on the date card.

The statement about senior hall issued by college council stated that the privilege would be essentially the same as in former years. All members will live in one dormitory area and will have their own governing body whose responsibility is self-administrative.

In explanation for the exclusion of mature students the statement said that members of college council did not believe that these women would need the exPhillips and "One Hundred Intolerable" by Berton Braley, which are about world brotherhood, can be obtained by college students at the Flambeau distribution center in lower ▼escicot.

College council considers Senior Hall "an opportunity for juniors to prove that they are capable of assuming the responsibilities that accompany increased freedom." It still retains jurisdiction over the activities of Senior Hall and the evaluation of its results.

The Senior Hall of practically all members of the junior class inclu- ded added freedom of Senior College were the state years of numerical growth. When Senior Hall was founded in 1941 all girls were selected for membership on the basis of scholastic ruling, health, and campus citizenship record. Hall government was started in the government of today's Senate with the consent of students acted in an advisory capacity for individual members. Girls were entitled to complete personal freedom as long as it did not interfere with the policies of the college. Residents were subject to judicial council only if they were dropped from hall membership for violation of group standards. Senior Hall was considered as experiment in personal and conflict responsibility.

History Building Work Is Begun

Construction of an addition to the History building has been started, stated Dr Doak S Campbell, president of Florida State College. "The new portion, which will be located on the southeast corner of the building, is expected to relieve many conditions overcrowded at the present time, said Dr Campbell.

The wing will be completed by the beginning of the fall term next September, according to present plans. Consisting of a basement and first-floor addition, the wing will contain five class-rooms and two offices. The basement will be used as a dressing room by performers in the Auguste Conradi Theater.

The additional stories will be constructed above the new wing after the war, stated Dr Campbell. Number of rooms to 18 Paul Smith Construction Company of Tallahassee is in charge of building. Work of excavating around the present wing for actual construction began last week.

Pemble Elected

Percy Pemble was elected ▼ senior Senate ▼ representative in the election held last Friday in lower Westcott. Rachel Ball was defeated by a vote of 100 to 80.

Only 158 seniors bothered to vote, a bare majority of the 295 ▲. The former senior representative left school last semester.

Spirit of the Week

● MORE ON COEDUCATION

Discussions of the issue of coeducation for Florida's state colleges seems to be state-wide now.

Directors of Florida Junior Chamber of Commerce, in a business meeting held in Tampa two weeks ago, adopted a resolution favoring coeducation at the University of Florida.

The resolution was adopted after little debate and supported by all state delegates except those from the Tallahassee chamber.

In backing the move to make the Gainesville university coeducational the state junior chamber has based registration of women to the junior and senior classes and the graduate schools. The resolution recommended the plan be put into effect at the opening of the fall term in 1945.

The plan approved by the Junior Chamber would provide that Florida State College remain as a first-rate state women's college, which position many people feel to be desirable.

The Florida Alligator editorially stated that the Jaycee plan "is desirable and practical. With such a setup, the state of Florida can have one first-class university and one first-class woman's college."

The editorial further stated that the "most attractive feature of this plan is that the cost of conversion under the system for coeducation in the junior and senior years would be negligible. Women now attend the University during summer sessions with no conversion costs."

William G Carleton, head of the political science department at University of Florida, endorsed coeducation for the University of Florida in an address at a banquet of the Gainesville Chamber of Commerce January 29.

Dr Carleton said: "Coeducation is no longer a debatable question. The question was settled in the affirmative fifty years ago. Even the University of Florida is the only state university which excludes women."

He might have added that the only other Florida state institution of higher knowledge is equally discriminating against men.

Speaking for the Gainesville Coeducation Committee, Selden Waldo, its general chairman, said at the Jaycee meeting, that if the state legislature adopts the recommendations of the State Jaycees, both the University of Florida and the Florida State College for Women "can become first rate institutions."

"There will be no competition between the two schools since most of the courses women would take at the University of Florida are those not available at Tallahassee," he declared.

Many people believe that coeducation should be extended still further. They believe that the Negroes, as one of the growing states, could and should be represented in the academic field by two leading state institutions.

War-time conditions should not cause the question to be shoved aside, they believe, but since coeducation is no longer a debatable question, the Florida legislature at its next session should ask for the necessary appropriations. Those who believe in Florida's great future possibilities hold that the state could adequately support such a program and would profit greatly from it.

● LIBERALISM AND SENIOR HALL

Much should be said for the present liberality of College Council in relaxing its rules governing study hours for members on Senior Hall as to other academic restriction requiring an average of "C" for all members.

That was a historic and progressive step in the history of the College Government Association, as this writer and is a direct response to the student body's verbal appeal the first in the year and urging students to return to principle and allow them greater responsibility to govern.

In the Code Book of Student Government, Senior Hall reads that Senior Hall is to "become a symbol and a privilege but it must be earned." Council has given Senior Hall juniors considered "on the basis of maturity of thought, thoughtfulness, and responsibility." Council has also stipulated that only those who have shown responsibility and contribution toward good citizenship would be members of Senior Hall.

Student Chairs is criticized in the stated assertion concerning who warns people of grave dangers such as "theological issues" and "economics". It is suggested that rather than considering meanings of such words and to misinterpretations of many kinds. Last year one of 200 students who were chosen under these words later became. The choice is third of the prospective students who were interviewed on the basis that they would be able to discuss economics.

Although these restrictions concerned only one-third of the seniors this year from living under the liberal rules of Senior Hall many have thought that all seniors are capable of the responsibility that accompanies "increased freedom."

This last has been accomplished in the recent legislation and all seniors, with exception of those under the scholastic requirements and those considered as "mature students", will be given full responsibility next year.

It is the hope of all students that next year all seniors in Senior Hall will live up to their new responsibility and prove themselves worthy of such freedom. In the past years members of Senior Hall, chosen under the former requirements, have proved themselves worthy of self-chosen legislation. There is a hope and faith that ALL seniors can also prove themselves so worthy. It is with this hope that College Council has issued such liberal legislation. And it is in this hope that all seniors who will be eligible for Senior Hall next year should have if they wish to continue the general trend of more responsibility and freedom for the college students on this campus.

● WE MAKE PROGRESS

Showing true response to student wishes, two governing bodies at FSC, College Council and Student Senate, this week legislated in long-sought changes in regulations actions—for which both groups should surely be commended.

Long a subject of discussion, the 12 o'clock rule for overnight absences had been amended by Executive Council recently to permit students to return from overnight absences any time before 11 o'clock at night, or after 7 o'clock in the morning. However, Student Senate took advantage of a constitutional provision and this week completed action to provide for a trial period during which students would be on their honor to return when possible before second light flash. It was decided that a statistical report would be kept to define reasons for which students returned during the late night hours, and thereby to determine the legitimacy of late arrivals on campus. If the report is favorable, the now disputed rule may be abolished. This Senate action must still be passed upon by College Council, but the very action is a forward step in giving students more responsibility in campus regulation.

Further work by Student Senate in session Wednesday afternoon was the movement to extend senior automatic permission from one half hour on week days and no weekend permission to one full hour at all times. That means that seniors will be permitted to stay out on week days a total of one per month until 12 o'clock during the week, and until 12:30 on weekends. Such a move indicates that girls who have spent nearly four years in college will have a chance to demonstrate to a greater degree their discretion and maturity. This act also has yet to be passed upon by College Council, but Senate must be congratulated for inaugurating the bill.

College Council has also moved to lessen student dependence upon regimentation in the form of permitting upperclassmen to assume more social responsibilities in regard to signing out with the director's approval for places which had formerly required such supervision and to have dates without having to have them approved first. This also has been made. Could the cause of student judgment and responsibility. Faculty and students alike have, by this new ruling, a token confidence to face the world as mature citizens, be certainly on our own as we follow our professions after college, must learn now to direct our own activities if we are to succeed in the future.

All of the new legislations mark the beginning of a time when we can prove by proper appreciation and deeds that we are capable of accepting duties responsibilities of self restrictions—socially, as well as governmentally.

Skits Presented

A group of five skits was presented by members of Zeta Phi Eta, professional speech fraternity, Tuesday at a meeting in Mortar Board for the entertainment of Camp Gordon Johnston Hospital.

Those who appeared were Hera Villian, voice instructor; Jane Beach, Dorothy Peep in belief by Sue Rodgers, and Mrs. Ann Arbor. The Ban "You of Music Clubs to act as judges Name It and You Can Have It," for the Young Artists' Contest, and the Typical Doctor".

This skit who made the trip in the purpose of the contest, Girl to the camp at the field which will be held on April 14 after the program visited Before in Jacksonville, is to discover Tom Carrollton, president of Zeta young talents in the several branches of music.

Three Judge Music

Three faculty members of the school of music, Mr Karl O Kuersteiner, acting dean of the school of music Miss Mary E Wilson, assistant professor of piano, and Mrs Mildred F Davis, instructor in voice judged the contest. Dean Kuersteiner announced.

● OUR BROTHERS' KEEPER

Civilization has advanced a long way since the era of the cave man, when clubs were a man's calling card, and his muscles his criteria of worth. Today men are judged on a different basis; intelligence ,responsibility, imagination and ability all have their share in contributing to man's estimated worth today.

Along with our great strides in all phases of learning we have begun to do a lot of thinking about "man's inhumanity to man", and for the past twelve or so years we in America have been setting aside a week especially dedicated to the task of reminding men that they are their brothers' keepers. Here on FSCW campus we have observed National Brotherhood Week in a variety of ways, with a radio broadcast, a proclamation by Dr Campbell, and special programs by the various denominations on campus.

The terrible war raging in all parts of the world today stands before us a perpetual reminder of how energetically the youth of this nation should work to foster a genuine spirit of brotherhood. This is the only nation on the face of the earth today where there is time to think of such abstract ideal goals as the universal brotherhood of man. Unity will necessarily have to be the keynote of this spirit. At the present time the whole nation is firmly united behind the common effort of defeating Germany and Japan as quickly as possible. Every American has a common goal and is willing to work shoulder to shoulder with every other American so long as that goal may be reached more quickly.

However, once that longed for goal has been achieved will we not all be tempted to fall back into our old prejudices, hatreds, and animosities? Have we any assurance that the men of our nation will not again return to their old habits of distrusting and despising men who do not think and believe as they do" For lack of some elevating goal will men repeat those sad stories of petty nationalistic hatreds, race riots, religious bigotry and intolerance that have been such dark blots on the histories of every nation under the sun" Or will men emerge from this strife with a clearer idea of what the word "tolerance" can mean, and how much real worth there is in another man despite the fact that he holds different ideas and his beliefs concerning the ultimate destinies do not happen to coincide with your own many?

We can only hope that this last idea will be so, and do all that is in our power here to make it so. Here on this campus we must expend all our energies in ridding ourselves of religious bigotry, intolerance, and misunderstandings if we are to take our place in community life that is broad minded unprejudiced women. How many of us could give, at a moment's notice, even a very few of the basic principles that govern another's religious beliefs". If we were to stop and ask ourselves the question "What do I know about the Protestant faith, or the Catholic, or the Jewish?" we will find that most of our information about other religions is based on hearsay or a series of unrelated facts that we have picked up somewhere concerning the ritual of other religions.

We realize that this is an isolated question about one problem of the complicated question of universal brotherhood, but it can only be progression from these basic leads that we can at last achieve some idea if what the meaning behind the phrase "our brother's keeper" really means.

—by Jo Ann Carroll.

● TIME FOR TEAMWORK

A reminder to every man, that no matter to what color, race, or creed he belongs, he is still a vital part of a whole pattern of humanity with definite responsibilities to his fellow creatures, is the annual observance of Brotherhood Week. As we here on campus try to define just what a position means to us, we immediately think of many high-sounding and oft-repeated phrases which have little, if any, specific meaning and practical application: good will, fellowship, tolerance. . .

Unfortunately, these words have various interpretations in the minds of various persons; consequently we must look more deeply into the question of "What does Brotherhood really mean to me?" Does this week mean that I shall spend more kindly to the maid who cleans my hall? Or that I shall, for seven whole days, mouth the fact that I am in favor of good interfaith relationships? We think not, for such actions are merely surface ones, and even though this might be ideal for one week, there are still 51 other weeks of the year to be considered.

FSC is composed of all types of girls, from all stations in society, of many different beliefs. Catholic, Protestant, and Jew. Working together concretely, these groups can do much to benefit all; working separately they can do much harm. It is therefore, up to each individual to do her share in the Brotherhood effort. Basically, all religions are striving for the same end—peace and truth. It is merely the rituals followed to reach these ends that differentiate one religion from another. Consequently, what difference does it make if we all go to one church or not? True religion can be defined only in terms of action, not of ideas. All of us want the same goal, all of us are striving for the same future happiness, all of us are searching for the final good.

Mathematicians tell us that all parallel lines will eventually meet in infinity, and if we could visualize a point far enough in space, we could actually see by pinlike holes such paths. We might extend this promise to religious and race precepts, and in so doing, find a working arrangement for Brotherhood. To the Jewish people as to the Catholic and Protestant peoples, the basic idea of Brotherhood is the Golden Rule—and because such is the case, we must devote ugin a course which will make this platitude practicable—not just for one week, but for all time.

We college students might for example, make, and carry out plans to support wholeheartedly the Youth Conference which opens here tonight. By learning about other groups we can appreciate their situations and work more effectively with them. We could further act by emphasizing our faith forums and meetings; by remembering always, and acting accordingly to take cognizance of the struggles of other groups, including racial and ethnic bodies, in order to help them solve the vast amount of problems which face them. These are merely the most obvious actions; there are many more which can be done.

Members of minority groups on this campus, can honestly and gratefully say, that there is very little discrimination shown against them, and it is to promulgate this lack of injustice and ignorance that we would all strive. Therefore, we must make every week Brotherhood Week and in our actions, and though they may be, make everyone a Jew Protestant, and Catholic, black, white, and red—a companion on the highway of humanity.

—by Doris Pepper.

● WORLD BROTHERHOOD FOR FREEDOM

When the swords, the bombs, the planes, the tanks, the rockets and the other deadly instruments of this war have been beaten into plow-shares, automobiles, radios, the machines of peace, the Protestant churches all over the world must unite with Cathodics and Jews to insure that such a catastrophe will not occur again.

During the course of this war, members of all religious faiths have cooperated to aid both our soldiers and civilians. Peoples of all races, black, white, and yellow, have fought and died for the common cause of freedom. If we have the will to create and build destruction, how much more easily it is for us to meet on a commom ground of brotherhood and win the peace.

In the Book of Acts, Paul says, "God has made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitations." Paul states again in Galatians, Ephesians he exhorts that "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and of the household of God."

But through the realization of the teachings of St Paul about world brotherhood can the nations of this world come in peace, only through the realization that all men are brothers can the grave problems created by race prejudice and economic slavery be solved. When Paul speaks of removal of economic slavery, he means not only freedom in the next world, he means the removal of slavery today—the removal of the economic slavery which keeps white, black, and yellow men living in poverty and suffering.

The Biblical teachings about the brotherhood of all men presents a challenge which has never been adequately met. It is our duty and our privilege as Protestants to unite with the Catholics and the members of the Jewish faith to build a world in which "there is neither bond nor free," no men are free.

Kaufman Gives Violin Concert

Civic Music Tickets Are Obtained from Cowles

Louis Kaufman, violinist, will be the guest artist at the Civic Music Association concert tonight at 8.15 p m, Professor W R Cowles, orchestra director, announced.

The concert is to be held in the Leon High School auditorium and may be attended only by members of the Tallahassee Civic Music Association. However, newcomers to Tallahasee may obtain membership cards by contacting Professor Cowles. Quick cards (single admission) may also be obtained through Professor Cowles.

Mr Kaufman is a native American born in Portland, Oregon. Educated in Portland and New York, he became interested in music at the age of five when his family was at that time living in Bucharest, Rumania, and a young violinist named Enescu was teaching the youngster to play a violin.

Returning to this country, after two years in Rumania, Kaufman's parents encouraged his interest in music, arranged for him to study with local teachers in Portland. At the age of ten he toured the country as a child prodigy.

Though he has recently been associated in Hollywood and is next busy there, Mr Kaufman has never deserted the concert hall to annual recitals at New York's Carnegie Hall have established him as one of the many appearances each year on tour. Critics have pronounced him well-known as an exponent of new music, he has introduced to concert audiences the work of Aaron Copland, Gail Kubik, William Grant Still, Ernest Toch, and Darius Milhaud, Benoit, as well as many others.

In recent years, Louis Kaufman has been employed by the motion picture music. His violin solos are heard by the theater audiences, and he has to is credit a great many outstanding motion pictures. Some of his recent recordings have been for the scores of such well-known pictures as "Joan of Arc," "The Song of Bernadette," "Cabin in the Sky," "The Moon and Sixpence," "The Road to Morocco," and "The Major and the Minor."

become Senior Hall members in 1939. The number dropped to 92 in 1940, however, 96 seniors are allowed extra privileges the following year. Less mention was made of the fact that Senior Hall was an experiment and it began to become an accepted campus tradition.

A student vote helped to elect the 49 girls who made the Senior Hall of 1942. In 1943, 105 girls were elected. In 1944, 109 seniors out of 366 were selected as campus leaders, and this year 120 seniors out of 366 were selected as campus leaders. Each of these groups had the privilege of a proposed bill suggesting that all seniors be eligible for Senior Hall privileges.

Convocation closed with a short devotional service in honor of Dr. Edward Conradi, former president emeritus of Florida State College, as an observance of the Lenten season. Verses 13 and 14 of the 1st Chapter of Galatians were read, then the college body sang "Garnet and Gold."

Grainger Here For Spring Music Week

Mr Percy Grainger, noted pianist-composer and conductor, will be the guest of Florida State College's meeting assembly to be held to be observed on this campus from May 6 to May 12.

Though national music week has been in existence in this country for several years, it will be observed on campus this year for the first time. Mr Grainger will be here the entire week. Mr Karl O. Kuersteiner, dean of the school of music announced.

The program for the week will be a large one with many musical organizations on campus taking part. The week will be climaxed May 11 by a grand concert which will combine the forces of the band, the orchestra, the glee club, and the organ, and will be directed by Mr Grainger.

The activities will be given wide advertisement throughout the state, and a schedule of events will be made up with the convenience of music supervisors of the state, who will be invited to attend.

sent to the College Council for approval.

A resolution was introduced to extend Senior Hall privileges to all seniors. Objection was made to the possible difficulties of extending the privileges and after a lengthy discussion the resolution was tabled until the next meeting.

The program for the trial period on students' return after an overnight absence consists of the following provisions:

1. That there should be a trial period without a rule governing students' return from overnight absences for one college year, under academic

2 That the Student Senate should make a study of the housing unit to keep the record of the girls returning between the hours of 7 a m and 8 a m and the reason why they returned at this time.

3. That, at the end of the trial period, a report should be made to Student Senate in the first quarter of the following year session. The report would then be presented to the College Council for decision. College Council would pass the report and send their decision to the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs for approval.

A suggestion was made but not voted upon that a record be kept of the complaints made by students distributed by other students to the proper authorities, the hours of 11 p m and 7 a m.

In This Our Time

By BETTY WEAVER

Many more names were added to the heroic history of the United States Navy last week when a carrier task force of 15 to 20 aircraft carriers, sailed to within 300 miles of Japan bombarded the island homeland for the first time since the Doolittle raid.

This task force was a far cry from the pitiful little group of B-25 bombers that took off from the Hornet early in 1942 to bomb Tokyo its first bombing. It helped to sweep from the face of the earth a handful of officers from ships like the California, South Dakota and Nevada, which had been sunk by and hap-hazardly struck back at the enemy in the early days of the war. Wounded and sick, the American would win the war, but it never occurred to most Americans who were ignorant of the real and serious conditions in the Pacific.

America is not a revengeful nation who wants only to pay back Japan for Pearl Harbor. Pearl Harbor comes incidentally with the fact that we were caught by the hand of America. We want only to make sure that Japan and her like will never repeat this aggression toward China, America the Philippines, Australia, and other any nation whether she be small or large strong or weak, we want self-respect. The Japanese Corregidors, Sevastapols, and Stalingrads will never be repeated.

During the two months or days in which the aircraft carrier task force has been operating, the Japanese have lost 1200 planes. Of her surrounding targets, 1200 planes were launched from carrier decks. The estimated 16 or 20 carriers were supported by destroyers, cruisers, battleships, mine sweepers and submarines. Navy's satisfaction was confirmed by Admiral Nimitz and Admiral Nimitz in his communique in which he said, "This operation has long been planned and trained carefully to accomplish it fullest the deeply cherished goal of every officer and man in the Pacific Fleet.

Japs Driven from Bataan

"No living Japanese soldier is to be found on the peninsula of Bataan, reports General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announcement came as a result of an American patrol of the area combed Bataan on the northern shores of Manila bay. Every bend of Corregidor has been counted so far as 1700, not including an unknown number of bodies that have been lost in the tunnels of the island, touched off one." There is still intent upon asking about the stand the U S intended to take on the Mandate Islands after the war. Secretary Hughes leading it, President Coolidge to keep them cool, and Charles Lindbergh to do the same. they didn't have a chance to learn from Japan or Germany. The Argentines had gone to the trouble to create an "Argentine Navy" and "Argentine Army" and failed."

In 1933 at Montevideo Uruguay this bloc was created all over again. Through Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Uruguay's mingling with the other delegates, talking on the side and acting in every way the friendly neighbor. Argentina felt that maybe she had been a little too cool and "sentimentally mannered" too.

An artificial development has been carried on since the present war. A series of conferences were held to discuss how to maintain peace not only in the Western Hemisphere but also all over the world.

Economic and political cooperation has been helpful in developing a better understanding between the Northern and Southern hemispheres. However there has still been some friction.

The most recent step in furthering good relations, Mr Wilgus stated, was the conference that met Wednesday in Mexico City for consideration of post-war problems.

ment was forgotten for the time being.

In the fifth conference in Santiago, Chile in 1923, questions of arbitration, aviation, and cultural cooperation were discussed and the countries of this hemisphere could understand each other better and they gave such a critical view of each other.

To the sixth conference in 1928 President Coolidge himself went to attend "to keep the Latin American's cool." There was still intent upon asking about the stand the U S intended to take on the Mandate Islands after the war. The Students Speak

BOBBIE BELL

Elections are coming up! An amazing lack of interest has been [illegible] heretofore and [illegible] students are only [illegible] taking an interest in [illegible] The question [illegible] therefore, is WHAT DO YOU THINK CAN BE A REMEDY FOR THE STUDENT LACK OF INTEREST IN COLLEGE ELECTIONS?

As many students fail to realize what an opportunity they have here in college in connection with student elections and as they fail to realize that the student government of this school is only as big as the smallest individual in it, some sort of program of education should be undertaken by the student officers. One suggestion is that of a forum.

Betty Bell

I think the importance of the [illegible] offices should be emphasized more for the benefit of freshmen. We comprise a great portion of the student body, and yet we are not fully informed as to the vital places filled by students we elect. Adequate information should help to solve this problem.

Mary Charles Skipper

A better understanding of college government. The elections they do what their relation to the student body is needed.

Della Mae Rhodes

More emphasis should be placed on freshmen being included in college government. The elections committee should get them interested in their college and the way it runs.

Emma Jeane Hackle

Perhaps the lack of interest is due to having to vote the same people to office for several years. Maybe arousing interest before March in students to run for elections and to vote for those who do would help.

Shirley Grube

Most students do not realize what a priceless opportunity they have when they vote in the college elections. If this fact were given more emphasis I believe students would be more interested in the college elections.

Ella Mae Baer

We do not get to know the people who are running for offices. As a freshman, our associations with them are limited because we are not in classes with them, and we have no idea of what their offices do.

Blanche Harvey

The importance of their offices as far as the students are concerned is not stressed enough.

Bettye Acheson

More freshmen should have part in the offices of the government. We are not informed enough about them and since we are such a large part of the college a chance for more participation should be given us.

Library Sponsors New Radio Program

A radio book review program will be sponsored by the Florida State College library on Monday from 6:15 to 6:30 p m over station WTAL.

Three Florida books which will be reviewed are That Vanishing Eden by Thomas Barbour, Bulletin No. 9 of the Florida Geological Survey, by Dr Herman Kurz, professor of botany, and Florida During the Territorial Days by Sidney W Martin.

Sara Norman, Maurine Petty, Pat Paul hall and Bonnie Hunt will do the announcing and give the reviews. These students are members of the speech department who took a special course last semester in radio work.

Other Florida books will be suggested for reading, and music will be provided by Sarah Lewis, who will sing Lisa Lehmann's "The Owl and The Wren" accompanied by Eleanor Bragg.

This is the first radio program to be sponsored by the library as a project in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of Florida's admission to the union, which is March 3. The publicity committee of the library, which is responsible for the program, is composed of Miss Louise Richardson, librarian, Miss Florence Bethea and Miss Sarah Graham, assistant librarians and Lola Anne Sparkman, student assistant.

Sorority Catches Ferocious Animal

"Don't kill the poor little thing!"

"He will have to be put out! After all, he's the one who gnawed on the piano."

These two sentences rose above the babel of screaming and shouting at the Sigma Kappa house Monday when fifteen brave girls and a housemother succeeded in cornering a baby flying squirrel after chasing it from room to room.

He was finally captured in a corner of the sun porch after leading his pursuers all over the formal parlor. At one time the little frightened animal quivered on the top of drapes. His nest was discovered in the book case when he tried to get to the hole he had chewed in the back of [illegible] in order to escape.

Esteren Entertains Spirogira at Party

Esteren entertained the members of Spirogira at a Blanket party in the Landis recreation room last Friday night.

Catherine Barr and Elizabeth Brown won first and second prizes respectively, while Betty Alday got the booby prize in the game. Cokes and cake were served for refreshments.

On Wednesday of this week Esteren started a current event program for this semester. Each day they will post the world news headlines on the bulletin boards in each dormitory. They will also make posters with pictures of important persons and short paragraphs about them.

Esteren is also going to sponsor the defense movies which will appear on April 28 and 29.

Cotillion Sponsors 3 Defense Films

Dance Classes Are Renewed For Lindy, Ball-Room

Defense activity plans [illegible] sponsoring of three defense films and the completion of materials for scrap books to be presented to members of the armed forces have been completed by the Cotillion, according to Betty Lou Creasy, president.

The defense films "Reward Unlimited," "Target for Tonight" and "Paratroops" will be shown in the Augusta Conradi theater on March 3 at 6 o'clock and on March 4 at 5 o'clock.

"Reward Unlimited" is a story about Cadet Nurses while "Target for Tonight" gives an account of an actual Royal Air Force raid. The third film "Paratroops" portrays the daring exploits of the men in this branch of the service.

Cotillion members and taps are compiling cartoons and other things of interest to put into the scrap books which they will present as their defense project to servicemen.

Beginning March 1 every Thursday night from 7:30 to 8:15 the members of Cotillion will renew their series of dancing classes, which will be held in the Reynolds recreation room.

Betty Lou asks that only those who need help in preliminary dance technique attend the classes, which will be taught in the social graces and [illegible] in the fundamentals of the Lindy and other types of ball-room dancing.

PE Dept Sponsors Series of Lectures

The first of a series of student lectures open to all girls interested in becoming better officials for basketball, volleyball, tennis and softball games will be held Tuesday evening, February 27 from 7:30 to 8:15 in the classroom of the physical education building.

An examination on rules will be given on Thursday afternoon, February 29 at [illegible] o'clock.

Miss Grace Fox, instructor in physical education, explained that this is a Women's National Officials Rating Committee [illegible] [illegible] Miss Mary Jane Medlin [illegible] teacher in physical education [illegible] chairman.

The purpose of the committee is to stimulate interest in becoming better official for girls athletics.

The National Section on Women's Athletics has set up standards for the conduct of girls' athletics, and the campus committee and Florida high schools are striving to conduct their activities for girls in the approved manner. There is also a great lack of trained women," said Miss Fox.

Miss Medlin mentioned that among the standards set up by the National Section on Women's Athletics are the requirements that girls athletics be coached and officiated by women.

Workmen Shatter Library Silence

The almost sacred silence of Florida State College library was shattered last Tuesday morning by a stentorian shout which echoed from the high arch of the periodical room.

[illegible] and [illegible] shouted a masculine voice from the [illegible] of a 33-foot ladder. One [illegible] studying were [illegible] in their books, the next every head swung upward and [illegible] resounded throughout the room. For a few moments the [illegible] swarmed with brawny figures wielding measuring tapes and calling out measurements. After a short time, however, the descended, lowered their ladder and swept out. Silence again reigned supreme.

The cause of this unprecedented occurrence was that men from the college electric shop with the aid of a fire ladder were measuring the periodical room for fluorescent lighting.

"We plan to try [illegible] rows of [illegible] from the rafter," explained one of the workmen [illegible] single row down the length of the room."

WAPC Will Institute Foster-Parent Plan

British Refuge to Receive Aid For School Year

A plan for the support of British war orphans has been undertaken by the various groups on campus and has been initiated by Dot Jean Glass of the War Activities Planning committee. Organizations who are interested are asked to contact Dot Jean or Jane Lyles.

In this plan each organization adopts a British war orphan or refugee child, contributing a certain amount each month for care and education for one school year. Names, pictures, letters, and gifts may be received from the "foster-parents" and child.

The organizations are yet taking part as an organization, but the Tallahassee chapter of the Girl Crusaders of the Stars League with other chapters of the sorority, participated in this plan. Each chapter contributes $15 for the school term from September through May. Their "foster-child 'is in really two children—a pair of twins, a boy and girl, named Billy and Bobby Jones. They are at present in school in England, and the chapter hopes to be having received several round-robin letters from them.

Rainey's Pastor To Discuss Issue

Faculty and students are invited to attend a discussion tonight of the recent dismissal of Dr Homer P Rainey from the presidency of the University of Texas.

The speaker is Dr Blake Smith, pastor of the University Baptist Church of Austin, Texas. Dr Smith, one of the seven ambassadors to this weekend's Youth Conference, is Dr Rainey's pastor and has been active in his defense. Dr Smith's topic is "Fascism—Texas Style."

Dr Smith's discussion will follow immediately after the introductory program of the Youth Conference and will be in the Student Alumnae building auditorium. His talk on the Texas issue will begin at approximately 9 p m.

Artist Series Tickets Ready

William Primrose, Violist, Appears on March 16

Tickets for the performance of William Primrose, violist who will appear as an Artist Series event on March 14 at Florida State College, can now be obtained by holders of either A or B series tickets.

Dean Karl O Kuersteiner, dean of the School of Music, has announced that the Primrose concert tickets will be distributed through March 7 in the basement of the Student Alumnae building, every day except Saturday and Sunday.

Mr Primrose, conceded by many musical authorities to be the greatest viola player in the world today, began playing on the viola at 7 years ago and began his study of music when he was four years old. He has studied under the rare Amati viola which Primrose uses today, but because the viola was not thought to be a very "aristocratic" instrument at that time, it was kept in the back ground key. Mr Primrose, however, learned to pry open the lock and played the viola often until his father discovered the culprit and put him to practicing the violin instead.

He studied the violin as his father wished and by the time he was ten, played in the largest concert hall of Glasgow. For his formal concert debut, which took place when he was 17, a friend of his father lent him the famous Gibson Stradivarius violin, now in the Library of Congress.

Through all his study of the violin Primrose did not forget his viola, however, and the viola and when Ysaye recognized the youth's special aptitude for the instrument, the latter himself also allowed him to drop the violin Ysaye, a well-known teacher,

Eyman to Speak

Dean Robert Eyman plans to go to Panama City Friday, March 2, to speak before the Bay county teachers on "Youth Needs and How the School Aids in Their Achievement."

Friday 3 and 6 he will be in Fort Lauderdale discussing plans for the Summer Work Shop with Mr Tyler J Bryant, Broward county superintendent and his staff.

Mia Slavenska, former premiere-danseuse at the Ballet-Russe de Monte-Carlo, will make her initial appearance at Florida State College in the "B" Artist Series Wednesday night.

Appendectomies And Love Letters Plague Directors

The three members of the play production class have had their ups and downs for the last few weeks, not without several small difficulties. The task of each of the three students, Bonnie Smith, Maurice Petty, and Sara Norman, has been to cast, direct, and produce a one-act play.

Bonnie's efforts were toward a one-act hill-billy play called "Pink and Patches." Five of the members of the cast had an emergency appendicitis operation last Saturday and a last-minute substitution had to be made. Another critical problem was in the selection of two girls for the cast whose combined each other sufficiently to pass for twins. Also, necessary a battered straw hat for one of the "men" in her play, Bonnie had to buy a new one at the ten cent store and spent much

Majority of Students at University Favor Co-education, FSC Student Who Conducts Composite Interview Concludes

By BERYL KITCHEN

Co-education, which has captured the public spotlight all over the state of Florida, has been the subject of many discussions, pro and con, by the boys of the University of Florida, at Gainesville.

In a recent trip to the Gainesville campus a Flambeau reporter found that ever since the possibility of admitting women to the University was discussed, a temporary war relief measure came into the limelight during the late summer months, the subject has been the center of discussion carefully from all angles. They contrasted the 2330 record enrollment at Florida State College for women with the drop in regular students at Gainesville to 682; they debated the matter in student gatherings, both official and off-the-record; and in a studens. poll, conducted before the Legislature met, 60 per cent of them went on record as wholeheartedly favoring the "open-door policy" for women students.

Although the Board of Control at Florida voted down the proposal, saying that it did not feel justified in changing its 40-year policy in order to admit women to the college of education there, Dr John J Tigert, president of the university, declared that 300 women students, should they be allowed to enroll would be readily accepted. He stressed the ample facilities, particularly those of feeding facilities available for these women students.

After interviewing approximately 300 students at Florida, the reporter found that many of the boys agreed with the argument used recently by Representative Burke Floyd of Apalachicola. He supported co-education on the grounds that it is "just an experiment but a standard practice in the United States" saying "recognizing the fact that over 95 per cent of the states endorse co-education by its use.

Some of those questioned said that they believed educational segregation was out-dated, describing it as a "hangover from the old colonial days."

Legislator Joe Jenkins, of Alachua, said that he believed the dormitory things in Florida University, left vacant by the war, should be utilized by women students. The university has dormitory facilities to accommodate 1100 students.

Approximately 75 per cent of the Greek fraternity boys were interviewed favored co-education at the University of Florida, while 99 per cent of the fraternity boys, when questioned about their views on the subject, stamped their approval on the proposed co-education. In fact, the only one out of the 130 fraternity boys questioned who had decided to oppose the plan was the one who was not able to pass if all you pretty Tallgals came down here to school!

Some of the boys enrolled at the university in Gainesville thought it would make college life much more pleasant, although they dreaded the scholastic competition that girls would create. Many feared (or said they feared) the distraction girls might cause, while others felt assured that the presence of women students would only spur them on to better work.

The Florida Alligator, campus news publication backed the almost the entire student body, editorially endorsed the resolution adopted recently by the directors of the Florida Junior Chamber of Commerce which favors co-education, but proposes limiting registration of women at the university in Gainesville to the junior and senior classes and to the graduate schools. According to the Alligator, Florida under this plan would have both a first-class university and a first-class woman's college.

Mia Slavenska Will Perform At FSC on Wednesday Night; To Bring Ensemble With Her

Noted Danseuse and Group Will Present Original Numbers; Formal Dress to be Required For All Downstairs Seats

Mia Slavenska, Yugoslavian ballerina, and her dance ensemble will appear as the Artist Series event at the Florida State College auditorium next Wednesday night at 8:15.

Mr Karl Kuersteiner, dean of the School of Music, has announced that no student may attend any Artist Series event without a ticket and will not be allowed in the main floor of the auditorium without being in formal dress.

Those who do not plan to dress formally should reserve their seats in the balcony. Dean Kuersteiner explained that these were rules of the college and must be observed.

Mia Slavenska, star of tha dance group, was born in Slavonski-Brod (Yugoslavia) but spent most of her childhood in Zagreb, then capital of Croatia. From early childhood she showed an intense liking for dance and at the age of 16 made her debut in the Opera House of Zagreb. She arranged and choreographed the entire program herself.

After spending with Dance Olympiad at the Berlin Olympics of 1936 she toured Europe with her own dance group. In 1938 she came to America with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo and dance troupe in which David Thmar, her present partner, also had a large part. After only two years she has left her present group with Mr Tihmar, Audrey Keane, Norma Vasilvina and Joseph A Harris.

Miss Slavenska has appeared in the American movie Ballerina, a motion picture of 1937.

The dancer's interest in costume designing fits in with her profession and many of her original costume designs have been shown in exhibitions in art museums.

Because she believes that a complete understanding of music is imperative for the dancer, Miss Slavenska studied music at the Academy of Music at Zagreb for seven years. She is said to have perfect pitch and once while practicing with an orchestra, she asked the conductor to check the parts of the horns be-

AAUW Gives Convo Program

Campus Talent Promotes Creative Arts Contest

In order to promote interest in the Creative Arts contest, which is being sponsored by the American Association of University Women, a program featuring the campus talent was presented in convocation Tuesday afternoon. Featuring an original skit, tap dance, song and modern dance, the program was arranged by Miss Louise Gehan of the Alumnae office.

A song composed and sung by Anne Watkins opened the program. Anne was accompanied in her singing with the assistance of interpretation of Robert Brownin's "Pippa Passes" and the Ruby Dunstan, instructor in piano.

A short skit, "Why not Paint?" presented one phase of activities in the Arts and Crafts field. This skit was prepared and presented by Sarah Boswell, Jane Lyles, Juliette Gilham, Mary Ellen Knight, Nellie Hawkins and Dorothy Mathews.

A modern dance version of a polka was composed and presented by Margaret Weidman, Betty Fridy and Marjorie Platt. A military tap dance, given to demonstrate the rhythmical problem was in the selection of two girls for the cast whose combined each other sufficiently to pass for twins. Also, necessary a battered straw hat for one of the "men" in her play, Bonnie had to buy a new one at the ten cent store and spent much

"Purple Doorknob" To Be Presented

March 8th the Speech Department will present "Purple Doorknob," a play by Ruth McEnery Easton, for the AAUW in the Little Theatre. Student director is Maureen Petty. Cast of characters cast is Claire St-John as Mrs Bartholomew Evelyn Bowden as Mrs Dunbar, and Anne Hunter playing Viola Cole. The Purple Doorknob is a comedy in one act about a charming, young actress who is seeking an apartment and a bed-ridden old lady. She finally achieves it by giving a performance for the old lady in her bedroom and makins her one of the characters. Miss Ann Korn, instructor of aria, is in charge of the setting and stage craft.

French Fliers to Be Feted at FSC

Festivities are being planned here for 95 French fliers, after their graduation at Tyndall Field, Panama City, March 3. Arrangements have been made by their commandant, Lieutenant Commander Jacques Vaar-Nason.

First event is a reception in Landis parlor Saturday at 4 p m, followed by dinner in the faculty dining hall. A formal dance in Landis recreation hall will be the climax to the day's celebration. The school orchestra will furnish the music.

All advanced French speaking students are urged to attend. Frenchy Fridley, senior, is in charge of the arrangements.

Dr Goulding Offers Books for Display

Fifth, Eighth, Confederate Editions in Library

Several rare editions of The Young Marooners of the Florida by Kirk Munroe in the R E Goulding, grandfather of Dr R L Goulding superintendent of the Florida Sanatorium school, were on display in the library this week. The fifth, eighth, and Confederate editions plus the only other copy in existence in the state outside within was bound for the Royal Library of England were in the display.

Dr Goulding has a collection of rare copies of his grandfather's book, and he lent the books to the library. The book, printed in 1852, was one of the first books written in Florida as a background. The first three editions of the book were sold within

Wilgus Ends Talks Before FSC Classes

Dr A Curtis Wilgus, professor of Hispanic American history at George Washington University, from George Washington University, here last Friday morning when he spoke to Latin American history and advanced Spanish classes. His subject's were "Democracy and Dictatorship in Latin America." The Writer's talk Wherefore's of Latin American Revolutions and "The Historical Background of Latin American Civilization."

In comparing North and South American politics, Dr Wilgus said that Latin American politics are on a personal rather than a platform basis. He stated that the North Americans lost at the inception of their democratic governments and constitutions so do the South Americans since the United States for only having had two constitutions, both permanent as stagnant. Another contributing factor to the numerous revolutions of the countries to the Latin American belief in the democratic principles since their independence was accomplished.

Spirit of the Week

NOW IT'S UP TO US

For several weeks the Youth Conference has been continually kept before our eyes. In house meetings three weeks ago, part of the program was devoted to the explanation of the Conference; it has been publicized in the Flambeau; posters have been put up on numerous hulletin boards; and Convocation has given some of its time to enlarge upon the details of the Conference speakers and plans.

Almost all upperclassmen remember last year's Youth Conference, or at least remember that there was one; freshmen and transfers have heard and read about it and its activity through the aid of the various agencies mentioned above.

We have spoken about not being well informed about world affairs; it was shown in our last house meeting that we can't even answer current issue questions which are taken from "front page" stories.

Because of our secluded feeling or position, this weekend offers us a great opportunity to get first hand information the easy way—no drudgery of looking up material in research books; instead, all we must do is take a seat and keep our ears open and our minds alert. This opportunity ought to be a true challenge to every student on campus. Of course, it will take a little initiative to miss that good show or to give up playing a couple of fast sets of tennis Saturday afternoon, but it will determine whether or not we are truly sincere about wanting to learn more of what is going on around us and to understand more intelligently our fellow men.

It appears that some of us, because of loose conversation which has been heard around campus, have a misconception that Youth Conferences are nothing but dry lectures; others attend only because they can get out of classes. If students who possess this trend of thought would think twice about the marvelous chance we have to learn more about people who are "foreign" to us, to listen to well-known authorities on many suhjects, and in general find out what is going on (besides what kind of a sandwich Dagwood has concocted now, the latest popular song, Van Johnson's latest picture and other interesting hut not vital suhjects), it seems only natural that they as college students would be grateful for such conferences.

It might sound big, noble, or whatever, to say it is not just for our own good but for the "general welfare" of America but if we realize that when we let opportunities such as this one slip by us and keep going around in our little shallow self-centered world, we are not only harming ourselves but our country as well. The state is educating us to be future citizens and to carry on better than our parents; therefore the least we can do is get a "painless education."

WE CAN HELP

Mention of the word college has for many years immediately stimulated mental pictures of ivy-clad walls and cloistered pathways. Unfortunately, connotation and reality have often extended this physical picture to include not only the surroundings in which students live, but also the manner of thinking and participation in which students indulge. We, and others like us, on campus, often find ourselves withdrawing into a cloistered existence, far from the mundane actualities of the world into which we soon shall go.

In a country where war is draining every possihle resource to hasten victory, the college student finds it difficult to remain aloof—and so she should. We are not "sheltered women" who must "tend" only to our classes and intellectual ahilities; we are a part of a whole, whose duty it is to take an active part in all that goes on about us. We are, or should be, in fact, the "protecting women" who tend to civic ohligations and manual activities even while we are still in school. There is, today, as never before, an opportunity for students to come out from behind the shadow of books alone and to help in the war and peace efforts.

Florida students in particular must respond to the needs for assistance in practical fields. Many convalescent hospitals have been designated for and opened in this area, and President Roosevelt forcefully indicated the drastic need for nurses. Trained nurses who are working in civilian hospitals find themselves swamped with the necessity for doing many things which can easily be done by trained helpers—nurses' aides, grey ladies, and junior workers; Army nurses find themselves overcome with extra work as their ranks are not increased and have to perform tasks which could be done by others.

Many of us FSC students will return this summer to towns where such conditions exist, and if we were prepared and willing we could go immediately to the aid of both civilian and military hospital staff members. Does it not seem feasible than, that we should request the Red Cross to conduct courses in such fields so that we might be ready to help when we can? Naturally, there must be a desire on the part of the student to learn first aid, and other necessary subjects, and there must be stamina to see it through if courses are once instigated here. The Physical Education department has started just such a training—last week they began teaching first aid to any one who wished it. But one course in one field is not enough to absorb almost 2400 students.

Nurses Aides might be permitted to train and assist at the Tallahassee city hospital, for the College infirmary could certainly not be able to make use of the trainees in any large number, if it could use any at all in its limited space. Grey ladies, who do much morale work by reading to patients, writing their letters, and helping to amuse them with games, might easily begin training while going to school. Much planning is necessary if these aims are to be carried out, but there are at least several campus bodies already organized to make arrangements: War Activities Planning Committee, College Government Association, or even the Pre-med Club.

Naturally, the above statements are merely suggestions, but it is time for students to inaugurate more ways to take an important place in war work. It is up to us to ask for such opportunities to help if we are willing. To say we are not is to admit that we cannot do more than learn by rote lessons taught from words, and cannot put our talents to practical application.

LEGISLATURE INTEREST

That the issue of co-education is definitely on its way to this year's legislature was made positive yesterday when the state papers quoted Representative Holmes Melton, Jr, of Lafayette County, as stating that he is expecting to co-sponsor a bill authorizing co-education at the Florida Legislature this April.

The representative believes that co-education can be accomplished at "negligible expense to the State and without crippling either the Florida State College for women or the all-male University of Florida."

Since this coming issue should hold definite interest to all college students in this state it is hoped that students will consider the proposition of co-education with a rational point of view. Being the controversial issue that it is, students should hear both sides of the question and determine the merits of the legislators' discussions and contributions.

showed him how different the approach to the viola should be from the approach to the violin, and by 1930 Primrose had switched permanently to the viola and that year accepted an offer to join the London Quartet. In 1931 he gave his first solo viola performance in Rio de Janeiro.

In 1942 Primrose left the orchestra to devote all his time to solo work. This year he is doing many of his 60 engagements with symphony orchestras and about 10 in joint concert with Richard Crooks, metropolitan tenor.

Other colleges which Primrose will appear at this season are Michigan State College, Mount Holyoke, Chico State College in California, the Junior College of Marysville, California, Limestone College, South Carolina and the Prince of Wales College of Charlottetown P E I, Canada.

The Tihmars moved quite often during David's childhood, and he graduated from high school in Denver, Colorado. He attended Phoby College in Phoenix, Arizona, and studied dramatics at Los Angeles City College in California.

Mr Tihmar is interested in all kinds of American art and his study of the folklore of his country is shown in his original ballets composed for the tour this season. One is based on Stephen Foster's music and one on the emotional attitudes of the Negro spirituals. Both of these dances will be presented at the performance here.

Books Collected

Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman scholastic honorary, has been carrying on a drive among its members to secure books for the boys in the Merchant Marines. This drive has been going on throughout February and will continue until the latter part of March, according to Robin Hill, president of Alpha Lambda Delta. Each member is responsible for turning in one good book that would be enjoyed by the boys in the Merchant Marine. Approximately 30 books have already been collected. Mary Jane Kirst is in charge of this drive.

Collegiate Comeback

Pulling students out of their lethargy seems to be a problem at Auburn, Alabama Polytechnic Institnte, as well as at Florida State College. The following excerpt from The Plainsman is their opinion of the campus slacker:

"THE CAMPUS SHEEP—

He went all thru grade school and high school, doing what his teachers told him and following the herd. Now that he's in college, he's doing the same thing, fighting shy of all sheep with black wool, who don't do what the rest do. He has about as much initiative as a student dancing with a chaperone, as much imagination as a hamburger steak and as much color as a polar bear in the snow. He's the dummy who always votes the way he's ordered for campus elections and never questions the right and wrong of certain campus traditions. Like all sheep he'll let himself be pushed along to the slaughter house and never think about where he's heading or why he's being pushed. To hell with 'im."

From the Vermont Cynic, Burlington, Vermont, comes this item: At a meeting of the Student Union Council, the President asked for opinions on the question of wearing slacks and ski pants to classes. The rule which is now in effect states that slacks and ski pants may be worn in zero weather or below, and the student is advised to change to a skirt before going to class. After a short discussion, it was decided that the Council members should watch to see that the wearing of slacks and ski pants does not persist in warm weather.

the year, and it was printed in several foreign languages.

The book was written for the purpose of instructing Mr Goulding's children in the art of woodcraft. Mr Goulding wrote other books and articles but The Young Marooners was his best and is generally considered an outstanding piece of children's literature. The book went out of print in 1918.

In order that the students get an insight into the various fields of work undertaken on campus, the library is giving to each college organization full charge of the War Information Center. David Lang Speaks Here chairman of the child care committee, opened the session.

The meeting, attended by college students and faculty members and representatives of the Tallahassee school system, health organizations, and welfare groups, was held for the purpose of informing the community of the child labor law and the ways to check infringements.

After reviewing the major points of the child labor law, Mr Lang held an open discussion concerning the preventive checks on known violations of the law. Members of the audience, who were interested in the provisions for the enforcement of the law, raised the question as to prevention of such violations. It was then brought to their attention that citizens as well as law-enforcement agencies have the right to swear out a warrant before the county judge. A local attorney also suggested that members of the community share equal responsibilities with the employers to see that no infringements of the law occur.

Another point raised in this forum discussion was the fact that although most of the violations of child labor laws have been occurring at night, the inspectors, whose job it is to enforce the laws, work only in the daytime.

In explaining the law, Mr Lang said that 16 is the minimum age for employment without a work permit which is issued by local public school authorities. These permits, when issued, allow for a 40-hour week, including school hours, and designate an 8 hour days and a 6 day week. Night work, the speaker added, is prohibited from 8 to 6:30 p m for minors under 16 and from 10 to 6 a m for those between 16 and 18, except in cases of farm work or domestic service in private homes.

Exceptions are sometimes made, he explained, to allow certain children to work during school hours, provided there is definite proof of economic need, the child has completed the eighth grade and bears a doctor's certificate of physical fitness.

Even those with certificates are prohibited from certain ennumerated hazardous occupations, including that of messenger service and until recently, that of milk truck delivery. Also brought to the group's attention was the fact that it is illegal to employ any person under 21 in a pool room or any place dealing solely in intoxicating liquors.

Mr Lang also pointed out that the Industrial Commission, which in 1943 was given the job of administering the child labor laws, receives an annual appropriation of $7,300 for its work. Six inspectors, working throughout the state, have declared 339 violations during the past year with penalties assessed to the extend of $7,314, he added.

Smith Is President

Margaret Smith, senior, will serve as president of the School of Music for the remainder of this year having been elected at a meeting on Wednesday afternoon. Other officers who were elected at the meeting are Anne Bower, junior, vice-president; Eleanor Bragg, sophomore, secretary; and Joyce Evans, freshman, treasurer.

Officers met for the first time Thursday morning with Dean Earl O Kuersteiner of the School of Music. They discussed student attendance at college recitals and plans for a School of Music dinner Music Week in May.

BY GLORIA REED

On the Western front last week the final chapter of the war against Germany appeared to have opened with General Dwight Eisenhower's drive into the enemy lines along the forty-two mile front along the Cologne Plain guarding the Rhine. It was predicted by a Nazi spokesman that this attack would be linked with the new Soviet offensive from the East. Just before the action got under way, Field Marshal Sir Bernard L Montgomery told his troops: "We have come now to the last and final round; we want and will go for the knockout blow".

The Allied air assualt on Germany continues to add the final touch to the new offensive. Last week nearly every plane in the Allied air forces in Britain, France, and Italy, at least 7000 air craft, struck a paralyzing hlow at enemy communications which insured that the Germans could not rush troops to all the areas along the 450-mile front.

On the Eastern front the Russians are marshalling their forces into two spearheads, both aimed toward Berlin. The advance of these spearheads is expected by many observers to be rapid since the Red Army has pushed the Germans back over 1200 miles in little less than a year. During his address celebrating the twenty-seventh anniversary of the founding of the Red Army, Marshall Stalin said: "Full victory over the Germans is near. The Red Army, in common with the Armies of our Allies, is successfully bringing to an end the rout of the German Fascist Army.

The American flag has been planted firmly on the doorstep of Japan on top of a volcanic cone on Iwo Island only 750 miles from Tokyo, as close to the Japanese capital as Atlanta is to New York. The price of this island ran high in the loss of American lives as the Japanese fought with fanatical savagery to stave off this most pressing threat to the homeland. The loss of Iwo Island by the Japanese means heightened danger from American air power as well as throwing the spotlight on the inability of the Japanese to defend the near approaches to Tokyo.

In the Philippines General MacArthur's forces have succeeded in completely clearing up Bataan. However, "pocket resistance" still exists in the old walled section of Manila. The defeat of the Japanese has given the American forces a steppina stone to the coast of China which is only 700 miles away.

In Mexico City, in the Jewel Room of historic Chapultepec Castle, delegates of 20 American Republics met to discuss "Problems of War and Peace." Speaking three languages and representing various kinds of governments, the conference delegates had a threefold purpose: to increase co-operation in the conduct of the war; to regain, and if possible, strengthen economic and political solidarity of the American nations; and to take steps toward establishing a post-war stability.

On the domestic front last week the stage was set in Washington for another showdown over methods of meeting the nation's manpower needs. The debate is over whether or not compulsory methods are needed to provide the 7,000,000 workers which government authorities say are required to maintain critical production programs for the first six months of this year. Two proposals to meet the problem have been advanced: The May-Bailey bill and the Wagner-Kilgore bill.

time and trouble in unraveling, punching, backing, and generally mangling the hat in order to give it a sufficiently "beat-up" appearance. A brown dress had to be dyed three times before it was brown enough. Two pairs of red flannels for the clothes line were not oddly enough, uncommonly hard to find.

Maurine's main problem for her play "The Purple Door Knob" was to locate a fuchsia hat, gloves, and bag. Becoming quite desperate after having asked most of her friends, she says that she just started going up to total strangers asking her eternal question, "Have you got a fuchsia hat, gloves, and bag?" She is also searching frantically for a lavender bed jacket.

Another of her hardships has been in getting one of the girls to pick up her cues. It seems that this girl reads a letter from her boy friend over and over and just doesn't get the cues.

Besides all this, it seems that there are rats in the prop room, and Maurine is absolutely terrified by the little creatures. She declares that it took her three hours and excessive shuddering to get out all the props.

She has also had some difficuity in getting one of the members of the cast to wear a "slinky" dress. It seems the thankless creative would much prefer to wear just a plain one.

"Pink and Patches" and "No 'Count Boy" were presented before the American Association of University Women last night in the Augusta Conradi Little Theatre, and "The Purple Door Knob" will be presented next Thursday.

FSC Studio Presents Florida Book Review

Speech Students Participate On Library Program

An all Florida book review program in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of Florida's admission to the union went on the air Monday night from the college studio.

The program, prepared and sponsored by the FSC Library was presented by students of the speech department. Miss Louise Richardson, head librarian, wrote the reviews of Florida literature by Florida men.

Books reviewed were That Vanishing Eden by Thomas Barbour, Bulletin No. 23 of the Florida Geological Survey, by Dr Herman Kurz (head of the FSC department of botany and bacteriology); and Florida During the Territorial Days, by Sidney W Martin. Other books mentioned were Colcorton, by Edith Pope, an FSC alumna; Mangrove Coast, by Karl Bickel; Florida, Land of Change, by Katherine T Abbey, former faculty member; San Luis of Apache and Juan Ortiz, by Mary B Alfriend, FSC English teacher.

The scrip which included music was arranged by Miss Sara Graham, head of the library's radio committee. Sarah Lewis, soprano soloist, sang "The Wren" and "The Owl" by Liza Lehman. She was accompanied by Eleanor Bragg at the piano.

Speech students participating were: announcer Sara Norman; reviewers Bonnie Hunt, Maurine Petty, and Pat Pattishall.

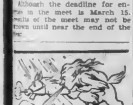
Southern Record Broken Clause Is Winner



Three new swimming records were made at the annual telegraphic swim meet held here February 23 and 27. Two of the new records were Florida State College records and the other was a 100 yard back crawl which was a southern record, formerly held by Peggy Barker.

Carol Clause, a freshman member of the Tarpon club and Elven swimming team broke all three of these records, doing the 40 yard free stroke in 30.2 seconds, smashing the old record by 1.3 seconds. She broke another record in the first place records of the other two. In the 40 yard free style, 3 Scottsdale, Arizona girl was cleared second in the 40 yard breast stroke and the 75 yard Individual medley.

Anna Horne won first place in the 100 yard free style and second place in the 100 yard back crawl; she placed second in the 40 yard free-style. Members of the winning 100 yard free style relay team were Mary MacEdwards, Anna Horne, Ann Clause and B J Singleton. Ann Clause, Rowland, Jan Harris Doris Dubois and Jo Parker completed the number two team. The 75 yard medley was won by Anna Horne, Carol Clause and B J Singleton in 51 seconds.

"We are expecting to place 'Wo-in-the Southern meet this year but I don't want to venture any predictions on the subject," says Margaret L. Clements, instructor, states.

Although the deadline for entries in the meet is March 15, trials of the meet may not be known until near the end of the month.

FSC Girl Raises Prize Steer In Southeastern Stock Show

"Teddy really won for me!" These are the happy words of Jeannette Zetrouer, freshman at FSC, whose steer "Teddy" won the grand-championship over hundreds of well-bred animals at the fifth annual Southeastern Pan-Stock and Sale show, held at Ocala on February 22-25.

"Terry" is a steer black steer and weighs 1,405 pounds. Jeannette smiles a bit wistfully as she talks about her two-year-old pet, because as custom demanded, she sold her outstanding steer to the highest bidder, Senator Graham, for eighty cents a pound, the highest price ever paid in the state of Florida for beef cattle.

Jeannette cared for Teddy herself until last September when she came to college to begin her study of animal husbandry. "When he was a tiny calf, I taught him how to lead, and almost as I have fed, brushed, and curried my Aberdeen Angusa," she says.

For over four years, now Jeannette has worked in 4-H clubs, and won first place in a national 4-H girls' contest. She also lives on a 200 acre ranch, four miles from Monticello, Florida. Range cattle were her regular companions.

From her father and grandfather, who are both in the beef cattle business, Jeannette has learned how to handle a steer, how to rear a calf and produce a full grown blue-ribbon animal. Corn, cottonseed meal, oats, crackers, and shell corn, but lucerne are the favorite dishes of "Teddy" plus water. "Teddy" won first prize in his class of steers. This husky fellow who sold for over $600 weighs 1,140 pounds.

"Terry", the baby in the family is eight months old. Jeannette plans to enter him in the next Ocala show. Should he, too, be a champ, Jeannette will be game still to winning the large gold cup in the Chamber of Commerce which is awarded to a three year old consecutive winner. As it is, her name is engraved on the silver cup, and she is proud owner of three cups, three purple ribbons, and two blue ones which number all the judge of the show, Dr. I. A. Richardson in the department of animal husbandry at the University of Tennessee.

Jeannette was away for four days week before last. She was the granddaughter Steer she was preparing him for the big moment when she led him to victory in the Ocala pavilion Thursday night. Friday night, after the show, she attended a banquet given for 300 important cattlemen. Last Friday night, she was interviewed over WTMC, Ocala radio station. Last night she talked about "Teddy" on the Tallahassee radio program. Next week, she will be in Miami to exhibit her steer and bid him goodbye, for soon "Teddy" will be turned into steaks for meat buying customers of the Marianna Packing Co. store in Miami.

In the future, Jeannette plans to purchase cattle which she can keep. Next fall with the $4,000 in prize money, and $1,700 she received for "Billy" and "Teddy" Jeannie is going to buy ten heifers and rear these cows for cattle breeding purposes. Yes, for this girl two plus two definitely does make a dream come true, a dream of "Stardust", the delightful name of a little calf which is her own the green pastures of northwest Florida.

PEA See Movies

Movies of past physical education majors at Florida State were the main topic at the next meeting of the physical education association on March 12. The movies were taken by Dr Katherine W Montgomery, head of the physical education department.

Margie Platt, president of the association, also announced that on March 31, the physical education majors are planning to go to camp for the weekend.

Chalmers Speaks At Lenten Forum

"Saint and the Individual" was the sermon given by the Rev Alan Chalmers at last Friday's Lenten forum at Ruge Hall. He explained the effect that Saint Paul's conversion had on the conception of the individual. Saint Augustine's contribution to the conception of the individual, Reverend Chalmers also talked of the relation between men and women, and relations between individuals.

Because of the Youth Conference scheduled for this week-end, the regular Lenten forum in Ruge Hall will not be held this Friday.

Last Sunday night Rev Alvin Shelton, a Negro minister, will speak on "God and the Nation" at his regular meeting at 7:30.

However, next Sunday night instead of Reverend Bullen's sermon, members of Ruge will hear Dr Charles W Hinton ,delegate at the Youth Conference. Dr Hinton is the former pastor of the Church of English and American Episcopalians in Mexico City.

On Friday, February 23, the sacrament of Holy Baptism was administered to Gloria Sue Reed by Reverend Bullen at Ruge Hall.

Time for communion services on Wednesdays has been changed from 7:45 to 7:30. This change will be effective for the rest of the school year.

Zoology Professor Seeks Fitting Name For Lizard Pet

Little "Phymosoma" — horned toad which inmates of Ruge Hall at all, but in reality a lizard—is seeking a name that will give him individuality.

The toad was given to Miss Eida Deviney, professor of zoology, by a student who felt she could not take care of the animal in the proper manner a toad should be taken care of, after returning from a trip to Texas.

There is nothing extraordinary about Phymosoma. He is just a lizard about the size of a baby's leaf with the right number of toes and other physical requirements. However, he is a bit eccentric, as he must have his sunbath in the attic and enjoys playing with his companions, two toy horses, which are the size of a quarter.

One day while straying out of his home, a shoe box covered on the bottom with sand, Phymosoma Texas Horned Lizard Regal, received from this accident, he calmly continued a search for cockroaches, his favorite afternoon-while, hoped he would not discover an edible cockroach around.

Any name submitted will be given careful consideration as to the fitness of the character of Phymosoma.

Pre-Easter Vespers Begin Here Sunday

Miss Ramona Beard, Organist, On First March Series

A series of pre-Easter organ vespers will begin this Sunday afternoon at 4:30 in the Westcott auditorium and will be continued each Sunday during March, it was announced by Mr Karl O Kuerster, dean of the School of Music.

Miss Ramona Beard, associate professor of organ at Florida State College, who is in charge of these Sunday afternoon vesper programs will be the organist at the first program.

Dean Kuerstriner says that these preorams will last from 40 to 45 minutes and will be of a much lighter nature than a regular organ recital.

Miss Beard's program will consist of "Pantasie in G Major" and "Sheep May Freely Graze." both of which are by Bach; "Intermezzo in A Minor" by Franck, "My Heart Cries Out to Angels" by Brahms, "Tumult in Praetorium" by de Malelnerean, and "Easter Morning" by Noble McConathy.

Participating organists for the succeeding vesper services will be Claude Murphree, professor of organ at the University of Florida; Gainesville who is being secouht here by the Rollins College for March 11, and Dr D Miller, associate professor of philosophy and religion at Florida State College, who will have the program on March 18.

The final presentation on the last Sunday of March will be in the form of a Bach festival program with 12 choirs from Tallahassees and one group from Dan Mabry participating. There will probably be a separate number by each group and several choirs in unison. Dean Kurrsteiner stated.

Chemistry Honorary Initiates Pledges

The formal initiation for pledges of Gamma Sigma Epsilon, national honorary chemistry fraternity, was held Sunday night, February 4th in the Science building.

After the initiation, an informal supper for old and new members was given in the Union Building on Broward. At this time, the essays that the pledges had written as part of the informal initiations were read.

Faculty members present at the dinner were Dr Mary Brent Carmichrooke, instructor in chemistry, Mrs Katherine B Hoffman, instructor in chemistry, and Dr Jennie Till, professor of chemistry.

The normal initiation was held Saturday, beginning February 4, from 2:00 to 7:30 p m in the Science building.

Charter members of Gama Sigma Epsilon are: Betty Jane Fox, Francesta Vinson, Carmen Moore, Mary C Beery Lansdon, Mary Jane Klein, Ruth L'Engle, and Joyce Funke.

Reynolds Is Winner Of Basketball Tilt

Reynolds basketball team was the winner over the Pi Beta Phi's in the finals of the basketball intramurals, which ended this week. The Alpha Gamma Delta's and the Alpha Delta Pi's were defeated in the semi-finals.

The winning team which scored 26-5 has won all the games they played. Opponents of Reynolds team have been Broward, Bruid, and Alpha Gamma Delta.

On the team are Marion Floyd, manager and captain, Grace Allen Boyette, Mary Louise Van Netia, Peggy Ann Cone, Georgie Jackel, forwards; Edith Ware, Mary Ware, Mollie Pedrick, Ida Lee Rents and Agnes Reiser, guards.

Practices will start at 5 p m today for tennis intramural games and continue every Tuesday including Saturday and Sunday from 3 until 6:30 p m for one week. The tournament will begin next Friday and consist of two separate contests, one each for singles and doubles matches.

A trophy will be awarded for the singles matches, and a plaque for the doubles. Any organization may participate in one or both tournaments, but each person may take part in only one.

The Students Speak

To discover the general feeling and the amount of interest toward the Youth Conference opening this afternoon at 4:00, the real what part of it was being satisfied part the 25 greatest number of students, girls representing the different classes were approached concerning their views. Some had never attended a Youth Conference before, others had been present at a few sessions, while others still had taken part to a great extent in the Conference. The questions asked were: How do you feel about the coming Youth Conference? What phase of it interests you most?

It is a wonderful plan. I was unable to attend the seminars held last year, but I've been looking forward to this year's conference. As I'm a Spanish major and plan to travel in the Latin American countries after the war, I'm interested in hearing about Mexico and Latin America.

MARGUERITE CHERRY,
Sophomore

I'm not going for the religious side of it especially, but mainly to learn the impressions the ambassadors have gained from having lived in the various countries. They have been Allies and Japan appeal to me.

COLLEEN HALLINAN,
Junior.

The Youth Conference is a very good thing, and I'm looking forward to the seminar on Japan. I feel that the Conference is never stops to think of dealing with the problems arising after the war in a Christian-like manner." It seems as though we should be considering it want an expert's opinion.

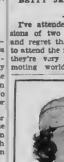
MARTHA HART,
Freshman.

The Conference will give us a better knowledge of our enemies and their ideals. I have had little interest has been shown by the students. It seems to me that if we attended in former years, it ought to be very good. I am going to take advantage of the seminars. However, more people could be reached if the seminars were not held on Saturday morning when some students have previous conflicting with the seminars in which they are most interested. I'm looking forward to finding out about the American prisoners of war and learning of conditions in India.

LOUISE NEWMAN,
Freshman.

It's so easy for college women as we are to become more or less involved in our own affairs and to forget what's happening on the outside. This Youth Conference is our "golden opportunity" to gain knowledge of many of the subjects we should be able to converse intelligently about. I'm especially interested in all phases of the Conference

ROBERTA FARRIS,
Freshman.



Of course I've never attended a Youth Conference here, but judging from what I've heard and read about it, I consider it a privilege to hear such qualified speakers. I'm looking forward to the war, and especially to the one on Japan.

BERNICE SLOAN,
Freshman.

I think it's a good idea. It gives us a broader insight into the situation in other countries and a greater understanding of the problems. I'm especially interested in the seminar on Japan because I want to find out how they feel about the world and their attitudes will be in the post-war world.

BETTY JEAN THOMASON,
Sophomore.

I've attended the opening sessions of two Youth Conferences and I've found that I've been unable to attend the rest, because I think they're very beneficial in promoting world friendship. The

Annual Elections To Be Held For Major and Minor Offices During March 13 Through 16

Six Major Office Candidates to Speak in Convocation Student Meeting Monday Will Feature Other Candidates Platforms

Annual elections will be held from March 13-16.

Candidates for six of the major offices, president of college government Association, chairman of Judiciary, freshman advisor, and editors of publications, will make three minute campaign speeches in Convocation Thursday. The primary for major offices will also be held then.

Candidates for the other nine major and the minor offices will present their platforms at the student meeting Monday at 7:45 p m in the Student Alumnae Building auditorium.

Finals for the major candidates will take place Wednesday on the voting machines in lower Westcott from 8 a m to 5 p m.

At a compulsory convocation, on Thursday at 7:45 p m, the primary for the minor offices will take place. Finals for the minor offices will be held Friday also at the voting machines from 8 a m to 5 p m. Students are asked to check in convocation Thursday with the Sophomore Council girls who will then to sit wherever there is a vacancy.

All candidates have signed up for two hours at the candidates' booth in lower Westcott. The purpose of the booth is to give the students a chance to become better acquainted with the candidates and to give information about the elections.

A chart is posted by the candidates booth naming the candidates running for each office and the time that they will be in the booth.

Pictures of candidates will be posted on a chart in Lower Westcott as a guide for voters this week.

Varied Program Is Given at Dale Mabry

Campus Troupe Has Songs, Dances, Puppet Show

A varied program, consisting of songs, dances, and a marionette show, was presented Sunday night at 8:30 at Dale Mabry Field hospital by a group of Florida State College performers under the direction of Margaret Vogt and Anabel Peacock, who head the entertainment program committee of Landis Hall.

The troupe left the campus at 7:34 p m in two army trucks sent for that purpose from Dale Mabry Field, and were accompanied on Miss Margaret Rogers, counselor in Landis Hall.

The program began with a marionette show presented by Margery Morris, Nancy Parker, Mary Penton, and Joan Phillips who patomined the song "Ma, He's Making Eyes At Me." This was followed by a tap-routine by Ruth Rew'ay. A trio, consisting of Martha Nell Booth, Elizabeth Booth, and Jinx Farrior, presented a duet on Bee in Bonnet," followed by Mar- Nell McFe'ter who gave a program of accordian music and Virginia Lee Johnson did sand sang blues songs. During the intermissions Tevia Barr gave a request program of piano music and the program ended with a marionette show presented by the talents and the troupe joined.

While the program was in progress over the radio in the Army Troops, Mary Fowler and Dot Ann Ketchum, hostesses, served, circulated through the wards and made sketches of many of the patients.

This series of entertainments is under the sponsorship of the Red Cross. Another program will be presented next Thursday night.

Ditiful Puo Pedestrian Pulled From Precarious Predicament

A loud screeching of brakes—a painful, blood-curdling scream—two girls dashing madly to the rescue of the victim. Such is the chaotic scene that took place on FSC campus this week-end.

Who was the unfortunate creature who issued the painful cry? None other than Whiskers," a poor, bedraggled, little puppy who met his fate under the wheels of a speeding Packard. Sir Galahad Georgie Jaecke' and Teddy Hamlin, wasted no time in bandaging the poor little creature's bruised leg.

That, however, was the least of their worries. The major problem was how to care for him. It seemed that two great minds met on the same track and with a little secret plot,the "Whiskers" was soon resting peacefully under the back stairs of Reynolds. It was not long until the news spread and girls came from all over the dormitories with everything from tomato juice to pickles to satisfy his supposed hunger.

He was soon able to hop around in his new home.

several times only to return at night. Rumors soon had it that the police were in search of Whiskers, looking for him. Someone had removed his bandage and he was again unable to move. It was already 10 o'clock but the girls were determined that something should happen to him. They located a veterinarian and with the aid of Mrs Sherrod Reynolds resident counselor Georgie Teddy, and "Whiskers" were soon in a cab speeding toward Wicker's Doc and Cat Hospital.

After their arrival, they were encouraged by the fact that a few weeks more would see their "Whiskers" well on the way toward recovery.

All the girls in Reynolds donated their dimes and nickels to the worthy cause. Now the plea is being made for an owner. Anyone wanting a cute little puppy that is "mostly fox terrier, very intelligent and well trained," please contact Teddy Hamlin immediately. "Whiskers" will be

Primrose Will Perform Here On Wednesday

Both Series Tickets Given For FSC to Hear Viola Player

William Primrose, who has been conceded by musical authorities to be today's greatest viola player, will appear on the Artist Series program Wednesday night at 8 in the Westcott auditorium. A and B series tickets have been distributed for the event.

Born in Scotland 37 years ago, Primrose began the study of music when he was four years old. His father, a "musician, owner" a rare and beautiful Amati" — which Primrose uses today) but strongly objected to the youngster's interest in it. "At that time," Primrose explains, "the viola was thought of as a sort of Cinderella of the strings," a harbor for disappointed fiddlers." The instrument therefore was kept under lock and key. Young William pried open the lock to play it until the elder Primrose discovered the culprit and set him to practicing the violin instead.

He followed his father's wishes and at the age of ten, while a pupil of Camille Ritter played the Mendelssohn violin concerto in Glasgow's largest concert hall. He late Henry Verersuchen conducted. He continued his violin studies in Germany at the Hochschuhl School of Music and at 17 made his formal concert debut with the Albert Hall orchestra under Sir Lancon Ronald. For the occasion, a friend of his father's lent

Library Staff Edits Bulletin Recently

"Calling All Readers" Is Title Of Publication

Calling All Readers is the title of the bulletin recently published by the staff members of the Florida State College library. The little booklet, of which a limited number of copies is available in the library, was written for the purpose of increasing interest in the library and adding to its usefulness.

The greenish gray cover of Calling All Readers was designed by Miss Ellen Herndon, assistant order librarian, but the contents was contributed by the entire library the staff, "so we can give special credit to no one," Miss Sara Graham, librarian, stated. Special sections in the first issue of the library bulletin, which will be published quarterly, include "I. Is the Library," "Current Books I Suggested Reading," "Here and There in the Library," and "Library Chatter."

Special attention is called to the thousands of pamphlets available in the library. Besides these growing tons of trees to the Dumbarton Oaks scrapbook are covered by the library's pamphlet collection. Until Monday the books suggested in bulletin will be displayed in the lobby of the library.

Carter Gives Books To College Library

Mr John Victor Carter of Critchobal, Canal Zone, who presented the collection of Inca relics to Florida State College, has given a nine-volume set of books on ancient art to the library entitled Les Arts de l'antiquite.

"Certain volumes have been approached as real contributions by their respective fields of art," said Miss Louise Richardson, librarian in charge of the library science. These books deal with Assyrian architecture, the Egyptian sculpture of Jerusalem and Persian art.

The volume on Egypt is deemed especially good by art critics, and the whole set is more valuable in the original than in translation according to Miss Richardson.

Mia Slavenska and Her Troupe Practice And Travel as Well as Perform on Tour

Speaking with a slight foreign accent, Mia Slavenska told her ballet star ballerina to come from Yugoslavia, discussed her troupe with interested students Wednesday, before her performance here.

The troupe itself is made up of two men, two girls, and Miss Slavenska. While on tour, their practicing consists merely of individual warming up—Miss Slavenska for about 10 minutes, and the girls from 20 to 30 minutes. When not busy practicing time ranges from one and a half to three hours.

It was Miss Slavenska's second trip to Florida. She was in Miami with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo three years ago. At this time, she is not appearing in any other place in the state. Dancing for a college audience is no unusual thing for her, as she has performed at most all parts of the country.

Miss Slavenska found as the main problem on this trip the drying of costumes after their performances. She said that with the combination of their great activity and the damp air in this section of the country, drying is really quite a problem. The costumes must be spread out until they dry, and often have to be packed away damp if there is no facility for drying them after performance.

Kellum Retires College Post

Thirty-Eight Years Service On FSCW Staff

Mr John Gabriel Kellum, business manager and treasurer of Florida State College, will retire at the end of this month after having worked here for 38 years. The executive council in giving Mr Kellum a contract for her on March 22 which will be followed by a reception given by President and Mrs Doak Campbell and faculty.

Mr Kellum, born on a farm, went to a country school. At the age of 20 he left and went to a private Normal school in Jasper, from there he began teaching in rural schools.

Later he entered Peabody Normal College, now the University of Nashville, Tennessee on a scholarship and graduated from there for a year and a half.

He was secretary of the Florida Education Association for five years, but he continued teaching until 1911 when he was elected assistant clerk of the House of Representatives. He was reelected, of which a limited number of copies is available in the library, was secretary for the purpose of increasing interest in the library and adding to its usefulness.

Annual Youth Conference Concluded With Discussion

After a weekend featuring speeches, a panel discussion, seminars and worship services, the annual Youth Conference ended Sunday. This discussion, which brought the conference to a close, summarized the knowledge and concepts gained from the entire program. The conference, sponsored by the Florida Chain of Missionary Assemblies, opened with brief addresses by the various ambassadors presenting a panorama view of the world.

These addresses designed to give a preview of the conference as a whole, summarized the situation in the regions where the speakers have worked. Emphasizing the need for providing opportunities for underprivileged groups, Dr Raymond B Druiker spoke on "Our Own United States."

Dr Druiker of the Reformed Church in America is director of mountain work in Jackson County, Kentucky.

"The American College Campus" was the theme of the address by Reverend Smith, pastor of the University Baptist Church of Austin, Texas. Stating that the American campus is the "most

College Council Returns Senate's Trial Period Rule As Not Within Jurisdiction

Council States Health Is Involved in Regulation; Senate Appoints Committee to Inquire Basis of Health Decisions

Returned this week to Student Senate by College Council was Senate's much-discussed proposal that there be a year's trial period in which no rule should govern out-night absences.

Reason for the proposal's return, according to the statement of the Council, was that: The Executive Council had indicated the matter was under its jurisdiction as "pertaining to health and safety." College Council felt that it did not lie within its jurisdiction to consider the matter.

Discussion of the need for a rule to cover overnight absences has held Senate attention since October.

Senate's first proposal that no rule govern return from overnight absences, was sent to College Council in January, and was referred by them to the college Executive Council. Executive Council did not accept the recommendation of Senate, but voted unanimously to return the old resolution by "disregarding the basis of the . . . resolution, namely the consideration of the effect of all night travel on health and academic achievement." Executive Council ruled that no solution of a trial period is the place of residence between the hourse of second light flash and 7 a m.

On February 19 Senate Senate agreed that, since health was not involved in the rule, it was within student jurisdiction according to the COA Constitution.

Senate then debated and passed upon the three-year program of a trial period with no rule governing return.

Wednesday Senate voted to ap-

Dance Troupe Appears Here

Large Audience Watches Ballet Program

A capacity audience attended the performance of Mia Slavenska and her dance ensemble at Florida State College Wednesday night.

The program of the ensemble in order of presentation was as follows: "Dance Fantasy" from the composition: Coppella, which consisted of seven excerpts from the third-scene ballet, portraying a village feast and the celebration of a marriage; and the last part of the program was a group of unrelated dances entitled Divertisments.

The first dance in Divertisments was Spirituals, a dance showing the emotional attitudes of the Negro spirituals. It was choreographed by David Tihmar. Miss Slavenska's partner was Paul Bulier. Miss Eva Mae Atwood, Miss Roberta Ackerman, Miss Ellen Starret, and Isabel Mumme danced.

The collection of freelen-made woods was displayed in connection with a series of programs on hobbies and creative interests held each Wednesday afternoon.

Next week Jennie Murphree girls will hear Miss Emily P Wilburn, associate professor of industrial arts. She will tell about arts and crafts as hobbies. Next week, too, there will be a display of articles made by the girls in Jennie Murphree hall.

Margaret Clayton Is New YW President

Dr Liddell Will Be Speaker At Cabinet Installation

Margaret Clayton is the newly-elected president of the Young Woman's Christian Association. Other officers elected Thursday and Wednesday were: Wilna Hamilton, vice president; Joyce Petty, secretary; and Alva Ray, treasurer. Committee chairmen will be chosen by these officers.

Installation services for the new officers and committee chairmen will be held March 22 in the Student Alumnae auditorium with Dr Anna P Liddell as guest speaker. All YWCA members are invited to attend. At this time the outgoing cabinet will officially turn over its duties to the new cabinet.

According to Margaret Clayton, the YWCA plans for next year include a program designed to promote consciousness of social, economic, and political problems of our day as well as fostering religious unity on campus and furthering personal religious awareness through convocation devotionals.

Another feature of new plans is the creation of the community service committee to be headed and assisted by Rosemary Hubbell in charge of the Big Sister Little Sister donation department which is directed by Miss Henriette Engelhardt, instructor in physical education.

Special Convocation For Honor Students

Emory University President Will Be Speaker Here

There will be a special convocation in Westcott Auditorium at 2:30, Tuesday, March 20, in honor of students with good scholastic standing.

Miss Myrtle E Dolbee, chairman of the committee on Scholastic Honors Day, said that all students who have established a credit in at least 45 semester hours of college courses here, and who have a scholastic average of 2.0 or better are the honorees of the program. Also transfer students who have established here at least 30 hours of credit with an accademic average of 2.0 or better are to be included in the honorees.

Dr Carmen Rogers Says Travel Is Necessary to Secure Peace

"I feel that this war could have been avoided had the agitators not been so provincial and ignorant of the other countries," said Dr Carmen Rogers, English teacher at Florida State College.

In expressing her opinion that travel should be incorporated in the educational system after the war even if it must be done at government expense, she said, "If thoroughly agree with whoever said, 'Travel is the fifth element in education.'"

As Dr Rogers has traveled extensively, she realizes the necessity of this. The strange and foreign places which have figured so prominently in the war when to most Americans have been just difficult names to learn, have been familiar scenes to her.

Before the war Dr Rogers conducted a number of tours through Europe, the last being in 1937. Included in that she stood on the decks of the Queen Mary that summer watching the shores of Southampton glide by. It would be a long time before she would again set these shores in view in the hope that the war to be over so she can go back.

Her first view of the war came while she was in the hospital. With each broadcast of the news came memories of places she had known and loved so well.

The cathedrals of Cherbourg which played such an important part in the Allied invasion of France, the Rhine River that Dr Rogers entered up by the first trip to Europe. Since the modern days the shores had not then been built, the ship had to anchor out from shore, being a tender carry the passengers to land. On one of her tours in France, Dr Rogers visited Compiegne where the Armistice was signed in 1918 and where Hitler ironically made the French sign an armistice in 1940.

While in France, she found the most impressive French festival to be the Independence Day celebration on July 14. This cannot be taken more seriously than the American Fourth of July, with the peasants and common people taking a big part in the parade.

Next of Dr Rogers' tours of particular interest to Dr Rogers for it was there she saw Prince Bernhart shrowing a window of the palace as he was urging his planes. She passed through here on her trips from Cologne to Brussels.

Another of the cities which has figured so predominately in the war and which Dr Rogers found most fascinating was Algiers. She described this city as having a depth of cosmopolitan atmosphere blended with a definite native element. The native quarters are intriguing with their steep, narrow steps winding among the houses in place of streets. The only mode of commuting is on donkey or on foot. In commenting on the city Dr Rogers said, "It is a city of a great deal of gay color and has one of the most beautiful harbors in the world. The water is clear blue during the day and like star sapphire on a moonlight night."

One of Dr Rogers' most memorable experiences at sea occurred when the ship passed through Scilla and Charybdis, between the to eof Italy and Sicily, and passed into the Ionic sea.

Latin America Hurrey's Topic

Speaker Gives Picture Of Foreign Influence

Dr Charles D Hurrey, world traveler, lecturer and former Secretary of the International Committee of the Y M C A, spoke last Monday at the Latin American countries uniting today for a tomorrow of liberalism, less corruption and the desires to govern themselves without outside influences.

Speaking before students and faculty of Florida State College in the Augusta-Conradi Little Theatre, Dur Hurrey gave a clear picture of foreign influence and finance, meddling political machines and foreign emissaries of interests that restrain the terror the Latin American countries to establish democracy, "good life for all of the people."

The need was stressed for a Pan-American League with the United States, "Arms length" idea, carried through to personnel, industry, and trained workers who will feel at home in the Latin countries as well as to the United States and the Pan-American nations.

"Today we are acquiring an interdependence culturally, financially, politically," Dr Hurrey stated. "Improved methods of transportation of the use of communication and transportation the nations are drawing closer. Radio and airplanes are becoming as one. "Dwight Morrow covered it well in a handful of good-will, did more to show the people that the United States was not only a land of culture and society of these nations to the South." English is now being studied in the high schools of countries by movies, as Spanish in this country. Most interesting to students is progressing so that Dr Hurrey predicted that in the near future people will be without them, a factor which will be a great purpose in Pan-American unity and binding force.

Dr Hurrey, at the conclusion of his talk said he was happy to turn Dru Pearson for the moment and give a few interesting facts concerning the Latin American countries.

"I predict that there is going to be an expansion of organized labor activities and improvement of rural and living conditions.

"I go further and predict a great industrial expansion in that these countries producing raw materials and exporting them, will continue to a production of the finished product.

"Cotton will be King rather than coffee in Brazil.

"I predict a great campaign will be against illiteracy in Mexico since her appropriations even at the present time made for education exceed those made for military purposes.

"I predict that the Latin American countries will not encourage anymore Japanese immigration and will place great restrictions on the Asiatics, especially the Japanese."

Dr Hurrey remarked that fair question concerning Paraguay, Uruguay and Bolivia's government would be: Would it improve the status of these countries if Argentina governed theme as one nation?

"This is one question that we all are waiting to find out the answer to," Dr Hurrey concluded.

him the famous Beta Sradivarius, now in the Library of Congress.

In 1925 Primrose went to Berlin for further study with Carl Flesch. But the charm of Berlin faded for Primrose and he sorsen: in fast, Primrose confesses he was "passionately in love with it." There recognized his special aptitude for the instrument and discovered him how different the approach to it should be from the approach to the violin. By 1930 Primrose had switched permanently to the viola and that year accepted an offer so the New York Symphony. In 1932 he gave his first solo viola performance in Rio de Janeiro. After hearing this performance critic Richard "shere has never existed a viola player who combined musical technique."

Primrose recently completed his 35th concert for RCA Victor including a series of duos and trios with Jascha Heifetz and Emanuel Fruerman. Several leading contemporary composers have written for him among them Roy Harris, William Walton, Ralph Vaughan, and Samuel Barber.

Mr Primrose, at his performance here, will be accompanied by Gui Mombourcin at the piano. The concert is being held under the sponsorship of Columbus Concerts.

Midnight Serenade By Two Lieutenants Fetes Landis Girls

The Spanish senorities of the days of yellow fever were nothing on the fair ladies of Landis Hall. Windows were lined serenaded by the opposite sex.

Last week two army lieutenants serenaded the occupants of Landis Hall at 15 minutes after midnight. They sang "I'll Walk Alone" and explained that it was because they couldn't hold each other. The song ended with the end of a fifth story window who made a disparaging remark about his singing and the lieutenants replied, "You wouldn't be so bold if you were down here."

They harmonized on "In the Evening by the Moonlight" and gave the girls the same version of "Acoen-leha-ala the Poetic."

Quite girl describes the incident as follows: "Windows were flying up all over Landis court, yelling, cheering and clapping during the dozens. "The little affair on the part of the lieutenants to serenade the girls in Landis was very thoughtful, but it was rather late. They got some very odd effects. The girl said, especially when the lieutenants harmonized on the words of "Acoen-leha-ala the Poetic."

point a committee of the Student Council, Campus Council and Executive Council's basis for decision. Council is a bundle measure afters its recent statement seeming to the Senate that the Council so appoint the committee came after debate of an earlier session.

Cordelia Barclay moved that Senate committee confer with Senate committee of the Council to define the limits of their jurisdictions, and that the Constitution which gives CGA all powers not involving public health and safety be changed to read management of residence halls, and that only those powers be given.

Dorothy Carter stated from the floor that such terms could not be interpreted because of the use of the term on students' behalf was guided by Executive Council's unofficial opinion of smoking.

Another Senate member said that Senate should not be fighting against rigid rules and had wanted to return to the use of Senate. Other Senate members seemed to want a rigid declaration.

It was again insisted that if student's part in government was to be effective students ought to know its own jurisdiction and know where it could take initiative.

The motion to appoint a committee to study a definition of the limits of the "health and safety" clause was voted down.

Also debated in Senate was the explanation for and justice of having men students, those with grade averages of less than "C", sort off-campus, ineligible for Senior Hall next year.

What is a Mature Student

No Senate member was sure what privileges a mature student had or exactly who was also eligible. There also seemed to be no definite information as to why students with low grade averages could not uphold the responsibilities of Senior Hall as well as those with better averages. There was brief discussion of the possibility of those who wanted to live in sorority houses to get out of Senior Hall.

The discussion was postponed until members of College Council or the Senate could find out the reasons behind College Council's action on Senior Hall. Next week clarify the terms.

The question of who made the rule that students should not sit in their sports clothes in front of new off-campus houses regarding the Senate article was raised by Janet Pancoast, who asked if the Student Standards council had made it and whether the Council had such power.

Source of Rule

Social Standards Chairman Dot Boardman said the Council had not made the rule and didn't know where it came from. It was pointed out that such rules were often originated by residency Counselors, with the aid of Dean Dorman. In so far as they deemed them beneficial to the halls.

Debate arose about the power of the Council to make rules, and of Emory University, Georgia, will deliver the address.

President Campbell will preside during the convocation.

There will be an academic procession, which will be formed by the students being honored, and faculty members on the program.

Music for the program will be under the direction of the faculty committee. Organ Prelude and Postlude will be played by Mrs Frank Sykora will play the violin accompaniment, and Mrs Winslow.

Miss DuBose said that students and friends who may not have attended a similar Honors Day program or a college commencement program are especially urged to attend.

The members of the committee on Scholastic Honors Day are: Dr Elizabeth Monroe, Dr Ruth Connor, Dr Mark De Graff, Miss Gladys Koch, Dr Hazel Steevnson, and Miss Myrtle Dolbee, chairman.

It was asked why such rules became effective immediately when Senate rules could only become effective when the Gold Book was issued each year. A member of Senate on the Gold Book that she had no idea where they were coming from, but was quoted that students had a right to know where their rules were coming from and who made such rules.

Discussion of source of rules was not finished when the Senate was adjourned. Next Senate meeting will be March 21.

Increases to Come

A rise in divorces, marriages and births in the years immediately following the war is predicted by Dr George K Simpson, professor of sociology at Pennsylvania State college.

FSC Alumna Selected to Enter Wing of British Staff College

Captain Janet Caroline Varn, alumna of Florida State, was among the first three members of the Women's Army Corps to be selected to enter the Auxiliary Territorial Service Wing of the British Staff College.

Captain Varn, who was president of her class at Florida State, was an employee of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company in Jacksonville, Florida, for a year beh's she enlisted in the Women's Army Corps in July, 1942. After graduation from the first Officers Candidate class, she was stationed in Jacksonville, Florida. In March, 1943, she went to Washington, D C, as an executive officer to Lt Col Betty Bandel, WAC Staff Director for the Army Air Forces.

The three WACs are the first American women chosen for the three-months staff officer course of the Auxiliary Territorial Service, the British counterpart of the American WAC. The school corresponds to the United States Army's Command and General Staff school, generally considered by the Army men to be the elite of Army schools.

In speaking of the course, Captain Varn writes: "You really can't imagine the excitement over this course is! Our day begins at 7:20 a m when our 'mid-woman' brings in hot water for our pitcher! At 7:45 a m somebody beats on a frying pan, whereupon I drag my frame from a concrete block, which is a bed, dress, and have a breakfast of porridge and either sausage or ham on toast—and coffee.

"Our first class begins at 9 a m and at 10:45 a m we break for 'eleventh,' which consists of cocoa and itty ambitions if I spread and butter and jam. At 11:15 a m class we begin again and last until 1 p m—when we have lunch. Classes again at 2 p m and until 3:30. Physical training comes at 4 p m -and they really go in for it over here), tea at 4:30, and then, if it is a fine day we study outside until 7 p m. We then have dinner and bed.

"We have classes until noon on Saturday. This has been an interesting week for me and I attended the Men's Staff College one afternoon, and went to an Infantry School (Wing Officers' Staff School) yesterday. The OCTU was here because we will use guns and equipment we have been studying—and fired mortars, machine guns, etc.

"But the highlight of the week (which I should have written about first) came on Thursday when I was presented to the Queen here at the Staff College and we were among those presented. You should have seen the curtsies! It was terrific. The Princess Royal almost threw me over her shoulder when she made a reverent curtsy. It was thrilling and the Queen is most charming. She chatted for a while with me quite a few minutes and I was completely bowled over.

She writes that the only thing she regrets about her new assignment is the fact that she is no longer in the Air Force. "When I was in the Air Force, my flying or coming from their task, I see so proud and thrilled that I want to cry. They are so wonderful, and every time I see them I start bragging!"

couple's dance, revealing both technique and interpretation.

The final number, another work of Mr Tihmar, was American Ballad and performed by Mr Tihmar and Joseph in the 1860's. Three girls held one man bickered lightheartedly.

Mr Tihmar was unable to appear in any of the numbers from Coppelia because of a knee injury sustained when he fell on a slippery stage a few weeks ago. Mr Tihmar said he thought it unusual that he should injure his knee while walking instead of in one of his strenuous dances.

The dancer has been indisposed for several weeks because of his injury and has recently been under treatment in a New Orleans hospital. Mr Tihmar said, however, that the injury was improving and he hoped to be back in his regular dances within a few weeks.

Joseph A Harris, who appeared as Mr Tihmar's substitute, is a graduate of Juilliard. Mr Tihmar expressed the opinion that since 19 is the draft age in Canada, they do not expect him to remain with the group many more months.

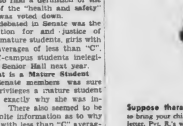
Smith Speaks On Texas Case

University Church Pastor Defends Dr Rainey

Declaring that the ruling board of the University of Texas violated academic freedom by dismissing former President Homer P Rainey, the Rev Blake Smith, pastor of the University Baptist church, Austin, Texas, spoke before the opening session of the Youth Conference Friday night. The topic of Reverend Smith's address was "Academic Freedom, Texas Style".

Dr Smith, president of the Campus Council of Religion which directs religious activities at the university, is Dr Rainey's pastor and has taken an active part in his defense. The address followed speeches giving a panoramic view of the world by the various speakers participating in the conference.

"The situation illustrates a perfect picture of fascism," stated Dr Smith, "and they was the person in the way of the group of wealthy men who have absolute control of the schools. His dismissal was necessary to their dominion of the university and educational system of Texas."



The Texas Board of Regents objected to certain of Dr Rainey's religious addresses outside of the college and held for consideration of them, according to the Reverend Smith. "When Rainey protested that this was a violation of academic freedom, the board voted his dismissal. Student and faculty demonstrations and his complete vindication by the state senate committee, the board has manfastly refused to reinstate Dr Rainey," stated Smith.

"Rainey has the support of the American Association of University Professors, and the solidarity of the faculty and religious organizations are solidly behind him. It is a recent report of the AAUP states that the Regents were denied of academic practice by dismissing Dr Rainey."

Something New

First is was goldfish—but recently a couple of Alabama Polytechnic Institute students tried something new. In order to win bets of 11 and 25 bucks respectively, Bob Sharman and Donald Goodwin existed on nothing but buttermilk for one week.

Put yourself in his shoes

Suppose there weren't enough money so bring your child into the world? In a hurried letter, Pvt. R's wife said how she was going to have a baby. There wasn't enough money to pay for medical care and hospitalization. Helpless, Pvt. R. appealed to the Red Cross. In a few days he received word that they had assured his wife in applying for emergency maternity and infant care.

Suppose you were wounded, disabled, jobless and discouraged? A Marine Private, he was wounded in the South Pacific and discharged for disability. He went home discouraged at the prospect of making his living again. Unable to take up his former trade, in despair he turned to the Red Cross. They put him in touch with the proper agency—he's doing swell, now.

Suppose your mother were ill and without funds? Seaman T. M. received word his mother was dangerously ill and without funds. He remembered advice he'd heard and went to his Red Cross Field Director who requested the boy's local chapter to arrange for care. They did, and grateful sailor, Seaman T. M. is back fighting man. Another example of your Red Cross in action.

Suppose your son were taken prisoner? Imagine the anxiety of the parents of Pvt. E. D., who had had no word from their son since the Red Cross sent a welfare inquiry. And then the International Red Cross received word on Tuesday and on Wednesday the following regularly the American Red Cross packages that helped keep up his spirits. Your money gets the packages to him.

Suppose you were dying for want of blood plasma and fragments from a skull bone? riddled Sgt. R. J. M.'s left arm. He was losing blood fast. Doctors decided to use a tested tree and Red Cross blood plasma. They they carried him on the field station and gave him a second pint of plasma. Without it, he would have died.

Suppose you'd lost your leg? And you couldn't bring yourself to sell your family? It happened to Sgt. J. T. and now his parents were coming to see him in the hospital. He appealed to a Red Cross worker to break the news for him. It was a tough job, but she did . . . and soon Mom was holding his hand while Dad was selling honey suckle—and Sgt. J. T. was smiling happily.

The Red Cross can't do this work without your help!

The actual cases outlined above illustrate just a few of the thousands of ways in which the Red Cross helps our fighting men—at home and overseas. But without your help there would be no Red Cross to do this humanitarian work. For the Red Cross is wholly dependent on the money that you and other sympathetic Americans contribute. And after three years of war, the work of your Red Cross is greater than ever.

Think of the suffering you can alleviate by your contribution—and how proud you can be of your part in this work. Won't you give all you can?

KEEP YOUR RED CROSS AT HIS SIDE

GIVE *NOW*_ GIVE MORE

IF ELECTED, WE HEREBY PROMISE

President of CGA

No one needs to tell you that school is growing. Likewise, there needs to tell you that internal problems will arise as a result of this expansion of the new quarter system. To the elected officers goes the responsibility for cooperation, coordination and adjustment in our government and in our lives on a new campus.

No one needs to tell you that we are fighting a war — after which will come a terrific amount which all of us will have to assist. Our part in college government, as I see it, is as a good ground for future participation in community life. It is more than that, however, for in the means by and through which a student may find expression for herself is an added responsibility of the student office to see that each individual, as far as possible, finds that expression and is not lost in the shuffle. The student government through increased delegation of responsibility, but it will only do so if each student accepts her obligations.

There can be no definite plan or solution which is constantly changing. You—the voters—can only strive to choose the person for office who will exercise good judgement as the needs or problems arise and for the solution to problems, who try to see that our government is not a mere organism but a vital factor in the lives of students as they will be aware of increpencies and fallacies and to correct them; and who will be the connecting link between the students and organizations which go to our campus life.

ANN CAROLYN ALLISON

—o—

To the President of the Student Body is entrusted the responsibility of reflecting and molding that ambiguous thing called a job. I should like to have it.

Ours is a joint government of duty and obligation. As President, I would strive for a better understanding of the principles that they may be coordinated into a unified efficient government. I would bring together for common good activities now interested in their interests. I should like to add the interest a thorough understanding of the student government — its weaknesses and faults, its legislative powers, the principal of faculty-student co-operation. This would create more faulty reasoning, would enable students to participate more intelligently in major political affairs.

Here is presented only a brief element of some plans I should be glad to discuss them further in the candidates' booth for all who are interested.

BEA WEAVER.

—o—

Chairman of Judiciary

The obvious work of Judiciary Board students is rule-enforcement. This is a part, yet the least toward which we are working the necessary cooperation and more individual responsibility for upholding rules, decisions and standards of the college.

The first step toward attaining the goal must be a thorough understanding of all rules by the student. There are reasons for all rules and I would like to familiarize every student with opportunity to understand Judiciary's interpretation of the rule to give such a student any interpretation they do understand.

The student must be a functioning honor code evolving out of her will of self-discipline. This be achieved only through active interest and participation by all in the welfare and efficiency and the Honor committee. Judiciary Board and the honor code. Its present status, purposes, and to act as leaders to further the honor code.

Respectfully submitted,

CATHERINE BARRS.

—o—

Freshman Adviser

For the past year now I have had a future counselor and have come to love working with freshmen.

For this reason I am running for Freshman Adviser.

One of my main objectives, if I am elected, will be to present the honor code to the new freshmen in a way which will make them like to live up to it. I believe that this involves having well informed and competent people present the idea.

Another of my objectives will be full cooperation with and participation in College Government activities by all of the freshmen.

I want to make all know that they are a definite part of and other campus activities. These are my main aims, and if I am elected they are the things I will work toward.

Freshman Adviser

As Freshman Adviser I would endeavor to work for a better understanding between the members of the freshman class and the upper-classmen. I sincerely feel that there should be a closer bond of unity if we are to get the cooperation of all students in our campus activities as well as our problems. The freshman class is a vital part of the campus and can think of no better way to renew and to keep alive the standards of this institution and the spirit of tradition than through the orientation program as carried out through the uniring efforts o' the junior counselors.

Having been a junior counselor this past year, I am fully aware of the time and effort that this office would require along with the opportunities for service which it affords. I am greatly interested in the welfare of the girls who will be the bulwark of the school during the next few years. I feel that I am qualified to make the entire program for the freshman worthwhile to them and to the school as a whole.

ETTA FRASER

I am running for the office of Freshman Adviser because I am interested in our college government and particularly in that part which affects the freshmen.

I feel that I am qualified to fill this office because I have had experience in working with freshman, having been a freshman adviser as well as a junior counselor. I have been class representative to the council, have given me experience in some of the other duties connected with this office.

If elected to this office it will be my privileges to see that next year's junior counselors are instructed in a way that will be of most value to an incoming freshman class. In view of the other duties that are connected with this office, I will be a member of Executive Council, and College Council in my capacity of student opinion and promote fair interpretation of all matters that may arise.

KIT LAND

—o—

"What would you like to see done next year?" is the question asked a group of freshmen while trying to find out just what they feel is lacking from the first year and would like to see the next year. The freshman class officer wants the dates for freshmen elections more organized and remembered. She would like to have the chance to help this organization next year as your freshman adviser.

I realize the duties of freshmen adviser require a great deal of hard work, but I am sure I can budget my time so that I will be able to carry out my duties for the incoming freshmen become us great a freshman class as it is this year. Won't you let me try?

IRENE MENDOZA

—o—

If I am elected as Freshman Adviser, I want to see the present orientation program for freshmen continued, but I would like to see it a more complete orientation for the new freshmen entering each quarter. I also feel that I would like to see inaugurated a system of junior counselors to meet with the Freshman Adviser to discuss problems of common interest, especially during the first few weeks of school.

It seems to me that the importance of the freshman year should be given more emphasis. I believe that the standards and ideals that this college has set up depend on the attitudes and viewpoints developed in our freshmen.

MILDRED TURNER

If you elect me as Freshman Adviser, I shall endeavor to work energetically and humbly for the good. I can to make the new students of 1945, a wholesome freshman class, and the sophomore class of 1946, a fine junior class in 1947, and a worthy senior class in 1948.

I shall only hope to contribute in some small way to the fundamental guidance and development of new freshmen (and perhaps junior counselors too) in their attempts to make and keep our college the fine and happy place it should and can be for themselves and others. I shall make second semester freshmen feel just like first semester freshmen when they are introduced to the school, and I shall do what I can to make and keep worthwhile the standards which rule our college life.

Respectfully,

AUDREY W PERRY

—o—

Chairman of Off-Campus

The Off-Campus committee is that group which unifies the policies of all the different houses and makes living off-campus as nearly like that in the dormitories as possible. As a candidate for the chairman of this committee, I offer you my qualifications. I have lived in a sorority house on the campus which has proved to be smooth living in an off-campus house. Rules cannot be enforced if there is no need for them. There should be sound reasons behind all rules, deciding upon what policies each off-campus house must live by. We should think about the good of all concerned. As far as enforcement of rules and penalties I'm breaking them are concerned, the Off-Campus committee and the chairman should work with a court of justice. For the past year I have been a representative on the Off-Campus comm-ttee. I have learned the order of presided at the meetings also. I have become familiar with such duties as checking up on house reports. Also, I have experienced all the duties the house chairmen have to perform and the type of social problems they are up against. This is just a brief outline of the duties you enjoy and one in which you have a great deal of interest. As chairman of this committee I would be a member of Senate and Judiciary. In fulfilling these duties I would do my best to represent just what policies our off-campus students have and help make my decisions according to what the best needs for the good of all are.

The chairman of the Off-Campus committee should have respect for the students, the faculty, and the standards of our college at all times. She should render helpful service. She should accept all of her responsibilities and duties and should strive for a feeling of friendship and understanding between the faculty and students. It is important that they respect each other's opinions. If elected to this office, I shall do my best to have these qualifications and I am grateful, and I shall not forget a single time that I am serving you, my fellow students.

STELLA BARRINEAU

—o—

The Off Campus Committee is a very important council of upper and lower court. As such, its interpretations and decisions of activities should be closely coordinated with the other courts.

The girl elected to fill this office should be aware of her opportunities and willing to take advantage of them. She should be aware of her responsibilities and willing to accept them.

BETTY ALDAY

—o—

First Vice-President

As the president of Student Senate is the major responsibility of the First Vice-President. I would do everything possible to keep Senate an active body dedicated to the improvement of student legislation. I believe that Student Senate is a proper representing student opinion for the purpose of thoughtfully considering and initiating worthwhile programs and procedures.

As a member of College Council it would be my desire to carry student opinion to the faculty and to turn to bring the assistance of the faculty to the students for consideration. I believe that students' officers can and should contribute a great deal towards improving faculty-student relations.

It would be impossible to foresee at present all the events and problems which will arise during the coming year. Therefore, all I can promise is that I will do my very best to keep Senate actively considering campus problems for the greatest good of our college.

SARAH LEWIS

—o—

Second Vice-President

The office of second vice-president of student government in CGA and the person who is elected to that office will be in a position to help improve affairs on campus not only as a COA officer but as adviser to Sophomore Council.

If elected I shall do my best to bring about better understanding and co-ordination between COA and the student body at large and attempt to bring Student Senate and the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs closer together in viewpoints.

ANN PARKER

—o—

Second Vice-President

As a candidate for second vice-president of College Government Association, an office whose primary function is that of student adviser to Sophomore Council, I should like to see that organization a firm link between all classes and at the same time a reserve of student abilities that is of service to the college.

ROSETTA CARVER

Working with Sophomore Council this year as its chairman has been one of the most valuable and one of the most enjoyable experiences I have ever had and there is doubtless I would again relate more that, the opportunity of continuing this work next year as second vice president of C G A and advisor to the new Council. Being chairman this year has brought me in touch with many of the things with which the second vice president will have to deal, an invaluable experience to a candidate for the second vice presidency.

In addition to being advisor to Sophomore Council, the second vice president is chairman of Elections Council of C G A. No one can know anything of the problems of our campus will be next year so I can only promise to take a sincere interest in college government, to keep myself well informed on the various phases of its problems, particularly student opinion, and to endeavor to do my best to be honestly believe to be the best for our college as a whole.

JEAN COLE

If I am elected to the office of second vice-president of CGA, I promise to do my best to carry out its duties well. Being advisor to Sophomore Council and also a representative to executive council, college council, and student Senate, I will do my best to maintain an attitude of open-mindedness and fairness and to perform my tasks efficiently.

I am interested in holding this office because I have enjoyed serving on Sophomore Council this year, and I would like to have an opportunity to continue serving as its advisor next year and because I feel that it will take a larger part in student government.

JEAN ANN GRAHAM.

I shall make no platform promises, for as each new day appears it brings with it changes and circumstances and problems which alter the requirements upon an office holder. However, I feel that I can do is to prepare herself to meet the problems and the situations met with a clear head and an unprejudiced heart, and to be ready to fill the needs and demands of her office. Whether elected or not, she will be always always to be prepared to serve, and to accept responsibilities and be aware of her responsibilities and willing to assume them.

BARBARA MANN

—o—

Third Vice-President

As a candidate for the office of Third Vice President of College Government Association, and as a member to accept the responsibilities which the office entails as a member of College Council, Executive Council, Senate, and the chairmanship of Social Activities.

It would be my intent to have ever available to the student body students' opinion for the purpose of thoughtfully considering and initiating worthwhile programs and procedures.

Because I believe our part in war effort is a big one, I would like to fulfill in any way, however small, I would endeavor to assume my part in the promotion of these throughout the year.

BOBIN HILL

—o—

If I am elected to the office of third vice-president of CGA I will concentrate on three three phases of war activities:

1. Fewer but more concentrated drives and plans for activities on campus. Not so few that a student will not find one that she is interested in but not so many that she become lost in the mass.

2. More student backing of the war effort on campus. The students are already the tribes such as more but they seem to be lacking the incentive. I will try to arrange the program so that there may be more student participation.

3. Backing of a "Community Program" which will have one big drive a year. By donating to this ONE drive you can make donations to all the tribes such as Red Cross, World Student Relief, etc. that you have separate drives for now.

BARBARA WICKHAM.

Third Vice-President

In addition to aiding the war effort, defense activities can serve as a factor in improving the faculty-student relationship. Working together for a common cause in the realm of conservation faculty members and students will make possible co-operation in Red Cross work, for example, understanding possible. Drives up into other fields would be gained, thereby laying a basis for co-operation in other matters.

Forums stimulate interest in college and community affairs by focusing the student's attention on current problems. Drives up our discussions, brother students from the U of F might be invited to participate in forums on matters of interest to them, such as co-education.

Most of us need a jolt to hurl us out of our day dreams. What's the use of living if we don't win. There is still a long furlough ahead. Let the fighting men be assured that we, too, are willing to go to work. Are you with me?

EUGENIA AVANT.

Chairman of Residence

If I am elected to the office of Chairman of the Residence Halls Committee I shall do my best to fulfill the duties and obligations that is entails. Working with the various hall presidents I hope to develop a clear interpretation and understanding of the rules set by both faculty and students, and to promote the living of the Honor Code.

GLADYS (SKOOKS) LESTER

—o—

The chairman of the Residence Halls committee is endowed with varied responsibilities. However, the duties to do are chiefly work for the good of the student body as a whole. I think it is a big and extremely conscious of the individual good. Thus, the opportunity for service, leadership and building for happy relations, is the challenge this office holds for me.

As background for running for this office, I have served as floor chairman during my sophomore year and as house president my junior year. I have been vice-chairman of the Residence Halls committee. I hope to perform well the duties to the best of my ability.

PEGGY LOU THOMAS

—o—

Secretary

Having held the office of secretary in various organizations, both social and scholastic, I have had sufficient experience to enable my qualifications for the office of the secretary of College Government Association capably. If I am elected, I shall attend to their duties faithfully and to the very best of my ability. I shall endeavor to be of service to Florida State College and to its student body in every way possible.

YVONNE BOATRIGHT

—o—

I believe that I could perform the duties of Secretary of COA which require a person who can write rapidly and neatly. Of the secretarial work but also take an active part in the work of COA as able to represent her class.

My training has been both theoretical and practical—a wide range of clerical subjects in high school and a business course at Civil Service employment was a clerk stenographer.

I am interested in the student body should be more conscious of world affairs and that Young American is a well informed American.

DORIS DU BOIS

—o—

I believe that the job of secretary is one which requires accuracy, neatness, and reliability. The chosen secretary of C G A should be a person who is dependable, punctual, and conscientious.

In the event that I am elected, I shall endeavor to maintain the standards of a secretary and shall do my utmost to fulfill the qualifications of this office.

JANE GUNN.

—o—

Along with the privileges of a position of responsibility that I enjoy on this campus goes the responsibility of upholding such an organization. I would like to accept my responsibility as Secretary of COA.

In high school and here at college I have had the opportunity of the incentive to live up to the range the program so that there may be more student participation.

Two of the things I consider most important among the duties of this office are reflecting student opinion as a member of Executive Council and in promoting student cooperation with the faculty as well as COA. This I will endeavor to do if elected.

JIMMIE ROGERS.

Secretary

The office of Secretary of C G A is a very responsible position and requires of its holder, first and foremost, that she be aware of her responsibilities.

With this in mind, I present myself as a candidate for the office of secretary of C G A. I have had secretarial experience in the past, and if elected, I shall arrange to devote all the time necessary for doing the job to the best of my ability.

MADGE PILCHER

—o—

As a candidate for Secretary of COA, I do not feel that I have any platform or views to set down. The duties of Secretary are specifically stated and have to be carried out accordingly. I will do my best to fulfill these duties efficiently and conscientiously and I will always be willing to help any of the officers or my fellow students in any way I should be elected.

LAURIE ROGERS.

—o—

All I can pledge to the student body is my willingness to do the work which this office requires. My interest in the welfare and promotion of student government to the complete satisfaction of each student body.

I pledge my willingness to do the work which this office requires.

DALIA SANTOS.

—o—

Treasurer

If you, the students, elect me as treasurer of College Government Association, I will endeavor to perform the duties of this office to the best of my ability. I ask only to be elected treasurer.

RUTH DISMORE

—o—

As a candidate for the office of treasurer of the College Government Association, I intend to fulfill the duties and obligations of this office as best I can. If I am elected I will endeavor to put students' interest in formulation of policies as a member of Executive Council, Senate, Council and College Council.

CAROLYN KING.

—o—

If I am elected to the office of treasurer of COA, I shall carry out the duties of this office as efficiently and faithfully as possible. I will use my influence as a member of Student Senate and Executive Council to promote better understanding and cooperation between Senate and Council, the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs. It is only when there is a strong group working together that we will have good College Government.

ALICE WALTON

—o—

Dietaff Editor

In this office there is one duty which above all others is paramount. This is the maintenance and advancement of what shall be termed independence of the literary ideal. To this ideal shall be sacrificed all such banal and transitory vacillations of fashion as are found in "censorship, politics, and external considerations". That is, in carrying out the duties of this office the greatest concern will be with the stage of artistic and technic; or philosophical and literal quality comes primarily. I shall also endeavor to maintain a high standard of the production of material. The ideal of pravda, both in fact and truth, shall be upheld; there shall receive free and full expression always.

Having worked on the Dietaff constantly for three years, both in production and in editorial capacities, I feel that I am capable of handling the responsible routine of this office to the satisfaction of everyone.

WINIFRED MELDRIM.

—o—

Flastacowo Editor

To be the editor of a college yearbook necessitates, among other qualifications, a thorough knowledge and interest in the personnel of the student body. After serving as the editor of our high school annual and three years on the staff of the Flastacowo, I feel as though I understand the various duties of the publishing a yearbook. With the cooperation and support of both the student body and a well-chosen staff, I believe that, as editor of the 1946 Flastacowo, I could direct the publication of an annual picturing the features of campus life that would be of lasting interest and enjoyment to the graduates of Florida State College for Women.

MARGARET BAUGH

Flambeau Editor

If elected co-editors of The Flambeau we plan to maintain and improve the present standards of the paper. We hope to further student expression and encourage guest editorial writers to contribute to the weekly publication.

In the editorial columns of the Flambeau, we will make an effort to bring before the student eye, pertinent and important campus issues as well as other issues relevant to student life. It is our hope that the editorials in the Flambeau will serve as explanatory ones in some instances and thought-provoking ones in other instances. We shall also do all we can to strengthen and improve student-faculty relationships.

The policy of co-editors is done in many newspapers throughout the country with a measurable amount of success. Together we feel that we will be able to give our readers a better newspaper in every respect — in the news editorial and student opinion columns. We plan to share equal responsibility and work together for the best of our ability for the welfare of the Flambeau. We should like to prove the theory that "two heads are better than one."

President of WAA

I am a firm believer in more participation of the student body in sports and in recreation. We have excellen. facilities here on campus for recreation for every student. I believe that through the cooperation of the WAA Board the students can be better acquainted with these facilities that are available to them.

I cannot say if elected, I promise, "...but I will do all on my power to promote a worthwhile and interesting program which will enable more students to participate in the activities sponsored by WA.. I feel that my past experience in work on the WAA board as secretary, and also participating in several organizations which are sponsored by WAA such as "F" club, Tarpon, Life Saving corps, and the Physical Education Association gives me an understanding of this organization. If I am elected, I shall do my best to give you, the students, for you the WAA, a program of activities in which can participate.

JO GUTHRIE

Recreation is something that is of vital importance to everyone in this day and time when we are living under such tension and strain in the present world. Therefore, it is important that we have an active organization here on campus to accommodate the needs and desires of the students. If a program of recreature is built around the needs and interests of the students they will feel more like participating because they will be more a part of the program. This will be the aim and objective in regard to the office for which I am running.

With the quarter system coming into effect next year, many changes in the activities of the WAA's activities will have to be met but the decisions of the board will be in coordination with the other activities of the school.

The runner for the office of president of WAA I feel that my past experience in the WAA board as secretary, Tarpon member, treasurer of WAA, and WAA vice-president of WAA would be of value if I should be elected. I am not a great believer in this "promising stuff" but my chief desire is to promote a program that will be more attractive and beneficial to the participates, you the students.

Spirit of the Week

A MAN? SURE I CAN BE READY IN FIVE MINUTES!

DON'T NEGLECT THE BALLOT BOX

Next week will give us the opportunity to accept one of the greatest responsibilities alloted to citizens in a democratic group life: choosing the candidates who will be the officers for the coming year.

CGA elections come only once a year, and to a degree, whether college government is successful depends on these elections and the extent to which the students accept the responsibility of the ballot. In almost every election on campus, methods little short of lassoing are necessary to obtain a bare 51 percent majority. The privilege of voting seems not to be realized as such. The fact that the right of the ballot box is a responsibility each citizen should carry out is even less realized or acted upon: therefore, the work of college government falls lightly on the shoulders of the majority and heavily on the shoulders of a few.

Not only is it imperative that each student vote in both major and minor elections, but it is even of greater importance that the students think carefully about whom they elect and choose as nearly as possible the person best qualified to hold the office in their opinion after due consideration. It must be remembered that through the ballot an unthinking majority of voters can cause more harm in a democratic society than a thinking minority, because the final power of selection is not given to the thinking minority.

Several efforts are made during the election time to enable students to become acquainted with the candidates and their so-called platforms if elected to office. The candidates make themselves available for questioning in the candidates' booth in lower Westcott before elections. Both major and minor candidates make speeches in convocation and in a special forum for that purpose. Also, in this edition of the Flambeau appear statements from each of the prospective office-holders, and although neither the speeches nor the statements are, as a rule, pertinent or definitely objective in content, it is well to give some attention to these means of measuring the candidates.

If the students not interested in holding offices are nonetheless interested and informed on campus issues, legislative procedures and at least the framework of the constitution, those who hold office will of necessity be able to make more progress and do a better job, having at least a comparatively aware student body with which to work.

The same disinterest or negligence which is prevalent on campus in all probability will carry over after college into community, state, and national matters where life is in no way as sheltered as it is in college and here the action of the individual is of utmost importance. The voting machines here are easily accessible and there is no descrimination as to who is qualified to vote in the student body. Time and thought on the part of each individual, however, are required for better college government.

CHALLENGE TO EDUCATION

One of the few peace plans that in general has definitely been decided upon though not in detail is the G I bill of rights, which will offer to all service returnees an education with expenses paid. Which educational institutions will be used or exactly how much money will be given to the service man is not settled, but that all men under such conditions will be offered an education is sure.

This democratic experiment should prove a challenge to all boys returning back to the states and is thought to be widely accepted by them. But another challenge will be to educators and to educational institutions in this country.

That all educators should grasp the opportunity cannot be over emphasized. Both state and privately endowed colleges and universities will find themselves suddenly crowded with men who for two or three years have abandoned all school work and concentrated their entire efforts on warfare. Many have become fired not only by bullets but by thoughts. They have found out the hard way that each person must not only share the privileges of this country, but the responsibilities as well. They have learned that economics, history, political science are not merely broad terms but vital things that affect all citizens of this country and of this world. They have learned through the many scarifices of this generation that the last generation failed. They have seen college graduates become corrupt leaders of a nation, they have seen college graduates exploit in dangerous business enterprises, and they have seen colleges subdued undr tyranny.

Yet these boys who have suffered under the failures of their predecessors are willing to make another try; are not only willing but are enthusiastic over their new opportunity. And their willingness along with the democratic generosity of this offer together can boost American education a great deal.

But the educational methods of today will be placed under trial, for the returnees are going to demand real education. They will not be satisfied with vague generalities and long worded truths. Mere textbooks and objective tests will not satisfy them. They will want something to put their teeth into, and they will demand it. It's up to the teachers to give this to their new clientele and they must not fail. It will be their job to make a practical trainsfer of knowledge. They will have to substitute theory for actualiyt.

If this can be accomplished education will have made long strides and they will turn out intelligent rational men and women who will be able t ograsp the present situation. Educators will be able to pat their own backs if this can be achieved; Americans will be able to back theri hopes of a democratic way of life with real intelligent.

WE WASTE TIME

The return by College Council to Student Senate Wednesday of Senate's proposed trial period, with no rule governing overnight absences, brought to the floor questions about the extent of Senate's constitutional powers.

It seems reasonable to say that Senate can never be sure of its right to take initiative in any legislation if the extent of broader administration power is not clear. Senate gave evidence of its confusion about constitutional powers in the recent six-months discussion and action on the overnight ruling. When the student legislative body must spend hours debating suggestions and taking final action on matters which are of dubious constitutionality, there is time and energy wasted.

Much of the recent confusion ahuot what is constitutional has centered around the elastic "health and safety" clause in Article II of the CGA constitution. The college authorities, in this section, intrust to CGA management of all matters not academic in nature concerning students, with three reservations. The reservations include regulation of student public health and safety, management of college residence halls, and use of college property and equipment. These terms are open to many different interpretations, students have concluded in observing that in past years they are said to have included even cigarette smoking and dancing.

Student bewilderment about the source of many rules which do not seem to come from Senate, Executive Council, or College Council was also reflected in Senate. A Senator inquired the source of a social regulation; the Social Standards Council chairman said she too hadn't known where it had come from or why its unknown source was empowered to make it. Another senator stated flatly that everybody knows many rules aren't in the Gold Book, and that she didn't know where tney came from.

Since in the Constitution it is stated that Senate may legislate only when such rulings are not in conflict with prior faculty or administrative rulnigs, surely Senate members have cause for curiosity about sources of existing rules. Since Senate's power is limited constitutionally by reserved powers of the Administration and also hy past rulings, Senators are left in confusion if limits are not defined and i: sources are unknown.

Yet Student Senators voted NOT to ask a committee to find out the extent of powers other than its own, and in the process to find its own powers.

We do not see why any measure to clarify the CGA constitution should be in the least objectionable. As long as Senators let their rulings remain on dubious ground, they waste their own time and that of other legislative bodies. The work of one committee might save hours of fruitless Senate debate—why not appoint one?

The Students Speak . . .

For some time there has been much discussion on the subject of making Florida's state colleges co-educational Now this discussion has assumed statewide proportions For this reason this week's column deals with the question:

WHAT IS YOUR OPINION OS CO-EDUCATION, IT'S ADVANTAGES AND DISADVANTAOES?

Young people should have the opportunity for associations along social and educational lines at the same time Graduates going into the business world find themselves unequipped to meet men in many situations. A long discussed problem has been the one of a person not socially educated Very few of our girls in Tallahassee find the opportunity to spend much time in mixed social gatherings. If boys and girls were allowed education together there might be fewer "misfits."

A co-ed school presents a more normal aspect of life in studies, and in social activities. There should be at least one co-ed state school in Florids, and one women's college. I am very much in favor of co-education at the University of Florida

WILDA HAYES (Senior)

I approve of co-education because it affords a more rounded preparation for life in a mixed society.

COPELYN RAMSEY (Sophomore)

In my opinion co-education would offer a wider variety of courses which are not available in a women's college.

ANNELLA BARBER, (Freshman)

I firmly believe in co-education It presents a natural environment for boys and girls, for after all, they will be working with one another after college. In the classroom there will be broader opinions expressed and thereby, a wider experience for all. As for the argument of "too much dating and not enough concentration on work" I don't believe that is true.

RUTH RICE (Senior)

Although co-education has some advantages as follows: It serves as an aid to meeting mén and provides a man for every occasion and also the existence of men on a campus might create an incentive for more neatness among the girls. Courses for men that attract feminine students would be available to both—there are many more disadvantages. Aside from the evident fact that men were around to "cramp" style somewhat, there would be a tendency for better scholastic work to take a "back seat" and give way in many cases for obvious reasons. A drop in the self-sufficiency scale would appear, and girls' ability and leadership would be subordinated. In the sportsm world, the spotlight would tend to be directed much in favor of the boys' sport teams rather than the girls'.

I think that a state co-educational college would be an excellent idea if a plan can be successfully worked out. Florida at present is the only state in the co try that does not have a state university for both boys and girls. Why don't we employ the plan used by the 47 other states?

NELL M'NEIL, (Sophomore)

I think all schools should be co-educational Co-education would tend to instill more school-spirit and interest in the school.

Cologne, Germany's fourth largest city, became one of the Allies' richest prizes since D-Day when it was captured by the American First Army. As Cologne fell Gen George S Patton's men raced toward Coblenz. In the last few days the American Third Army has come within 12 miles of Coblenz.

The capture of Cologne was made official after the spearheads of Lt Gen Hodges' third armored division knifed past the Dom Cathedral and reached the west bank of the Rhine in the center of the city. There was little of the usual house to house fighting as the city was taken. In the assault three columns of Americans smashed into the shell-torn streets as three Allied armies continued the systematic reduction of the German bridgehead west of the last great natural barrier between Gen Dwight D Eisenhower's armies and the Ruhr basin.

The elimination of all German forces on the west bank of the Rhine is in sight but it has become apparent that the momentum generated by General Eisenhower's offensive will not be great enough to carry the Allies' spearheads across the river without a pause for reorganization. The battle that is now being won is merely a preliminary to the greater assaults on the Rhine crossing.

On the ninth anniversary of Hitler's remilitarization of the Rhineland, American troops cleared out all of shattered Cologne and were drawn up firmly along a 90-mile stretch of the wide Rhine from Cologne to the Dutch border with the exception of a major enemy pocket at Wesel.

MEIKTILA CAPTURED

A big British armored and motorized force ended a dramatic 11-day thrust through Japanese-held central Burma by the capture of the important railroad and airfield center, Meiktila, 80 miles south of Mandalay. The plunge across the Irrawaddy to Meiktila had been held back by the censors until last Saturde when it was released.

It is estimated that 30 000 or more Japanese troops in the Mandalay area have been cut off north of Meiktila and have no well-developed road or rail escape routes except eastward across the Shan pleateau into Siam

The capture of the Meiktila area promises the eventual destruction of Lt Gen Katamura's Fifteenth Japanese Army defending central Burma, and the army represents about half of the effective Japanese combat strength in Burma. Meiktila is an important railroad center and is one of the main Japanese air bases in Burma for it is surrounded by eight airfields. One of these had been captured several days before the capture of the town More than 500 Japanese were killed in the push to Meiktila while at the city itself probably 1 000 were killed before enemy resistance ceased.

FORMULA GIVEN

At the Inter-American Fonference on Problems of War and Peace in Mexico City this past week, the formula for dealing with the controversial Argentine question can be stated as follows: Argentina will receive an opportunity to abide by the decisions of the conference: and if she does so, declares war on the Axis, and signs the declaration of the United Nations, obligating her to abide by the principles of the Atlantic Charter and not to make a separate peace with the Axis, she will be welcomed back into the American family of nations.

39 NATIONS TO ATTEND

Thirty-nine nations have been invited to the San Francisco Conference on April 25 A place has been reserved for Poland when that country reorganizes its provisional government, but Argentina did not receive a call Secretary of State Edward Stettinius stated that the complicated voting formula reached at Yalta requires unanimous Big Five's consent on matters involving the use of forre. This will be one of the main topics at the conference.

COLLEGE COMMENTS . . .

By RUTH KELLER

Dr Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, will speak this next week at Florida Southern College in Lakeland during that college's celebration of its sixtieth year of foundation. Having been 29 years old at the time he took office, Dr Hutchins was the youngest president ever to take office at that university. Founders' Week at Florida Southern will also commemorate the 20th year of the administration of Dr Ludd M Spivey, president of the college When Dr Spivey arrived in 1925, there were two buildings on the Southern campus, no sororities or fraternities, and few privileges for the students.

The Southern

In answer to the question "What does the University need most?" students at the University of Kentucky made various replies, ranging from new academic buildings to more informal dances The suggestion most often given, however, was more MEN

College is just like a laundry: you get out of it just what you put into it, but you'd never recognize it.

The Branding Iron

Cheer up, girls: our college brothers aren't so bright either. This conversation was overheard in a fraternity house:

"I'm taking my wall home with me in May because it has all my phone numbers on it."

Silence.

Fellow brother (his brow all wrinkled from much thought): "Why don't you just take the phone numbers off the wall?"

The first brother was staggered by this stupidity. "Because drip, they're written in ink!"

The associate editor of the Utah Chronicle may have something there. . . .

Two freshman coeds at the University of Utah slowly descended the library stairs. One looked at the other with a tragic expression. "I've never had one never in all my life have I had one"

The other girl looked rather confused. "Never had one what?" she inquired.

"I have never had a dramatic experience how on earth can I write about one?"

Could it be that our English professors are carrying scholastic requirements just a bit too far, when they demand that each and every freshman have had a dramatic experience in his or her life, that he may glorify it in a theme?

The Utah Chronicle

It happens other places, too. At Huntington College in Birmingham, Alabama, the Grand Council requested that the students stop walking across the grass Bing Crosby had a hard time keeping trespassers off his newly-planted grass once Finally, he put up a sign which read: "Please keep off the grass Remember when you, too, were struggling for recognition." That's a thought to keep in mind when we start across the short cut.

The Huntress

One janitor at the University of Wyoming took all that he could stand. Then he wrote a poem, which he entitled, "I'm Tired." To give an idea of just what he was tired of, here are a few stanzas of his poem:

I'm tired of legs
White, black, or brown
That take up the walk
And eyes of a town.

I'm tired of powder,
Paint and bobbed hair,
Plucked eye-brows, dames' knees
And collar bones, bare.

I'm tired of gowns
That hang like a rag,
Gowns that are sloppy
And high heels that sag.

The Branding Iron

As the time for voting for College Government officers at Texas State College for Women draws near, a plea is made by one of its students for intelligent voting. Such reasons as "I enjoyed that skit, I'll vote for her" and "She wears good-looking clothes, she's the one for a student body office" are not qualifications of a capable officer was the warning given the students.

The Lass-O

An idea voiced on the University of Alabama campus favors the grading of the professors by students. The grades for each teacher in each of his classes would be averaged at the end of the quarter, thereby determining the effectiveness of his teaching

The result, they believe, would strongly benefit pupil and teacher.

"A professor conscious of the fact that he will be graded by his student is going to work harder at teaching, just as a student thinking of 'grades goin' home' will study harder."

The Crimson-White

The University of North Carolina, which has been operating on the quarter system, is now shifting back to the semester system, according to a bulletin received recently.

Florida State College will operate on its planned quarter system for the first time next year.

A Winter Carnival Week came to a climax at the University of Wisconsin when champions from the University and from nearby ski teams comp ed in a ski jumping contest. This thrilling event, as the skiers climbed up the ski jump, gracefully glided down, leaped over the edge, and landed far below into Lake Mendota, is a must course for every Wisconsinite's curriculum.

Or Forever Hold Your Peace

Dear Editor,

More student opinion should be voiced an this campus. Student views are heard wherever an audience exists . . in the dining hall, in dorms, and in student gatherings. None, howover, have taken advantage of the freedom our press is supposed to have. The college paper should be the voice of the students. I realize that the paper welcomes guest editorials and letters to the editor. Can something be done to encourage students to take this opportunity of free expression of their opinions on controversial campus problems?

Religious Activities Feature Speakers, Services, Holiday

Guest speakers, special Lenten observances and the celebration of a Jewish holiday characterize the religious activities for this and next week.

The local Hillel organization and the University of Florida Hillel celebrated jointly the Jewish holiday Purim last weekend at Florida State College. Two boys from the Gainesville Hillel participated in the Friday night services, which were followed by a reception. Saturday night at a dance both groups presented skits. The Hillel members were entertained by Mrs Sam Rosenberg with an all-day barbecue Sunday at her home near Tallahassee.

Rev U S Gordon, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Gainesville, will be a campus guest this weekend, and Rev Hugh Powell, new director of Religious Education in the state of Florida, will be a guest ths weekend of March 17.

Reverend Gordon will address the Westminster Fellowship at their supper forum the Sunday evening. Reverend Powell, the following weekend, will address the Sunday evening forum to enlist helpers from among the students to assist him in the vacation church schools to be held throughout the state next summer. He will also have a special meeting with Presbyterian students for this purpose.

Miss Juliette Mother, the Southernwide Young People's leader of the Woman's Missionary Union of Birmingham, will be at the Tallahassee Baptist Student Union for the weekend of March 18. Miss Mother is to present the book Pray Yes to the Young Women's Auxiliary of the Baptist Student Union

At Ruge Hall two corporate communions will be held next week. On Sunday there will be a corporate communion for all off campus houses and Wednesday corporate communion will be for the faculty. Next Friday at the weekly forum Judge B A Meginniss will speak on St Paul and the State.

The Rt Rev Frank A Juhan, Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Florida, has asked that a Sunday in March be designated as Army-Navy Commission Sunday. During the week of March 11 through 18 offerings will go to the Episcopal chaplains in all branches of the armed services.

Freshman Carnival To Be Held Tonight

Freshman Carnival, the annual festival presented by the freshman class, will be held Friday in the Florida State College gymnasium.

Although the theme of the carnival is still a secret, work has already been started by members of the various committees.

"This is the only project the freshman class is undertaking this year, and I surely am glad to see that so many freshmen are taking part in the preparation for it. We hope that this will be the best carnival a freshman class ever sponsored," Ida Lee Rentz, president of the class, declared.

Heading the committees are freshmen who have been elected to an office this year. In charge of the decorations committee are Bams McCarthy and Jean Ann Ramsdale, costumes; Jo Ann Long and Irma Lee Shepherd, concessions; Amarene Thompson and Jean Sharer, publicity; Betty Kennedy and Beth Fuhrer, planning committee; Jimmy Rogers and Martha Peacock.

The planning committee has met twice, at which time the theme and script were approved.

Tryouts for parts in the carnival were held yesterday in the little gymnasium. However, members of the case have not yet been announced.

Honorary Pledges

The Kappa Delta Pi had pledge services yesterday afternoon in the Student Alumnae clubroom inviting new pledges to the education honorary. New members are: Mrs Margaret Powell Arrington, Maurice Ashton, Leida Helen Atwater, Mrs Lottie May Dykes, Doris Helen Hill, Barbara Irvin, Mary Elisabeth Marshall, Harriet Martin McCarter, Joan Victoria Shanor, and Anne Gladney Widerquist. Two other pledges who are now interning are Margie Sue Oxford and Alice Willis Kammerer.

Dean at Meeting

Dean Karl O Kuersteiner, dean of the School of Music, left yesterday for Birmingham, Alabama, where he will attend a four-day meeting of the National conference of the Southeastern Division of Music Education.

Dean Kuersteiner, who has been appointed consultant from Florida, stated that the conference is being held for the purpose of planning a music program for the post war world in particular; however, plans are being made for the present emergency also.

The dean stated that music holds an important place in the world today and it is hoped that they will be able to lay out an over all plan for music's place in national life

Campbell Speaks

Miss Margaret Campbell, instructor in modern languages at Florida State College, spoke on Chile last night before the Parent-Teacher Association of Haines City.

Arrangements for this trip to Haines City were made through the Alumnae office by Miss Louise Gehan.

Miss Campbell studied at the University of Chile on an exchange scholarship in 1942. During that time she attended classes and did research work in preparation for her Doctorate. Miss Elena Whatt was the exchange student from Chile to FSC.

Stamps on Sale

How's about another bond? Or perhaps another war stamp? Every bond and stamp bought brings the war closer to its end. The Stamp Shack in lower Westcott is being operated by the Alpha Gamma Delt's this week and will be taken over by the Zeta Tau Alpha's next week. Buy another War Stamp instead of going to that movie and help put FSC "over the top!"

New Hall Has Tea To Choose Mascot

New Hall featured a Wednesday tea contest to choose the hall mascot. Frmo a number of entrees of animals belonging to the dormitory girls a tiny stuffed cat was chosen. The cat is owned by Joan Delaney who received it from her grandmother. It was a gife to her grandmother from a young man in Switzerland.

Once when Joan's grandmother was having her house cleaned of termites the workmen left an apologetic note saying they were sorry but they had accidently killed the life-like stuffed cat.

Music Class Gives Program on Radio

A special musical program will be presented over Garnet and Gold from the college campus at 3 p m next Friday. Sponsored and presented by the third, fourth and fifth grade tonette classes of the Demonstration School, this program will be under the direction of Mrs Jean H Scrogin, director of the Demonstration School band.

Mrs Scrogin will give an explanation of the uses of the tonette in musical instruction and will announce the numbers to be played by the children. A tonette is a vocal instrument used as an introduction to the playing of instrumental music.

The Garnet and Gold program Thursday night featured Miss Margaret Dunn, instructor in piano, as "editor" of its music section. Miss Dunn played Chopin's "Nocturne in A-minor. News of the college and an "editorial" concerning the American Red Cross drive were presented by the radio coordinator.

Recitals to Be Held

By request of the students and vote of the faculty, the Weekly recital of the Music School students will be held every Monday at 5 p m in the recital hall of the music annex.

Monday, March 12, the program will include piano and voice solos. The singers are Mildred Mann with Wilda Hayes, accompanist; Katherine Gremli, Ann Fifield, accompanist; Anna Watkins, Miss Dunstan, accompanist; Ysobel DuPree, Anne Bower, accompanist; Betty Ruth Augenbaugh, Fawn Trawick accompanist. Piano students are Eleanor Braggs and Eleanor Loyless.

Contest Not New

The idea of a male pin-up contest did not originate at Florida State College. Houston State Teachers' College, Huntsville, Texas, recently conducted such a contest though it was not for the same reason as that at FSC. The Houston contest was divided into sections with the winners representing servicemen overseas, servicemen within the States, and campus men.

Fashion Flashes

By BERYL KITCHEN

In fashion strategy a gal from Florida State usually rates A-1 . . . and has for years had quite a reputation for being exceptionally well-dressed. Whether in winter, summer, spring, or fall, she manages to select the clothes which play up her personality, looks, and figure to the best possible advantage.

Many factors enter into this first-class rating awarded to the fashion-wise FSCW collegienne. For one thing, she's an individualist, rather than one in a long assembly line. For this reason, she selects clothes which "accentuate the positive" . . . and sticks to them. She looks for grace and sophistication in her clothes, and understands the flattery of line and color in fashions.

In an over-all view of Miss Florida State's fashion tastes at the moment, one finds that:

She's wild about the ageless and unbeatable combination of navy and white, sometimes with a dash of crimson added . . . the new "doll" waists . . . black playclothes . . . jackets of all sizes, shapes, and descriptions, because they're a sure-fire asset to almost everything . . . baby cap sleeves and the new high necklines . . . wrinkle-resitant clothes, which she can pack for quick week-end jaunts away from campus . . . peplums (on other people) . . . vivid plaid tafettas, that literally rustle of Spring . . . the new Carmen-Miranda platform shoes guaranteed to give her a "lift." . . .

She's sun-worshipping in provocative midriff playsuits . . . sun-back dresses, which show off the beginning of her summer tan . . . "little boy" shorts in gay Mexican colors . . . the new bare-thigh bathing suits, which are next to nothing for getting maximum benefits from Ole Sol's rays. . . . (Note: check tennis courts, camp, or upper arcades for examples of styles mentioned.)

She's smart enough to buy only a few new things for springs, and those few very good . . . to give her wardrobe a once-over, before doing much "spring splurging" . . . to realize that there has never been a Spring when white meant so much and could be used so dramatically . . . to have a "basic" ensemble to which she may add and subtract to make it suit her mood . . . to know that big bold checks in bang colors are taking a bow now in fashion circles . . to "latch on" to foolproof clothes which make a huge hit each and every time she wears them. . .

She's caught the very spirit of Spring in her crisp casuals of linen-like fabrics in light spring-hued colors . . in her saucy flower hats . . . in her enchanting flower print silks in lush tropical shades . . . in her navy sheers with eyelet bodices (especially smart in Azalea Pink!) . . . in the ravishing prints which help her radiate the contagious gaiety of spring itself.

Health Education Group Makes Survey

A survey on immunization was taken, by Miss Fannie B Shaw's health class in conjunction with the country healthy service, at the regular Tuesday night house meetings. The survey covered small pox, typhoid fever, and diptheria. typhoid fever, and diptheria.

An announcement was made concerning the dates for elections. Special attention was called to the fact that the vote would not be valid if less than fifty-one percent of the students voted.

Announcements were also made concerning the oratorical contest being sponsored by The World Student Affairs Council and The Hillel Organization, and the YWCA forum at which Dr Miller will speak on Protestantism Students were warned about the heedless destruction of grass.

After the meeting a vote was taken for Sophomore Council Girls in the Freshman Dormitories.

Tennis to Begin

Tennis intramurals begin this Friday at 5 p m on the tennis courts back of the gymnasium. Louise Fernandez is in charge of the officials for the games.

Teams from all of the dormitories will participate. All girls who have the required practice points will be eligible.

Three Sororities Climax Round Of Initiations This Weekend

Initiations still hold the spotlight in sorority activities for the past week. This weekend finds Alpha Chi Omega, Tri Delta, and Kappa Delta holding the last initiations on campus.

The Alpha Chi's will initiate eight girls tonight. They are Polly Blank, Lillian Brown, Margery Potter, Jesse McCalla, Louise Rampey, Gloria Wells, Twyla Bair, and Martha Peacock. There will be a coffee at the house Sunday afternoon from 4:30 until 5:30 p m in honor of the new initiates. Patronesses and alumnae will be guests also.

Tri Delts Initiate

Climaxing "Delta Week," which included a round of parties and activities in honor of the pledges, eighteen girls will be initiated into Tri Delta tomorrow. New initiates will be Patty Allen, Libbie Henderson, Joyce Pepper, Franklin Smith, Betty Shirley, Betty Phillips, Mary Jean Floyd, Norma Hotard, Shirley Crawford, Virginia Hel.., Doris O'Neil, Vivian Collins, Jean Ann White, Madge Pilcher, Arnette Walling, Dottie Hasbrouck, Betty Marshall Childress, and Jean Ann Ramsdale.

Thursday night the pledges presented a skit for the entertainment of the members. At this time Jean Ann Ramsdale was awarded the bracelet for being the best all-round pledge.

Tri Delts coming to Tallahassee for initiation are Lucille Parsons from Tampa, Marjorie Morrison from DeFuniak, and Mrs Ramsdale from Plant City. Following initiation Saturday night everyone will spend the night at the house and the chapter is planning a day at camp Sunday. Jean McPike and Barbara Britton were pledged last week.

Kappa Delta

Kappa Delta will initiate new members tomorrow afternoon. Those being initiated are: Evelyn Marie Badcock, Jeanette Chapman, Edith Collings, Betty Jo Creig, Peggy Grimsley, Anne Holton, Barbara Jane Lindsay, Ann Mikell, Katherine Nolan, Margaret Olson, Murl Price, Peggy Reid, Norma Schaeffner, Joan Sparkman, and Clara Lou Taylor.

New officers will be installed Monday night. They are: Maurine Ashton, president; Louise McMichael, vice-president; Lois Earle Wilson, secretary; Ruble Plant, treasurer; Marie Badcock, assistant treasurer and Edna Price, house chairman.

Delta Zeta initiated eight last Saturday afternoon. They were Lillian Blackwelder, Betty Copps, Dorothy Coster, Grace DeWolf, Eileen Smith, Ann Singleton, Dorothy Vincent, and Alice Walton.

Mrs Hilda Johnson, a national officer from Thomasville, was present for the initiation. A formal initiation banquet was given at the Floridan Wednesday night. The old actives are entertaining the new actives at an informal get together tomorrow night.

Initiation service was held for 14 last Saturday afternoon at the Phi Mu house. Those initiated were Mary Ann Atkinson, Yvonne Boatright, Patricia Conner, Tess Daniels, Barbara Gaillard, Alene Goodman, Nancy Hazard, Barbara Lanford, Zeane Lanier, Mary Jane Lassiter, Margaret Leslie, Betty Jean Linderman, Betty Ann Sinclair, and Harriet Warnock.

A banquet in honor of the new initiates was given Monday night at the Cherokee hotel. Yvonne Boatright was presented the trophy for being the most outstanding pledge and Betty Sinclair's name will be engraved on the scholarship plaque for having the highest average. Guests at the banquet were Mrs G H Scudder, district president who was spending several days here, and Mrs J A Caldwell, house mother.

Alpha Gam's Award

Following their initiation ceremony last Friday night, the Alpha Gamma Delta's held their traditional Rose Banquet at the Cherokee Hotel at which time the annual awards were presented. Jean Sharer received the scholarship plaque for having the highest average among the pledge group and Virginia Budd was awarded the diamond in her pin for being the most outstanding pledge.

Mrs H G Flemmer, international officer of the sorority, left Monday for Austin, Texas, after spending the past weekend here, where she will continue her tour of Alpha Gam chapters in the United States and Canada. An after-dinner coffee was given in her honor Saturday night at which time deans and faculty members, patrons of the sorority, house chaperones, and sorority presidents were invited to attend.

Kathleen Robb was recently pledged AGD. An informal party is planned for this Saturday night with Bonnie Hunt, social chairman, in charge of preparations.

Alpha Delta Pi honored its new initiates with a breakfast last Sunday at the Three Torches. Annual awards were presented to three pledges. The cup for the best all-round pledge was given to Janet Boyd. The plaque for having the most activity points to Jane Bryson and the scholarship cup to Anne Fielding. Betty Bazemore and Dale Taylor were recently pledged by the sorority.

Alpha Xi Delta pledged Charlotte Younkman last Thursday.

Miss Willie D Johnson, district president of Kappa Alpha Theta, was a visitor here from Saturday through Thursday. The Theta's entertained Sunday night with a supper, and Monday night with an after-dinner coffee.

The Zeta Tau Alpha's honored Mrs H C Seepe, Iota province president, with an after-dinner coffee last Thursday night. Ruth Ervin, social chairman, was in charge of the entertainment. She was assisted by Sarah Boswell, Joanne Newman, Betty Bweck, Nellie Beville, Betty Bolles, and Duffie Groover.

New officers of Z T A are: Polly Council, president; Jacquie Belehoe, vice-president; Sarsh Boswell, secretary; Ruth Mann, treasurer; Nancy Lee Wheeler, historian; Sue Walters, rush chairman; Ruth Ervin, social chairman; Virginia Summer, house chairman; Betty Bolles, activities; and Catherine Royall, guard.

Cotillion Teaches

Cotillion's Thursday evening dancing class looks as if it's going to be a very successful project, according to Betty Lou Christian, president of the organization.

The purpose of this class is to teach girls to dance, and Cotillion especially urges girls to come who can dance very little.

The class meets every Thursday night at 7:30 in the Reynolds recreation hall

Rare Books Are Shown

Library Displays for The Florida Centennial

As a continuation of the display of books in honor of the Centennial celebration of Florida's statehood, there are six rare books on the history of Florida, from the McGregor Collection of Early Americana, now in the library.

Two of the books are tales of the lives and tribulations of two women: "A Narrative of the Life and Sufferings of Mrs Jane Johns", published in 1837, and "An Affecting Narrative of the Captivity and Sufferings of Mrs Mary Smith", whose publication date is not known.

From John Bartram's journal, kept all during his travels, comes the story "A Description of East Florida" which tells of his journey from St Augustine up the St John's river to the Lakes. This book was published in 1769.

Following in his father's, John Bartram's, footsteps, William Bartram wrote "Travels Through North and South Carolina, Georgia, East and West Florida", which was published in 1792.

"An Account of the First Discovery and Natural History of Florida" was written by William Roberts and illustrated by T Jefferys.

The book, "Florida Breezes" or "Florida, New and Old", by Ellen Call Long and published in 1882, tells of Tallahassee in particular as it narrates the story of "ancient" Florida.

Also in connection with the Centennial celebration, three maps have been put on display in the library. Of these, two were by Guillaume Del'Isle, geographer of the Royal Academy of Sciences one showing Mexico, Florida and countries around Mississippi, published in 1703, and another of Louisiana and the course of the Mississippi, published in 1718. The third map is "Florida—Peninsula and Gulf of Florida 'Bahama Waterway' with Bahama Islands". Although published by Thomas Jefferys in 1777, the earlier impression of this map was 1775, when it appeared in England.

In the Browsing Room there are two new books on display—"America Sings" an Annual Anthology of College Poetry, and "Philobiblon of Richard de Bury", translated by Andrew West.

The displays in the Browsing Room are varied in order to please all types of readers. There is one group of biographies of scientists, which consists of the lives of some of the greatest pioneers in the field of science. Another display is directly concerned with the Artist Series to be presented this week.

"Nature's Garden", published in 1927 and written by Neltje Blanchan, opened at a colored picture of an azalea, is for the benefit of "nature lovers" who would like to see it.

Hinson at Meeting

Dr M R Hinson, professor of education and director of graduate division, has gone to Memphis, Tennessee, as a Florida representative for the committee on Accreditation of Secondary Schools. Dr Hinson will attend the meeting, which is sponsored by the Southern Association of Secondary Schools, tomorrow Sunday and Monday.

Flambeau Wagon Becomes Agent Of Red Cross to Injured Girls

A little red wagon has traveled many miles over the campus of Florida State College in the past two weeks.

This little red wagon from the Flambeau office isn't carting its usual load of newspapers anymore. Today it has a new and urgent duty.

On this little vehicle rides Darley Lochner or Alice Comstock, pulled sometimes by Maria Lochas, sometimes by other helping hands who gladly play their part in getting Darley and Alice to class on time.

Darley is on crutches for about two weeks ago she injured her toe while playing tennis. Alice is suffering from a sprained ankle.

In a moment of inspiration, they solved their transportation problem by converting the Flambeau wagon into an agent of the Red Cross.

Miller Entertains Freshmen With Tea

Mrs Lou E Miller, English instructor, was hostess at a garden tea party at her home Wednesday afternoon. Members of her advanced Freshman English class were present.

Guests arrived at 5:30, and were conducted about the home and garden by Mrs Miller and her daughter, Susan. A set of new kittens, the victory garden and a fine collection of old bottles owned by Mrs Miller, were points of interest.

Refreshments, consisting of fruit punch and chocolate cake were served in the informal garden of Mrs Miller's mother, Mrs Whitfield.

Those present were Connie Baker, Marion Cross, May Dolsty, Jean Douglas, Martha Jo Dunagan, Ann Fielding, Jean Fliess, Alene Goodman, Betty Sue Gray, Winifred Lane, Marian McEwen, Alma Moreno, Joanne Newman, Martha Peacock, Elaine Segal and Josephine Story.

Richey Will Discuss Japonese Customs

Miss Helen L Richey, instructor in textiles and clothing at Florida State College, will speak on "Japanese Traditions, Customs, and Dress" at the Home Economics club meeting Wednesday at 8 o'clock in the Student Alumnae building auditorium. Barbara Irving is program chairman for this meeting.

Miss Richey lived in Japan for a period of 12 years. For six years she taught home economics in a girls' school which was pioneer in this field. She spent the next six years doing evangelistic work and some teaching in Fukushima, the heart of the silk-raising territory in Japan.

In regard to the recent news that primary schools in Tokyo were being closed, Miss Richey stated that she felt sure that the children were being evacuated to their ancestral homes because of the recent bombings, much as the children of London were during the blitzkrieg there.

Eyman Returns

Dr Ralph S Eyman, dean of school of education and professor of education, has just returned from Fort Lauderdale where he and county superintendents, supervisors and principals met on Monday and Tuesday to make arrangements for a county wide conference on workshops.

These workshops will be held the last of August and the first of September in Broward county in order to better the educational programs of the county.

The common lilac is said to have come from Persia in the 16th century.

Wave of Sickness Besieges Members Of Sorority Group

"Don't be a sorority girl if you want to keep your health."

This statement could easily be made after the experiences of members of one chapter during the last week.

On initiation day last Saturday there were five of the members who were temporarily released from the college infirmary for the ceremony. Their aches and pains varied from a broken toe, a sprained ankle, two cases of tonsillitis, a case of mumps which turned out to be wisdom teeth which caused the jaw to swell.

The situation on the health front remained relatively calm until late Saturday night when a taxi brought two very nauseated chapter members to the infirmary door.

At the initiation tea Sunday afternoon the initiate elected best pledge was unable to attend because of two sprained ankles. Sunday night an active packed her suitcase with all sickbed essentials. She was tired of fighting a cold.

Another active joined her on Monday with an attack of influenza. Her roommate is sporting an arm covered with band-aids which protect allergy scratches. The infirmary is attempting to discover the cause of an irritation on her upper eyelids.

The local chapter of the sorority is seriously considering requesting a special room in the infirmary so that the sick sorority sisters may enjoy each other's company while recuperating.

Odd Soccer Leader Elects Team Today

Members of the Odd soccer team will be elected today after soccer practice. These girls will participate in the coming class games and Odd-Even game.

Margaret Fernandez, Odd leader, disclosed that the Odds have been stressing goal rushing the last week along with corner kicks.

"I believe we have a good chance to win," she asserted.

"More girls turned out for Even soccer this year than ever before," Babe Evans, Even soccer leader, announced yesterday.

Practices in the last few days have been concerned with improving the team passes, dribbling, place kicking and tackling.

Still remaining from last year's team are Babe Evans, Catherine Barrs, Eloise Boyles, and Gladys Lester.

Soccer class games will be held March 13 and 15 and the Odd-Even game will be March 17 at 4 p m.

Students Do Social Work

FSC Girls Learn Function Of Local Agencies

Students in field practice in the social case work class under the direction of Miss Caroline Blue, field supervisor, are now working with local agencies, including Caroline Brevard and Sealey elementary schools, Leon County Welfare Association, the State Board of Welfare, two day nurseries, and the home service department of the Red Cross.

The work each student will do is determined by the function and policies of the agency involved, according to Miss Blue. The students go out from agencies as representatives of those agencies and work within their functions.

The girls' work in the elementary schools consists of visits with parents in the homes to determine the causes of reasons for absenteeism of children, to investigate the need of financial assistance for hot school lunches, and to bring about better understanding and cooperation between the school and the home.

Work with the Leon County Welfare Association will include personal interviews with interested persons to determine their eligibility for financial assistance.

In the Unit Office of the State Board of Welfare and the Home Service Department of the American Red Cross the students will begin with their duties as receptionists.

As workers in the day nurseries, students hope to become acquainted with the daily program of this type of agency and gain a deeper insight into its functions.

Of the five hours spent each week on the course, four hours are devoted to actual case work, which consists of reading records, securing information, and writing up each interview. Each interview written by the student becomes part of the permanent case record of the concerned agency. An hour conference with Miss Blue discussing the progress on the case or problems which have arisen completes the five hours.

This field practice course is pre-professional training in social case work and is limited as such. Its main values are to give more meaning of the theory of social case work to the student, to tie the theory to actual practice and to develop the student's own personality.

As Miss Blue stated "Case work is very helpful to anyone who is going to work with human beings."

Day Students Hold Activity Contest

Day Students having the highest number of activity points, which were turned in at their last meeting, were Emily Herold, Geraldine Brumby.

The three girls with the highest ... The winner of the three will be chosen by popular vote of the day students, but will not be announced until March 16, when a party will be given in her honor. A loving cup engraved with the winner's name will be presented to her at the party.

Geraldine Brumby, and Katie Hamilton, number of activity points have been active in the Day Student Organization and other organizations on campus. Emily Herold is a member of the YWCA, 4H Club, and Freshmen Flunkies. Besides being a member of these organizations, she works on the social committee and poster committee. Geraldine Brumby, while taking part in DSO activities, is also a 4H club member. Katie Hamilton is the chairman of the social committee.

In addition to the other positions, he was also business manager and treasurer of the Florida State College. Also, he is director and secretary of the Exchange Bank of Tallahassee. He was elected president of the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce in 1921 and vice-president in 1922.

He is director of the Leon County Milk County, a co-operative organization for the promotion of the dairying interests of the county.

Outside of business activities he is a Sunday school teacher in the Presbyterian Church and is a Mason.

Mr Kellum married Miss Ruth 3 Conibear in Lakeland in 1914. She was born in Morton, Illinois.

Red Cross Room

The Red Cross room in the Student Alumnae building has not been opened this year. Mrs O C Collins, chairman of production for the local chapter of the Red Cross, announced that there is no call for surgical dressings now nor is there likely to be any time soon. All available warehouses are full.

Also, there is no call for sewing right now. The only Red Cross workshop open in Tallahassee at the present time is the knitting room in the County Court House, which is open on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings from 10:30 until 12:30.

Students Now Making School Diet Analysis

A study of the diet of the Demonstration school lunch room is being made by students in Home Economics 401, cooperating with the dietian department of the college.

Samples of the diet as served to the high school students and the waste remaining have been collected on several different days. They are now in the process of being dried and prepared for analysis.

While the exact analysis will consume a major portion of the semester's work, preliminary calculations from food value tables have shown the school lunch to be of good quality. When compared with recommended daily allowances, it was shown to contribute approximately 1 3 of the calories and calcium; 2 5 of the protein, vitamin A, thiamine and riboflavin and ½ of the vitamine C desirable in the entire day's diet of these students.

Students engaged in this study are Margaret Dugger, Norma Falcon, Josephine Maniace, Rose Messina, Carmen Vazquez and Sibyl Wool. It is under the direction of Miss Edna Mae McIntosh, Miss Marie Casteen of the dietory department is in charge of the school lunch.

First Inter-American Majors Graduating In June May Expect Broad Opportunities

Positions in Rio, colorful Mexico City or in the State Department may await students graduating this year. For the first time at Florida State College Inter-American majors will graduate in June. One of the newest majors at FSC, the Inter-American, which is being offered for the third year, is designed to provide information essential for an understanding of the American nations.

"Broad opportunities will be open to graduates in this field after the war," stated Dr Arthur Seymour, professor of modern languages, whose department is one of the six cooperating in this major. The others are the departments of history, political science, geography, sociology, and economics.

Requirements are set to the individual needs of the student and she concentrates in the field of greatest interest. "Positions as censors, as hostesses on South American airlines and for export and import companies are among the possible careers open to graduates in this major who specialize in the modern language division," said Dr Seymour.

Among the courses offered for this inter-departmental major are Latin American history, Spanish American literature, Latin American geography and conversational French, Spanish and Portugese. Brazilian literature in Portugese will also be given next year. The department of political science presents courses in American government, international politics and the governments of Latin America according to Dr Marian D Irish, professor of political science.

"Inter-American majors who concentrate in political science may obtain positions with the Pan-American Union or in the Departments of State, Agriculture or Commerce," stated Dr Irish. "Jobs in the Panama Canal Zone as well as in statistical, personnel and administrative work are also available."

This major aims to give an appreciation of the language and literature of the American nations and to provide knowledge of their historical, racial, economics, social and political development. The head of the department of greatest interest acts as an adviser to the student and aids in choosing her courses. Students who wish to enter technical fields in the South American countries may take up more specialized subjects such as Spanish or Portugese shorthand.

College Announces Plan for Veterans

Idea Based on Four Points Copied from Yale U

LIBERTY, Mo (I P)—A plan to save returning service men an entire year of their time in college without acceleration or streamlining was announced here by President Walter Pope Binns of William Jewell College.

This plan as developed by the post-war planning committee is based on the idea adopted by Yale University for its education of war veterans. Within the plan the committee has set up four categories:

1. Service men who have no college work but who have completed high school or its equivalent and who are capable of carrying the courses assigned should get their A B adgrees in three years instead of the normal four.

2. Service men with one year of college work before they went to war should get their degrees in two years.

3. Service men with two years of college before they went to war should get their degrees in one year.

4. The college will shorten or lengthen the time of these intensive courses for any service man according to the character of the work he does.

By going to summer school, veterans under the plan will be able to reduce the time requirements of these categories. The five board fields for the men in the first year of the first category are the relation of the natural and physical science, historical perspective, social outlook, culture through literature, and linguistics. These men also have a seminar or directed reading course.

"There men should get a college education in the quickest possible time consistent with high standards," declared President Binns. "Our plan provides a flexible program of intensive studies under five broad fields with a seminar reading course in addition.

"As each returning service man will present an individual case in view of his maturity, training, experience, mental capacity, and ability, these intensive courses of study will be designed to meet his individual needs as well as his willingness to work."

Girls Want Dates

Soon after Northwestern University announced that they were opening a date bureau to increase the attendance at the Prom, a jabbering race between two females was heard. Finally this was distinguished. "We've got a car, we've got coupons. Furnish the date and we'll furnish the rest."

Applicants must furnish full details about themselves. Calls for men are also coming in fast.

The first lighthouse in America was built in 1716 at the entrance to Boston harbor.

Inter-Class Games Held March 13, 15

Class games for the hockey teams will be held March 13 and 15 and the Odd-Even game will be March 17 at 3 p m. Both teams are working hard on team tactics, dribbling, team cooperation, and defensive playing, with only one more practice remaining.

"We have been playing the Odds practice games every Friday afternoon and the games have come out pretty close," Evelyn Stuckey, Even leader, asserted. Many of the players from last year's team are back along with some new freshmen.

"Eighteen girls have been out for Odd soccer all season, with the majority of them being sophomores," Alieze Triesta Odd manager disclosed.

"With some valuable aid from Miss C Papatsos, practices have been coming along all right, although our passing hasn't been showing up too well. We're working on the passes now and expect to be in tip-top shape for the class games. Furthermore, I believe we will win," Alieze declared.

Prof Gets Fags

Ginny Tomion of Michigan State College, was more than a little embarrassed last week when she cut her 4 p m literature class only to meet the professor in the hall. She explained that some cigarettes had just come in at Byrnes' store and even offered to split a pack with him. Professor A Smith held out for a whole package.

Girl Learns Too Much

If Janice Richey, a freshman, had earned 17 cents less last year, her income tax would have been $5 less. That extra 17 cents put her into the next bracket. She now looks back to that time before Christmas when she was tempted to play hookey from her work as student assistant. She wishes she had. She would have lost her 30 cents for the hour's work and saved $5 income tax.

Miss Dunn, New Faculty Member, Abroad As Second World War Begins in Europe

Miss Margaret Anita Dunn, newest addition to the faculty of the school of music, was in London during 1936 when the war in Europe began.

"The most powerful and impressive experience I had," said Miss Dunn, "was when I saw the English people, from the youngest to the oldest, go out to dig trenches and spend hours bringing up sandbags to protect the renowned statues in Hyde Park, London."

Miss Dunn was in London when the tropical hurricane hit our North Atlantic coast and she said that the repercussions in London were very destructive, also.

Miss Dunn comes to F S C fresh from wide experience as a college music teacher in the middle west, including eight years at the Sunset Hill private school for girls in Kansas City, a term at Baker University in Baldwin, Kansas and a semester on the staff at Kansas University in Lawrence, Kansas.

Miss Dunn has received her bachelor's degree in piano from the University of Kansas and has twenty-six hours of graduate work towards her Master's degree. She is a member of the junior, intermediate, and adult divisions of Mu Phi Epsilon, honorary music society, and of the Kansas City Music Club.

She has had concert experience —including a concert appearance in Boston's Jordan hall—and she spent one year in London as an accompanist to Gerald Moore, famous English musician, well known through his Victor recordings. In Boston she was assistant to Nancy Loring, pupil of Schumannheink.

Miss Dunn may appear in a recital here later in the year.

Writing Experiment Continues Progress

Herndon Says Laboratory Is Being Well Equipped

The new laboratory experiment in freshmen composition which began this semester is making progress, stated Miss Sarah Herndon, associate professor of English in charge of the experiment.

The class originated as a means of giving students a convenient place in which to write and at the same time have an instructor to whom they can refer if they need help. The students do their regular work in English composition but the two hour laboratory period is used to write on subjects of their own choice. Written work may be of any length, on any subject, and there is no definite time limit.

Room 307 Westcott has been equipped with new tables to give the students plenty of room on which to write. Filing cabinets have been installed in order that the students may file their work. It is hoped by the department that the new bookcases which have been ordered for the room will arrive soon. Also, new reference books have been ordered to serve as a source of information for students who need them.

"Taking part in this experiment are three sections of freshmen English; a section of 101B, taught by Miss Sarah Herndon; the section of 101B which is made up of students who made high grades on the placement test, taught by Mrs Lou Miller; and the section 101A, taught by Miss Mildred Henry.

Forums to Begin

The first of a series of forums on the subject of Religious Beliefs and Practices will be held next Monday afternoon, March 12, at 5, in the Student Alumnae building.

These forums are sponsored by the YWCA Worship committee to foster interest and better understanding for the various religious groups on campus.

The subject of the first discussion, Protestantism, will be led by Dr Robert D Miller of the Department of Religion at Florida State College.

"Dr Miller is well-informed about the many Protestant denominations and sects of religions," said Margaret Clayton, when she made the announcement for the Worship committee.

Other forms will follow dealing with Catholicism and Judaism and will be led by leaders of those faiths in Tallahassee.

"Dr R Annis will lead the Catholic forum the fourth week in March, and it is expected that Rabbi Goldman will lead the forum on Judaism," said Miss Clayton.

All students, whether YWCA members or not, are invited to attend these forums.

Drive Progresses

The National Red Cross War Fund Drive, sponsored by Senior Hall is still under way. Mr Becker, who is collecting the funds contributed by faculty and staff, says everyone has been very generous. Yesterday at noon he reported that $1,197.70 had been collected from the staff and faculty.

No return have been released about the amount collected from the students. Dot Jean Glass requests that students who wish to mail in their contributions may mail them to her through campus mail. Her box is 979. Anyone who contributes over a dollar will be given a membership card.

Sidney Snow Plans Museum

Inca Relics to Be Placed In Informal Museum

Sidney Snow, artist who has sketched, drawn and sculptured in New Zealand, Australia, Hawaii and both American continents for a number of years, is now engaged in designing and arranging an Inca Museum here at Florida State College.

The collection of Peruvian relics which were presented to FSC last year by Mr and Mrs John Victor Carter of the Canal Zone will be housed in the museum. Already 13 cases of relics have been sent to the college and according to Mr Snow, who is a personal friend of the donor, there are 37 more cases which will come sometime in the future. The collection contains gold and silver coins, ornaments of beaten silver and gold textiles, tapestries, pottery, toys, weapons and implements which were in existence hundreds of years before the white man crossed the Atlantic.

Because of his special interest in sculpture, Mr Snow is particularly interested in the small pieces of sculpture in silver and gold which are included in the collection. Little silver figures and "whistling jugs" which, through some intricate arrangement of water pressure, whistle when liquid is poured from them are included among the relics. There are also certain silver figures which are said to have been used as weapons.

Mr Snow, who is a graduate of Minneapolis School of Fine Arts, Minneapolis, Minnesota, and has been engaged in production illustration for the government since the war, plans to make the museum "a different type of museum —one that is alive and interesting, one in which you can relax and enjoy yourself." The small museum he will design for the relics now the college will be in the nature of an experiment to point toward what the future museum will be. Attacking the problem from the art aspect is a new trend in museum work. The relics have been shown to the public only by special appointment to this date.

Modern Dance Teams To Compete Saturday

Members of the Odd and Even modern dance teams will compete against each other tomorrow night at 8 p m in the Augusta Conradi theater.

"This is the first time that modern dance has been put on a competitive basis," Anne Widerquist, Even leader stated, "and we're hoping that there will be both Odds and Evens out tomorrow night to see the demonstration."

The procedure to be used in the performance will consist of a dance by Odds and a dance by Evens; followed by the two teams combining to do techniques. Each team will be scored on certain points established by the judges.

Margie Platt, Odd leader, disclosed that the ten girls who made the Odd team are Ann Parker, Betty Anne Shiver, Lorraine Smith, Betty Donnally, Alice Taft, Oleta Booth, Harriet Kirk, Marion Welch, Margaret Friday, and Margie Platt.

Those who made the Even team are Carolyn Bourland, Mary Lou Perry, Jinx Farrier, Jo Guthrie, Betty Jo McAteer, Audrey Evans, Marilyn Dewey, Lois Byrd, Dana Martin and Anne Widerquist.

Residence Director Taking Vacation

After several disappointments and changes of plans, Miss Edith McCollum, director of residence, left February 20 on her annual vacation. She spent several days in Chicago, where she was met by her friend, Mrs Cecelia Werner who is dean of women at Milwaukee State Teachers' College. Miss McCollum was accompanied as far as Chicago by her sister-in-law, Mrs O McCollum, and her two nephews.

The remainder of her vacation she plans to spend at her home in Neptune Beach before returning to FSC Wednesday.

Soldier Dance to Be Held Here Tomorrow

A formal soldier dance will be given in the Physical Education building tomorrow night from 8 to 11 p m. Approximately 125 men from Finney General Hospital in Georgia, Camp Gordon Johnston, Perry, and Dale Mabry will attend.

The swing band will play for the dance. During the intermission, Calista Hatcher, blues singer, and a trio made up of Marie Nell Booth, Jinx Farrior, and Lea Booth will entertain.

Chaperones for the occasion will be Dean and Mrs R L Eyman, Miss Cynthia Reeves, Mr and Mrs Hoffman, and Mr and Mrs M... sing.

Honors Day Will Be Held Here Tuesday With Program For Faculty and Students

Dr G C White, Emory University President, Gives Address to Students With B Average In 45 Hours of Credit

Scholastic Honors Day for honor students will be held at Florida State College, Tuesday afternoon, and a formal program will be held in Westcott auditorium at 2:30 p m.

An academic procession, including all faculty members and honor students, will take place at this time. Honor students are those who have established an average of B or above in 45 hours of credit and who have maintained an average of B or above on these credits.

Honor transfer students must have established 30 hours of credit in hon and maintained a B average on these credits and also on their transfer credits. Dr. Venita J. Shores is in charge of the procession.

Dr Goodrich C White, president of Emory University, will give the honor address at this occasion.

The invocation will be given by Rev Claud M Haynes, minister of the Trinity Methodist church of Tallahassee. President Doak S Campbell will preside.

Mrs Ramona Beard will play the organ prelude and postlude. The processional will be the "Grand March" from "Aida" arranged by Warner and the recessional, "Pomp and Circumstance" by Elgar.

Mr Frank Sykora, violoncellist, will play a cello selection on this occasion, accompanied by Miss Mary Cate Winslow.

Faculty members of the Scholastic Honors Day committee are Dr Elizabeth Andrews, Dr. Ruth Ducker, Dr. Mark De Graff, Miss Hallie Kern, Miss Ella Stevens, and Miss Myrtle E Dobbs, chairman.

A coffee is being planned for the honor students taking part in the program by Miss Pearl Shepard, lecturer of English and journalism, and Mr Earl Vance, associate professor of English and journalism. The coffee is to be held Tuesday evening at Miss Shepard's home.

Dr C P Heinlein, professor of experimental psychology, will entertain the honor students taking psychology at a tea Monday at one Tuesday afternoon at five o'clock.

President Campbell has sent invitations to principals of several high schools, which have graduates among the honor students.

Miller to Present Vespers Program

The third in a series of presentations of programs of well-known vocal-classical selections, and the "First Sonia" for organ by Borowski. The program will be introduced as follows: "Prelude in D Major" by Bach; "Andante E Flat Major" by J S Bach; "Menuette in C Major" by J S Bach; "Ai Evening Bells" from "Boris Godounow," by Gounod; "Dolly Dear," arranged by Gillette; "Nobody Knows the Trouble I See," arranged by Gillette, and the "First Sonata" for Organ by Borowski, which includes "Allegro maestoso trappo" "Andante," and "Allegro con fuoco."

Dr Miller will play as organist in the Trinity Methodist church each Sunday for many years as professor of philosophy and religion here on campus. He has studied extensively with private tutors and also at the Zechwan Radio Philadelphia Musical Academy at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

The last in this series of presentations will be given by Miss Pauline March 25, 1945, at 4:30 p m in Westcott auditorium. Dale Carnegie and 12 Talahassee students will perform. Ramona Beard is the pianist-director.

Council To Meet

The various heads of the 27 honorary organizations will hold a meeting Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the clubroom of the Student Alumnae building. The plans for elections are the question of new chairmen and the question of cooperation in future activities will work. All members are urged to be present.

Senior Hall

All students who will have senior ranking by September will be eligible to live in Senior Hall according to Miss Cloris B Dorman, chairman of College Council. In order to get the rooms all students who do not at present have senior ranking but who expect to attain it by the end of Summer School should apply to Miss McCollum, Director of Residence, for rooms adjoining those which are designated as Senior Halls.

Seniors Mournfully Look Back Over Past Years and Regret Lost Opportunities

Questioning of several Florida State College for Women seniors regarding their regrets and advice to freshmen presents an interesting picture.

Tedy Parker says she regrets letting so many opportunities slip by to attend Artist Series programs and lectures on campus. She regrets that so many freshmen think she has so much to do that she doesn't have time to play with them. She wishes she had more time to play golf and swim and just lase around.

"Although I'm getting much the same if I had it to do over again. I don't even regret so much being Marshall instead of Mortar Board," said Tedy.

Catherine Barnes regrets that she didn't participate in more extra-curricula activities. She wishes she had read more books, spent more time in the Browsing Room, and gone more often to camp. "I also wish I'd received more mail," she concluded.

Mary Flo-ence Fox rues the fact that "I didn't get started on what I wanted to do in my freshman year." She also wishes she had made a greater effort to meet people and to see more of Tallahassee.

"I think freshmen should be careful not to put too much or too little in scrapbooks but to do other things also," said Renee Brown.

Martha Ogden regrets not choosing her courses more wisely. She advises freshmen to participate in as many extra-curricular activities as possible without neglecting their work.

Pete Pamble is concerned that freshmen don't have the idea of the U- bunch or feel limited in them early or well enough. She cautions freshmen to be curious.

Student Campaigns Presented Tuesday

Major Office Candidates Speak In Convocation

The campus speeches of candidates for major offices were heard in convocation Tuesday morning, ending the introduction of candidates for minor offices.

The first "battle of words" for president of College Government Association was given by Jean Sisson on "Dreams for Florida State College," and Mary Lou Carpenter discussed her aims for that office.

Unopposed as candidate for chairman of judiciary, Catherine Barnes gave an outline of that officer's duties and responsibilities.

Next came three-minute speeches by the two candidates for vice-president, Betty Bell, Rita Fraser, Kit Land, Irene Mendoza, Audrey Perry and Jeanne Turner. Each of them presented her ideas for an improved freshman orientation as extensively carried out for second, third, and fourth quarter students as well as for students entering school in the fall.

As Treasurer, the candidates, Jane Pepper and Janet Rogers promised a continuance of unbalanced budgets and increased student opinion columns.

Winifred Meldrim spoke of her ambitions as Secretary, Kraaff, being unopposed in the race for editor, Betty Lou Bell, the only candidate, gave a resume of her experiences on the Flambeau staff and of her candidacy for editor.

Announcements were made concerning College Honors day on Tuesday and compulsory convocation on Thursday night.

Viola Player Appears Here

Primrose Features Works Of Arthur Benjamin

William Primrose, world famous violist, performed last Wednesday night at the Florida State College auditorium.

Komm, Susser Tod (Come, Sweet Dawn), which was the first number on the program, was arranged for the viola by Tertis. Featured on the program were works of the modern composer, Arthur Benjamin. Mr Benjamin is originally from Australia, although he now lives in Vancouver, B C. Benjamin's composition presented by Primrose was the Elegy Waltz, Toccata, Concerto in Symphonic Form, and the two Jamaican folk songs, Matty Rag and the Rumba. The Rumba was an encore number that Mr Primrose had to repeat it.

Other selections on the program were Sonata in B- Flat, Op 120, No 2, by Brahms; Soft strains of music drifted also by Brahms; Litany by Schubert, and Caprice No 24, by Paganini.

The instrument played by Mr Primrose is an Amsati, made in 1631. He owns the only known viola of the same make in existence today. two are in Berlin and two are in Paris.

Mr Primrose was born in Glasgow, Scotland. He came to this country in 1930 to play with the London String Quartet. He toured with the quartet five years and in 1937 he joined the NBC Symphony Orchestra to become

Chanaes Approved For Quarter System

Dr M W Carothers, registrar of Florida State College, announced that the control committee had already aproved all changes to be made for the quarter system next year.

Dr Carothers said that the schedule committee has started its work to see whether there will be any serious difficulty in regard to room assignments. Previously rooms occupied by classes on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday could be used by other classes on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. As the classes will be changed more frequently now, it will not be possible to use the present arrangement.

Part of the manuscript for the new catalogue has already gone to press.

Primrose Prefers 100-Year-Old Viola Owned By Father To Violin as His Particular Medium of Art Expression

By JEAN DOUGLAS

William Primrose, considered to be the top violist in the world by musical authorities who was featured great artist on Wednesday night's Artist Series program, finds that many people have a mistaken idea about the viola. In an interview after the concert, he remarked that it was commonly believed that any violinist could play the viola automatically played any other stringed instrument equally as well. This, however, is not true, he said. "I prefer the viola to the violin, because as a violinist I am rather cramping to dry point, or oils to water color. The viola is my particular medium of expression."

When asked about his habit of closing his eye while playing, he recalled a young girl who once remarked that he closed his eyes to get inspiration. He asked him, incidentally, if playing the viola made him sleepy, and answered his questioning "Why?" with the remark that he had seen violinists' eyes on the platform. Her little brother, who was with her, thereupon spoke up and said, "Oh, don't be dumb! He closes his eyes so he won't see the audience. It scares him!"

He spoke of his viola, a superb instrument once owned by his father. It was constructed in 1593, more than 100 years before the time of Stradivarius. Many violas were made during this time, but very few were as good as Stradivarius. There are not many of these now in existence, most of them having been destroyed or lost since then. It was then, and still is in Europe, called a "tenor" rather than a viola.

It has only recently been popularized as a solo instrument, having been brought out of almost complete oblivion about 20 years ago in England by Lionel Turtis, a good friend of Mr Primrose'. He has always had great difficulty in finding music for his program. Through several of the great composers of Europe, Bach, even, Paganini, and Rolls among them, played the viola, none wrote anything of importance for the viola. Many of his concert-pieces have been written by living contemporary composers, one of whom, Arthur Benjamin, composed on Wednesday night's program.

He has played before many college audiences, he said, and has enjoyed them all. He finds the campuses very beautiful. He especially admired the huge clump of azaleas on the north side of the Westcott building, mentioning the rarity in finding music for his instrument. He also admired the trees though he finds it rather warm.

His accompanist, Gus Mombarte, is Belgian by nationality, and was once pianist in the Belgian Symphony. He made his first visit to this country when he went on a tour of the United States with the quartet just as the European war broke out. When Belgium was invaded he was called to Belgium to join the Belgian army, and two other members of the quartet were likewise called to Belgium When he arrived in England he was no longer needed for the army, and after the quartet was scattered, he returned to the United States. Here he joined with another violist, and began giving concerts, mostly for army camps, naval bases, and in support of the Belgian War Relief. Mr Primrose found him in Colorado Springs, and, impressed by his technique signed him as his accompanist.

From Florida, Mr Primrose will

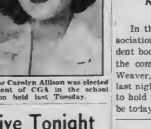
Head of State Stresses Needs

Gov Caldwell Proposes Changes for Florida

Needed action for preservation of state resources, state aid to vertising, for improvement of public schools, and for more local government were discussed by Governor Millard E Caldwell Monday night in his talk before the FSCW chapter of the American Association of University Women. His topic was "Florida's Immediate Problems."

The Governor first explained he presented to the State Legislature. Fifth is the conservation of fresh water. The richest water resource in the world is in the Everglades and is being abused by unwise drainage, he told the audience. He recommended that water control authority be established and given the right to change flood decisions, if necessary. He added that there is also an acute problem of erosion, which must be controlled, or Florida will be ruined as a tourist state. A committee of citizens from the state have been appointed to study this problem.



"A need for a system of laws to control oil exploration and conservation should be established," Caldwell said. Private industries are spending millions of dollars drill-

Drive Tonight In Dormitories

Senior Hall Will Collect Red Cross Funds

Tonight there will be a dormitory drive for the National Red Cross War Fund, sponsored by Senior Hall. Representatives will call at the students' rooms to take contributions.

Students are asked to set aside their contributions and are ready to give them to the Senior Hall girls when they call. Membership cards will be given if the contribution is one dollar or more.

According to the last quotation $571.18 has been contributed by the students, and on Tuesday afternoon $1,236.76 had been collected from the faculty, Mr Harry P Becker, executive secretary of geography, who is collecting the funds contributed by the faculty said that the faculty seemed to have done much better up to date than they did last year. He also stated that the students on the whole were not contributing as much as they should. He appealed in close contact with the war through their relatives and friends, it is to be expected that they would realize the necessity of such a drive and contribute free-

FSCW Band Presents Spring Performance

Color Guard Members Carry State, College Flags

The FSCW band, under the direction of Mr Jack Rogers, presented its second annual spring concert last Friday evening, in Westcott Auditorium.

The band, in traditional colors of garnet and gold, began their performance with the presentation of colors by the band's six-member color guard under the direction of drum majorette Ann Richardson. The flag of the State of Florida and the newly adopted garnet and gold FSC flag were brought to the stage. Following the program, persistent applause from the audience brought Mr Sykora back to the stage for several encores, and in reply to requests from the audience, he led the band in playing again the Caribbean Fantasy to close the show.

The band, Hitchcock Scrapin, guest conductor, who is the conductor of Florida High School band, led the band in Deep Purple, by DeRose.

The entire program, which included the music of many nations, were "The United National Banner," Paller of Victory, French Military March, Finlandia, Hungarian Dances, In a Persian Market, Caprice Espagnol from the Opera Carmen, and the Caribbean Fantasy which is Intricate Latin American rhythms.

Thomas L Thomas To Appear Friday

Civic Music Presents Noted Baritone in Concert

Thomas L Thomas, baritone, will give a recital at the Leon High School Auditorium tonight at 8:15 p m under auspices of the Tallahassee Music Association. Although the performance will be open to members only, all service men will be given off the association.

Thomas sings for the "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round" broadcast which goes over the air every Friday. He is now on a concert tour which includes over thirty-five appearances throughout the United States and Canada.

Born in South Wales, Thomas was encouraged to take an interest in music by his father and appeared in children's operettas at local churches. When he was nine, the Thomas family came to the United States and settled in Scranton where the boy continued with his singing. Thomas participated in amateur musical performances throughout high school.

After graduation Thomas studied mechanical engineering and draftsmanship after finishing high school, his chief interest continued to be in singing. Coming to New York to continue his studies, Thomas, he soon began singing in various churches and for commercial radio programs. He made his debut at the Metropolitan Opera in 1937. Since that time Mr Thomas has appeared in recitals and concerts in all parts of the United States and Canada and has sung with the New York Philharmonic and other symphony orchestras.

Students To Attend Centennial Program

Girls of Florida State College are urged to attend the Florida Centennial program which will be held in the Leon High school auditorium next Sunday at 3 p m.

Governor Millard F Caldwell will speak on "Florida's Future," and Senator Claude Pepper will talk about Florida's Past and Present.

This program is planned to acquaint students with the history of statehood since March 18, 1845. On March 3, 1845, President Tyler signed the statehood document in Washington, but it was not until June, 1845, that William D Moseley was inaugurated governor to succeed John Branch, last of the territorial governors. Moseley Collins, great grandson of Florida's first state governor, will read a selection from William D Moseley's inaugural address.

Miller Opens YWCA Forum

Protestant Creeds Topic Of Religious Forum

The 215 Protestant religious sects of America were the subjects discussed by Dr Robe- D Miller, associate professor of philosophy and religion, and a group of Florida State College students on Monday afternoon in the Student Alumnae building.

This forum was the first in a series to be sponsored by the worship committee of the Young Women's Christian Association, Margaret Clayton, chairman of this committee, stated that Rabbi Alfred Wolf, regional director of the American Congregations of Hebrew Unions, will speak on Judaism next Monday afternoon at 5 in the Student Alumnae auditorium.

Dr Miller began his forum on Protestantism by discussing the general organization and doctrines of the increasing number of Protestant sects in America. He explained that all the churches were organized on one of three general patterns according to how they selected their minister. First was the episcopal or hierarchic type in which the bishop appoints a preacher to a conrereation, second was the Presbyterian type which is similar to the Episcopal except that they elect their supreme officer for a limited time while in the Episcopal type the bishop holds office for life, and third was the Congressional type in which the congregation appoints their own ministers.

Dr Miller discussed the basic differences in church doctrine such as method of baptism, kind of holy communion, and the amount and type of library used in the services.

After this general introduction the students were allowed to ask specific questions concerning the differences of the many Protestant doctrines. Dr Miller presented between the northern and south ern branches of the churches were explained and the reasons for the ferences between similar sects.

Personnel Office Sponsors Program

The Personnel Office of the college, headed by Dr Elizabeth Gordon Andrews, will present a special radio broadcast Monday night at 9 o'clock from the college studio.

Dr Andrews will be the speaker, and will outline for the radio audience the personnel services conducted on that campus by her office. She will also give interesting information about personnel work in general, its purposes and functions. "Methods and Aims of Personnel Work" is her radio subject.

Students who heard Dr Andrews' recent address on "Personnel—a New Field for Women" will be interested in hearing this further exposition of the possibilities in the field Dr Andrews has been in personnel work at FSC for more than 15 years.

Included on the personnel program will be a soprano solo by Paula Jean Frazeres of Tallahassee, a student of Mrs Mildred Barter Davis in the school of music. Paula Jeanne will be accompanied at the piano by Betty Martin of Gainesville, also a student of music student.

Dance Contest

Students planning to enter the Dance contest in the AAUW Creative Arts program are requested to let Miss Margaret Clements know by March 26. The judging of the dances will be held later that week.

Spirit of the Week

● PLANS FOR PEACE

A heartening evidence that the statsmen of the United Nations are giving much time and careful preparation to the peace plans following this war, that the mistake of the last war of leaving all considerations until the last shot is fired will not be repeated, is found in the numerous conferences that are being held discussing the issues as they present themselves.

The recent Inter-American conference held at Mexico City, at which Mexico's Padilla presided, brought to light many issues, some of which were decided, some of which will be presented for decision at the San Francisco Security Conference to be held in the near future.

Leaders of the United Nations have been confering and and collaborating in deciding immediate questions affecting war strategy and policy all during the course of the war, paving the way for closer and franker cooperation in determining the peace plans to follow the strife and in working together to maintain world peace in the post-war world.

Not only as the action of the nations' leaders encouraging, but also commendable is the attitude of the citizens of these countries, those who have obtained a global consciousness in demanding that the isolationist view be abandoned and that their countries participate in world cooperation to plan and maintain peace in the post-war world.

The young people of the world are the ones who will be responsible for seeing that this peace will be kept, that minor difficulties arising will receive prompt attention from the world family of nations. The outcome of these conferences will soon be history. While history is still in the making, students should do all in their power to be intelligently informed on the issues now up for decision, so that in the future, they may be able to protect more wisely what world statesmen are now securing for their generation, and, it is hoped, for generations to follow.

● SWAN SONG

It seems fitting, that the topic of my last editorial as editorial as editro of the Flambeau, should concern what has been one of my main hopes for the future of FSC's student body. That hope is that as soon as possible our student body should obtain and assume powers over its own social actions —that the College Government Association should become a Student Government Association, with real instead of superficial control over student legislation and courts.

There are three questions which logically can be asked about installation of student government at this college. They are (1) Is student government more advantageous than the present joint student-administration government? (2) Can our present student body be trusted with powers over its own affairs? (3) How can the transition from CGA to student government powers be accomplished?

If we believe in the traditions of a democratic country, then we believe in government by the people or in control over their own action via elected representatives. We believe that in exercising power over our own actions we gain in resource and maturity.

Why should not democratic ideas be applied to college students, who are said to be training for democratic citizenship? Democracy cannot be learned from books, but from action, from incorporating its ideas into our own daily lives. If we are not allowed to govern ourselves, while in final training for citizenship, when are we to acquire suddenly the needed practice—when do we get our "field work" and laboratory practice? We cannot learn democratic without practice in democracy, any more than we can become responsible without being given responsibility. If college is preparation for life, we will go into life unprepared if we do not govern ourselves here.

Student government also has the practical advantage of relieving faculty and administration of many hours of passing official judgment on our decisions. Student government may also relieve students of the burden of complying with many rules made by able but occasionally misguided people who do not themselves have to live under their rules.

The second question Flamba with the ability of students to handle a government of their own efficiently and responsibly. Experiences in other colleges would give the question an emphatic answer of "yes!" We have only to look to the University of Florida to see a government by students, delegated almost total power, which functions democratically and wlel. There is little scientific evidence to show that women are of necessity less capable of self-government than men. We grant that htis is a women's college in the conservative South—but experience also shows that student officers tend toward conservative action. We do not anticipate an unregulated social group here, under student government . . . we do anticipate power lodged in student hands for making and carrying out these rules.

The transition fro CGA to a student government need not be a difficult nor even lengthy process.:

First of all, the student body must want student government, and realize that with increased powers will come increased maturity, and opportunity to live in an atmosphere more like that of the "great outside." We believe that there is a latent desire on the part of students for more control over their own actions, and that this desire only needs leadership and channeling.

Secondly, to achieve student government by a simple revision of our present CGA constitution. This present document was adopted several years ago with the assurance that greater student power would follow soon. It has not followed, to any fundamental extent.

To change our constitution to a more democratic one, the reserve powers of the administration (page 00 of the Gold Book) must be defined, with the extent and meaning of the administration's power to regulate "health and safety" completely outlined. The government of the students should not need to have lengthy legislative and judiciary deviations approved by any faculty body. Such student government should welcome advice from the often more experienced college officials. but should be free not to accept advice if students honestly feel their opinions are more applicable.

Rules concerning student social conduct should come only from a student legislative body, and all such rules should have an adequate constitutional background.

We believe that the change to Student Government is the only solution to current controversial student issues. We feel that student-made rules will aid the spread of the Honor Code. And, most of all, we feel that democratic student government will itrain us for het life awaiting us in a democracy.

● A SMALL PRICE

In a world of wounded and dying men, men drawn from our own communities and homes, we realize how much is being suffered and done for us. There is being little asked in return. To put its drive over the top the American Red Cross needs $200,000,000. This is 75 cents apiece of painless giving. Seventy-five cents is a small price.

With our contributions as its support, the Red Cross offers to our men a relieving balm and comfort to their misery. There are 4,500 Red Cross girls over-seas doing all they can to ease the life of the combat soldier. Hot coffee and doughnuts are not the only treats dished out. Cigarettes, toothbrushes, soap, phonographs, games, and the sight of an American girl furnish s link with home. There are Red Cross girls in hospitals near the line of battle, binding their wounds, comforting them, paying them attention. But the work of these girls is not the only vital service carried out by the Red Cross.

It is a life-line between family anc fovhole. It helps solve family problems when distance makes the soldier helpless. Its collection of plasma and whole blood donations has saved countless lives.

When we were obliged to protest through the International Red Cross because captured Americans in Germany were being fed so badly; we were told by the Germans to feed them ourselves. The American Red Cross had to establish a complete system of sending weekly food packages for American prisoners of war, and they did it. The total prisoner of war packages shipped and packed by the Red Cross Volunteers in this war would fill a train 18 miles long, or about 36 trains of average length.

Since Pearl Harbor, Junior Red Cross has prodnced 25 million servicemen's comfort and recreation articles—pingpong tables, game boards, lap boards, canes, and slippers—for camps and hospitals over-seas. They are channeled through Red Cross and hospital councils to meet military requests.

Since July 1, 1941, Red Cross volunteer nurse's aides have served 21,814,210 hours or the equivalent of about 2,490 years.

And we are asked only 75 cents apiece! The Red Cross deserves our support and needs it.

COLLEGE COMMENTS

Here's your weekly round-up of news from other colleges, gals . . . a synopsis of what's new on the campuses, what they are doing for fun, for work, and for the War effort, and fragments of unusual activities.

Girls in the dormitory at Radcliffe College keep their housemates well informed as to how they are on dates by using different colored inks in reistering the time they sign in. The code is: Green—just a nice time; Brown—thoroughly routine; Yellow—another fine! Depending on the intellectual plane: Red—perfectly swell: Purple—too, too divine!

"Does your cigarette taste different?" Well, if it tastes good or not, you had better check up on who you buy from. The Kelly Green—just a nice time; Brown—thoroughly routine; Yellow—another fine! Depending on the intellectual plane: Red—perfectly swell: Purple—too, too divine!

The University of Wisconsin is certainly doing its part to help back the attack by buying more war bonds. Last week war stamp sales soared to the $9,554 mark with a total of $9,554 50 collected, the highest amount ever sold during a one-day drive. In addition to this, the students are increasing contributions to the War Memorial Fund. This fund, hoorains those who are endangering and risking their lives in shaping the future, will be held in trust by the Board of Regents until after the war, at which time a building commemorating the Wisconsin fighting men will be built.

Just in the way of a roundup: The University of Wisconsin also starts into the quarter system at the beginning of the next school year. That's right . . . the University of Wisconsin they have a "Plaid Shirt Week". How long that . . . It would be nice to have an alumnae like Alexis Smith return to the campus for a visit, wouldn't it? That is what happened at the City College in Los Angeles recently. Seems like that school is just full of interesting news. Recently at their Howdy Hop, one of their informal ice-breakers, they crowned a King and Queen. Smiles . . . Last week a basketball game between faculty members and upperclassmen was held. Guess that Texas State College for Women. The score was 76-13 in favor of —well, we'll let you guess! . . . Also on the TSCW campus, a measles epidemic is raging. According to an editorial in their campus newspaper, "The Lass-O" "one of the best 'must haves' on the campus is that fascinating malady that sprinkles a semi-circle mark of identification on all little red spots over the body."

Tennis champs are always in body."

In This Our Time

By VIRGINIA AILSTOCK

The capture of the Ludendorff rail bridge at Remagen has made the most important news of this past week. This action has enabled 60,000 allied troops to pour into the Rhineland.

The capture of the bridge is also significant in that it shows the lack of German ingenuity and the ability of cool-headed American infantry men to take the desired course of action at the proper time. Fifteen minutes before the Yanks soldiers had been scheduled to blow the bridge, American soldiers reached that sector. Two minor explosions were set off, but the Germans were making no further move until the time designated in their official orders. The American had no specific orders about capturing the bridge, but a wire sergeant saw the opportunity and made use of it. In ten minutes the course of the European battle had changed.

Lt Geo Courtney H Hodges' First Army has now advanced for a distance of five miles beyond the Rhine with an offensive which extends ten miles along the bank of the river. Two pontoon bridges have been set up to supplement the system of ferries. Because of these, the Allies have already overrun 23 towns. The U S Ninth Armies of Lt Gen W H Simpson is maintaining air mastery over the bridges.

Lt Geo George S Patton's Third Army has overrun another 24 towns in his advance. He likewise is guarding the rich industrial Saar Basin.

Patch's Seventh Army recently took Hanau in the southern Palatinate after a period of little important action. Simpson's Ninth Army has been shelling the arsenal at Kruppstadt, Essen, in the Ruhr valley.

On the Eastern front Kuestrin, key fortress city 33 miles northeast of Berlin, has fallen to the Red Army. This was the last line for Nazi central Oder river line defenses. The Russians are converging their crossings of the Oder south of Kuestrin into one broad front.

A chance at the battle of the Pacific shows American forces in possession of the important airdrome at Zamboanga.

Fifteen square miles of Tokyo were destroyed shortly after midnight last Friday when 300 B'ss struck the Japanese capital. Bombs also blasted the city of Nagoya, an important aircraft building center. Meanwhile, Superfortresses were lashing Japan's base at Sinesapore.

The battle of two Jima is nearing its bloody end with all remaining Jap troops backed into a narrowing sector on the north coast.

A three-day conference in China took place this past week when Lord Louis Mountbatten met with Chinese and American military leaders in Chungking. Mountbatten is attempting to coordinate his Southeast Asia operations with those in the China theatre.

Here on the home front it has been announced that from now on all men called before draft boards at 18 and 20 will be inducted into the army while those between the ages of 19 and 26 will join the navy. This does not apply to those already in service. Inductees will be sent where needed.

Further action of the United Nations now awaits the conference scheduled to be held in San Francisco on April 25. In respect to Argentina Senator Tom Connally, Chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, stated that the resolutions adopted at Mexico City leave Argentina free to subscribe to the act of Chapultepec if she wishes, whereupon she would be invited to "full partnership and brotherhood."

The Students Speak . . .

When asked this week for opinions about social activities on campus, the majority of students replied that there were enough things to do in which girls participated, but the ways of meeting the opposite sex could be improved. The following girls have stated what they think about social activities at FSC:

I think the social activities on campus are adequate and well rounded when you consider the limited funds allowed in school. The college is doing a grand job. The only thing we could ask for is a dance where we take the feminine role.

Virginia Black
Sophomore

Social activities in general should be more varied and include larger groups. Our social activities are limited because of the war. We can't prepare us for future activities.

Judy Burnett
Junior

I think that what we need in the way of social activities is a place like the Sweet Shop or the Rat where we would be allowed to dance. As it is the only place we can dance is in the Union, and we get tired of going there night after night.

Marjo Dukes
Sophomore

There seem to be enough of the various types of social activities, but the main problem seems to be that the students are exected to go to the social functions every time there is one. We've just got to have enough time to attend the affairs and study too.

Cleona Asher
Freshman

I think that social activities could be greatly improved.

Margaret Fridy
Senior

I think social activities on campus are pretty well organized. There just aren't enough of them. With 2500 students in the colleges something further could be done for our entertainment that would be possible for more than a few at a time to have a little recreation. Why not enlarge the present program?

Barbara Brough
Sophomore

Social activities on campus are many and varied to suit the different tastes of the girls. There are dances, teas, outings, picnics, plays, etc., and I think the campus should take part in the activities that appeal to her

Gloria D Smith
Junior

When one starts to think of the number of students the social activities become more than a problem. There are limitations. of course, but I think that there should be more cooperation with the activities we have. There is a social chairman and committee in every dormitory open for suggestions.

Toppy Marsh
Sophomore

I think that there should be a way for the girls at FSC to meet nice men from Dale Mabry and other army camps beaides just the soldier dances.

Margie Morris
Senior

Foreign Travel Is Chief Hobby Of Modern Language Instructor

Travel—that is what Miss Ackerman, new instructor in the modern language department at Florida State College, has done all her life. Mexico, Cuba, Canada, and most of Europe are familiar to the tall, pale teacher whose native state is New York.

"I can't wait until the war is over to travel again," she said. She done her undergraduate work at Wheaton College in Norton Massachusetts. Miss Ackerman received her MA from Columbia University in New York City. From Columbia, she went to 11 other girls to Geneva at the University of Paris Catholic French.

She has taught at the University of Mrs Ackerman decided to settle down to a comparatively quiet and uneventful life until after the war. For three years she taught modern languages at Elmwood Park Junior College in Briarcliffe, New York. Another year she became head of the modern language department at Florida State College from March 19 through 21 to conduct a series of lectures to explain the concepts of the Jewish people. She is brought here by the Religious Workers' Council.

Mrs Alvin Bullen, Episcopal student secretary and chairman of the Religious Workers' Council, has announced the following schedule for the visit:

On Monday he will have two meetings which will be open to all students. The first one will be at 5 p m in the Student Alumnae room in the basement of the Union on The Jewish Faith. This will be the second of a series of forums sponsored by the Student Committee of the Young Women's Christian Association. The second meeting will be at 8 p m in the Student Alumnae clubroom where he will speak on "Modern Inter-National Cooperation in the World Today." There will be a social hour after his speech and all students are invited to attend.

On Tuesday Rabbi Wolf will speak to Dr Bellamy's 12 o'clock Anthropology class about "Little Christian Jesus." He will address Dr Miller's philosophy of Religion class on the Jewish concepts of God.

At 5 p m on Wednesday Jewish students will meet with Rabbi Wolf at their dormitory tea, at which the Jewish girls in the dormitory will serve as hostesses.

The rabbi's final meeting will be with the Hillel Foundation Jewish student students at Ruge Hall where he will discuss The Jewish Idea of God.

Rabbi Wolf is the present rabbi of the Temple Beth Israel in Gadsden, Alabama, where he has lived while his graduation from Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, Ohio, four years ago.

In the fall of 1944 Rabbi Wolf was employed by the Jewish Chautauqua Society to speak at various Jewish centers in the country in order to foster better understanding between the Jews and the Gentiles of the United States, and it is in that capacity that he is coming to Tallahassee.

Odds Win in Modern Dance Competition

Demonstration Is First Of Competitive Type Held

The Odd modern dance group was winner in the Five-Seven competition Saturday night in the Augusta Conrad theater. Their original dance portrayed "A Child's Fantasy."

The performance presented by the Even team was entitled "Lost Souls." This occasion constituted the first competitive demonstration oi modern dance at Florida State College. The dances were judged by faculty members from the physical education department on the basis of a point system which considered originality of theme, execution, technique, grace and floor patterns and effe ♥veness in carrying out the theme. The Odd group scored 96 points and the Even group 94 points.

Preceding the dances a demonstration of techniques used by modern dance students was presented. The group giving this demonstration included members of both the Even and Odd teams.

The students composing the Odd dance team led by Margie Platt were Carolyn Bourland, Jo Donally, Margaret Fridy, Harriet Kirk, Ann Parker, Margie Platt, Betty Ann Shuford, Jeanne Smith, Alice Taft and Marion Welch.

With dance techniques as leader of those making up the Even group included Carolyn Bourland, Lea Byrd, Mary Ann Cassady, Evana Jinx Farrior, Jo Guthrie, Nancy Martin, Peggy Jo McAteer and Mary Louise Perry.

Panhellenic Honors Faculty and Staff

Panhellenic reception in honor of the faculty and staff will be given this afternoon from 4:30 until 6 p m in the Student Alumnae auditorium. A Si Palackiy's day theme will be carried out in the entire tea and while decorations.

Mrs O S Lanier and Mary Shelley will act as general chairman of the reception. A musical program planned by Mrs Ruth Ferguson and Dorris Bridges will be presented for the guests. Chairman of the arrangements committee Mrs Rosebelle Gilliland and Mary Ann Waller, chairman and Mrs Mary Murr, Mrs H Morgan and Margie Morris, flowers; Mrs J A Cooper, Mrs J W Rogers and Mrs Bernice Hall, refreshments; Mrs Ellen Barret, Mrs T B Stovall and Mrs Ben Cleveland, serving, and Mrs Garnett Parker, Mrs Frances Fogg and Estelle Hamilton, invitations. Mrs Dodge and Virginia Collins will be in charge of the receiving line, and Mrs W R Poteet, Mrs Marianne Gserem and Frankie McCarrey will be chairman of the floor hostesses.

YWCA Installation To Be Postponed

The installation of the new officers and representatives of the Young Women's Christian Association has been postponed until March 26, according to an announcement made by Dorothy Caswell, retiring president.

Dorothy said that because of the full program of events for the coming week, during which the installation was originally scheduled, the cabinet thought it best to postpone the ceremony until Monday, March 26 at 8 p m.

The ceremony will be held as planned in the Student Alumnae clubroom and all YWCA members are invited to attend.

The com.nittee chairmen were selected at the cabinet meeting Tuesday night, but Dorothy said that they would not be announced until the ones selected have accepted their appointments.

Esteren Plans

Esteren calls all good Evens out to the games tomorrow to put into practice some of those some and yells heard at the Wednesday evening surprise pep meeting held in front of the new dining hall.

Sarah Bennett, president of Esteren, announced that an Easter egg hunt is being planned for the members. Dorothy Ann Brown is in charge of the arrangements.

Viola Player Appears Here

Toscanini's chief viola player. He remained with Toscanini until 1941. Since that time he has been touring in concert.

When the present tour is over, Mr Primrose and his accompanist, Gui Mombaerts, will leave for South America, where they will appear in concert during July, August and September.

Esteren Searches For an Amplifier

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of an amplifier please notify Sarah Bennett, president of Esteren.

"We have big plans," Sarah said, "of having a street dance soon, but the after dinner recreation group is having difficulty finding an amplifier for the music. We plan to hold this dance in the streets before the new dining hall."

In the plans of the committee are many interesting and amusing ideas, according to Sarah, but at present they will not be revealed.

The after dinner recreation program in front of the new dining hall is in full swing according to the committee, and will be continued as long as the girls enjoy it. Some of the games being played have been horseshoes, badminton, and ball games. As the girls just sit around talking while they watch the activities of the players.

ner for the faculty and a committee of citizens of this state should be formed for the purpose of aiding in producing states and compare them to the needs of this state. A plan should be formed in relation to leasing of land, preventing the destruction of streams, and conserving the oil in the ground. Natural resources should be conserved and must not be allowed to reach the maximum, he added.

Net, the speaker said, the state should be developed, the speaker stated. More service men are returned here than at any other state, because of the suitable climate. In order to encourage them to return after the war a committee should be appointed to advise every man about the appropriation of a large amount of money. It will have to be allowed the committee in order to help them to advertise every major activity of the state.

The grave problem of public school education in Florida, the state is well below the average. In public education mainly because the state has a comparatively small tax base. Florida is also handicap of jobs competing for teachers, and that there are not enough public school teachers. He praised teachers highly for the work they have done and are taking better paid war jobs. He also stressed the importance of the low standard of schools here is that the schedules have been cut to the bone, and many schools have only a seven months session and the basic ones have been slighted. Too many young people are forced to stop at the high school, so the courses should be planned to help them in their future. A permanent Florida Citizens Committee should be organized to study the needs of education and overhaul it, so that Florida education can be classed in a higher category, the speaker said.

Next, the Governor brought up the necessity for getting government back in the hands of the local people. First, the legislature must be prepared to select and elect officers. Governors of states have been forced to suspend many officers because of the people's interest in voting, and interest in choosing local officers, he added.

Another problem is the cabinet budgeting and appropriation, the speaker said. The budget committee is divided by the cabinet members and does not have facts to base a central budgeting system. They may recommend that the Legislature select local officers in charge of budgeting, auditing, and purchasing. If this recommendation is approved it will take the spending problem from the budget board.

The Governor concluded by being followed by a round table discussion and questions.

The first question was, "How would you go about educating the people for citizenship?" The governor replied that this training must start in the classroom and the duty and privilege of voting must be engrained in every child. Very often the people who are in college or who are successful, the three times a week, Miss Bloodworth acts as radio co-ordinator in charge of the "Garnet and Gold" programs broadcast over station WTAL every Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock. She writes the script, directs, and times the programs.

According to Miss Bloodworth the most amusing thing which has happened on the program occurred the night of October 7 when the studio on the top floor of the Alumnae building was being dedicated. The participants went through the entire program only to find at the end, that because of the hurricane, they had not been on the air at all. Apparently the storm had caused a faulty connection. So they had to present the dedication program again the following Thursday night.

A new radio series is being sponsored by the college. "Let's Learn Spanish" is the name of the dramatized program sent out by Time and Life magazines which will go on the air as a college program February 12 for 13 weeks, three times a week.

Student activities and faculty achievements comprise the news which Miss Bloodworth gathers daily. After school she employs one of her assistants helps her gather material. She has a file of copies for release throughout the state.

"Of course, there is no way to tell how much of the information released through the college news is used, but according to the clippings which we receive from the Florida Clipping Bureau, which specializes, of society items, over one thousand inches of publicity appeared in Florida papers each month for the first three months of this year. This is equivalent to a six and one-half page newspaper," said Miss Bloodworth.

Miss Bloodworth keeps something day to have articles about FSC printed in the New York Times and nationally distributed magazines such as Life with a "Life Comes To a Campus" or something similar.

Majoring in English and journalism when she attended FSC, Miss Bloodworth worked on the Flambeau the Distaff and the Flambeau and received practical training in the publicity field as a student assistant in the college publicity office. A member of Alpha Chi Alpha, national journalistic fraternity and Chi Beta Phi, national literary honorary, she received the Bachelor of Arts degree in 1940.

After graduating in three years, Miss Bloodworth worked for the TVA in Morristown, Tennessee, for a year before entering the navy. She has been secretary to the Board of University Examiners in Gainesville, secretary to superintendent W H Shaw, Sumpter, South Carolina; Dr W L Mayer, South Carolina State College; Dr Leo M Chamberlain, University of Kentucky; and Ben Wiseman, Dallas, Texas.

Future of FSCW in Radio Field Interests College Publicity Director Bloodworth

To have a Florida Mutual pickup at least once a month asks from local broadcasting is the aim of Miss Bertha Bloodworth, publicity director, for Florida State College's future in the radio field.

Miss Bloodworth, a graduate of FSC in 1940, returned to Tallahassee last September to reopen and take charge of the publicity department which had been closed for two years. The office is located on the first floor of the Administration building and consists of a reception room, Miss Bloodworth's office, a room where the mimeographing machines and some files are kept, and a darkroom for developing and printing pictures.

In addition to her regular duties as publicity director she writes more than 200 daily papers

Dr Richards' Courageously Saves Moment Supreme

Had it not been for Dr Richards of the physics department, Emily Shetfall would have lost her perfume bottle. Dr Richards' Moment Supreme was a precious bottle of perfume which came from the original collection of Jean Patou, but she had never had a stopper for the bottle.

On trying to open it, she had broken off the ground glass stopper which fitted, but she couldn't get the stopper on the bottle without the instrument Emily put her Parisian perfume away until she could think of some way to get a stopper.

Last week, it suddenly dawned on her that perhaps some physics instrument this year. That he would solve her problem. Her first thoughts were to take her bottle to Supervisor Ben Richards. Imagine Dr Richards' surprise when he presented her with a stopper from a perfume bottle!

Of course, he was only too glad to help Emily out of her predicaments, so, taking all precautions that the bottle should break, he placed it in a glass jar, put four loops of nichrome wire around the neck of the bottle, connected the other ends of the wire to an electric switch, and a steady current of three volts became red hot, and that in turn heated the neck of the bottle. The glass of the neck became hotter than the wedged-in stopper so the bottle expanded faster than the stopper. In the meantime, the air inside the bottle grew hotter and, thus, expanded due to increase. Since the pressure increased, it had to expand, and not having any other place to go, it had to fore its way out, so out popped the stopper. Dr Richards and Emily had the stopper.

To make the job complete, he took pieces of cork from the stopper and glued them together. The next day he presented Emily with her Moment Supreme as good as new, except for a few drops missing due to evaporation.

F Club Makes Rules

A committee has been appointed by the F club to draw up a definite set of rules concerning color rush. These rules will provide for more specific rules concerning the weather. Plans for making the Weather Report to be broadcast in these rules. The rules will be voted on at the next meeting of the F club.

very ones who are most capable, fail to vote because of "dirty politics." These people are largely to blame for the inefficiency in the cause of their failing to vote. The simple fundamental things should be taught to make good citizens, he added.

Another question was, "Do you think we can do more toward forming democracy?" The governor answered affirmatively, saying, that the main thing is to control business. A committee is planning a system to burn forests every three to four years to get rid of the trash and accumulation that would develop over this time.

The final question asked of the governor in the reception room of the Student Alumnae building was held after the meeting.

Nature Camp To Be Opened

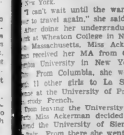
FSC Invited to Send Two Girls to Study Group

State colleges are asked to submit names of a few young women students who are sophomores, juniors or seniors to attend a nature study course to be held near High Spirtus, Florida, June 3 to 16. Quota from Florida State College will be two names.

The nature study camp is to be sponsored by the Florida Federation of Garden Clubs, and located at Camp O'Leno. There is no charge for attending the camp, whose purpose is to provide background and training in Florida wild plant and animal life for prospective state leaders.

It is the hope of the Federation that the course will appeal to students who are preparing to teach grammar grades or who will assume leadership in home communities in their organized outdoor activities for children.

The camp is a state park equipped with recreational facilities. Natu-re study trails are laid out and a state naturalist will be on hand to conduct short hikes each day. Lectures and informal talks will be given by college nature lovers and experienced campers, and a reference library shelf will be supplied. Colored slides and movies will be shown in the evenings in the recreation hall.



The plan of study will include trees, shrubs, wild flowers and vines, seeds and fruits, birds, insects and bees, wild animals, snakes, frogs, lizards, toads, fish, and soil and water, and their various relations to man in their esthetic or practical values.

Students who qualify and are interested in attending this camp are asked to communicate with Mrs L T Weeks, 330 East Court Street, Gainesville.

Freshman Carnival To Be Held Tonight

Side Show, Booths, Fortune Teller To Be Features

The annual Freshman Carnival will be held tonight at 8 p m in the physical education building.

The theme of the carnival is a secret, but Jimmie Rogers, co-chairman of the planning committee, has disclosed that activities not allowed in the gold book will be the order of the night.

The concessions will consist of food and drink stands, fortune-telling booths, sketching booths, and side shows including a bearded lady, the twin thin men, a wild woman, and a five hundred pound lady.

The committees for the carnival are being headed by the freshman class officers, Jo Long and Dena Lee Shepherd are in charge of concessions. Anne Thompson and Jean Shaver, concessions; Bibs McCarthy and Jean Ann Ramsdale, decorations; Jimmie Rogers and Martha Peacock planning; and Betty Kennedy and Beth Fuhrer, publicity committee.

Artcroft Hobbies Is Speech Topic

Continuing the creative interest programs at the Wednesday afternoon teas in Bennie Murphree, Miss Emily Wilburn, associate professor of Industrial Arts, spoke on "Handcraft as a Hobby." She displayed artcraft collected from various countries.

Also on display were rugs, pottery, mats, baskets, book-ends, wood and glass carvings, and basketclothes made by students in the Industrial Art department.

In charge of the arrangements for the tea was Luella Rouse Mathews, graduate student in the Industrial arts department. Juanita Pearce, Rose Mayhew, and Sylvia Schooltz.

Two Colleges Have New Career Service

Geneva, N Y—(IP)—Intelligent choice of a career, the most important problem facing young men and women when they will be aided by a new program introduced by Hobart and William Smith colleges. This service, "Career Destrmination," has been developed by Warren D Bruner, a management consultant, formerly with the airplane division of the Curtiss-Wright Corp. at Buffalo, and now a member of the staff of the coordinate colleges.

According to a recent survey, approximately 50 per cent of students entering liberal arts colleges have made no choice of a career The Career Determination program is designed to include conferences with life interests to ascertain rewards, hardships, working conditions, and opportunities in the field making this choice.

Special testing techniques will help students evaluate their own qualifications for research into their inclinations, abilities, and education needed for success in each field. Provision is made for movies, lectures by visiting experts, and trips to business and industry to demonstrate actual conditions. This program reverses the usual vocational counselling technique

To assist students in finding the opportunities for which they are best fitted, the colleges have also developed a special placement service.

Hinson At Meeting

Doctor M R Hinson, professor of education, is attending a committee meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in Memphis to review the accreditation of such schools in the southern states

Doctor Hinson has been a member of this committee for several years.

Student Recital To Be Presented

Monday afternoon at 5:05 o'clock in the Music Annex Recital hall the weekly student recital will be presented. Miss Lucille Hall, assistant professor of piano, will give a talk demonstration on stage and audience department.

Voice selections will be presented by Miss Twyla Bair accompanied by Miss Margaret Hall; Virginia Sewell accompanied by Miss Roberta Whitfield; Miss Mona Mitre accompanied by Miss Dolly Sutton; and Miss Virginia Hollis accompanied by Miss Elvina Wiggins. Piano selections will be given by Miss Roberts Perkins and Miss Edwina Wilkins.

The time for the student recitals has been changed from Wednesday to Monday, announced Dean Kuerstainer, School of Music.

Wednesday afternoon at tea Parkside had on display some articles from various parts of the world which were contributed by the students.

Among these were a pair of straw sandals and a shell bracelet sent to Edwina Speirs by her husband who was in Hawaii. Letters and snapshots from her penfriend in England were shown by Jean Gardner, and money from England, France and Canada was contributed to the display by Winnie LaPaso.

Mrs Harriet Barksdale, house director, showed the girls a necklace carved from ivory which her son had sent her from India. She also told that the ostrich fan she had on display had been used to fan her son, Jimmy, when he had a fever while in the Arabian desert. When he had prepared to leave his Arab friends one of them gave it to him as a souvenir.

Another necklace and bracelet and a tiny carved ivory statue were displayed by Sybil Hughes. The little statute was worshipped as a god by the natives on the South Pacific islands and it was difficult to persuade the natives to sell such statues.

All the articles on display were gifts that the residents of Parkside had been sent from other countries and then raised from little Dutch dolls to intricately carved ivory statues, and articles appropriate for wheat-cold climates.

Mrs A J Caldwell, chaperon of the Phi Chi House was the only guest at the tea.

Mather To Discuss Book On Religion

Miss Juliette Mather, southwide young people's leader of the Women's Missionary Union, will discuss the book, "Faith With the Baptist girls of Florida State College tonight at 8 o'clock at the Baptist Student House.

Miss Mather will hold two additional forums during the week-end. One will be held tomorrow and the other will be held Saturday afternoon at 2:30 and the other Saturday at 8 p m.

Miss Katherine Walker, local Baptist student secretary, said that Miss Mather has traveled abroad through Europe and Palestine and is now living in Birmingham, Alabama. She also stated that Miss Mather comes to them very well recommended as a speaker.

PTA Meets

At the PTA meeting of the Demonstration School last night a recommendation was presented requesting the increase of the state's appropriation for schools. This recommendation would provide for securing more money for the smaller schools.

Hillel to Sponsor Oratorical Contest

Challenge to Complacency To Be Theme of Talks

The theme of the school-wide oratorical contest which has been in progress since the week of February 9th is "World Citizenship: Challenge to Complacency." The contest, finals of which will be held April 25, is sponsored jointly by the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation and the World Student Affairs Council.

All students are urged to prepare papers on the contest and all campus organizations should appoint one person in their group to prepare a speech on the subject, Cordelia Barclay, Council chairman. The talks may be on any subject related to the general theme and are to be approximately 800 words or 5 minutes long. The prize money is to be awarded publicly in an evening program on April 25. Judges will be prominent state and out-of-state officials. Grand prizes will be three dollars in cash, to be engraved with the names of the winners.

Semi-finals will be held April 17 and 18, with faculty members as judges. Entries in the contest will be April 10. Applications and information may be obtained from Rabbi Abraham Shusterman, director of the school of music, and Robert Kuerstainer, secretary, and he became so interested in the work that he decided to purchase the study of the subject as a means of achieving functional ability in a language.

Dean Kuerstainer first became interested in the field of applied music during his study days at the University of Michigan. He worked for a year there in collaboration with Dr. Joseph Maddy, director of the school of music, and Robert Kuerstainer, brother, and he became so interested in the work that he decided to purchase the study of the subject as a means of achieving functional ability in a language.

Dean Kuerstainer began his musical studies in Louisville, Ky., and continued them there until he was graduated from Shelby Public chose Bush Conservatory in Chicago for further study and his college training, transferred to Ithaca Conservatory in Ithaca, N Y., and A. B. degree. He received his BM degree at the Chicago Musical college, and his graduate work at the University of Michigan, he left for Europe where he studied in Salzburg during the summer of 1935, and in the summer of 1937 in Switzerland. He returned to do more graduate work at the University of Michigan and to act as professor of music at the University of Kansas until the summer of 1939 when he accepted the position of dean of the music school at FSC.

The field work of the American Red Cross will not be far reaching. Most of the relief for America's allies in Europe as in Germany and Japan are sent by the Red Cross. "We really get a kick out of doing it," Mrs Bailey said, "Knitting is the best thing for food and clothing." This statement was made in a letter to an FSC student. Mrs Bailey's boy who is a prisoner of war in Germany. Another prisoner of war who have returned to this country have praised the American Red Cross for the service in aviation after the war. it was discovered in the course of a nation-wide surve yof educational institutions made public recently by Ernest F. Breech, president of Bendiv Aviation Corporation.

The Wisconsin colleges who have since had definite plans in the survey are: Marquette University, Milwaukee; Lawrence College Stevens Point: Carroll College and State Teachers' College, Milwaukee.

In common with 456 American colleges it responded to the survey to date, the four institutions indicated they would require, for teaching and other auxiliary duties of useable government-owned aircraft equipment, which will be declared surplus after the war.

A total of 342 schools in their replies stressed the need for supplying to the nation's colleges at low cost quantities of surplus useable aircraft and equipment, as a fundamental contribution to future continuous development of aviation education. it was pointed out.

This equipment will be made available to the various schools on a sale or lease ba, is, under provisions of the Federal Surplus Disposal law, Breech stated. Replies to the Bendix survey to date reveal that at least 307 colleges have specific plans for teaching some aspects of aviation after the war, according to Breech, who headed the surplus aircraft disposal committee of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

The survey further disclosed that 312 colleges already offering aviation curricula plan to continue or expand, and that 95 colleges which do not teach aeronautics at present are definitely interested in planning to establish postwar courses. Breech stated.

Music Objectives Is Topic of Paper By Kuerstainer

By MIRIAM ANGELL

Mr Karl O Kuerstainer, dean of the music school, created a great deal of interest on the campus with his dissertation on applied music objectives which prepared for his PhD degree. The paper deals with the objective goals of applied music of the past music masters in their methods of instruction, and their findings for results as compared with the purposes of the present day music master's instruction in applied music.

The paper contains a discussion of the differences of opinion in recent years of the objectives of the relative values derived from music training. The two schools of thought, is the public school music theory are the primary and secondary The primary school aims at achieving functionality in music as in any other art, the most important consideration in the study of music. The secondary school, however, believes that music should be studied as a means of achieving functional ability in a language.

Dean Kuerstainer first became interested in the field of applied music objectives during his study days at the University of Michigan. He worked for a year there in collaboration with Dr. Joseph Maddy, director of the school of music, and Robert Kuerstainer, brother, and he became so interested in the work that he decided to purchase the study of the subject as a means of achieving functional ability in a language.

Headgears Cover Rain-Soaked Hair

"I just washed my hair and it's dirty, but I'll wear it," is the familiar expression so often heard around the Florida State College campus. But this statement does not let this get her down because she can make anything from head-gears to cover the uncontrollable mop.

The principle arises on whether to tie Tom's Navy handkerchief or put Dick's Army cap on her head. Sometimes she does, the other the girl goes out into the rain.

If rain is bursting from the sky, another problem is that of keeping the hair dry. Hats must be carefully or carelessly (depending on the girl, occasion, or date. If she's ambitious she'll probably rolled up on rags the night before. Some students brave the weather sloppily, with tresses pulled real low and just high enough above the eye to afford vision without collision.

Out in the torrents of rain and drooling hair comes the FSC woman, some trudging slowly forward with their raincoats pulled over their head or umbrellas waving in the wind. Others walk nonchalantly in the rain hair with covering on the sides for protection. Cake hair, these shaped in the form of pies, fancy caps or tams with knots on the tops.

Other popular headgears, fringed scarfs and ear-muffs are quite popular.

Aviation Plans

Waukesha, Wis (IP)—At least four Wisconsin colleges and universities are planning to establish or continue courses in aviation after the war, it was disclosed in response to a nation-wide surve yof educational institutions made public recently by Ernest F. Breech, president of Bendiv Aviation Corporation.

The Wisconsin colleges who have since had definite plans in the survey are: Marquette University, Milwaukee; Lawrence College Stevens Point: Carroll College and State Teachers' College, Milwaukee.

Decline in Foreign Languages Shown

Nicholas M Butler Deplores Educational Decrease

New York, N. Y.—(I.P.)—Dr Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, in his annual report, deplores the steady decline in the study of foreign languages in American colleges, which he attributes chiefly to the pressure of social studies upon the curricula.

"The languages, like English literature and mathematics, have been steadily losing in extinction by the pressure of courses in general education and the ever increasing demand for special training for vocations. Obviously this strikes at the very roots of a liberal education. The harmful results of these curriculum restrictions are already evident in the products of graduate and professional schools."

Intermediate Free Bulletins

Dr Butler praises the Army's achievement in accepting responsibility for language instruction in its own schools in the Special-ists Training Program.

"The results of the Army's language program have given a high potential value for the post-war period. These results clearly contradict the theory that American youth cannot become language-minded and furnish conclusive evidence that he can do so if given sufficient time and the adequate facilities. Our returning men with the life and institutions of other peoples, who have come into our neighbors whether they live in South America, Europe or Asia, will be valuable administrators and teachers, including a considerable and influential group, feel that foreign-language study will now enter on a new stage of development."

"For many years there has been a steadily growing number of students from other lands at Columbia. Dr Butler points out in his report, "They come in large numbers years of foreign students to Berlin and to Paris, justly looked upon as centers of the best education of those universities has been largely interrupted. There is increased number by those now coming here."

"It is of particular interest that for three years past there have been held in Germany under the auspices of the Red Cross, a competitive examination for a number of free choice Russian students, selected by their home government and sent to Berlin and Paris for very definite purposes. All these students are graduates of well-known universities, and many of them have taken active parts in the life of their own country. It is apparent that the government of Russia is taking cognizance of the language handicap in itself with a body of trained youth with scientific and literary knowledge contact with other countries throughout the world."

"Russian exchange scholars are undergrad, and a new capital grant of $10,000,000 to open the general salary revision is required, Dr Butler says. "The salaries paid are far from adequate to even becoming. The rising cost of living and the high Federal taxes have made the situation now and most serious problems. The entire salary schedule ought to be revised at the earliest possible moment."

Odds, Evens Both Win Soccer Games

After losing the first class game to the freshmen and juniors by a score of six to one, the sophomore-senior combination won the second game yesterday with a score of four to nothing.

The first game Babe Evans, Bopie Whitaker, and Catherine Sullivan scored goals for the freshmen and juniors, while Rachel Chambers turned a penalty kick into the sophomore for the Odds. The sophomore-senior combination was held scoreless by the Evens and Odds centers breaking loose in the second quarter to score two goals.

Tuesday at 5:15 the Odd-Even team will participate in tomorrow's game.

Roundup Planned

Sophomore Council is planning a "round-up" of all old and present members next Thursday. At 7:30 p m all members will meet in front of the dining room and have breakfast together.

Thursday afternoon at 5:30 p m there will be a picnic supper. Detail plans are a big secret and the present "blue jackets" are planning a big surprise for the old members.

Horse-Mounted

Russia still maintains a large number of horse-mounted troops. Being the only country still to use horse-mounted troops in battle hasn't proves a disadvantage for Russia. The ability of these troops to make use of the tactical advantages of the terrain and shock has often proved itself to be too much for enemy soldiers to face.

Student Senate Passes Changes In Gold Book

Constitution, Convocation Cuts, Audit Ruling Are Revised

One Resolution Is Rejected After Discussion

Student Senate passed changes in a the constitution, the under standing rules, and convocation ruling this past week when it met Wednesday afternoon.

The changes after passing Senate will be presented in a future convocation, where they will be voted on by the student body, after they have been posted for two weeks on the bulletin board. If the changes are passed by the student body in this way they will go into effect in the fall of this year.

The changes in the constitution involved changes in the election system to comply with the change from the semester to the quarter system which will be instituted in Florida State College this year. According to the new rules a candidate for a class office in the sophomore, junior, or senior class must have a grade ratio of 1.0 for each of the two quarters immediately preceding candidacy. A candidate for an office in the freshman class must have a grade ratio of 1.0 for the quarter immediately preceding candidacy. A student must be a bona fide member of the class for the year in which she holds office and must maintain a grade ratio of 1.0 for the term in office."

In section two the change will read "All students, except second quarter freshmen, must have a grade ratio of 1.0 for each of the two quarters immediately preceding candidacy. A student

Palm Sunday Organ Vespers to Be Given

Church Choirs to Participate In Musical Selections

The last of the series of pre-Easter organ vespers will be presented Sunday, March 25, at 4:30 p m in Westcott Auditorium.

Musical selections bringing out the spirit of Palm Sunday will be rendered by choir groups. Represented among these choirs will be the First Baptist church, Baptist Student Union, Trinity Methodist, Presbyterian Church, St John's Episcopal church, Russell and Florida Methodist church. A choir from Dale Mabry field has scheduled to perform but will be able to do so if it can.

The "Processional" will be played by Mrs Margaret Hall, assistant professor of organ and director of the program. "Blessings of Palm" by Archangelsky, "Hosanna Bursts Today," by Dickinson-Shaw; "God Is a Spirit" by Schnecker, and "All Glory, Laud and Honor" by Techner will be sung by the choirs. The junior choir, located in the balcony, will render selections as the "Choral Strains" by Strauss, organist of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, will play the "Postlude."

The program is sponsored by the Tallahassee Branch Chapter of the American Guild of Organists of which Mrs Beard is the Regent.

Highest Freshmen Grades Announced

Names of 20 girls who made the highest average in the freshman class for the first semester's work were announced recently by Dr M W Cumpston, registrar.

The girls, Anne Bright Fielding and Winifred Annette Lane, who made three point averages, were honored by having their names placed on a scholarship honor roll to be displayed at Honors' Day convocation.

Both honored are as follows: Leland Arias, Constance Baker, Rosemary Baker, Adelaide Chambers, Laura Lee Butler, Mary Belle Dias, Audrey Carr Evans, Anne Bright Fielding Hamlin Rogers Krentzman, Winifred Annette Lane, Lois Ann Morrow, Jeanne Marie Newman, Patricia Jane Pattishall, Ruth Sara Perry, Lailie Rogers, Elaine Sessa, Alice Josephine Smith, Anne Margaret Strinfellow, Mary Maud Trowbridge and Mary Louise Van Natta.

Forum

A student forum on co-education will be held next Friday night in the auditorium of the Student Alumnae building at 8 o'clock. The history of co-education in Florida, the pros and cons of the subject for the University of Florida and FSC and the possibility of the State Legislature passing a law in favor of co-education will be the topics of discussion.

Dot Jean Glass, third vice-president of COA and head of the forum committee, announced that there would be four students who have not yet been selected as forum speakers. The speeches will be followed by open discussion in which all students are urged to participate.

Officials Will Judge Contest

Barclay, Halpern, Holmes Urge Student Entries

Four officials of the state of Florida have been asked by Dr Campbell will be judges for the finals of the first FSC oratorical contest, to be held April 24, Cordelia Barclay, chairman of the Student World Affairs Council, has announced.

To judge the finals competition speeches will be the Honorable Roy Chapman, Chief Justice of the Florida Supreme Court; the Honorable Colin English, superintendent of Education; Secretary of State Robert A Gray; and Dr Campbell.

All students are asked to enter the contest, in which eight-minute or 900-word talks will be given. The subject will be "Post-War Citizenship—Challenge to Complacency," and each student's talk can be used as a theme, according to the SWAC chairman.

Each organization and association has been asked to enter one candidate to be judged by the panel of three silver cups. Individuals are also urged to enter.

Deadline for indicating a desire to enter is April 10, and Cordelia Barclay, Virginia Holmes, and Gerry Halpern, all of the Student Affairs Council, are asked to be candidate in composition or in oratory.

"We urge every student to enter," Cordelia states. "Discussion on campus knows that our college students can narrow a theme and this contest is part of a joint effort to broaden them. Entering it is simple, the talk can be on any and any student talking part will enjoy the competition."

Semi-finals will be held April 17 and 18. The contest is sponsored jointly by the Rhai B'rith Hillel foundation, headed by Gerry Halpern, and the Student Council's SWAC, composed of heads of 27 campus organizations.

Dumbarton Oaks Is Discussed by Panel

The International Relations committee of the Florida branch of the association of University Women of Tallahassee and the International Relations club of Florida State College will sponsor a panel discussion on the Dumbarton Oaks proposals Wednesday, March 28, at 8:15 p m. in the auditorium of the Bowens Longmire building.

The program will open with a discussion of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals by Miss Marian Irish followed by a talk on the political and constitutional aspects by Miss Daisy Parker. Problems of international organizations will be discussed by Miss Lucretia Imler and the creation of international public opinion will be discussed by Miss Ruth Vance.

Questions from the floor will follow. All interested in the Dumbarton Oaks proposal are invited to attend this meeting.

Sophomore Council Will Hold Round-Up

The annual Sophomore Council-roundup will be held next Wednesday, March 27. All juniors and seniors who were former sophomore council girls are invited to meet with this year's council in front of the Student building at 7:50 a m for breakfast. In the evening the girls are to meet at the gymnasium to go on a picnic, the location of which is secret.

All the girls are asked to wear their council uniforms all day.

Committee chairman for the roundup are: Geneva Barter, invitation committee; Betsy Hahn, food committee; Bookie McMichael, entertainment committee.

Sophomore Council plans to begin an annual events since 1937.

Reception to Honor Kellum

Retiring Business Manager Receives Recognition

Mr J G Kellum, retiring business manager of Florida State College, was honored last night by a banquet and reception.

At the banquet, which was given in the old dining hall at 7:30, Dr Doak S Campbell, president, and members of the executive council were hosts. Dr W G Dodd, dean emeritus of the School of Arts and Sciences, on behalf of the faculty, presented Mr Kellum with a scroll signed by all members of the faculty and staff. Dr Elizabeth G Andrews, dean of women, was master of ceremonies.

The presentation of the scroll was made by Dr Campbell. After the presentation President Campbell expressed on behalf of the board of education, board of control, executive council, and faculty, their respect and appreciation for his fine service. Governor Millard F Caldwell also expressed his appreciation.

The reception which followed the banquet was held from 8:11 p m in the main lounge and small lounge of the Student Alumnae building.

Mr Kellum has been connected with Florida State College for many years.

Four Defense Films Presented Tomorrow

Senior Hall Sponsors Week's Informative Pictures

Senior Hall members are sponsoring this week's defense films which will be shown tomorrow night in the Augusta Conradi Little Theatre. The 45-minute program will consist of four brief films: "Mexican Moods," in full color; "Coast Guard Story: Report"; "Power in Readiness" and the "Western Front."

Dot Glass, publicity committee has been responsible for obtaining the defense films being shown at the program. Representatives of this committee, which is composed of the heads of 27 campus groups belonging to the World Affairs Council, tell that there was a definite need for such films at the Florida State College for more and more complete information concerning the war.

All films that are shown are released by the war information agencies. Most of them are shown in regular theaters as shorts and are also available at only the cost of transportation. This sum is paid from the money made by selling war stamps. Head of the sixth Lynn, assistant professor of Physics, is in charge of getting the films from the agencies and operate the projector.

In the past, not many people have made use of this opportunity, announced Dot Jean Glass, chairman of the film activities committee. She also stated that she had "several unusually good films scheduled for the near future, including one on South American affairs, on April 14, during the 'Pan-American Week'."

A mistake was made Saturday night in the time of the films. Be forgot to sign up for the Little Theater on the Student Dance bulletin board. The result was a "vaudeville" before the informational reels.

Five FSC Seniors Match Wits In 'Brain Quiz' at Army Camp

Five seniors from Florida State College matched wits with five servicemen from Camp Gordon Johnston in a "Brain Quiz" held at the Camp Service Club Wednesday evening and won by a very close margin, 240 to 239. The winnings, $25 in cash, were contributed to the War Bond drive, to a prize agreement by both groups of contestants.

The five seniors, hailed by the master of ceremonies, Lt Francis Tyer, Special Services officer, as "brains," included Isabel Rogers, president of COA and a Phi Beta Kappa, Mary Gray Mendenhall, chairman of off-campus committee and a Phi Beta Kappa, Virginia Holmes, president of International Relations club, Diane Washbon, social chairman of Landic; and Janet Pancoast, associate editor of the Florida Flambeau and a Phi Beta Kappa.

The girls, driven to and from Camp Gordon Johnston in a staff car, were shown over the camp by the members of the opposing team: M/Sgt Saul Miller, T/3 Paul J Kern, of New York City; T/Sgt L E Clayton, Fremont, Ohio; T/3 James B Vickery, Unity, Maine; and William F Morse, Cleveland, Ohio.

A boat ride for the girls was scheduled Thursday on the inland condition of the Gulf, but the seniors enjoyed going through the post exchange and eating in the mess hall with the boys, a visit to the Non-Commissioned Officers' club, a tour through the post library, and a tour through the camp area and inspection of the barracks as well as a much-appreciated lunch after the quiz was over.

The quiz, commented the girls, was on a very high intellectual level. One of them admitted that "We really didn't know what we were in for." Questions on completion of quotations from literature were snapped up by both sides. Historical dates were identified so rapidly that the MC decided that the questions were getting too easy. Mathematics stumped the girls, whereas the boys gilibly named baseball champions, baseball heroes, and winning football teams.

Hollywood, of course, both classical and popular, were also included. Both sides showed widespread information on many subjects, and answers and reparties were often humorous.

Mrs W H Rogers was the chaperone for the trip.

PKL Invites Dr Campbell

Dean Opperman Tells of President's Election

Dean Emeritus Ella S Opperman, president of the local chapter of Phi Kappa Lambda, national music honorary, announced that Dr Doak S Campbell, president of Florida State College, has been invited to membership in that organization on a faculty status.

Four students and one alumna were also elected to Phi Kappa Lambda. The students were Mary Ruth Alexander, Sara Margaret Rose Miller, Joanna Sturgnk and Margaret Louise Smith. All are majors in the School of Music. Mrs Kathryn R Haun was the alumna invited to membership. She has sung in concerts throughout the United States and abroad and is now in her second season with the Gilbert and Sullivan opera company.

Alumnae Group Publishes Bulletin

The Alumnae association of Florida State College has just published its first newsletter for this year. The bulletin, which contains a summary of the college news, is published each quarter and is mailed to approximately 7,000 graduates from Florida State. About four-fifths of the bulletins are sent to alumnae living in Florida, with the rest distributed to various places over the world. Sixty are sent overseas to the alumnae in service.

The bulletins are written up and published by the staff employed of Alumnae association. Members of the Alumnae office staff are: Miss Florence Flynn, executive secretary; Margaret J Boyle, vice president; Mrs Julia Dehaa, executive secretary and editor of bulletin; Mrs Marion P Reese, assistant editorial; and Miss Lettie Baxter; Mrs Mildred D Harvey, Mrs Elizabeth B Whitney, Miss Cedora Futch, and Miss Marjory Faulerson, who are members of the board.

Tickets Distributed For Artist Series

Maurice Hindus, Next Artist, Appears April 14

Distribution of tickets for the next Artist Series will begin April 2 and continue through April 6, announced Mrs Ruth Landis, chairman of the Artist Series committee, head of the School of Music. Admittance will be by reserved seats only.

The artist, Maurice Hindus, lecturer, novelist, and expert on Russia, will appear in Westcott auditorium on April 14. Mr Hindus is a native Russian who left the country when he was still a young man. His first-hand knowledge of Russia has been expressed in his books, which are "Mother Russia," "Humanity Uprooted," "Humanity Uprooted," and "Red Beard."

Mr Hindus has made frequent visits to Russia, thus enabling him to speak with accuracy and authority on the war and the political machine, as a people, and as a nation.

Tickets will go on sale to the public April 9 in the college book store.

Playnight Will Use Quiz Program Theme

Playnight this Saturday night will be based on the popular radio program "Truth or Consequences." Jane Worrill will be the Mistress of Ceremonies and the contestants will be chosen at random from the audience.

The program will begin at 9:15 p m right after the defense films in the Little Theater. The public is to attend the films which are being sponsored this week by Senior Hall.

All students are invited to attend Playnight. Those attending they might be fortunate enough to be one of the contestants. Students may bring their dates.

Junior-Senior Prom Started In 1927; Now Is College Tradition

Since the inaugural Junior Senior Prom was held in 1927, which featured men and an imported orchestra, it has continued to be the main event of the Spring season at Florida State College.

Every year the Juniors and Seniors spend many weary but seldom unrewarded hours lining up that "special man" for the night when several riding and dining rule of FSC are abolished for the Juniors and Seniors.

Quite a few sophomore council girls look forward to being asked to be hat-check girls and are happy to stagger under the weight of the coats as to meet and greet the guests as they come.

In other years Freshmen have hung over piled up dining hall tables to catch a glimpse of the frolic and this year was no exception. The freshmen become almost as excited as the Juniors and Seniors over the spectacle of so many good looking dresses and men.

In 1932 the annual prom was attended in spite of rain and high weather. For that weekend various sorority houses gave dances on Saturday before the prom and on Sunday the dormitories gave teas and informal parties.

In 1930 the Juniors and Seniors could stay out until very late according to our time limits now. That night "special man" for the night when several riding and dining rule of FSC are abolished for the Juniors and Seniors.

Also in 1930 began the custom of signing only one date card for the whole day's activities provided the day's activities were attended with only one date which one need have no fear of now.

In 1934 the plays that were the Distaff prize were given as a command performance for the Juniors and Seniors. A special section of the Augusta Conradi theater was roped off for the prom-trotters and their escorts.

That year the University of Florida Symphonic Band, the Florida Bulldogs, played for the affair.

In 1935 Noel Coward's prize play "Hay Fever" was presented by the players.

In 1941 the East dining hall was decorated in red, white, and blue for patriotic effects. The prom was given on Feb 21, in honor of George Washington.

The programs had figures of colonial couples on the front and the theme song, script for the atmosphere.

Russ Morgan's orchestra gave out with "Stardust" and other swing music. This was the first time a big-name band had appeared on campus.

The bandstand was along one side of the ballroom and was made like an old-fashioned garden. Potted palms, flowers were placed on the walls between the windows.

In 1942 Emory's Aces from Alabama brought along a cool blues singer, Betty Parks and microphones were set up to give the ball an important air.

The theme that year was South Seas Island with Hawaiian dancers played from a thatched hut on one side of the hall.

Religion Is Speech Topic

Wolf Speaks to Council Tuesday Evening

"Religion as a Basis for Cooperation" was the theme of the talk given by Rabbi Alfred Wolf, of Temple Emmanual, Dothan, Alabama, when he spoke to the Religious Workers' Council on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Methodist student house.

Rabbi Wolf defined religion as being based on study, worship and charity. He spoke on each topic separately explaining in detail whether or not it would work in society today.

Under religious study, it was pointed out that the teaching of religion in the primary grades of public schools would not be advisable, because children of that age are just beginning to build the foundation of the beliefs of their denominations through the teachings of their parents. Teachers are too apt to interpret the Bible to their own religious ideas which are not the same beliefs of every denomination represented in a classroom.

Rabbi Wolf stated, "America is established on the principle of separation of the church and the state." He said that although religious instruction should be given in primary grades, the Bible could be studied in high schools and colleges as a source of literature so that one might learn about other religions, and that a child should be taught that there are other ways to worship God.

Rabbi Wolf said that it would be difficult for all denominations to worship together because each would soon become watered down. He said that there could be occasional visits by the local guests of other denominations. By this contact with other faiths the individual can understand and learn about other modes of worship and that this would strengthen rather than weaken his own religion. It was stated that although many groups do not believe in the same religion, and that one denomination must not be set up as the standard for charity, there is no exclusion because of race, color or creed. The community should be built on the common ground where all denominations can meet.

During the address, the various movements that are fostering the brotherhood of mankind today were cited. These movements, the speaker declared, are teaching the individual to better understand what faiths, other than his own, represent.

FSCW Alumnae Act

Senator Charles S Ausley told the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce yesterday that the Florida State College Alumnae Association and its legislative committee has already written to the legislators concerning the co-education issue.

He said that the alumnae can demand all legislators to "say hasty action" on co-education and that they would do injury to Florida State College.

Emory President Addresses Honors' Day Convocation; Campbell Presents Awards

242 Students Recognized for B Average for 45 Hours; Freshmen Act as Marshals and Ushers; Mortar Board Given

"Peace is not an absence of war,' said Dr Goodrich C White, president of Emory University, in his address at the Scholastic Honors Day convocation held Tuesday afternoon in Westcott auditorium. The convocation was in honor of the 242 students who have records of at least 45 hours of B work. In the case of transfer students this was lowered to 30 hours.

Dr Doak S Campbell, president of Florida State College, introduced the speaker and made the special award presentations.

Dr White stated in his address that he feels the place to learn how to pay the price of freedom is in the American schools of higher education. He stated that in a younger generation learns that peace is not a negative thing, but something that is built around the council tables of the world our nation and all nations have a better chance of enjoying a lasting peace.

Honor Day Is Important

Dr White said an Honors Day such as the one celebrated on Tuesday was important, but it itself, but as a symbol of what the allies are fighting for. A symbol of the international mind and the right to seek and teach the truth. "This war is not a war of one old struggle of ideals against brute force, justice against the forces of power, right against wrong, Dr White brought out.

"The cost in money, in the final victory unless everyone in the world is free, he continued. Peace is not a matter of one or two countries enjoying freedom without any regard for the sufferings of other parts of the world. There is a price on peace.

The speaker went on to say, "the golden dream is hard, stern reality if civilization is to continue on this earth. America not only has to fight abroad, but she has a battle at home before she has really made the world safe for democracy. Democracy will become Americans first instead of members of different racial, color, and religious groups."

The nature and permanence of the peace depends on the nature and permanence of the people for whom and by whom the peace is

Play to Open On April 10

Yellow Jacket to Be Given By Speech Department

A Chinese fantasy will be presented when the "Hellow Jacket" given by the speech department at Florida State College. Arranging the form and spirit of Chinese drama, the play will appear April 10, 11 and 12 in the Little Theater.

The play presents his drama of a young man's adventures through life from birth through his development as a youth, lover and mature man. Seeking and finding adventure, excitement and satisfaction, he at last finds a meaning for his life

The conventions of the Chinese stage will lie used. Costumes and make up will be especially stylized. Special music is being arranged by Mr Frank Sykora, assistant professor of music, with members of the band. They will accompany the scenes with musical effect of various kinds through the entire production. Miss Ann Bell is in charge of the dance and of staging and lighting. Since the whole drama takes place in one conventional setting, the traditional property man and his assistants will manipulate the chairs and tables in full view of the audience to provide variety in setting an idea and philosophy of living in a non-realistic manner.

"The cast is progressing splendidly with the production," said Miss Evelyn Bowman, assistant professor of speech. "We anticipate

Religious Choices Listed By Girls

One hundred and fourteen new freshmen expressed preferences for 13 different religious denominations in the questionnaire submitted to them early this year, according to the tabulation compiled by the office of the registrar.

The Baptist and Methodist churches each received the stated preference of 27 girls. Twenty-two are members of the Episcopal church; three, the Christian Science; one, the Church of Christ; one, the Assembly of God; and nine, the Episcopalian church. Two girls preferred the Lutheran church, one the Seventh Day Adventist, two, the Protestant, and three the Christian Science.

Seven girls expressed their preference for the Catholic church, and five stated no church faith.

Only five girls out of the 118 new freshmen stated no preference.

Contributions Soar In Red Cross Drive

Combined faculty and student contributions to the Red Cross have reached a grand total of $3,356.83, with student contributions making up $815.13 of the whole amount, Faculty solicited under the direction of Mr Henry F Thomas, professor of geography, amounted to $1,541.70.

As a result of door to door campaigns in the dormitories, canvassed by Senior hall, student contributions have netted nearly $150 more than last year.

Mary Lee Withers and Jackie Parker are in charge of the drive for the Senior Hall drive for contributions.

Spirit of the Week

● EDUCATION FOR WHAT

College graduates are fast falling into the standardized strata of mass production. They have been victimized by an educational lag with the result that they are stereotyped by required courses which produce unthinking minds. Many college graduates come forth from four years in college with their minds undeveloped and only a degree as evidence of their efforts.

Today students are full of facts, but they do not have the ability to use and transfer their knowledge. They are almost completely unable to analyze, interpret, appraise, classify and apply their knowledge to living in a democratic society.

The fact is that students know more and have the ability to learn more than either teachers or parents give them credit. By not recognizing the intellectual possibilities of students, teachers unconsciously tend to limit the students' scope and make their minds lazy. Their education becomes a repeated pattern with almost all students doing only enough to get by.

We need an educational system that will be a step in the direction to remove the barrier of valueless knowledge or at least day away with facts for which the individual has no use. Many educators and institutions are not willing to make changes, whether they be radical or conservative. They continue digging deeper the rut of educational lag. Perhaps we should, as President Robert Hutchins of the University of Chicago suggests, build our universities and colleges in tents so that every twenty-five years they can be torn down and re-built.

● HANDICAPS FUTURE

America is being faced with many problems today of many different natures. What to do with the economic world, what improvement can be made in our educational system, who is going to put their country's title on captured territory, and a variety of other such problems meet the public man today.

All these questions are of utmost importance and should have immediate attention. However, the human being in the post war era should also be an upper thought in our fast growing problems of peace. Everyone will be looking for a job! Everyone will be seeking some source of security, and everyone will want to make the most of his mental, physical, and social welfare.

There will be a distinct group of young men who will return from the battlefield injured for life. Your friends, who once could dance, play golf, drive a car, and socially accepted as ugly public pests. What is America going to do itself, will have to adjust to this fact! Are we going to give the handicapped a chance to live—and by living, I mean work, play, and worship as his fellow citizens? Or are we going to tax the government and people to provide a source of seclusion for those who we do not regard as physically fit to meet our demands in the business and educational programs?

Today we have twenty-five million physically handicapped men, women, and children! To these will be added men who also are handicapped as a result of service toyour country —America! What compensation are we going to give them?

They do not want pity, they do not want to be talked to! They want an opportunity to compete in America! To live and work in America! Are we going to give them the opportunity? Is FSC going to make an effort to meet the rehabilitation demands now or in the future? We are a leading woman's college and as such, we should start now, facing the facts and doing all we can to make the life of the handicapped more profitable than it looks to them now. Accept them for what they are and give them an opportunity to use what they have regardless of physical incapabilities. Adopt a vocational program which would be accessible to be handicapped. Above all, bring these vital facts to the attention of the American student on every college and university campus.

The answer to the problem primarily lies with you, young America! You, students at FSC! And with you, a part of the general public! EVELYN AYRAULT—Guest Editorial Writer.

COLLEGE COMMENTS

College Comeback

By EILEEN DAVIS

With the advent of spring the crusading spirit seems to have entered America's colleges. At the University of Wisconsin, Mrs Glenn Frank, widow of the former university president, has joined what appears to be a rising tide demanding the abolition of high school and college fraternities and sororities. In an article in the March issue of the Woman's Home Companion, Mrs Frank argued that she felt that the Greek-letter organizations might foster was outweighed by their snobbery, religious bigotry, pressure for caste systems and undemocratic practices. First Panhellenic fraternity council vice president answering for his group, claimed that any statement of the type made by Mrs Frank showed an ignorance of the principles, creeds and principles of the Greek organizations." Abolish them? Not at the University of Wisconsin? Time will tell.

As election week draws near at Georgia Teachers College, Georgia's campus leaders are starting a movement to clean up politics. Part of what they consider a campus voting evil—"straight party tickets." Too many students are voting for either all of one or a progressive ticket without any idea as to whether the candidates they represent them in student government. Candidates who can boast a long list of activities usually receive winning elections. Many students have lost their positions because they have been too busy bother to vote. The suggested solution to the problem is to have the use of the Australian ballot bearing the names of the candidates and the offices they may make his selection according to party rather than according to names. It will be the duty of the two parties to fan the voting spirit and hold closely contested elections.

Trail Blazing Must End! That's the slogan at Texas State College for Women. Barry Fox and students came out with loud squawks and complaints because new cement walks were laid. And yet the reason for these walks was all too clear, however taint the grips of the students. Mud in the fall plus so much tramping across the grass ensures a path by late winter. For the benefit of the perennial grass-cutters, the walks were added. Come spring and greener grass, even more students seemed to take the shortcuts. The solution of this practice is an open invitation to more walks. Aware of the situation, workmen are replacing against further traipsing on green grass. Soon the new grass better than cement, and their leaders hope to make a word to the wise sufficient.

In This Our Time

In Hitler's Germany

Ten years ago last week Adolf Hitler set out building the German Army for war with the ordering of general conscriptions for military training. For ten years Adolf Hitler has marked the anniversary, calling it "Heroes' Day." Speeches, medal-giving, and parades became the order of celebration. This year, "Heroes' Day" was not the triumphant affair it has been in the past. Instead of the military parades along the flag draped boulevards of Berlin, there were parades of hungry Nazis and Nazis who had been bombed out of their homes. Instead of the usual bragging speech of the Reichsfuhrer, there was merely a broadcasted speech by an underling. There could have been little else, for the German people know that within the last few weeks each front has called for more troops. And the German people also know that soon there will be no more troops to send since the Reich has an estimated 10,000,000 casualties in the war. Germany, running out of soldiers and supplies, is calling civilians to street barricades. How long they will be able to hold out. Allied military leaders will not give a time limit on. However, Prime Minister Churchill says the war in Europe might well end before the summer ends or even sooner."

Allies Hit Italy

The Allies, with a markedly superior weight of men and arms, took heavy toll of the enemy's strength on the western front last week. With the weather clearing and strong air support, the worst obstacle opposing the Allied drive is the terrain in Germany. Meanwhile, the battle plans of the Allied commanders are a matter of apparent in the four-way attack on the Saar Basin and in the drive toward the Rubr.

European Air Battle

Although the front in Europe are around 300 miles apart, the Allied airforces are fighting the battlelines ever more tightly in coalition war. From the east, west, and south, the Allied airfields have thrust deep beyond Germany's borders and have attempted their bombloads on her great cities, her industrial and transportation centers, and her front defenses. The main weight of the coordinated attack comes from bases in Britain, France and Italy. For the first time, the newest and world's largest bomb—this eleven-ton bomb—was used to destroy German transportation system. Industrial cities were hit: Essen, Dormund and Sarmen.

Bombers Over Japan

The greatest air blows yet struck in the Pacific last week hit Japan's four largest cities, Tokyo, Nagoya, Osaka and Kobe in ruins in many sections and their people in a state of panic. Reconnaissance photographs of the target areas, taken after the raids, showed that fires caused by the attacks burned for days and that entire districts, extending for miles, were leveled to the ground. An estimated 1,000,000 persons were rendered homeless and vital war production was battered. A news dispatch from a Russia correspondent told of widespread panic, the details of which was withheld by the censors. Unidentified American planes were already operating from the captured airfields on Iwo Jima.

On the Home Front

President Roosevelt stepped into the home front picture last week with an announcement that plans to say manpower problem in the nation's dwindling food supply at his press conference today. The President said he was entitled to the fact and he wants it to stay that way. However, he thought a congressional investigation would help—one already has been authorized by the senate—he declined to comment. He did say, however, that he thought that he did not like to criticize congress.

The President has just directed the war mobilization board to study the entire question of establishing a guaranteed annual wage for almost all employees as a goal of organized labor. When asked how long he had been considering the matter, he replied that he has been thinking about it for 10 years and that it is now one of his post-war aims.

● CO-EDUCATION TO BE FORUM SOON

Next Friday the student forum committee will sponsor a special forum on co-education. This each and should be a vital and pertinent discussion of all students here on this campus for with the possibility of having a men's college for co-education will be one of the most discussed issues to arise during the present assembly.

State chamber of commerce's, alumni association, faculty members of the University of Florida, the board of control, and many other groups are considering what effect have focused a great deal of attention on the co-education question. It has been a topic of discussion among many of the faculty members here and on the University campus. Students on the University of Florida campus have had open forums on the subject, special information groups, and newspaper articles.

But until this announcement of the student forum, and with the exception of various posters on the bulletin boards, and a few editorials in this publication, there has been little attention given upon the coming issue, considering its great importance on all the students of this campus. More forums and open discussion groups of this type should be stressed but the responsibility for this should than likely depend upon the success of this initial forum.

Students are urged to attend and hear both sides of the question so that they may prepare for themselves the situation and what would be best for everything. They will be called upon by legislators, parents, and all tax payers of this state to testify on the possibility of co-education. And they will have to know what they want and why? It is a hope that this forum can start a new and vital interest for the students here at Tallahassee. They have a privilege and a responsibility. May they take full advantage of both!

Debutantes Are Listed

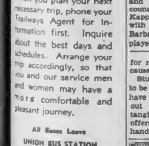
Former FSC Students Are Named in Register

Full-length pictures of Kitty Jo Coleman, Dorothy Jane Irving and Julia Foster Peed, three former Florida State College students will appear in the Third Edition of the Debutante Registrar of 1944, an illustrated edition of the state's debutantes, recently issued by the library.

Miss Kitty Jo Hickman's picture also appears in the section devoted to Florida's debutantes as the freshman daughter of Mr. and Mrs E Hays Hickman of Gainesville. She received her degree of arts degree from FSC in 1942. She is a member of the Margaret club, the Florida Yachting Club, Delta Phi literary society, Phi Delta Sigma and Alpha Phi sororities. Miss Hickman's name is listed in Who's Who, Students in American Colleges and Universities.

The second FSC student whose picture appears in this book is the former Dorothy Jane Irving, daughter of Mr and Mrs Henry Arthur Irving and a descendant of the famed FSC before continuing her studies at John Hopkins University in Baltimore. She is a member of the Spinsters' club, Phi Delta Yacht club, Tumiquana Country club, and Alpha Omicron Pi sorority.

Miss Julia Foster Weed, daughter of Mr and Mrs Joseph Dunbar Weed, also of Jacksonville was FSC and later the University of North Carolina. She is a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority.



As the front page is the dedicated to the national sponsor, Mrs Harry F. Pollikoff of New Orleans. Following this is the section for its publication which includes "We on the home front, in keeping the long established custom of presenting our debutantes in the pages of the annual.

Cruises New Vogue; Hop - Scotch Claims Student as Victim

The newest vogue on campus seems to be brushed shins, skinned knees, strained ankles and crutches. The girls with battered shin bones, resembling a relief map of the Alleghany Mountains, are probably been playing soccer or hockey in the last sport fling or flower-eyed with the gentle art of boo-scotch has its victims, too. The girl standing hopping on one foot in front of the dining room door is hence, twisted an ankle, injured several days or weeks of rest from various parts of her anatomy and has also developed a sudden passion for very soft well-stuffed chairs.

Soccer players have a potent advantage over soccer players, in that they may wield sticks whereas soccer players have to be content to use only their feet, and it is almost impossible to inflict wounds upon the knees. In hockey, the eyes and forwheads can be protected with the ball and the sticks are wonderfully useful for warding off smashing fingers. Hockey sticks are well adapted

Meeting Open

All the colleges faculty and administration are invited to attend an open meeting of the All-Faculty Study Group on Modification of Curriculum and Degree Requirements to be held on March 27, at 1:10 in the club room of the Student-Human building.

At this time Miss Edith West, associate professor of classics, will report upon the attendance at the conference on the humanities held in Nashville last week. Following her report, the meeting will be open for general discussion of the humanities and of their place in our own curriculum.

Carnival Features Raid, Wild Woman, And Den of Terror

Although rotating seemed to have been done until the last few minutes before 8:15 last Friday night, although the fake sophomore council raid was a source of momentary panic to some, and although the mask, "Wild woman" was purely an extemporaneous and unrehearsed accident, the Carnival was a very successful this year.

Revelers who had come out for a heretofore dull evening of amusement approached the swinging, gaily lit entrance to the gymnasium warily. A sign reading "Keel over inn or boot" did not reassure them. Inside the gymnasium lurked a strange but familiar assortment of circus freaks, including the Fat Woman, the Human Skeleton, the fake sophomore council raid was a source of momentary panic to some, and the mask, "Wild woman" was purely an extemporaneous and unrehearsed accident, the Carnival was a very successful this year.

Inside the gymnasium lurked a strange but familiar assortment of circus freaks, including the Fat Woman, the Human Skeleton, the Wild Woman, the Human Pincushion, the Sword Swallower, the Snake Charmer, the Fortune Teller, and Mad Beautiful Girls in the World Pass Out! Loud screams from the den of the Wild Woman, the Mad Beauty greeted them on entering. "Some Beauty" was the title of a real one said one of those in charge.

Jeanette Hollister acted as mistress of ceremonies and she was assisted by Virginia Hatton who appeared in a white and satin Queen's gown, singing waiters, a tap routine, and a can-can were all part of the show.

The Carnival was originally was a closely-guarded secret until the night before it was to enter front bar during the roaring 1920.s. At the end of the show, a fake raid was staged during which more council girls, and brutalized-looking that an ordinarily, but obviously uneasy stranger dived for the exit at the sound of the whistles and the sight of the blue coats.

Food committee's report was that everything was all right and two bags of roasted peanuts which had disappeared from the kitchen, said one committee member, "the last batch of candied apples turned out all right, and the bones for the hot dogs were not found until mid-evening. Then and they were frantically prepared in Jennie Murphree's kitchen, from which they emerged in white paper containers to the gymnasium to the delight of all.

Ida Lee Rentz, co-chairman of the planning committee, states that the carnival has netted financial success, clearing about $85. "It was great fun," she said, "but we're certainly glad to get it over with."

Members of the show have been asked to repeat their performance at Dale Mabry field.

Guests Give Talks At Dormitory Teas

Regular afternoon teas were held last Wednesday in Bryan, Gilcrist, Cockrell and Campuside. Parkside, and Jennie Murphree.

At the Landis tea held last Wednesday afternoon, Miss Martha Frosen, state supervisor of home economics, showed color movies on Puerto Rico which she took during her stay there in 1938. Rabbi Alfred Wolfe talked to the girls who attended Jennie Murphree's tea on Jewish customs and the passover.

At Reynold's tea, Vera Brown, and Mary Florence Fox, junior counselors and new Phi Beta Kappa members, were honored with sweet pea corsages made by Barbara Fennel. Francis Williams played the violin and cello.

Posters, Articles Displayed In Library 4-H Club Exhibit

Striking green and white posters, factual pamphlets, and numerous award articles on display at the information center in the library this week tell the war-time story of the 4-H Club of Florida.

One large poster, decorated with four-leaf clovers, the club's emblem, is headed "Florida 4-H Club girls, 12,777 strong, help to win the war". Figures on this poster reveal that in 1943, these girls cultivated 8,134 victory gardens and 2,928 fruit orchards. They raised 29,595 chickens, 1,364 dairy cows, and 1,583 head of live stock. Under the heading, "Conserved Food Canned Products" appears the figure 187,798 quarts. In 1943, too, 6,021 4-H girls enrolled in nutrition classes, 47,101 nutrition meals were prepared, and 7,333 house furnishing articles were made. 1,512 rooms improved, and 3,112 home-s were beautified a nd improved.

Helpful slogans which instruct the public to conserve through selection and care appear in bold black print on another large poster.

Two green and white banners edged in gold give the creed of 4-H girls and the pnlegge, "To Make the Best Better."

On the table to the left, is a brass covered scrap book filled with newspaper clippings, stories of FSC 4-H girls and their work. Officers of FSC's 4-H Club are also listed in this book and the Club theme for the year 1944, "4-H Club Wins a Second Front War Places". On this saffe table is a quit frowsa pamphlet for Florida 4-H club girls, a "4-H Handy Book of Supplies", "4-H Club News", and "Everything You About Some Demonstration Work."

There are identification badges worn by state representatives and leaders at the National 4-H Camp in Washington, D C. a br.ne plaque with an engraved inscription, a prize gavel, and four-leaf clover pin displayed on another table at the information center.

A 4-H Club service roll which lists 19 former members of FSC is posted nearby.

Pictures of the 18th Annual 4-H Club Camp held in Washington, D C, on June 20, 1941 are posted on a bulletin board.

In charge of the exhibit and display is Eleanor Boyles with a committee composed of Jane Dunbar, Ray, Clarice Journigan, and Elizabeth Hudson.

Dr Heinlein Congratulates Professor Sykora and Band

Florida State College Band and Dr Frank Heinlein, conductor, recently received praise for their work this year in a letter by Dr C P Heinlein, director of experimental psychology. The letter, written after the band's spring concert, follows:

"Dear Professor Sykora: Heartiest congratulations to you, to your great conductor—Mrs Jean Hitchcock Screrin—and to the talented and very able members of your Band. I say your Band without reservation, for I feel this action because I know that the FSCW Band could not have achieved such fine results in fact nor could it have reached such heights of musical excellence without the enthusiasm and respect which your magnetic and inspiring personality commands.

"To me, it was a glorious evening that ended much too soon. The presentation of the music in color guard was most impressive. The Majorettes twirled their batons with such rhythmic grace and skill. The colorful uniforms of the Band added much beautiful symbolic background which I shall long remember.

"But more beautiful and impressive than the pattern of colorful uniforms was the thrilling music which sounded from the many instruments played with exceptional skill and professional delight. The performers of the percussion instruments fascinated me more than I can describe in mere words. Confidentially, for long years I have had an insatiable ambition to become a trumpet player; however, too many other interests have prevented my ambition from being fulfilled. The cornet players and soloists performed the masters, while the trombonists, especially Beryl Taylor, pumped out some beautiful mellow phrases in the thrilling ribbean Fantasy which will linger long in musical memory. Nor will I ever forget the spontaneous instrumental fluidity which provided such exquisite phrases of emotional depth and fullness as experienced in Deep Purple. Sometime, I hope the Band will play Star Dust for me.

"Whatever credit may be assigned to the individual and the particular sections of the Band, the highest commendation is truthfully that which I give you, to your great conductor—Mrs Jean Hitchcock Screrin—and to the talented and very able members of your Band. I say your Band without reservation, for I feel this action because I know that the FSCW Band could not have achieved such fine results in fact nor could it have reached such heights of musical excellence without the enthusiasm and respect which your magnetic and inspiring personality commands.

must have removed all conditions and failures in subjects necessary for graduation. She must maintain a 1.0 grade ratio to continue in office.

"A student previously enrolled in regular sessions who was asked to withdraw because of her scholastic average must maintain a grade ratio of 1.0 for three quarters immediately preceding candidacy in office."

Section three was approved to read: "All students must have a grade ratio of 1.0 for two quarters immediately preceding appointment. "All students must have a 1.0 to continue in office.

Cut Ruling Changed

For the first quarter system the convocation cut ruling has been reworded to read: "All students, including members of the student council, shall attend convocation programs. Each student will be allotted one cut per quarter and more than excused absences, and any absence beyond this number will incur a fine."

The reasons given for the new cut system ruling are that there will be 12 weeks in the quarter; three of these will be used for registration, 1 for dead week and exams. In the first quarter case will be taken for the YWCA recognition and for investiture, leaving 8 convocations. The students should attend at least 4 out of the 5 remaining convocations, stated Ann Carolyn Allison, new president of CGA.

In the second quarter there will be honors' day, CGA installation and the tapping of Mortar Board, leaving only 4 convocations, one of which may be cut.

Audit Ruling Changed

Senate also passed a change in the "under standing rules" which is that "audit shall be made at the end of the first quarter and at the termination of each trees-ters term of work."

Resolution Rejected

Another resolution which was discussed and not passed was that vacancies occurring in class officers, the vice president of the term in office did not exceed one quarter before regular elections, shall be filled through nominations by the remaining class officers.

The new changes in the ruling was Betty Lewis, president of the senior class, who stated that since so few people come to the class meeting, and because they are required to pass an election the quarter is too short to allow for the two or three meetings usually required to obtain the percentage. She said that the change was expedient to illuminate the element of time for the present system.

Elizabeth McPherland, editor of the Distaff, was not in favor of the change. She said that even though the present proposal is fair, sacrifices must be made in a democracy. She continued that since students do not use their privileges is no reason for taking away the privileges.

Other students gave their views on the pro and con of the change after which the bill was passed.

Council Prepares Book For Social Chairmen

"A Handbook for the Social Chairman in the Dormitories" is the present project of the Social Standards Council.

Realizing that there is no organized way by which the social chairmen of the dormitories will know their duties and how to follow them through, the Social Standards Council is preparing a handbook. This handbook will contain all of the information that a social chairman will need. The handbook will be ready for the social chairmen next year.

Selected for their position by the Social Standards chairman, Dorothy Boardman, with the aid of the residence counselors, the social chairmen have had no previous experience and have very little information in regard to their duties and methods of carrying them out. The handbook which is still in the elementary stages, will contain all the information concerning social functions in the dormitories from tea to formal dances. Whether the social chairman will have to use The Handbook will explain how these functions have been carried on in previous year, who is to be invited, the number of students on the various committees, where service sets for the teas will be kept, and general functions of the individual halls, and other such necessary information.

Dorothy Boardman stated that this handbook was needed because of traditions which have been lost due to changes in personnel. She said that Reynolds Hall did not have its traditional birthday party this year due to a change in the residence hall counselors who were in charge of the event.

This handbook will put into written form all of the traditions of the school which have been formerly handed down to those who were here in previous years.

A committee was selected to be responsible for the actual organization of the handbook. Gloria Jo Clab Smith, social chairman of New Hall, is the chairman of the committee. This committee will work with Dorothy Boardman of Dean Olivia N Dorman. The other members on the committee are social chairmen of their respective Halls: Mary Nell McPadden, Broward hall; Doris McIntosh, off-campus houses; Mildred Turner, campus houses, and Carolyn Allison, new president of CGA.

The work on this handbook was started at the beginning of this school year, but it has just now been revealed. The handbook will be given to each social chairman at the beginning of the next school year.

Each social chairman will write up a report of the activities which she has conducted during her time so that posterity these reports will be handed down to the future social chairmen so that they may have a first-hand account of what is to be expected of them.

There will be an auction in the Student Alumnae building auditorium on Monday, March 26, at 7:30 p m. Jewelry, scratch, fountain pens, and clothing are among the articles that will be auctioned.

Kirn to Talk on Art Career in Designing Field

Miss Ann Kirn, instructor in art, will discuss "Designing your art career in fashion" on Thursday at a o'clock in 302 Education building.

This talk on the work of a fashion illustrator and the opportunities for women in commercial design is the third one in a series of vocational guidance programs sponsored by the personnel office.

Next month Miss Elisabeth Thomson, instructor in speech, and Mrs Beverly Stevens, counselor of Reynolds hall, will discuss radio work.

Group meetings to discuss various vocations constitute only a part of the vocational guidance program conducted by the personnel office. Although the meetings provide general information about vocations, individual interviews are necessary to evaluate how well the students' characteristics meet the demands of the job in which she is interested.

Dr Elisabeth J Anderson, director of personnel, and her assistant, Miss Margarette Dressler, by appointment confer with students to help them to choose a vocation, to plan courses and to plan their college program.

Tavern Is Setting of Skit For Freshman Carnival

Highlighting the Freshman Carnival, which was held last Friday night at 8 o'clock in the gymnasium was a program composed of talented students from the class of 1948. Side shows and game and food concessions were other attractions offered.

The setting of the skit was a waterfront tavern of the Gay Nineties, the Keel Over Inn and Reel Out," an unapproved place according to the Gold Book." Jeanette Hollister as a drunkard, was master of ceremonies.

Opening the acts was a barbenders' quartet, consisting of Jo Harrison, Eugenia Booth, Sonnie Hayes, and Ann Townsend, singing "Clementine. Ginger Hinton and Anita Hayes presented a scene between a drunkard at the bar and his daughter, bringing the usual remark, "How did she get in here? Doesn't she know this place is unapproved or hasn't she read her Gold Book?"

Emily Phillips sang "Temptation." Ruth Brown gave a specialty dance and Johnnie Myers sang "A Good Man". Betty Jo Wilson, Jackie Richey, Sarah Daugherty, Catherine Holloway, Janet Robertson, Joyce Williams, Marilyn Watson, and Mary Morris danced the "Can Can." Joyce Evans and Lee Kendal gave a Negro dialogue An Apache dance was performed by Mary Brokaw, Peggy Heller, and Lily Hatton. Anne Singleton ran through the tavern carrying placigns of water because "Senior Hall's on fire!"

In the side shows were, Mary Ann Waite, the wild woman, Shirley Crawford and Jean Ann Ramsdall, whodo voodoo girls; Connie Baker, the fat lady; Jean Bennett and Marshall Lee Vernon, the twin thin men; Marilyn Dewey, the lovely lady with the Gage, the tattooed lady; and Jo Ann Long and Lillian Brown, fortune tellers.

Other concessions were bowling, bingo, darts, beanbags, the guess booth and Kelly's Kandid Kamera. There was dancing all during the evening. Hot dogs, cocacolas, candies, apples, and peanuts were sold.

Arrangements for the Carnival were made by Jimmie Rogers, Martha Peacock, and Rosemary Marcuse, co-Chairmen of the planning committee; Babs McCarthy and Jean Ann Ramsdell, of the refreshment committee; Tommie Thompson and Jean Shaver, of the concessions committee; Jo Ann Long and Irma Lee Shepherd, of the costumes committee; Bell Pulley and Betty Kennedy, of the publicity committee.

FSC Is Winner Of Swim Meet

U of NC and Duke Follow In Southern Region

The Florida State College swimming team placed first in the southern division of the national telegraphic swimming meet, according to a telegram received from the regional headquarters in Durham, North Carolina.

Miss Margaret Clements, faculty sponsor for the swimmers, stated that the telegram had just come from Duke University announcing the FSC supremacy in the southern region. National results have not yet been compiled.

Second to Florida State College in the South came the woman's college of the University of North Carolina, with Duke representing third place.

The telegraphic meet is a type of national competition for woman in collegiate swimming. The United States is divided into regions, and the colleges in each region holds individual meets and mail their results to the regional sponsor. Mary Washington college, which represents the national sponsor, will telegraph the results to the colleges when they are compiled.

Carol Claus of Hollywood succeeded in breaking several pool records and a Southern record. Other first place winners in the meet were Betty Jane Singleton, Winter Park; Anna Horne, De Land, and Nancy MacEdwards, Lakeland.

The other picked swimmers in the local meet were Betty Bissell, Shipley, High Springs; Sis Myers, Tallahasee; Norma Schaeffner Clearwater; Charlotte Bonland, Zephyrhills, and Josephine Parker Maitland.

Week-end Planned At PEA Meeting

At the Physical Education association meeting this week final plans were made for the annual week-end activity and a proposed field day for all the school was discussed.

The activities planned for the annual camp trip Easter weekend included a breakfast hike, a moon light canoe ride Saturday night and skits to be presented as a competitive basis by small groups.

An experienced FSC Field Day will be held in April and it is open to all students. Before the Odd-Even system the intramurals an annual field day was the big athletic event of the year on the campus. This took the place of all the present Odd-Even sport seasons.

Planned events for Field day include 50 and 100 yard dashes, the yard low hurdles, baseball throw for distance, discus throw shot-put, running and standing broad jump. Plans are still in the primary stages and more definite announcements will be made according to P E A officials.

The Garnet and Gold radio program from the FSC studio on the air since last October has practically become a college tradition. Every Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock this weekly broadcast is composed of the students of the FSC radio classes.

This is Florida State College for Women, broadcasting from on the air"—followed by 15 minutes of college news and music, broadcast by experienced students from the facilities of station WTAL in Tallahassee.

The college studio located on the fourth floor of the Student-Alumnae Building is equipped for comment in the Alumnae Bulletin, looks almost like CBS or NBC studios. Credit for this goes to FSC's resident engineer, Col H D Mendenhall, who has installed all its professional look with its insulated walls, glass-enclosed control room, and microphones.

For several months Dr Herman Kurz, professor of botany, head of the radio committee, worked on plans for the operation of the studio. Last fall Miss Martha Bloodworth, publicity secretary, was appointed public relations officer and radio coordinator for the college. On October 26 the first Garnet and Gold program was presented, starring Dr Doak S Campbell and the faculty trio, composed of Professor Frank Sykora, cellist; Miss Mary Esther Winslow, pianist, and Miss Gladys Kinsey, violinist. The trio plays by transcription every Thursday night on the program.

One of the visitors for the future of the college will be the state of Florida Mutual hook-up so that at regular intervals, perhaps once a month, broadcast from Florida may listen to the Garnet and Gold program directly from the campus.

day afternoon at 5:30 in the P Phi house.

Mrs R M Levy Has Doll Exhibit In Education Building

An exhibit of dolls made by Mrs R M Levy are on display in the lower Education building until March 27. Mrs Levy is the mother-in-law of Eloise Goulding Levy and made the dolls for her grandson, Rich Levy.

The dolls are made of socks and stockings and are stuffed with cotton. Many of the dolls have removable clothing that may be taken off and washed. Some of the dolls represented are several Hula girls, a West Point cadet, Chinese lassie, Scandinavian Gnomo, and various others that are tall, short and brightly arrayed.

Mrs Levy has over made a few dolls, tested them on the neighbor's children and found them very popular, not only with the children, but with the adults as well. Orders poured in and Mrs Levy became a busy woman. She sold dolls to members of her club activities and to doll collectors.

Mrs Levy found that a thriving business was in the making. However, she turned down commercial offers and now makes only a few for her grandchildren.

Tennis, Softball, Archery To Begin

The Women's Athletic association announced that the new sport season would begin Monday afternoon, March 26, at 5 o'clock. Sports for this season will be tennis, softball and archery. Blanche Favor is Odd tennis leader and the Even leader will be appointed in softball. Rose Hall is the Even leader and Alice Trezise fills the same position for the Odds. Caroline Forehand will lead the Odd archery and Charlotte Bourland will lead the Evens.

The Evens practice on Monday, Wednesday and Friday and the Odds practice Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

Two assistants who will be named at a later date. She expects this information to be compiled in its finished form within a few weeks at which time it will be given to Dean Olivia N Dorman for approval. The information will then be ready for the new students for the coming school year

Cotillion Party Is Given By Taps

At St Patrick's day party for the members of Cotillion Club was given by the taps of that club last Thursday afternoon in Landis recreation room.

The decorations were green and white. which are the colors both of Cotillion and St Patrick's day, stated Betty Lou Christian, president of Cotillion.

The program arranged by the taps consisted of an Irish jig done by Doris Snow and Nancy Cleaton. Twin taps, and an original poem about all the members was given by Claire Cashen.

Recreation was provided in the form of dancing for all present and refreshments of cake and punch were served.

Odd hockey team scored the goals to the one goal scored by the Evens in the annual game Odd-Even games played on the hockey field Saturday at 3.

The game took place in a fast furiously amid the rooting cheers of the large crowd which gathered the sidelines.

The Odd cheerleaders led the followers in one cheer after another while the Even cheerleaders retaliated with yell for yell.

At the half the score was tied. The Odds made a quick rush down the field for the first goal. Within two minutes the Evens forwards had carried the ball back down the length of the field and placed it between the Odd goposts to tie the score.

Between the third and fourth quarters, the Odd team lined up with their sticks across their shoulders and marched diagonally across the field to the center. Even team with a large box of green and yellow candies.

In the last few minutes of the fourth quarter, the Odd forwards again pushed up the field and adroitly placed the ball in the white ball between the legs of the opposing goalie for the winning goal.

The whistle blew with the Odd team in possession of the ball and on the way to the Odd goal.

Coach Henrietta Greenberg recreation director in charge of the games and referee said that the teams were better matched than they have been in practice games and showed evidence of the skill in techniques they showed.

"They have worked faithfully and hard," she said, "and it is a great interest and long hours of practice when a game is played with such perfection."

At the end of the game, the Even team aroused great interest among the spectators by marching and singing in an important looking line and the goddess of the middle of the line, Elaine Garman, stepped up to get the winning ball.

Lineup during the game:

Dr Annis Discusses Catholic Doctrines

Religious Beliefs Explained To Students in Forum

The basic dogma of the Catholic religion was the subject discussed by Dr. Annis, Talla-hassee physician and a member of the Catholic church, in a forum at Florida State College students on Monday afternoon in the Student Union auditorium.

This forum was the last in the series of religious forums sponsored by the worship committee of the Young Women's Christian Association.

Dr Annis said that fundamentally Catholicism was the same as any other religion. Its highest principle is to live as much as possible in order to attain happiness in the hereafter.

The Catholic church is the medium by which this happiness is aided along a safe course to heaven" said Dr Annis.

The speaker explained that churches are misunderstood because each one is considered by the entire nineteen hundred years of its existence.

After this general introduction the students were given a chance

Students in History Building Work to the Sounds of Drills

Students having classes in the History building have been forced to plug their ears with cotton the past week due to the relentless sounds of hammering and drilling arising from the construction work being done on the new addition. V C McClain, superintendent in charge of construction, also has a crew of New Hall, reports that progress is being made according to plan.

The annex will run east and north to form a closed U. It will be landscaped and beautified. This new addition will be used for the purpose of classrooms, accommodating various departments. At present no specific assignments of space have been made, except that the basement room is to be used for the offices of the various rooms by the speech department.

Although the annex will upon completion, be only one story in height and include five rooms, the foundation will make it possible to build additional floors to correspond with the main building at a later date.

The materials being used consist of reinforced concrete and brick, and the architectural lines will be in harmony with the other buildings on the campus.

Entrance to the new addition will be attained through an opening in the present building. Excavating is the work of Eastman Kodak Company.

Dr Andrews Explains The Qualifications For Honors Work

Farewell speeches by Isabel Rogers, president of College Government Association, and Tedy Parker chairman of Judiciary; explanation of honors work by Dr Elizabeth Andrews; awarding of Pi Pa Women's Athletic Association President Joe Guthrie; and student announcements constituted Tuesday's convocation.

Isabel said that the students should take individual responsibility to make college life higher by all working together.

"By working together students are able to find solutions for many problems and will be solid ground for their future responsibility placed in their hands for governing themselves," she pointed out.

Isabel concluded her farewell speech by wishing the best of luck to her successor and thanking the students for the most satisfying and richest experiences in her life.

In her farewell talk, Tedy Parker explained that the honor of the college is no higher than the honor of the individual in the college, and that the honor code contains the honor of each one's college, and to one's fellow students. She said that the only regulations that are made by the governing students that break rules was the "honor code" which demonstrates might profit from the mistakes of these students.

Tedy pointed out the judiciary has meant a great deal to the and

Unusual Experiment Is Being Conducted By Physics Student

Junnita Cooper, doing individual directed study in physics, is experimenting on an unusual ment. She is comparing the efficiency of a modern camera having a good lens with that of a pinhole camera, which is merely an empty box with a film placed inside and a hole pierced by a small needle in the opposite side to let the light enter.

This pinhole camera is the oldest type of camera. It produces an image of respectable size and has a wide angle and excellent depth of field. The main disadvantage of this lensless camera is the necessity of a long-time exposure. Whereas an ordinary camera usually has a time exposure of approximately 1/100 seconds, the pinhole camera requires an exposure of from three seconds to four minutes. As the size of the pinhole is increased, the length of exposure is decreased, and the picture becomes blurred. The film may also be moved about within the camera. As it is placed closer to the opening, the angle of vision becomes narrower.

The startling feature of this camera is the fact that, due to the small aperture of the needle, any one time during the exposures people often crossed in front of the camera, came in the line of vision without making any impression whatever on the film plate.

Junnita made her own camera with materials furnished by Eastman Kodak Company.

V-E Day Celebration Plans Are Complete

National Anthem and Service To Announce Beginning

The playing of the "Star Spangled Banner" on the Florida State College campus will announce the beginning of V-E Day celebration on campus, announced Dr Edith West, chairman of the committee appointed to recommend activities on campus upon the arrival of that day.

The committee has completed all arrangements for the observation of V-E Day on campus including the musical features and programs and appointing the proper persons to take part.

As soon as possible after the announcement of V-E Day, Dr West said, the regular routine of the college will lead a community service program to be held behind Westcott if the weather permits; otherwise, in Westcott auditorium. There will be no general dismissal of classes or holiday atmosphere but in the event that the announcement comes during a class hour, all classes meeting the next hour will be dismissed for the service which will last 30 or 40 minutes. If the event should come at night the announcement to the campus will be made by the President at the time he deems best.

After the initial service program is held, an observance of a different nature will be held in Westcott auditorium that evening if possible. The program will be addressing by the student body president, followed by the band and glee club and group singing. Wherever possible, all organizations will participate in the singing of the national anthem.

Scholarships Now Available

Physical Therapy Training Given By Foundation

Scholarships for training in physical therapy under the provisions of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis are available immediately for classes commencing June or July, Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation, announced.

As a result of the increasing use of physical therapy in the treatment of infantile paralysis and other diseases, and because of the acute shortage of trained personnel, the National Foundation is offering these scholarships for nine to twelve months' training in approved schools of physical therapy. The scholarships will cover tuition and maintenance in accordance with the student's needs.

"There are opportunities at the present time for the full employment of 5,000 additional physical therapists immediately," said Mr O'Connor said. "However, the present teaching facilities of approved schools can accommodate approximately only 1,000 students. Teaching facilities at these schools will be increased by additional teaching units through the National Foundation's teaching program and in the training capacity of the schools can meet the full requirements of the profession."

Pointing out that there are only 2,500 qualified physical therapists in the United States with more than half of them in the armed services, Mr O'Connor said it would require several years to train the additional thousands of physical therapists needed.

Church Choirs Sing In Easter Vespers

The last of a series of pre-Easter vespers was presented Sunday afternoon in Westcott auditorium in observance of Palm Sunday. Choral selections were rendered by 13 choirs representing the various churches of Tallahassee. The vesper service was sponsored by the local chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

Beginning with an organ prelude played by Prydertean pianist and ending with a choral selection by the combined choirs, the program presented the Florida State College for Women Baptist Senior choir First Baptist church, Young People's Union, Bethel Student, Presbyterian church, Prydertean student, St John's Episcopal church, senior, St John's Episcopal church junior, Ruge Hall student, Trinity Methodist church senior Trinity Methodist church junior and Methodist student choir. A choir from Dale Mabry field was scheduled to sing but was unable to appear.

'Yellow Jacket' Rehearsals Are Fun Because of Play's Oddity

Pantomime, quaint music and rhythmic movements are the order of the day at rehearsals of "Yellow Jacket" as work progresses on the play This Chinese fantasy which will be presented by the dramatic department in Florida State College April 11, 12 and 13 features actors and actresses from visible horses complete with sound effects, climbing an imaginary mountain and dancing on a row of stools and chairs

"Rehearsals are more fun than work because the play is so different from any production that has ever been given before," stated a member of the cast. Performers explained that free, unrestricted action will be used and that the movements will be big and broad, leaving quite a bit to the imagination of the audience.

Oriental music heralding the entrance of the characters sets the mood for each of the players and reflecting a definite mood is to be played by an orchestra from the corner of the stage. A Chinese chorus on the sidelines also will announce every entrance.

The traditional property man and his assistant are every present. To effect a chance in setting, the pantomimists will walk off the full view of the audience. During the actual performance they are to act as if one were actually eating rice with chopsticks or playing cards while supplying the actors with the necessary accessary they might need

Strange as these imaginative pantomimes will be the costumes and make-up. Dressed in Chinese robes the actors will wear make-up designed to make their characters obvious to the audience Disreputable characters for example will wear make-like make-up with bright colored streaks across their faces.

Robert P Tristram Coffin Will Be Poet in Residence On FSC Campus April 2-6

Noted Maine Writer Scheduled for Four Lectures, Conferences With Student Writers And Judging of Contest Poetry

Robert P Tristram Coffin, noted Maine poet, will be on the Florida State College campus April 2 through 6, April 6 to give lectures concerning modern poetry, judge the poetry submitted to the Creative Arts contest and confer with those interested in creative writing.

Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock Mr Coffin will give his first address in the August Conradi Little Theater. At 8:15 Monday night he will speak in W e s t c o t auditorium at which time the citizens of Tallahassee are invited as well as the students of the college. A third talk open to all students students will be given by Mr Coffin next Friday morning at 10 o'clock in the August Conradi theater Wednesday, April 4, the guest poet will speak to members of the Phi Beta Kappa and other invited guests.

Mr Coffin is not a stranger here as he visited the FSC campus in 1938 at which time he met Bertha Bloodworth, who is now the college publicity secretary. He reviewed for the Flambeau. He will stay at the Student Alumnae building while he is here next week Before coming here the poet was on tour in Texas and will go to Millersville, Georgia, upon leaving Tallahassee, to discuss his views about poetry as a public function to the public

Though Mr Coffin is noted for his poetry, which is published in eight volumes, he is also a novelist, critic, biographer, essayist and is a Pierce professor of English at Bowdoin college. He is an authority on modern poetry and has lectured on It at Columbia, gave the Turnbull Memorial lectures at Johns Hopkins University, 1938, and the Patten lectures at Indiana, 1941. Library Features Easter In Exhibit

An Easter exhibit of books has been placed on various tables in the Reference room of the library.

A Treasury of Art Masterpieces edited by Thomas Craven, is open to the Crucifixion by Antonello de Messina of the Venetian School on the table with The Book and The Spell of the Holy Land by Archie Bell, which contains interesting pictures of the various places in Palestine. The Quotable Bible edited by Louis M Notkin, The Sermon on the Mount, and Mary the Mother of Jesus, which is open to the "Adoration of the Magi."

On another smaller table are a group of authoritative books concerning Easter poems Placed near these are two editions of the Bible and The Greatest Book in the World by A Edward Newton, which is an essay on the Bible. Two novels and a biography, The Robe by Lloyd C Douglas, Brn Her by Lew Wallace and Life of Christ by Giovanni Papini are on another table The last book is entitled A Treasury of Art Treasures by Harry E Foddick.

Spirit of the Week

● CO-EDUCATION—YES OR NO?

The subject of co-education in general and the co-education for Florida has been greatly discussed in the past months. The issue has merited even State-wide attention with special emphasis being placed upon it by the University of Florida, even in their festive occasions such as Spring Frolics.

In view of the fact that a special forum is being presented tonight for the purpose of bringing to light both sides of the question of co-education for Florida, the following editorials, one affirmative and one negative, are printed to give both views in the hope that students will give this matter due consideration and be in a small way more enlightened before the forum. A matter of as great importance and as relevant to student life as this should be carefully studied by each student.

● PRO—

Florida stands alone today as the only state which does not have a co-educational college or university state-supported. Women have been accepted in the Army, Navy and Marines; they work with men in business and industry; they have equal rights as voters, but in Florida they may not be educated with men in a state-supported institution.

Co-education has been accepted for many years as a part of the American plan of higher education, but it is barred in Florida's state college and university, because of a bill of forty years ago. A survey was made in 1935 listing the eleven greatest universities in America, and reported in the Atlantic Monthly by its author, Edwin R Embree. These universities were rated according to the outstanding scholars who taught there and by the eminence of the various departments.

They are: Harvard, the University of Chicago, Columbia University, the University of California, Yale, the University of Michigan, Cornell, Princeton, Johns Hopkins, the University of Wisconsin ,and the University of Minnesota. Of the first four on the list, three are co-educational; Chicago, Columbia and California. A total of seven of the eleven are co-educational: four are men's universities.

University of Virginia, the University of North Carolina and the University of Texas are the three best Southern universities, according to Mr Embree; two out of the three are co-education.

During the 1945 session of the legislature a bill is to be introduced to give Florida co-education. Representative Holmes Melton, Jr, of Lafayette county, who was a law student at the University of Florida during the first semester of this year, will be a co-sponsor of the hill. His plan is to allow women to enroll at the University of Florida during their junior and senior years, the system which has been successfully adopted at the University of North Carolina.

Three alternatives to this plan have been suggested by various legislators. First, to leave the two state colleges as they are. Second, to make the University of Florida co-educational temporarily because of the wartime increase in enrollment there and the increase in enrollment at Florida State College. Third, to admit men and women to both state colleges.

It is feared that bringing co-education to either or both of Florida's state colleges will damage the scholastic standing of these institutions. However, other state universities have become co-educational without any damage to their academic standing. If seven out of eleven of the best universities in the country are co-educational, what bas Florida to fear?

Another objection is that if both colleges were to become co-educational, a duplication of facilities would occur, which would put the two schools in competition with one another. But as Representative Charles E Sheppard of St Augustine points out. "It might be well to turn Florida State College into a college where students of both sexes might secure a classical education and the University of Florida into a school where special training along professional lines might be provided." Or, he suggests, "perhaps Tallahassee is the best place to have a specialized education with the exception of agriculture, and let Gainesville have the standard college course. The law school would be particularly well located in Tallahassee."

The editor of the Florida Alligator, Eddie Kelly, said, "Our aim is to broaden the educational system of the state with no thought of competition with anybody."

The Florida Junior Chamber of Commerce, the University of Florida Alumni Association and the student body of the University of Florida have all endorsed the plan for co-education at the University during the last two years. The Alumnae Association of Florida State College does not favor the plan of co-education.

Different legislators have expressed varying views on the question, but it must be remembered that Florida is the one state in the union that does not offer state-supported co-education to its students. Florida students must leave the state if they desire to go to a co-educational state university. It must be admitted that the problem is complex, that it must be considered carefully. It now rests with the elected representatives of the people of Florida, the 1945 state legislature.

● CON—

For over forty years Florida State College has been devoted solely to the purpose of educating women. Established as a sewing institution by act of the State legislature in 1905, the college has achieved its prestige and maintained its high standing in the academic world by virtue of its activities as such a separate institution, and this standing is not a fact to be lightly tken or hurriedly cast aside under pressure of war emergency. In consideration of the current discussions regarding the introduction of co-education into the college, such problems of college welfare and prestige become evident.

Aside from the question of established position in the scholastic world is the question of expense. The task of changing and developing the facilities of the two schools to accommodate both men and women would be an immense one for financers as well as organizers. Under the proposed plan by which the Gainesville institution would become the center for standard college courses and Tallahassee for specialized training along professional lines, the reorganization and development of facilities would entail a great deal of expense as well as a colossal feat of planning which would seem hardly practical in time of war emergency. Even the plan for establishing co-education as a temporary wartime measure to harmonize Tallahassee's surpluses with Gainesville's increased enrollments would be a highly complicated procedure. Residence as well as academic halls would have to undergo considerable overhauling to serve their new function and expenditure as well as delay in proceedings would seem to defeat the very purpose of the action.

The co-education plan would also mean the establishment of a co-educational status at the state university during the junior and senior college years, leaving the state college in its present standing. It is feared, however, that this plan, though greatly modified compared to other ideas, would serve to reduce Florida State College to the position of a glorified junior college, which students would attend only to secure sufficient academic credit hours to permit admission to the privileged years at the university. Enlargement of the co-education plan is also opposed from the academic standpoint by the fear that the two state institutions will lresult in increased social activities and a proportionately marked decrease in the traditionally high scholastic average of the state college.

The solution of the university enrollment shortage would probably be found in the proposed plan by which the university alone would become entirely co-educational, reaching its normal peacetime quota by draining students from Tallahassee's over-burdened supply. But this measure could be little more than temporary. The state college surplus as the state universities' shortage is a war phenomena—and its duration will probably closely approximate that of the war. For the increased male enrollment will follow military victory, as well may be supposed, facilities equal to peacetime accommodations will be required to take care of boys returning to the campus to finish their education. It would be impossible to come to an end with the return to peacetime salaries and peacetime conditions. Thus it becomes obvious that under this suggestion, the educational balance of power will be three to one in favor of women in the period following war, unless the status quo is maintained or co-education is extended to both institutions.

Opposition to the latter suggestion aries in the feeling that under such conditions the t r o schools would cease to supplement each other. By admitting the same type of student at both institutions, that is, both men and women, the university and the college will be placed on a competitive basis.

All in all, the problem of the introduction of co-education to Florida's campuses is one which requires thought and consideration. There is more to this situation than the superficial branding of the sexes, any decision which are made must be made with a full understanding of the advantages and disadvantages to be encountered by the choice.

Short Change

A Marine in a sniper's post on a Jap-infested island had been doing his job and doing it well. Suddenly his superior officer crawled up to him and barking him. "Buddy you'll have to give me your rifle."

"Why?" interrupted the Marine. "I've been doing all right in the past few hours. I've picked off 14 of the yellow Nips. Why do you want my rifle?"

"I hate to tell you this," said the officer, "but the fellow back home whose war bond purchased that rifle wants his money back."

Conscription For Peacetime?

By HANSON W BALDWIN

A glimpse into the vitally important issue of peacetime conscription—now before Congress—is given in the current issue of Harper's by Hanson W Baldwin who is said to be one of the top ranking civilian writers on military and naval affairs.

Mr Baldwin maintains that if peacetime conscription is ultimately judged as essential to our postwar military policy then it must be had, but the decision must be made in view of the fact that it is a part of the whole problem of postwar policy, that it may possibly carry with it determent to our political, economic, and social problems, and that it must be made on the grounds of military merits alone. He feels that legislation for compulsory military training is for tomorrow and not for today. With this in mind it becomes necessary to know more about the coming needs of our military systems than can be analyzed before the present war is completed and the peace begun. The suggestion is made that a committee on the order of the Root-Baker Board should be appointed to study the problem.

Although the Army and Navy, the conscription bills introduced to date provide for one year of training, with the Army and the navy. The ages stated in the Army Bill are 18 to 22 or from the time of graduation from high school or preparatory school. After the training is completed each man may be enrolled as a reserve for five years stated and may be subject to periodic refresher training.

The issue of the wartime draft law which terminates May 15, 1945, need not be confused with the peacetime conscription bills which are also before Congress. The wartime draft provides for training and not for service. In Mr Baldwin's opinion there can be no logical basis for extension of the present wartime conscription law for the duration of two to five years after the end of hostilities.

Stated in favor of pressing the peacetime conscription bill through Congress is the fact that we must maintain that after the cessation of hostilities public interest in national defense subsides. Those against immediate action, says Mr Baldwin believe that to postpone a subject to be passed in the heat of war and without the influence of fear and hate would be now serving in battle.

Mr Baldwin presents and tears down what he calls the "straw men" arguments for and against conscription. Among the arguments of the military benefits of universal military training and education comes the answer that these belong to the medical profession, not public education and have been tried in the educational institutions. In connection to the thesis that military training develops self discipline and character is the statement by Admiral Nimitz to the press of the New York Times that the man in military service is not required to teach men to fight and kill. Also from the military training of the navy and army comes the argument that the question of a balance of power in international affairs is involved in allowing the military class to become too influential.

Mr Baldwin lists the international arguments for conscription Mr Baldwin believes that conscription will not stop the outbreak of war although it may effect the method and standard of warfare. Conscription is to the military standpoint he reminds the reader that although the United States will need to maintain scientifically and mechanically the best equipment in the world and a sizeable cadre of highly trained soldiers, sailors, and airmen of all ranks plus a reserve corps of officers selected for outstanding qualities, this system must be maintained entirely by volunteers for the one war industry it is dependent upon troops for service.

As Mr Baldwin sees it, the most valid argument given for conscription is that it will build up a large reserve for the huge forces put up at the outbreak of war will enable the skeleton of an army to be filled out with apparent rapidity and ease. However, the inducted troops will not be ready for service and taught new methods.

Mr Baldwin lists arguments against conscription is according to the author, "America must remain a land in which the state exists for the people, not the people for the state."

Allied Air Operations

In Europe during the last week the Allied air forces have been carrying on continuous bombing raids over Germany. The pattern of these attacks would tend to indicate that the Allied command is preparing for a last top ditch tantal all-out assault designed to crack the inner defenses of the Reich. The first are largess in Germany were her heavy industries—both coal and iron fortress Later the Luftwaffe's resources had been the objective. Fourteen of the 16 war targets were transportation centers. Since 13 of these were all or benrol facilities, it is clear that the Allied intention was to destroy German mobility—her strategic rail system, the sources for fuel and tanks By immobilizing the Reich and cutting off its supplies, the Allies were preparing for the battle of inner Germany. Those were the days that Germa's air force to fight the bombers, the Reich relied on a round defense

Although the main European Allied air raids have been on the German transportation system, the cities also have been heavily bombed. A traveler reaching Sweden from Germany last week said that of the 250 large towns Germany had before the war, the majority of them now are rubble heaps It is estimated, said the traveler, that 20,000,000 Germans have already fled from their homes to escape bombers and grim Berlin, this source stated, the dwellings which once housed 4, 250,000 persons are now down to such an extent that they can only accommodate 1,000,000 and that in Munich there is no light, gas, or running water.

It is also estimated that only one of twenty synthetic oil plants in Germany was still working and that of seventy-eight vehicle coker-oven plants.

In heavy blows against Japan's industrial war machine, 450 Pacific navy planes ranged wide over the harbors of Japan's home and striking warships and at their bases This attack according to Admiral Nimitz, was a crushing. Planes from an estimated 15 fast carriers swept over 10 of the skies In successive waves and dropped bomb loads on airfields, seaports and seven major naval bases. The next day the bombers hurled 500 tons of explosive onto and shore installations near Kobe, the enemy's principal port.

European Land Battles

In the most massive operation since D-Day: last June 6, Allied forces swept across the Rhine ripping the historic barrier wide open The United States Ninth Army, with General Bissellower-watching, charged five miles into the Ruhr just south of Wesel, welded four crossing's into a solid 13-mile bridgehead and captured 12 towns southeast of Wesel, 15 miles of Duisburg, Europe's greatest inland port. This gigantic ramp is after the widespread collapse of German armies west of the Rhine the last of the Wehrmacht's wall reduced, the Saar knocked out of the Reich war machine and the Germans forced to fight on three directions.

During this combined land, sea and air assault, Prime Minister Churchill, with the usual cigar clamped in his teeth, watched the Rhine crossing operations from a spot overlooking the great river's banks

In eastern Europe Russian tanks and infantry smashed within 15 miles of Vienna and turned 43 miles southeast of Hungary's capital along a 62-mile front in a great new offensive timed with the Allied assault in the west. Premier Stalin disclosed. The Red Army, 31 miles from Berlin, engaged large numbers of troops needed by the Germans to hurl against the Allies pouring into inner Germany.

Pacific Naval Actions

In the Pacific last week the navy supported the air attacks on Japan. Incomplete reports indicated that the Japanese Navy has suffered fifteen to seventeen warships damaged. Within the last week's attacks, the enemy's air strength would appear to have been seriously hampered for the immediate future.

On The Domestic Front

President Roosevelt has asked Congress for new power to stabilize farm prices "build an economically healthy world." Numerous and stormy objections arose in the senate from Republicans who say the move would be an economic blow to the United States which would mean closed industries and no jobs for returning war veterans. From the other party comes back his proposition, many observers believe will be a part of the new tariff fight since the Smoot-Hawley bill was written in 1930.

COLLEGE COMMENTS

We saw a major on campus the other day. Wasn't sure of it, but really should have said is that we an Army officer on campus the other day. That would distinguish him from a "Major-General" or even the greenest freshman with hardly any orientation at all, knows is a major and colonel. Ranks seem to have something important to say about the Army major, but all the Army major has to say is not involved that it will just be easier for us to mention it, and we'll start all over with something new.

We have another sad tale to tell. This time it's the Delt pledge girl we know who has had ulimited extra new privileges and there won't be able to go home for Easter as she was planning to. She has been told that she will be taken all semester last Tuesday's holiday and will have to stay at her cuts. It is even more sad when you know that she is one of the leading pledges. We guess Easter at home isn't too important, and the Honors Day program can very well spare her. It probably become a very impressive affair.

We don't like to complain all the time and we know lifa isn't all root beer and skittles, but why is it that if you're sick in the dining ball believing you have a minute or so to spare the "Closed" sign is always up? It wouldn't be so annoying sometimes, but is invariably when hungry and you're starving and don't have any money, and don't even have a roommate to borrow from. Maybe some day all the clocks on the campus will be synchronized and these fascinating little surprises will disappear. Meantime we can only complain. Or we can do as we thought that it will do us good to miss a meal or so. Vitamin pills are a big help.

It seems strange that all the alumni of the University of Florida would like to see co-education in this state while all the alumnae of FSC don't approve of the idea. Maybe it is just that our alumnae want to protect us from the big, bad O'Ville wolves, but from the reports of Spring Frolics it sounds as though a few wolves have been let loose with the idea that Dale Mabry variety isn't trying hard, but they will be gone after the war and Tally will still be here. Maybe all they really should have said is that we're all getting a little more interesting.

If you've noticed a few girls who seem to be outcasts of society be assured that this isn't their permanent position. It is just that they have been indulging in the home grown variety of permanent wave and they are not to be seen for a whole day with their hair done up in some exotic stuff. To be perfectly frank about it, they smell.

Quarterlies are all over and it seems nice to slip back into the old rut of sleeping until ten minutes before your first class, and point to Soda Shop between classes instead of studying every possible minute. This can go on for about seven weeks and then exams start. Isn't there always someone like us around to spoil your beautiful peace and quiet?

We have never seen so many people not getting the D's they were sure of. All the Monday there were little groups standing around in the post office saying "But he told me I'd get a D in journalism" and "They can't all be up yet because I'm positive I'll be the only one." If we're sorry but we can't help it If some girls are unable to cope with the social education. We're just quoting people . Rumor had it that grades were held up for a week-end, and even though we haven't received any cards we're getting suspiciously into their mailboxes.

Easter Sunday is almost here, and even though we haven't received any little tokens of remembrance yet we aren't giving up hope, because that springs. After all maybe tomorrow's mail will bring a box of candy or flowers or something. Even a card 'any old kind, post card, greeting card, playing card—anything; would be appreciated. Maybe Al and Bob and Jack will forget us, but Mother should send our allowance anyway.

Geological Survey Features Skulls, Teeth, and Skeletons

The Florida Geological Survey museum, the purpose of which is to provide accurate information about minerals and related resources of Florida, is located in the lower part of the state hall of Florida State Univ. Dr. John H Davis, Jr., director, states that the museum is primarily for the use of the public for after the specimens are gathered and studied, a lot of little more use to the public.

At one time, the museum during the day when it was open

The museum, covering one room of the survey headquarters, is packed many exhibits as well as vertebrate fossils. Among specimens is a mounted skeleton American mastodon, the skull of which were gathered recently from the bed of Wakulla Springs 20 miles south of Tallahassee. Another mount is the leg of an American mammoth. The mammoth bone is larger than the elephant's, and the animal stood 18 feet high. Some teeth of these extinct animals are displayed in the museum, one being a solid block about 6 inches wide 7 inches long and nine inches high.

Also near Vero, Florida, comes the human skull and other bones unearthed near that town by Miss Lidy Moore. Almost all these ancient bones have been so much petrified that they look like stone. Dr. Herman Gunter, geologist and director of the survey, is authority on the culture of the southern aborigines who have in further identified the origin of the bones of three-toed animal not known to have lived in the present area, shown by models and the specimens. The specimens are housed in the Thomas building of the Santa Fe river in the hills southeast of Hall's Florida. The vicinity of Ichetucknee Farm is said to be the richest area in fossil remains in eastern North America.

There are two displays of pottery have been made from Florida soil, and said is supposed to many of the early Florida had some skill in pottery making.

Among the Indian relics is a specimen pipe that was found from the Ochlockonee river in Gadsden Florida, in 1939. It is supposed to be an Indian chief.

However because there is not room for all of the specimens in the survey headquarters, museum, survey has a library of scientific books and magazines and bulletins from all the geological surveys. The museum receives its own special reports and bulletins as well as all of the publications in the state if the author so desire them.

The present time two maximum of the survey are the soil water conditions in Florida which is being made conjunction with the rainfall of the state. There is increasing or decreasing and the effect that the rainfall has on swamps and drainage will have on the pop-

Former Student Now Medical Secretary; Finds Life of a Private Very Interesting

Private Betty McNabb, formerly Betty Wood in the class of '?, is now serving as a medical technician, specifically a medical secretary-typist. She is in the General Hospital in Camp Butner, N C.

Mrs McNabb said in a recent letter to Miss Louise Gehan, alumnae secretary, that she had joined the WACs because she felt there would be shipped overseas soon, and they would not be kept together. She also said that she "was anxious to be doing the thing I am fitted to do where I hope it will do the most good."

She said that her specific job was secretary to surgical personnel—medical, stenographer to the officers on surgery. She is looking forward to ward tasking medical and military histories. Her work is appreciated, and she feels very successful and pleased with the setup. Their mess is wonderful and even it is a privilege to work for them."

In dispute of the many dissertations which she accomplished for her enlistment, she has found all of them to be wrong—at least in each case. She says that she has three things that she could do in every major of the army. As for being a person who wasn't placed in her proper job. "I'm not one of them, either," she writes. "The people in the Army that you don't want to associate with, they can be easily "lost in the shuffle or those whom you may greatly admire." As in civilian life, your social standing is whatever you allow it to be. She has yet to meet a discourteous officer and is continually pleased by their consideration for the WACs.

Her living conditions are ideal with plenty of room for individual expression. The University of North Carolina, which she attended for a while, and Duke, offer vast resources in the way of relaxation.

She and her roommate are the only registered record librarians that they know of on the post. They went through basic training together and have been together ever since. They both claim that the original members of their company are the most helpful women that they've ever met. "None of them are rank-conscious although they look forward pour green privates (Oh, shades of my Freshman days!)."

Most of the patients at the hospital where she is a medical stenographer are suffering from trenchfoot. Life magazine recently had an article on this affliction.

Special Easter Services Take Place

This weekend special holiday services will be presented by the various church organizations connected with the college.

Dean Hagan announced that Good Friday services will be conducted in the Little Theater from 12 to 3 p m. The Episcopalians are asked to turn in their Lenten envelopes on or before, Wednesday morning. Instead of Sunday morning communion services there will an 8 o'clock service at St John's. They will have regular vesper services that day.

On Friday evening at the dinner hour, the Methodist student group will sponsor a social service in the place of the meal.

At 10 o'clock Sunday morning the Methodist group will sponsor a special Easter service of music. At the Methodist church, immediately in theory and panic, will conduct the choir. At 11 the worship service will be culminated by the presentation of "Bread and Wine" by the student group. Portrayal of Mary and Martha. Dot Bennett will take the part of Martha and Jackie Foodick will play Mary. A worship guide will be distributed by the Methodist girl.

The Baptist student house has conducted morning watch services at 8:30 every morning this week and will continue through Sunday in observance of Easter.

Last Wednesday the Jewish girls of college attended the Seder attend a Passover Seder at the American Legion hall.

FSC Program Stars Kellum

Business Manager Speaks On Eve of Retirement

Mr John G Kellum, whose 38 years as business manager of Florida State College will end in retirement tomorrow, was interviewed last night as the personality of the week on the Campus and Gold radio program from the college studio.

Mrs Eleanor Loyless, a student in the school of music, was pianist for the program and chose for the musical portion of the program Debussy's "Arabesque No." 1.

Mr Kellum, interviewed by radio coordinator Bertha Bloodworth, gave some facts about the early history of the college and told of its future that he believes it is "on the way to becoming one of the outstanding woman's colleges in the country."

Asked about his feelings on the eve of retirement, Mr Kellum replied that he had put so much of himself into the college that he will always feel that he were losing a member of his family. Since his forthcoming retirement was announced on February 20, Mr Kellum has received floods of letters from friends, business associates and prominent state officials congratulating him on his long term of successful work in helping to build FSCW up to its present status of second largest state college for women in the United States.

Among Mr Kellum's congratulatory mail from outside were Justices business managers of colleges all over the country, Dignitaries of the state government, and others, are included many letters from his associates of the college who remember him for his personal attention to their needs at FSC.

director of the affair, asked for a volunteer. Catherine Gallagher, a junior, offered her services, and soon cries of "10c! 15c! 25c!" filled the hall. Numerous articles were sold to the accompaniment of Catherine's pronunciation. "Hmmm—here's something rare—half a pen. The better half, that is." Well, goodness, you don't write with the other half anyway? The better half went for 5oc.

Bids rose rapidly on a green umbrella with a hole in one side. After Catherine's observant remark. "Well, you can always walk on the other side!"

Reliable items appeared in a scarf with the name "Jean" embroidered on it after the auction-eer announced: "Even if your name isn't Jean you can always give it to somebody!"

The presence of a small defect in one of the fountain pens nearly retarded the sale when Catherine's helpful comment: "There's a little catch to this—there's an ink sac to fill it with. Well, my grandmother liked to dip pens!"

Cigarette case, belts, rings, pins, gloves, coats, scissors, sweaters, jewelry and numerous other items readily sold. Fountain pens seemed to be the most popular articles, with repeated requests from the audience for more of them.

The greatest amount paid for an article was $12 for a brown full-length coat, and the smallest amount was 5c, for which many small items were purchased.

The auction was very successful according to Mrs Hughston Armstrong, chairman of the affair, totaled $77.10 which was turned over to the S&I fund. Mrs Armstrong and Mrs Gullck were assisted by Nell Clark,

Former FSC Student Dies In California

Linnie Lou Gautier, daughter of Mr and Mrs T N Gautier of Miami, Florida, has been elected chairman of the Social Life department of the student council of Scarritt College, Nashville, Tennessee for the academic year 1945-46.

Linnie attended Florida State College before registering for advanced training in the Nashville University Center. She has been attending Scarritt College during the fall and winter sessions training for a career of full time Christian service.

She will receive preparation for social and religious leadership in spirit which will include practice of the methods and technique learned in the classroom. Laboratory work with the community agencies and churches is considered an essential part of the educational program for the deepening of social responsibility and development of poise and tact in working with people and the acquisition of skill in various types of service.

The widely representative character of the student body is indicated by the fact that the young people represented in Scarritt during the past time quarters have come from 35 states and 8 foreign countries. They represent 8 denominations.

The large group of nationals who are studying in the University Center, and the presence of many graduate students who have lived and worked in foreign lands, make Scarritt truly a world in miniature.

According to Mrs J C Crawford, director of public relations at Scarritt College the international atmosphere as of large educational significance in the building of better interracial relations and international good will.

Stardust Formal to Highlight Alpha Gamma Delta Weekend

A tea dance, formal, and pledge service among the activities planned by the Alpha Gamma Delta's for their formal weekend.

The annual "Stardust Formal" will be held at the sorority house tomorrow night from 8:30 to 12 o'clock. Blue lights, silver stars on the walls, and other blue and silver decorations will carry out the theme of the dance which is the song "Stardust."

Tomorrow afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'clock a Hawaiian night club will be the scene of the tea dance. Guests will be seated at tables throughout the front of the house and will be entertained with a floor show with June McCurdy acting as mistress of ceremony. A hula chorus of six girls led by Ruth Sprott, a skit, a specialty by Betty Jo McAteer, and a Hawaiian quartet made up of Bonnie Hunt, Carolyn Abrams, Shirley Rodgers, and Jane Lyles will be included in the program.

Bonnie Hunt, social chairman, is in charge of all preparations for the weekend, and she co-ordinated the activities of the various committees. Carolyn Abrams is in charge of decorations for the formal and Betty McAteer for the tea dance. Ruth Sprott and Jane Lyles are in charge of the tea dance programs, and Helen Miller is making plans for the picnic.

A breakfast and picnic at Wakulla Springs for chapter members, pledges, and their dates has been planned for Sunday afternoon.

Out-of-town guests include Lillian Ervin of Plant City, Marjorie Nixon of Tampa, Mary Cooney of Miami, Dorothy Archer of Atlanta, and Betty Jane Gant of Tampa.

Fashion Flashes

The Easter Parade" will hold the spotlight on campus this weekend as Florida State College students display their creations of early colored prints and suits.

Navy blue for this spring seem to favor smooth, streamlined pastels with deep shades. V or square neck lines, and narrow skirts. The elongated shoulders and unpressed pleats are very popular. The new flattering tie bows are especially used to lend softness to even the most sophisticated dress.

Gally splashed prints with black as the predominant color will be worn with matching black pumps and white gloves and hats. These prints will be characterized by lower waistlines, less exaggerated shoulders, and the new side drape. This new drape is especially effective in black accents on the pocket and giving a "peplum" effect.

Suits of pastel and dark colors will be contrasting accessories will be worn, this year" styles differing slightly for, last year's with longer, more tailored jackets and the hip pocket.

Sleek pumps of white, black, or red, along with matching gloves and expensive shoulder bags will serve as accessories.

Hats this year will be small and worn over the back of the head. Many girls have made their own hats of flowers, fruits, fancy veils, or anything else that will serve as a good excuse for a hat.

The predominant colors for the season will be fushia, blackberry, red, and a startling new color of a greenish yellow hue limelight. Popular combinations will be navy and powder blue coral and white, green and orangy red, aqua and fushia, and brown and gold.

youths of our nation are jeopardizing and erring their lives.

Mrs Frank says, "It is time for the leaders of this country to enact stringent laws abolishing both college and high school fraternities and sororities from coast to coast." Young men who have spent the years of their college life in the bitter school of war return to college in the democracy of the whole forgot and find themselves "victims of a ridiculous and juvenile caste system which is totally un-American."

After having had close observances of these letter societies for more than a quarter of a century Mrs Frank is convinced that "any group of these societies accomplish is far outweighed by the unhappiness and heartache whereby they inflict . . ." She cites examples of a boy being rejected because he "failed to dance well or wear the latest cut of collar and of a girl who was made to feel a campus outcast because she was a bit overweight, perhaps, or made the fatal mistake of cutting her lecture with a knife."

"Even Abraham Lincoln would not possess leadership enough to make a fraternity under the present Panhellenic system," declares Mrs Frank. She tells of a brilliant and beautiful girl who was banned because her father was a railroad engineer. The argument that exclusion and fraternities lend a kind of material polish is in her opinion mostly pure nonsense. Moreover a brief study of Who's Who in America proves that "Greeks" have no monopoly on ability.

The author maintains that Greek letter societies are not deeply rooted to be "laughed out of society as they deserve to be. She says that parents and faculty members although they do not approve of sororities and fraternities nevertheless want their children to belong to the social scene as the caste system remains. Therefore in her opinion is it necessary to fully dissolve association against the caste system of sororities and fraternities which exist in a country where the most powerful asset for the preservation of democracy is the school system from the primary grade through the university.

Mad Dog Flothing At Mouth Scares New Hall Students

A very distressed female voice summoned several members of the campus staff to New Hall on Monday afternoon to annihilate a dog who showed every sign of having rabies. The dog was found trotting down the road south of New hall, barking wildly and frothing at the mouth. When approached, the creature made for the killer with open mouth, but was turned away by a club. The dog then ran after a colored man who fled in terror.

Finally the mad dog was cornered by a mouth of iron pipe and then killed.

FSC Fourth In National Meet

Takes First Place From WCUNC in Southern

Florida State College's swimming team tied for fourth place in the national swimming meet, according to an announcement received here today. They tied for placing first, second and third were not given in the announcement.

Marie Rose Tells College Girls How To Meet Officers

"We would like to know how we can meet some Army officers" was the plea of a group of "Lonesome Girls" from Florida State College

Issue of Sunday's Atlanta Journal Magazine carried a letter from a group of "Lonesome Girls" who wanted to meet some officers so that they could "have some good clean fun." The girls said that they "simply did not know the way for the students at Florida State to meet officers. The letter was in the column "Tell Marie Rose Your Problem."

Marie Rose answered their letter by saying that "the thing to do was to talk it over with those in authority at this time and one small group could do a lot of campaigning among their fellow students. Then they should appoint a committee to bring an outline of plans to the next meeting of the college. Marie Rose stated that she'd be glad to correspond for the college to hold open house or give a weekly dance to which they could invite Army officers."

Former Student Gets Position at Scarritt

Ruth Davis, graduate of Florida State College and member of the class of '34, died March 14 in San Paulo Brazil, South America, it is learned here today.

Her death was caused by a rare bone disease which had confined her to bed since last May. She has been in the Palo Alto hospital for the last six months. Her family stated that several specialists had been called in on the case but were not able to diagnose the bone disease.

After graduating from FSC Miss Davis took further training at Duke University She was prominent in the California Society of Girl Scouts, organization as president of the group and secretary of the Northern California division. She served at the time of her death.

Inter-Sorority Dance and Sing Will Be Featured

Highlighting Panhellenic weekend, will be the annual hop featuring music by the college swing band, to be held April 7 from 8:30 until 12 p m in the gymnasium. The sixth annual Panhellenic sing will follow Saturday, April 8 at 4 p m in the auditorium.

With the traditional decorations of sorority emblems and a profusion of streamers, the formal will present a colorful setting. Past and outgoing officers of the various sororities

First held in 1940, the sing will feature group songs by members of each sorority, and a silver cup for the best fast and slow numbers. This occasion will be open to the public.

Climaxing sorority activities for the year, Panhellenic formal hop has become a college tradition. A superstitious party, tea dances and a dining party are among the activities of the weekend in 1936. A "Flicken Walk" reminiscent of the famous one at West Point will be the way in which 1937 will end.

A spring garden with romantic arbors was the theme of the Panhellenic hop in 1938. That year their motto "You can't go wrong with Charlie Strong," students danced to the music of Charlie Strong and his orchestra. The first week-end in May 1942 reled out a patriotic theme, centered about a huge V for Victory.

The Swing-phibians from Camp Gordon Johnston supplied the music at the Panhellenic hop of "April Showers" was featured with flower arrangements appropriate to the season.

Juniors Nominate 29 In Class Meeting

Twenty-nine girls were nominated by the junior class as candidates for offices in the class meeting held in the auditorium of the education building at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon

Martha Jane Brown was the nominee for president of the present.

The two nominations for vice-president are Frankie Hall and Gladys Lester. Alice Walton, Walton who has been class sponsor adviser. Miss Walters is leaving Florida State college to go overseas with the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Association.

Miss Barbara Edinger, national lifesaving secretary of Tri Delta, will arrive Sunday night to spend

Jane Parker and Frankie Hall were nominated for the position of athletic manager. Other nominations for the position are Jacqueline Limentarian, Stella Barrineau and Ruth Ann Hall.

Even demonstration. Ella Mae Quimby and for chairman of May Day is Mary Rhodes and June McCurdy.

Professor Receives Committee Position

Doctor Coyle E Moore, professor of sociology at Florida State College, has been appointed as a member of a joint committee on the coordination of training for social work by Doctor Ernest B Harper, president of the National Association of Schools Associate Administration.

This committee is national in scope and was authorized by the American Association of Schools of Social Work and the National Association of Schools of Social Administration at their meeting in Washington, D.C. in January of this year. Other members of the committee are Walter Pettit, New York School of Social Work; Arthur Dunham, University of Michigan; Ann Pinlayson. University of Minnesota; Ernest B Harper, Michigan State College, and Mary Val Married, University of Arkansas. This committee plans to meet sometime this spring

Party To Be Held

Saturday, April 7, at 8 o'clock p m, the Live-saving Corps will hold a big "Splash" party at the pool in the physical education building. There will be water games, diving, swimming and relays. All members are urged to attend in order to get acquainted and become more interested in the work of the club.

Esteren Has Hunt

Esteren members in the spirit of the season enjoyed an Easter egg hunt Wednesday on the Chi Omega lawn following dinner together in Gilchrist dining hall.

A separate egg with each member's name on it which she had to find was the special feature of the hunt. The sisters Jane Brown and Corrine Johnston were in charge of arrangements.

Co-education Theme Is Its Big Bang In Florida's Spring Frolics

Co-education, war veterans, South American students, and Dean Hudson's orchestra were favorite conversation topics of Florida State College girls who attended the annual spring frolics at the University of Florida in Gainesville last week-end.

The festivities, which included a week-end of dances and parties, had as its central theme this year the observance of co-education week. Holmes Melton, a former University of Florida student, now a member of the state legislature, spoke to the students urging them to write their congressmen their views on co-education and to help promote the idea throughout the state

Miss Co-education was elected as the ruler of the formal dance Saturday night. A candidate from each fraternity was entered in the contest. Miss Joan Hanney, freshman and member of Pi Beta Phi sorority at FSC, was the winner of the title. When asked to say a few words to the newly elected her, Joan said, "I want to thank you all very much and I real happy." Joan represented Sigma Nu fraternity.

Dean Hudson's orchestra played both for the formal dance Saturday night and a short program of popular music Saturday afternoon when Mr Melton and Mr Hudson, an alumnus of university, made a short visit during the dance, telling the students that he hoped co-education would be inaugurated on the state.

Decorations for the dance were was held in the gymnasium of university, were very simple however, the girls thought that members of La Fiesta added splendid touch with their uniforms of

Sorority Chit-Chat

With so many sorority girls going home for Easter holidays, the social life on campus has been somewhat cut down, but several parties have found their way into the social calendar.

Alpha Xi Delta gave a ruse party Thursday night. The members and the rushees played games and refreshments.

The fifteth anniversary of Chi Omega will be celebrated by a dinner at the Floridan hotel a week from today Faculty members who will be present are Dean Emeritus William G Dodd, Er and Mrs Dana S Hodgson, and Mrs Frank Miller.

Phi Tri Delts had informal after-dinner coffee last Friday night in honor of Ann Carolyn Hudson, who was recently elected president of Collees Government Association. Invited were individual members of the sorority and other friends of Ann Carolyn's.

Thursday night the chapter entertained with a supper at the house honoring Miss Catherine Walters who has been their faculty adviser. Miss Walters is leaving Florida State college to go overseas with the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Association.

Miss Barbara Edinger, national lifesaving secretary of Tri Delta, will arrive Sunday night to spend a few days with the Tallahassee girls.

Delta Zeta had their election of officers last Monday night. The officers are: Jeanette Jaggard, president; June Padgett, vice-president; Betty Jo Hall, corresponding secretary; Alice Wade, Lamp editor, Aileen Stallings, rush chairman, Lillian Bridgewider, house chairman. The new officers will be installed in the Monday night.

Pi Beta Phi plans an Easter party for Sunday afternoon to be held on the lawn at the Pi Phi house. All members and alumnae are invited

Alpha Gamma Delta plans a Service Ball Monday, April 9, at the Floridan hotel. Mrs Ralph McIntosh last Monday, April 26

Coffin Is Here

Poet in Residence Addresses Students on Various Topics Concerning Creative Writing

Coffin to Confer With Those Interested in Writing And Will Discuss Their Original Poetry From Eleven to One Today

Dr Robert P Tristram Coffin, noted Maine poet who has been visiting the Florida State College campus this week, addressed the student body Monday night in Westcott auditorium and has spoken informally to several English classes and groups interested in creative writing.

From 11 to 1 o'clock today Dr Coffin will confer with students who wish to have him evaluate samples of their writing. Yesterday at 5 o'clock and this morning at 10 the poet spoke in the Augusta Conradi Little Theater. The guest also discussed some of his poetry on the Garnet and Gold radio program last night.

In his address last Monday night Mr Coffin discussed the poet to be found in the common and familiar things of home environment and as well as giving an illustration from his own life explained his arrival at an appreciation of everyday occurrences.

Blessed in a one-room, one-horse, rural school house, he was brought up on the classics, Greek and Roman poetry and the Testament, and has a really earliest conception of poetry is that it dealt with things far and unattainable.

He declared that he knew the ancient gods and goddesses better than his own family and that his first attempts at writing were in the form of Latin or Greek hexameter verse. However, in reached college age, he was to find many of the familiar things concerning people, and his writing has become more the fastest," as the poet expressed himself.

He also mentioned some of the new factors in the writing of poetry. Poets must be able to prove sounds like most new poems and only after it has had for about six months can such work be discerned. It must also be in logical order, with certain things understood left to be surmise and others not included, lest the poem be lost in bits and interest. He is especially partial to the poetry of Emerson, which, he said, is easiest to best poetry in the language of the common people.

He read a group of his own poems beginning with "Hound on Chilcoot Pass" which concerns a man-dog and his audibly sentimental half by which his farmhouse is surrounded, and the numerous which of his friends happened to be passing by. His next poem was "Gypsy Meets Boy." He read with a dog, but added a bit for the poem. Told of a boy and a willow whistle by Tow to Make a Willow Whistle" and "Ode To Told of was about Mr Coffin himself and dealt with the forest experience behind a plow. The furthenance, a very important part of balance in the composition of his next poem and described a Child Maine character, and finished him with the weather Christmas" is an example of his love for common words and of his genius for finding poetry in the familiarity of a barn.

Films To Be Shown In Little Theater

Flambeau to Sponsor Movies For Tomorrow Night

Three defense films, "Conquer by the Clock," "Cadet Classification" and "Target Tokyo," will be shown at the Augusta Conradi Little Theater tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. There is no admission charge.

These movies, presented by the defense council and sponsored this week by the Flambeau, give information about the various branches of the war news and are designed to show some of the phases of the army air forces of the United States and her Allies.

"Conquer by the Clock" tells the story of the importance of time in carrying on a full scale war economy. "Cadet Classification" describes the classification procedure employed for the selection of cadets to be trained as pilots, navigators, and bombardiers, and "Road to Tokyo" is a dramatization produced to show how Canada at the Pacific war should operate in building up Canada's preparation for invasions of Japan. It is also the story of Canada and America from his latest book. Primer for America. This will be the last showing of films in the leaves Saturday to lecture at Georgia State College for Women in Milledgeville. Duke university and the University of Rochester.

From 11 until 1 today, Dr Coffin will have conferences with students desiring his appraisal of their work, both prose and poetry. At 11 o'clock Dr Coffin has stated the pride he has for his native state. Maine. He has pointed out that it is a country that poets thrive in, naming Edwin A Robinson, and Edna St Vincent Millay to back up this statement. In his talk Wednesday morning he said that he personally had discovered that Robert Frost is a descendant of Mother Goose. He said that he had a hard time getting Mr Frost to admit this fact, but that when he pointed out to him that there is a mountain in Maine named after Mr Frost, America from his latest book. Primer for America. This will be the last showing of films in the leaves Saturday to lecture at Georgia State College for Women in Milledgeville. Duke university and the University of Rochester.

Coeducation Wins in Poll Of Students

90 Per Cent of Votes Cast In Favor of System in Florida

U of F Alligator Sponsors Campus Census

Coeducation in Florida scored a decided victory in a student opinion poll taken last week when approximately 90 per cent of students voting cast their ballots in favor of co-ed housing in state college. Over half of the 816 students participating in the poll believe that both Florida State College and the University of Florida should be open to men and women.

Sponsored by the U of F Alligator, the poll was conducted on campus by the Future Voters of America. Voting on local, state, national and international problems. It has long been intended in coeducational colleges, followed the issue closely, according to Alvin Dark, editor of the Alligator, was interested in sponsoring a poll here as well as at Gainesville. Dark compiled this two-day poll in order to secure student opinion on the subject," she said.

"We believe Florida legislators should take this matter into consideration when they vote next fall. Whether it is the students themselves who will be primarily affected," Alicia has stated in regard to the coeducation question.

Students also voted to make both state colleges coeducational commented that this would fur-

Creative Arts Contest Stimulating to College Students Is Opinion Voiced By Visiting Poet and Lecturer on Campus

"I think the poetry submitted to the Creative Arts contest was very good for college work," said Dr Robert R Tristram Coffin, Maine poet, novelist, biographer and professor at Bowdoin college, who has been on the campus this week giving lectures and helping judge the Creative Arts contest.

This morning at 10 o'clock Dr Coffin will appear in the Little Theater to read ballads and selections from his latest book. Primer for America. This will be the last appearance of Dr Coffin on the campus. He leaves Saturday to lecture at Georgia State College for Women in Milledgeville, Duke university and the University of Rochester.

From 11 until 1 today, Dr Coffin will have conferences with students desiring his appraisal of their work, both prose and poetry. At 11 o'clock Dr Coffin has stated the pride he has for his native state. Maine. He has pointed out that it is a country that

Allison Gives Her Conception Of Responsible Student Citizen

"Student government on campus should mean more to our people, as too few girls take a real interest in it," asserted Ann Carolyn Allison, newly-elected president of the College Government association, in a recent interview.

She continued. "It is supposed to function for the entire group. Many students just complain among themselves about things they don't like instead of taking their comments and criticism to the proper officers. It is necessary that we work with the existing system to make corrections."

Ann stated her conception of the duties of a responsible student citizen as follows: "to know what's going on, to be interested in the campus and community, to keep up with her academic work, to make honor system a part of herself, to participate and find a definite place in her college life, and to vote in student elections."

When asked what advice she would give to her younger sister, who will be a freshman at Florida State College next fall, and to other freshmen on the basis of her own experience, Ann said: "Make a study schedule and stick to it, especially during the first semester. Remember everyone else is just as lonely as you are. Try to get to know teachers as persons. Participate in campus activities to a reasonable degree." Ann admits that her main regret of her three years on this campus is that she didn't "get to know the faculty members personally."

In her opinion the requirements and preparation one needs in order to become a successful student officer are: To get along with people; to think clearly, evaluating both sides of a problem; to search for individual solutions, keeping in mind the good of the best for the most people; to be willing to learn; to be patient; to have a good sense of values; and to be emotionally stable."

Ann's hobbies are reading, which she likes to study and learn and because she thinks a college education is the best preparation and preparation for a useful and happy life. She enjoys reading, par-

M'Farland Wins Poetry Contest

Modern Dance Winners Announced by AAUW

Winning contestants in the poetry and dance divisions of the Creative Arts contest have been announced by the judges.

First place in the poetry contest goes to Elizabeth Nordbeck for her poem, which was decided by Robert P Tristram Coffin, visiting poet in residence, who read and judged the poetry submitted by the 14 contestants.

Margery Rolin and Anne Hunnicutt were awarded first place in the dance division of the contest given last Friday afternoon in the Augusta Conradi Little Theater by the interpretation of Miss Hanlonoff's "Prelude in C-sharp Minor." Honorable mention in the modern dance went to Jinx Farrior and Nancy MacEdwards and in tap, to Betty Bryson. No first place was given in tap by the judges who were Dean Karl O Furstenfeer of the School of Music, Dr Katherine Montgomery director of vocational guidance, and Mr Charles Crain of Dale Mabry Field.

Honorable mention in poetry was given to Mabel Rust, Margery Loomis, and Winifred Meldrim by Mr Coffin. An honorable mention, Mr Coffin mentioned Marianne Boyer, Mrs Marion Thompson, and Ellen Whitman. The guest poet also said that the quality of the poetry written by Florida State College students was much above the average in the several of that written on most campuses today.

Winner of the poetry contest, Elizabeth McFarland, has been the exclusive holder of first place position in the Creative Arts contests as she has won each contest since 1942 when the contest was first offered. At that time the contest concerned only contributions in poetry but has now expanded to the present creative arts program which includes several forms of literature writing, music composition, dance, and crafts. It is the hope of Dr Coffin, Mrs Rogers, chairman of the Arts and Crafts committee of the AAUW, that next year the contest will be expanded still further to include judging of exceptional journalistic writing.

Co-Education Resolution To Be Presented to Senate At Called Meeting Today

Recommendation That Student Group Go on Record As Favoring Co-education at FSC and U of F Will Be Introduced By Thomson

A resolution regarding coeducation will be presented at a called meeting of Student Senate today at 5 o'clock in the Student Alumna Building auditorium. Other business will be a report from the Senate appointed legislative committee and the election of house president and house vice-president of New Hall.

The resolution concerning co-education, which is scheduled to come before Student Senate this afternoon, will be presented by sophomore senator Peggy La Thomson. According to her, the resolution favors coeducation at the University of Florida, effective next year, with coeducation at both the University of Florida and Florida State College as soon as possible.

Primary reason for presenting the resolution, Peggy Lu said when interviewed, is that in the present student body on campus a "large majority" of those voting favored coeducation at one or both institutions, with 58 opposed to coeducation and 840 recommending it.

Senate Votes on Changes

At the regular meeting Tuesday, Student Senate discussed and voted upon proposed legislation from College Council, passing all but one of the changes referred to the student organization for approval. Changes in Student Conferences have only six day trips per quarter was voted down by a large majority.

The following are the proposed changes to be made in the 1945-46 Gold Book

The house presidents and house vice-presidents of the Reynolds residence hall should be elected by the entire student body, in this hall. At the same time the presidents and vice-presidents of upperclass residence halls are elected. Each house president and vice-president shall be required to take part in the counselor training classes. Any school who has been elected to the office of house president and has attended certain privileges to be determined by the Executive Council a CCA and to be approved by the College Council.

The chairman of the Budget committee shall be elected by College Council. Under the committees responsible to Student Senate, it shall be stated that the chairman of the Budget Advisers will be elected by Student Senate.

Petitions for candidacy for major offices must be signed by at least 50 students, for minor offices by at least 30 students. All students submitting petitions or nominated by other means shall present a statement of qualifications. These statements of qualifications shall be placed in public place prior to elections. The last two sentences of the paragraph concerning qualifications on page 32 will be omitted.

● GIVE US COEDUCATION

Over ninety per cent of those voting in the recent poll conducted Tuesday and Wednesday morning to get a sample opinion of the student body of Florida State College for Women concerning coeducation voted in favor of it. A majority of the 918 votes cast were for coeducation at both the University of Florida and Florida State College. While the poll included less than half of the student body, as is usually the case in student elections before the pressure is put upon the last 100 or so students to reach the 51 per cent majority, it is probable that further voting would have followed the same trend.

At present it appears that only one co-education bill, that for the University of Florida, has been introduced to the State Legislature. We feel that because of the number of students favoring co-education at the University of Florida this bill would find considerable support within the student body here.

However, the majority of students have indicated preference for co-education at both institutions. Although no bill to that effect has been submitted to the Legislature as yet, it is logical to assume that such a bill would best satisfy student desires here.

The members of the student body of the University of Florida have through their student organization expressed decided opinion in favor of co-education.

That an opportunity to express such opinion will be offered to the student government of FSC through action of Student Senate appears evident. Sophomore senator Peggy Lu Thomson has stated her intentions to introduce a resolution to Student Senate today which will favor immediate coeducation at both institutions as soon as possible. In view of the student sentiment expressed we see a strong probability that Senate will accept this or a somewhat similar resolution.

Senate members as well as the student body have been offered ample opportunity to give much consideration to the issue involved. Months of reading reports of actions and recommendations of various Florida organizations were culminated here last Friday night with an impartial forum to discuss pros and cons of the situation.

Since student bodies of both state institutions have registered their opinion through approval of co-education, we urge the representatives of the people of the state of Florida to give weight to our opinions. The students of Florida institutions are those to be most directly affected by any action.

● WANTED: CLOTHING

Clothes, shoes, any size or shape, and bedding—these among other things are what the European people and the masses in the liberated countries sorely need.

During the month of April, a United National Clothing Collection, under the direction of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, is taking place to supply good used clothing for free distribution to the more than 125,000,000 destitute people of war devastated countries. This campaign has a goal mark of 150,000,000 pounds of clothing, or five pounds per person, and is the most nationwide clothing collection to be conducted in the Spring of 1945.

On campus this drive is being sponsored by the World Student Service Fund, one of the fifty-odd organizations cooperating in the campaign. Boxes have been placed in the halls of the dormitories and in off-campus houses for the collection of any clean, wearable clothing. The only requirement is that the articles contributed be clean and serviceable. Obviously evening dresses, dress hats and similar garments would not be accepted because they could not be used by people who will receive them and who have neither time nor money for gay festivities even if night clubs still should happen to be in operation.

Reports have come from all points of Europe emphasizing the dire need for clothing to cut down the disease rate and illness due to exposure from lack of sufficient clothing. In Greece one is forced, according to reports, to pay approximately $220 for a pair of shoes made of a synthetic substance which falls to pieces after five miles of walking, and in Yugoslavia death notices occurring in a family bring mobs offering "fabulous sums" for the clothing of the deceased. Compare these conditions which exist all over Europe with the over-crowded closets of the American home and especially the closet of the college girl.

As is always the case, the success of a drive depends a great deal on the contribution of each individual. Here on campus almost every collective effort falls far short of the established quota no matter how worthy the cause. The reasons for this may be varied and many; one, that numerous drives are constantly being launched, exhausting the even enter in. But this clothing collection does not require cold, hard cash that might eliminate cokes and movies, but simply old but good clothing which each student has but isn' tusing that will aid the health of the war weary people where tuberculosis, typhus and other diseases have been given a free rein in great part because of the lack of adequate clothing. This campaign, too, rests with each individual.

● CHALLENGE TO COMPLACENCY

FSC's first Oratorical contest is now underway, and entries have been asked from all students who are interested in expressing their opinions on world citizenship and its challenge.

Certainly all phases of the subject need to be given thought by FSC girls. We who are to become leaders after college have a definite responsibility for knowing what's going on in the world, and for preparing ourselves to be intelligent members of society. Knowledge and interest about the world is not only our duty, and we are failing in it if we leave school unable to have rational opinions about state and national problems. We as leaders will do harm instead of good if we cannot intelligently face critical problems of this era—international organization, chances for permanent peace, problems of race, of inequality of education, income, and opportunity.

As a whole, many observers of the world today say emphatically that America as a nation just doesn't know what the score is, internationally speaking. And since our domestic problems are reflected in our dealings with the world beyond America, what we do and think about the Negro problem, labor's disputes with capital management, and the myriad of other difficult conflicts, ignorance about conditions at home damage our ability to understand world situations.

Everyday incidents reveal tragic ignorance of deep social problems in America. Without investigation we accept blind attitudes about causes of poverty, of misgovernment, of prejudice. We are often equally in the dark about world relations. This ignorance was illustrated forcibly this month in a street poll of pedestrians, taken in Tennessee. Asked if they knew anything about the Dick Tracy hair bob, seven heard the words. Several actual answers included "who?" "I'm from Georgia and don't know this town very well" and, "I only set shredded wheat for breakfast."

We hope FSC girls could make a better showing, but sometimes we think too much of campus emphasis has been put on trivialities, and too little on constructive thinking about our place in solving the riddle of human misery.

In recognition of the fact that our campus horizons have been narrow, the Student World Affairs Council and Hillel are sponsoring the oratorical contest, with its emphasis on social consciousness.

We heartily endorse the contest, and urge students to enter it and to start thinking about "World Citizenship: Challenge to Complacency." It is a challenge to our campus complacency, and should be accepted.

● REGRETTABLE APATHY

The convening of another Legislature serves to remind us that Democratic government still exists in our State and Nation.

These elected representatives of the people are charged with the responsibility of making the laws under which we live. And because they are only human and cannot possibly know how everyone thinks, it is our responsibility to at least express our opinion on proposed bills which concern us.

This 1945 session ought to prove interesting to students on this campus because such topics as co-education, possibilities of lowering the voting age to 18, and even rumors of placing a higher tax on cigarettes will probably be brought up.

Over the years the general trend has been that of an apathetic nature; this is, we do not think seriously about what is going on around us and thus DO nothing about the situation. Let's change that! Let a part be taken probably only one out of ten people could name the representatives and senator who represent his home district; naming the Supreme Court judges for Florida would be as difficult a task.

Getting closer home, newspapers from time to time have quoted Governor Caldwell and Senator Pepper often than not he is unable to name even his city or county officials.

Preservation of the Republic demands that we, the people, concern ourselves with government.

The Students Speak . . .

At the present time, one of the most discussed problems of national importance is post-war conscription. It is for this reason that this week's column deals with the question: ARE YOU FOR OR AGAINST POST-WAR CONSCRIPTION AND WHY?

I am in favor of conscription after the war for a year or two in order to protect ourselves from being caught unprepared again. It would, if the effect on the present members of the armed forces is to be the same as an incentive to improve the health of the nation's young men.

MARY GARCIA,
(Sophomore)

I am not in favor of post-war conscription because it is definitely against our democratic way of life, against the things for which the boys are fighting.

MARJORIE CLARK,

Perhaps a plan for post-war conscription would help solve the problem of post-wer unemployment by letting the men slowly return to a pre-war civilian life.

SHIRLEY GRUBE,
(Junior).

I'm for it. Men would be more easily adjusted to life by having to actually meet it than to read about it. The soldiers overseas seem to be in favor of it, and they ought to know.

PATTY HILL,
(Junior).

I think that conscription would be a good thing as it would form a basis for every young person and would help to fortify us against any other nation.

EVELYN AYRAULT.
(Senior).

A year of conscription would not provide enough training to warrant wasting a year of a young man's life—a year in which he might attend college or else find himself a job.

JOYCE AYERS.
(Freshman).

I feel that universal conscription will be needed in our dealings with Russia after the war as it will provide a reserve army for the United States, but it will only be preparing the men for another war.

BETTY ANN BRADLEY.
(Sophomore).

I am not in favor of post-war conscription because it will spoil or at least seriously hamper the chances of a lasting peace.

PEGGY LOU THOMAS
(Junior).

Freedom Carries to the Philippines
By Carlos P. Romulo & Save

"All of Asia, aspiring to freedom, has been fired on American conduct in the Philippines," says Mr Francis Sayre in his article in the March issue of the Atlantic Monthly. Mr. Sayre has had several opportunities to gain information concerning the Philippine Islands and was appointed High Commissioner to the Philippines in 1939.

The islands of the Philippine archepelago are the crossroads of commerce between great powers, Asia and America and the North and South Pacific. Of the people of the Philippine Islands only one per cent are foreigners. Of these Filipinos about 117,000 are Chinese, some 29,000 Japanese according to the 1939 census, $700 American and 400 Spaniards. By far the majority of Filipinos are the untutored, poverty-stricken peasants raised from the eight major castes or Manila-trained professional or commercial officials. It is these peasants, maintains Mr Sayre who will determine the destiny of the Philippines.

"Never before has there been anything quite like the story of the Philippines and their relationship." From the time that the United States acquired the Philippine Islands in 1898 the policy has been to help and educate the islands for self-government. In less than two years after the Islands were taken by the United States a representative power had been granted to a Philippine assembly in which Filipinos were gradually appointed. By the passage of the Jones Act in 1916 the Philippine Commission was entirely replaced by a Philippine Senate. In the 1934 the Philippine Independence Act gave the Filipino people the right to self-government and promised them complete independence after a ten year transitory years that followed before the outbreak of the war Mr Sayre becomes the High Commissioner under their able president, Manuel Quezon, proved that they were capable of self-government. He also showed, he says, that the commonwealth experiment was suitable as an interim arrangement but not as a permanent form of government for Asiatic situations such as the issue of education and the nationalist campaigns which arose between the Philippine Assembly and the United States Government, who tried mostly to follow a hands-off policy.

Mr Sayre says that although the coming of the Americans has not so fundamentally changed the life of the Filipino peasants it brought uncontaminated water and the simple health choices and small-pox, developed good schools, introduced good roads and radios and movies and many the outside world. During all the years that Japan and Filipino people were assisting the Filipinos in making the Islands one of the most literate countries in Asia in the Pacific the Filipinos could not help but absorb some of the bad habits of the West. The fruits of the newly created income went into the pockets of a small landlords thereby widening the gap between the masses and the small governing class. Mr Sayre then says maintains the Philippine Islands were formed into a progressive nation with higher standards of living than most of the rest of Asia. He concludes that the Filipino thinks of the American as a friend, a benevolent which he showed by his valient fight against the Japanese.

The immediate problem now is to drive the Japanese aggressor from the Islands and after restoration of constitutional processes and normal functions of government Mr Sayre has hopeful that the Philippine Islands their independence. A resolution to this effect was passed by Congress last June. The duty of the United States not only to encourage but for economically the Islands will be in a sad condition. Moreover their complete independence will exclude them from the United States market which is very lucrative for them free of tariff. Only by achieving a practical state of economic independence will the Islands be able to maintain their political liberty.

The question of United States navy and air bases in the Philippines is one which will have to be worked out, says Mr Sayre, for the mutual security of both countries and preferably through a world organization of the United Nations.

The importance of the Philippines is further emphasized by the statement that the success of independence in the Islands means the success of the furtherance of American ideas and ideals throughout the East.

In This Our Time

Nazi Germany was pounded and pounded hard this last week by the combined operation of the Allied ground and air forces. In western Europe the Germans in the area west of the Rhine were cleared out and the great river itself was crossed. This past week saw the beginning of the clearing of the Nazis out of the Netherlands, the beginning of the expurination of the Baltic ports and the almost complete isolation of the Ruhr within which the Allied armies around forces have trapped an estimated 10,000 German troops This loss of the Ruhr is important since it was Germany's last and greatest arsenal supplying of coal and iron for her lesser industries. Its loss, coming on top of the previous surrender of the Saar and the coal fields of Silesia, meant that Germany, which must depend entirely upon her own fields could not hope to carry on a long-term, full scale war. The Ruhr was sealed off by the blitzkrieg-like movement of the American Ninth army which cut the superhighway of the American First army to the south.

In the north the British, including veteran tankers of the African campaign, broke out and headed across the north German plain. At last report they sped beyond the Rhine in the area threatening to carry across the northern country's heartland.

In the central Reich three American armies were striking in the direction of Berlin. Germans by which Germany would be split in two, thus cutting off essential Nazi armies from the Nazis' final fortress—the mountain region of the south.

Last week, the German industrial cities suffered the greatest bombardment since the beginning of the war. Despite the New Act the transportation centers, transportation junctions and industrial plants have been the chief targets. Berlin, Germany's the great cities' populations have been moved into the southern country regions.

On the eastern front last week, the Russians launched a drive on the Oder river, 21 miles from Berlin, was the focus of the greatest danger to the Nazi. Little definite information has been obtainable concerning the developments on the "Berlin Front" because the Soviet government kept its events screened from view.

In addition to the drive along the Oder, the Russians launched a new offensive up the Danube valley toward Vienna and the mountain southern Austria. This was the drive paired with the American one toward the upper Danube where it seemed to some observers that the Nazi escape routes would be severed.

ASIATIC OPERATIONS

Troops of the new Tenth Army's 24th corps cut the vital island of Okinawa in two last week by reaching the village of Tobara on the east coast almost 10 days ahead of schedule against little sign of organized resistance. The amazingly little opposition for such a vital stronghold was taken as an indication that the Japanese as usual were holed up in caves and commanding any high ground they could hold.

This important operation was preceded by a Tokyo report last week which told of 20 or 30 American transports on several small islands to the west of Okinawa. This island is due to the Ryukyu Islands on the doorstep of Japan, only 325 miles southwest of the home island of Kyushu.

Admiral Nimitz's communique announced that naval guns and carrier planes of the Fifth Fleet, together with those of several British units which recently arrived, had been sweeping up and down the 700-mile island chain for nine consecutive days while concentrating their main strength on Okinawa, smashing at airfields, installations and war merchant ships. At least 47 enemy vessels were reported sunk or damaged and 38 planes destroyed in the 3 days' attack against the island.

The move was in a sense a mark near the end of the road to Tokyo which began over three years ago on the island of the Solomons. Since that time the Japanese have been pushed back from island to island, penned into a steadily shrinking area, shorn of many of their gains and deprived of their stolen supplies from others by the throttling of the ocean supply lines. Some observers consider this foothold in the Ryukyus the beginning of the actual invasion of Japan proper since it is so close to the main island and is represented in the Japanese diet.

PEACE ORGANIZATION

Throughout the United Nations this last week there was a great deal of discussion and controversy concerning the number of votes each of the Big Three should have in the Assembly of the world security organization to be created at San Francisco on April 25. At the Yalta conference President Roosevelt, Marshall Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill agreedthat the United States would have three votes, the Soviet Union three votes and Great Britain and her Dominions six votes. Then, very recently, to the complete surprise of the delegates and many observers, Secretary of State Stettinius announced that President Roosevelt had decided to ask for three votes for the U.S. as in only one vote. However, said Secretary Stettinius, this does not alter the President's promise to support Marshall Stalin and Churchill should the claim actually is made at San Francisco.

However, there was still no open question whether the American delegation, of which Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, is a member, would agree to support Roosevelt's promise to Stalin. Stettinius declined to discuss the American delegation's attitude, but Senator Vandenburg made known his opposition to multiple voting on the ground that it would impair the "sovereign equality of nations."

The multiple voting, which the Senator is against, would allow the United States, Republic one independent vote, the White Russian Republic one independent vote and the other fourteen Republics of the Soviet Union one vote each. However, it is realized that should the Soviet Union be united its three votes would always will be in accord with the number of votes to be able to balance against the votes of three independent nations, possibly the United States among them. On the other hand, some observers believe that there would be true in the case of the British Commonwealth of Nations within the last two decades the Dominions have moved steadily in favoring independence of the motherland and that their decisions would be as they are today, determined by their own necessities, geographical and economic.

Another point hinging on multiple votes mentioned this week was the voting of the Big Three's spheres of influence. Russia is fighting to secure the votes of its neighbors in eastern Europe, and America over the votes of its neighbors in Latin America. The votes, of either of these countries, together with those of its spheres of influence, could completely dominate the votes of many small independent nations.

This problem of voting is only

COLLEGE COMMENTS . . .

It's Only Human Nature

I was just thinking: Why is it that we all have such good intentions? Why don't we do them through? Just last night I courted and studied and went to see a show. I really meant to study, but after a trip for some coffee, and a brief skimming of the news there was a lot of good time gone. I know I couldn't have talked on the phone more than the minutes, and I only ran over to Leon's to get a sandwich. I came back I did play a few out again until I decided I'd like a cheerleader. Of course I had to go and buy some and then when I was home I had to wash my quick hands of Pantan with some of the girls. And then I didn't have time to study because I was sleepy. Whoever said Tempus Fugit was pretty smart man, but I can't understand how time gets away from me!

F. S. C. Clotheslines

I never hear the advertisement. "Sit-round, so firm, so fully packed," but what I think of the Tallahassee Girls' Dormitories is divided into two camps, those who want to refuse and those who do not. And that's where the laundry steps in. By shrinking every bit of clothing that a girl owns in the world to nothing and at times unattainable acid. Why do we have clothes if not what of us who are already preshrunk? The only thing left for us to do is to wear bathing suits (I contest that) clothing to the Florida Flambeau. Personally I really had to beat around the bush to get that plug in, didn't I?

That's Life or Rush Up, Honey. At Least You Have a Mop.

The other day I heard a sophomore remark that a certain update was an hour late. That's really tough! I feel sorry for the girl. I really do. Imagine having to wait a whole hour! Trials and tribulations, they multiply. I wonder if life is worth it all. Still I can't help wondering what she was complaining about. How wonderful to expect your man by the hour and not by the year!

Over the Tea Cups

He said. . . . I said. . . . Then he . . . Then I. . . . Oh, he's so wonderful . . . Do you know what my roommate did? . . . Wish I could bet a "B" in Psych. . . . A letter from. . . . Doesn't she look awful? . . . He said. . . . I said. . . . He's so wonderful . . . Brilliant conversationalists, these college girls!

The Thinker

I wonder if I could get one of those American way school for Zeros off my Physical Science papers?

What Price Glory

The general public knows very little about the history of Greek wit—about the evolution of man. But our Florida State College students, especially a member of the club knows that man descended from monkeys monkeys act like "goats," and "goats" are the lowest form of animal life.

NOTE: Any resemblance to anything living or dead is purely coincidental.

No Complainte

The dining hall has always come in for its share of verbal and written abuse. But I'm not going to complain about it. I'm just a little bit worried about the butter or rather the lack of butter. I've heard that it's because that stuff way back in the Dark Ages. Maybe the cows are justtired after giving their years of service to a war-time America, or maybe they've joined the Unions and are striking for an increase in fodder. We can only wonder. Of course we will—out o lot of things. We could have done without butter very nicely, too; that fish last Friday night. But I'm not going to complain about the fish. I'm just a little bit worried about the flavor or rather the lack of flavor. You know what I mean, that stuff. . . . Any suggestions as to how to end this will be highly appreciated.

This meeting, is held once a year to evaluate the work of the organization during the past year. The members go over their work, finding fault and discussing means of improving it.

The main topic of discussion was the proposed which will arise out of the new quarter system. The members have set up plans by means of entertaining the freshmen who will enter school at the beginning of the second and third quarters. It was thought that the Sophomore Council should work more with the freshmen and with the freshmen advisor. Their work has become too complicated. The council also decided that they should try to take a more active part in orientating the freshmen who enter at the beginning of the school year.

A discussion was also held on improvements of the Sophomore Council in regard to membership. They discussed particularly ways to facilitate roll check.

The freshmen finalists need to take a more active part in the college activities was also discussed. Jean Cole, chairman of Sophomore Council, said that many of the finalists were not called upon to do anything. She also said some of the finalists have had to ask for things to do, even though there are plenty of things that the organization could easily but are rarely asked to do.

Poet In Residence Addresses Students On Various Topics

three poems was an attempt to describe those things sometimes seen for an instant in a sudden flash of light and inspiration "Crystal Morning" described the flight of a star across a night sky a pack of hounds in pursuit, while the young Coffin watched from a rowboat. "Golden Folly" saw the golden, cruel beauty of a hawk just before the kill. In "Secret Hearts," he recalled a serious illness in his father's life during which his father came in the middle of the night and stood by his bed. "I realized that my father's face as he saw it in the light of a match.

The last group of poems were typical of his home in Maine. "The Face" described the walk through life of a typical couple who lived along the Maine coast. "This Is My Country" was a description of the people and the countryside of Maine. "Roxana" dealt with an old woman crippled with rheumatism and a sense of sin.

Sidney Foster Plays Tonight

Famous Pianist Appears On Civic Concert

Sidney Foster, American pianist, will appear tonight at 8:15 at Leon High school auditorium as a part of the Civic Music Association's series of programs.

In addition to his usual piano repertoire there is always a new composition or seldom heard work included in his programs. Of his interest in contemporary music, Foster says, "I feel it is distinct privilege to be able to introduce new works to my audiences since in my opinion, many of them are profound and vital contributions to the growing repertoire of American music, and distinguished additions to the whole of piano literature."

At nine he began his piano study and one year later entered the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. After two years at Curtis, Foster returned to New Orleans to study with Walter Goldstein. In 1938 he gave his debut recital and was encouraged by a newspaper there to continue his career rather than the ensuing four years. In 1934, he decided to devote his entire time to the piano and went back to the Curtis Institute and stayed there until he graduated in 1938.

Prize winning was the next thing in Foster's career. The Marcella Sembrich Memorial Prize and the Leventritt award in 1940 which provided for a solo appearance with the New York Philharmonic Society. He played the Philharmonic Symphony under John Barbirolli in March, 1941, in New York. Foster made his next morning was "a richly gifted performer" and "a pianist who possessed a profound musician." Since then both as a recitalist and with the leading symphony orchestras, he has continued to win high praise. Reviews in concert halls from coast to coast.

Any new members of the Civic Music Association may obtain their membership receipts for admission as guests to this last concert of 1944-45 season.

All students and faculty who have not yet paid their dues for their 1945-46 memberships are urged to do so promptly. Student dues are $2.50 for adults. The campaign headquarters are now open in the Student Union Building, Inc. Box 149. For students' convenience in securing membership slips this year they may also be had Thompson in the college book store, Mr. Walter Conkle, or Miss Isabel McKinnell. They may also see the following students for each: Carmen Cumbie, Mary Robertson or Martha Fox.

Other guest artists that have been presented under the Civic Music programs in the past are: Jascha Bearstein, Ballet Russe, Don Cossacks, Erio Pinza, Salzedo Ensemble, Erica Morini, Arthur Rubinstein, Jussi Bjoerling, National Operatic Quartet, Jean Dickinson, Richard Crooks and Philmenoff, Roland Gundry, Anne Jamison, Grillet Stirling Quartet, Carmen Amaya Company, Curtis String Quartette, Polyna Stoska, Louis Kaufman and Thomas L. Thomas.

Sensitive Seniors Organize 'S' Club

The S club is a new organization on the campus for "sensitive seniors" who never made the "S" society. Members of the members consider it next to the F club here at Florida State College.

Their colors are black and white are worn on Saturday and the members eat together Saturday night. "We do things up brown, but our hands are lily white," is the motto.

The song of the S club is, "A Little on the Bony Side." Mary Held a Little Lamb is their favorite poem since the pledges are called sheep.

Nancy Parker announced that the S club would go soon and they would refer to include all friends and roommates in particular.

Pre-Med. Exam

The Association of American Medical Colleges' aptitude test will be given on April 13, at 918 Westcott. This test should be taken by all students who expect to apply for entrance to a Medical School during 1945 or the Spring of 1946.

Having been adopted by the association as one of the official requirements for admission, the test measures one's ability to learn material similar to that given in Medical Schools.

Those who are interested should apply immediately to the office of the Director of Personnel. A fee of $1.50 will be collected from each student taking the test.

Sidney Foster, pianist, will appear on the Tallahassee Civic Music Association program tonight at Leon High school.

Contest Entries Deadline April 16

"World Citizenship" Is Topic Of Speech Competition

Deadline for Oratorical Contest entries is April 16, according to Sandra Barclay, chairman of sponsoring organization Student World Affairs Council. Broad topic of the contest is "World Citizenship: Challenge to Democracy," and all students are asked to enter.

Prizes will be awarded the contest winners in the finals to be held publicly April 23.

Variety of Topics Featured This Week

The radio program of Florida State College this week features a variety of topics.

Monday night at 9 o'clock the hour will be a program sponsored by the Personnel Office. Thursday night there will be the regular Garnet and Gold program and on Friday afternoon at 2:30 the elementary and secondary education school will give a special program.

The personnel office will sponsor a program in the form of a play, dealing with vocational guidance. The cast will include Dr Elizabeth G Andrews, director of personnel; Miss Mabel Wright Dressler, assistant director of personnel and Mary Alice Bowden, student assistant. This program is the second in a series which explains the work of the personnel department.

The public school music class will furnish the music for Thursday's Garnet and Gold program.

The demonstration school broadcast will be given from the college auditorium. The children, under the direction of their teachers, will present pieces from the cantata, "The Caravan."

Thatcher Talks On Military Diseases

"Diseases of Military Significance" is the subject of lectures given by Miss Mable Thatcher to the general bacteriology classes beginning this Friday and continuing every Friday until the end of the semester.

These are diseases which are often called "Oriental Diseases" or "Tropical Diseases," those foreign to the United States. The endemic areas and reservoirs of infection are located in many places where the American soldiers are fighting.

Since many boys will be exposed for the first time, they will be easy prey for these bacteria or protozoan parasites. These diseases now take on a new significance to all Americans.

The same lectures will be given at 8, 11 and 2 in the bacteriology laboratory, 101 Westcott. All students are invited to attend at any of these times.

ticularly historical novels and biographies. She loves music, either listening or playing the piano herself. One of her great pleasures is sitting in the back of Westcott auditorium, listening to the organ. Her favorites are Tschaikowsky, Debussey, light classics, and a few popular songs.

Her major at FSC is social studies. She is also minoring in Spanish, religion, philosophy, piano and organ. "When she graduates from college she will probably either take graduate work or coach a year," and eventually get married, I suppose." She amiably confessed that among her earlier ambitions was a desire to be a concert-pianist and to go to Radio City singing "Rosemary" not in star time.

Ann is active in church work at college, has helped in Methodist intermediate camps in the summer, and is Vice-president of Newer for Florida.

In the dining hall she eats cooked cereal with sugar and green tomatoes. Her "pet peeves" are disorder and people who borrow things and don't return them. She likes Spencer Tracy, Ingrid Bergman, and Bob Hope. Her favorite phrase on examination is "Now let me see," as she runs her mouth through the pines.

Co-Education Forum Is Held

of out-of-town outfits in competition over appropriations for the two schools, she said.

"Under the present system FSC is one of the largest and finest women's colleges in the country. The proposed legislation, however, would result in a decreased enrollment which would have a detrimental effect upon the school," Hall stated.

Emphasizing the expense involved in equipping the two state colleges for co-education she said that this conversion would necessitate the expenditure of approximately $1,000,000. A thorough study of educational institutions in Florida should, therefore, be made and the step carefully planned in order to have a workable and comprehensive system of education in the state, she concluded.

Janet Pancost then gave statements by various members of the legislature concerning their views on coeducation. Many of the legislators have decided on this question and the only course open is to "wait and see", according to Janet.

In the open discussion which followed statements concerning the possibility of housing women students in the existing dormitories at the U of F, Miss Hall answered the contention that under the present system students must go out of the state in order to take certain college courses.

Spirogira Backs Campus Grass Drive

Would you like for someone to cut your corners? To trample on your new spring dress? Spirogira has taken up the cause of people walking across the grass here on the campus of Florida State College.

Have you noticed how the grass is beginning to lose its alive look? Brown paths are appearing all over the parks. Nancy Parker asks everyone to cooperate in this keep-off-the-grass drive. She is asking each girl on campus to be a member of her committee.

Next time you see someone cutting across the grass, just whistle the first line of "There's a Long, Long Trail A-Winding." And don't forget yourself!

College Observes Pan-American Week

Departments Plan Programs About Latin America

The coming week, April 9-14, is Inter-American Week, which has been designated by the coordinator's office of the State Department, Nelson A. Rockefeller, to emphasize relations among the Americas.

In observance of the week, the departments of PSC have planned a series of movies, special class room discussions, lectures, talks and displays. This activity on campus is under the direction of the College Committee on International Affairs, whose chairman is Miss Sadie Orgain, associate professor of economics.

Several departments of the college are using some phase of their regular work to call special emphasis to Inter-American affairs during the week.

Department of Philosophy: Discussions on Latin American Art and the Christian Church in Latin American Countries.

Modern Language Classes: Personal talks in various Latin American Countries.

Political Science Department: Dr Lennox Miller will lecture on Latin American Governments in the Caribbean Area, Auditorium, Friday, April 13, at 5 p m.

Economics: Discussion in classes of economics of the Western Hemisphere.

Geography: Emphasis on Inca Relics now under the direction of Mrs Snow and discussions of Bolivia in geography classes.

Library: Two exhibits. Continguished Flying Cross, Distinguished Air Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters, and a presidential citation. Mrs Thomas is from Dunellon and is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority. She plans to return to school after her husband is permanently stationed.

Out of town guests included Mrs G W Shuman of Dunellon, mother of the bride; Mrs Karen Schmisseck of Chicago, Illinois, sister of the bride; Mrs Marion Griffith of Jacksonville and Mrs Louise Bascomb of Ocala, aunts of the bride.

Room Registration Causes Early Rising Of Girls Living on Lower Bryan Floor

For three successive Mondays, residents of Bryan's lower floor south, where the office of Miss Edith McCollum, director of residence, is located, have been awakened at an hour much earlier than their accustomed time of rising.

Sounds of running feet, excited voices and dragging chairs echoed through the previously quiet halls. When the exasperated girls finally got up in despair and disgust and started the morning trek to the washroom, they found themselves barricaded in their rooms. They found girls lined up in chairs against the walls, leaving no space whatever before the doors

The cause of all this excitement was room registration. Students desiring some particular room or locality wanted to be sure no other application for the same room or locality reached the office first. The first week next year's seniors registered; the second week the combo juniors; and the third week, the future sophomores.

From 6:45 until 10 on these Mondays the line grew longer an dlonger. Many girls brought novels to read. Others were occupied with unfinished homework. Still others were knitting or doing other handwork. Some few even brought their breakfast. Roommates and friends took turns standing in line and going to class or breakfast. By 10, when the actual registration began, the line had stretched all the way in the recreation hall and back. Girls coming from 8 o'clock classes added to the train. When the doors were finally opened, the line began to move slowly nearly forward. Soon there were steady streams of girls moving in and out of the office. Many little accidents occurred during the long waits. Books were dropped and redropped. Feet were stepped on. Dresses snagged, chairs knocked over or suddenly unbalanced by the opening of doors against which they had been propped. New friends were made and old ones shared time through shared suffering. Laughter, gossip, the latest news flew up and down the hall. Finally, after hours of fidgety and exhaustive waiting, room registration was completed for another year.

Odd-Evens Continue Sports Practice

Students who wish to participate in Odd-Even sport ball, tennis and archery games still have time to get their practices in order according to the sports leaders. ther education and put Florida in step with the other states, "if Florida State College are ever made coeducational, the young people of Florida will go out of state to college," stated one. "The boys and girls of Florida must learn to work together in close if the men and women are to cooperate in the future for the best interests of our state, nation and another."

Students voting that only the U of F should be made coeducational stated that this system would give young women their choice of attending either a coeducational college or a girls' school. "FSC should be made a junior college for women and the U of F a coeducational school," stated one student. "I believe that a trial period at Gainesville would determine the issue in both universities, commented another.

"The present system has produced two outstanding schools and should, therefore, be maintained. In the concensus of opinion among students opposing coeducation at either FSC or the U of F "Although I believe both colleges will become coeducational in the future, I think it unwise for the standards of our college to jeopardize a coeducational program at the present time," said one student.

Summer Graduates

Students who expect to graduate in the first or second session of the 1945 summer school are asked to come to the Personnel office for an appointment next week. Those students will be scheduled for a placement conference with Miss Helen Parker or Mrs Frances H Roberts of the personnel office if they have not been registered.

Rural Children Play At FSC Gym Today

Annual Play Day to Include Races, Games

A Rainbow Play and Field Day for the rural school children of Leon County is being conducted here today from the gymnasium under the sponsorship of the physical education department in conjunction with the Leon County Training School. This program was planned by Dr Katherine Montgomery, head of the department, and members of her faculty teachers from the Demonstration School and physical education majors of the State College for Women will be officials for these games.

The morning program features the Play Day Song sung by rural junior high school students. This afternoon all schools are participating in the Field Day. All children from the fourth through the seventh grades of the rural schools of the county will attend. The morning activities will include registration at the Training Association building from 10 o'clock to 10:30. At 10:30 to 10:50 announcements will be made and color teams organized, and from 10:50 to 12:30 there will be games.

In the first hour of games the girls from the junior high school group will play Newcomb on the volley ball courts while the boys will play softball on the athletic field. In the period from 11:30 to 12:30 the boys and girls are to play softball while the boys play basketball.

At this same time the elementary school children are to play relay games at bombardment, keep away, snatch club and throw it and run.

The afternoon's activities will include singing and announcements from 1:30 to 2:30 o'clock from 1:30 to 3 o'clock inter-school contests.

These inter-school events will be made up of such sports as the three-legged race, 50-yard dash, basketball distance throw, potato race, softball distance throw, target throw, 100-yard dash, broad jump and school relay. A 4-H club announcements of the winners will be made

Girl Is Held In FSC Thefts

Sheriff Frank Stoutamire said today that Jean Schmuck, 17-year-aged Anderson, S C, girl is being held in the Leon county jail on two counts of entering without breaking with intent to commit grand larceny in connection with the theft of $500 in wearing apparel and jewelry from sorority houses at FSCW last November.

The South Carolina girl also was held on a charge of vagrancy, ed in Anderson last week and was returned to this county by Stoutamire Saturday.

She was given a preliminary hearing by County Judge Ben A Meginnis yesterday and the case is temporarily delayed pending further investigation.

The girl had her first rift with Leon law enforcement officers last December when she and two other girls were detained on charges of trying to forge payment of a board bill to a local hotel, the sheriff said.

The board bill was paid later and the girl was released with the understanding that she would return home.

She went to Texas instead, the sheriff said, and later left there. It was during this time that the FSCW thefts were reported and a search for the girl was begun.

W R Cowles will direct the college orchestra, and Etta Robertson will direct the Glee Club in the concert to be given Monday night at 8:15 in Westcott auditorium.

Poet Personalizes His Autographs By Sketches of Whales

"One of my favorite poems in this book is about a whale, so I think I'll draw one," remarked the Robert P Tristram Coffin in the college bookstore yesterday afternoon. Dr Coffin was kept busy from 2 until after 3 o'clock by students and teachers who sought his autograph in their copies of his books.

Miss Margaret Stanion, instructor in the physical education department, handed the poet her copy of Dark Harvest on America, copy of the Primer for America, and a copy of Saltwater Farm. An ancestral whale" before drawing a sketch of a whale springing out of the water after being struck with a harpoon. The whale was then drawn in a continuous line from the last letter of his name

"The last letter stopped up said she thought she'd have a whale too, and he asked what her favorite flower was. He agreed on a sperm whale because "it has more fun in its nose," as Dr Coffin pointed out.

Charlotte Bouland, a student assistant in the Art and Music Department, and remarked that her father, from Maine, also the home of Dr Coffin, promptly drew a "scene from the Maine coast," with a lighthouse, a lighthouse, a few spruce trees, and a rocky shore.

The autographed dozens of his books, mostly volumes of poetry, and made a little sketch in each one of a sea sull, a house, a tree or just a bit of scenery

Miss Jewell Graham, manager of the bookstore, said that all of Dr Coffin's volumes of poetry and most of his other works had been readily sold. with numerous requests for additional copies lone after the bookstore had sold out.

Probation Period Keeps F Club Goats Busy With Special Tasks

Shouts of "Wipe that smile off," and "Your back, goat," were the two most familiar commands heard by the newly tapped goats as they began their probation period before they may be initiated into F club.

Most of the goats, as they are affectionately known, were already experienced at least a few of the many tasks of entertainment, errand running and odd jobs assigned by members.

Jobs such as sweater washing sewing letters on, shining shoes, and washing skirts have found their way into each goat's daily curriculum while evening dates for the members to and from the laundry constitutes a large part of the errand running.

However, ascertaining the members seems to be the main objective of every goat. Each goat is supposed to be fully supplied with jokes, stories and songs and dance routines to help make the members laugh a little brighter

The first day found goats bleating out "Mom Sweetmilk," diminished and esteemed F club member Miss so-and-so," until they were half crazed. By noon the members impatiently waited for the goats to call their name

Unfortunately, many goats did not know every member's name so for this error the goat paid a penalty.

Each day after lunch and dinner, the goats assemble in front of the dining hall to entertain the members in any way they can.

Coach Allen Taff crossed the bridges before she came to them while Coat Betty Gardiner performed a ventriloquist act.

Goat Rachel Chambers gave out with some "Chamber-music," while she "jumped in a commotion." Many of the F club members thought that ribbons in the goats' hair would improve their appearance. Goat Candy Jones and Goat Rosie Bess were two who wore ribbons in their hair to hold together pig-tails and dungarees.

Last Monday as the goat group was dancing around the May-pole, with a tree they had brought in, "She'll be coming around the mountain," including the verse "She'll be riding six white horses when she comes." F club member Miss Bess Abernathy, who immediately suggested that the goats wear red pajama tops Tuesday. Wednesday the group of goats wearing a purple outfit.

What F club there are many duties to perform, including the lamp post in front of the dining hall, and the mailbox in front of the dining hall being being two of the odd stand-bys. Miss Jones suggested that Friday first week, while Goat Anna Hoe made the trip from Murphree, the goats have been assured to learn the "rop" language and are able to add more to their pow and carry on conversations using it.

Thursday is march day for the goats who display their talents after lunch, usually going through the regular drill routine with rumba, waltz and conga mixed in for variety.

As Friday is F club day, members must look their best, so each goat has been assigned an "esteemed" members shoes after lunch.

Officers elected for the goat group are Betty Gardiner, president; Betty Kennedy, secretary-treasurer Evelyn Shea, property boss of the set; Alice Taff, director; Bopie Whitaker, Games Woods, Catherine Cole, refreshment chairman of the goats, Bobbie Leonard chairman of the songs.

This, however, is only the beginning of the goating period. Member of the goats, already established condition, are being asking to wonder if they will be able to take the goats and whole-heartedly agree that even thine they do is worth it. for they reach their graduation as they will become "most honored distinguished and esteemed club members".

PEA Elects Stuckey President Monday

Plans Made for Play Day And Field Day Discussed

Members of the Physical Education Association held a call meeting Monday night in the physical education majors' club room in the gymnasium to elect officers. Nominations which had been made at the last business meeting at the organization were voted on with the following members elected: Evelyn Stucker, president; Ann Bell, vice president and Candy Jones, secretary-treasurer.

A report was given by Virginia Palmer concerning the plans being made for Field Day, April 31, which is sponsored by PEA. This sports activity is open to participation for all the campus. Students may practice every day of the week from 4 o'clock until social assistance on Monday and Tuesday by members of the physical education faculty. Special points will be required to be earned for participation in the various sports.

Dr Katherine Montgomery, department director, announced that all majors were to help plan for and officiate today in the annual Play Day for the rural school groups of Leon county. This society will meet promptly at 9 in the morning and relays and races in the afternoon.

PEA had its bi-annual camp meeting last week-end with Evelyn Stucker in charge. An Easter hunt was held, various games were played and skits given by students and faculty in a circus picture. Easter morning a sunship service was held at 6:30.

Legislature in Brief

By CORDELIA BARCLAY

The Florida Flambeau

Published by the Students of Florida State College for Women

No Legislature Today!

Z 106

VOL. XXXII, No. 23 | Tallahassee, Florida | APRIL 13, 1945

Florida's state legislature met last week to begin its biennial session and Tallahassee saw the usual flood of senators, representatives, clerks, secretaries, lobbyists, and visitors.

The first week of meetings was largely concerned with the appointment of legislative committees, introduction of bills and their reference to committees. Senator Walter Rose, of Orlando, was announced president of the Senate, and Representative Evans Crary, of Stuart, was speaker of the House.

Leading in interest and controversy t'is week in Legislature is Sp. ... detailed conductation of introduced in the House by Representative Holmes Melton, of Duval county, and in the Senate by Senator Wallace Sturgis, of Dade. The companion bills, which provide for allowing women with 3 credit hours of academic work from reputable institution to enter the University of Florida.—In short, opening the doors of the colleges of junior and senior women, was introduced last week and referred to education committee B of the House for discussion, and to the Senate education committee.

This week's action on the companion bill was in the House education B committee did not how the bill and consequently "killed" it. However the education committee has reported the bill favorably, and it will be introduced at the Senate floor soon. If Senate as a whole passes the bill, it will be referred to the House once again to an education committee, probably the same one which has already considered it. The House can discuss a bill "killed" in committee by a two-thirds vote of the House.

Behind the scenes of the legislature was a flurry of public attention and agitation over the coeducational question.

Representative Melton's bill had been endorsed by the state junior chambers of commerce, exposing the Tallahassee chamber. The University of Florida alumnae had voted overwhelmingly in favor of the idea, and its alumnae group had distributed strong appeal.

The state Board of Control had taken no action on the matter, and administrations of both schools remained silent.

Students of Florida State College expressed approval of coeducation and the bill in the main poll and through the resolution of Student Senate. The Student Senate association, however, stated that its "heart was not in" the plan, and that nothing be done that would injure the standing of FSC.

Tension over the matter became acute the first of this week, as action was drawn near. Efforts were to have a public hearing on the part Wednesday of this session of the House and Senate education committees.

Senators and Representatives received wires and letters pro and con. A delegation of women students arrived Tuesday to support the bill and urge legislators to pass it. Several hundred letters and called upon their representatives to give opinions on the pending bills.

Wednesday the hearing was held. Two-score visitors and legislators came to the Senate chamber of the capitol at 2 o'clock to hear the discussion. Over three hundred FSC girls packed the floor and gallery of the chamber, and applauded speeches made, indicating their approval of proponents of the bills.

The University of Florida coeducation bill was also heard, and three proposals to be heard, and time for its discussion was limited to 20 minutes for each proponent-two debate lasted two hours. Speakers were to alternate with proponents and opponents sharing time.

First speaker for the bill was Senator Sturgis, and second was Representative Melton. Against the bill were Senator Mabry, of Tallahassee, and Representative Morgan, of Jacksonville.

Further speakers for the bill were various legislators, president of the state Chamber of Commerce, Representative Mary Lou Baker, of Pinellas, and president of the University alumnae association, president of the student body of the university Bill Nixon, Honor Court chancellor Jack Bailey, and Cordelia Barclay, FSC student and past editor of the Florida Flambeau.

Speaking against the bill were several legislators, Mrs Frank Moor, spokesman for the FSC alumnae association, and Chairman of the state Board of Control R P Adair. Mr Adair told at length of the actual physical conditions at FSC, stressing the cost of opening the school to women students, and stressed the need to preserve University facilities for men.

Senate Votes Favorably On Co-Education

31-9 Vote Affirms Senate Recommendation To Legislators

P. L. Thomson's Resolution Is Voted Down 28 to 11

"Student Senate resolves by a vote of 31-9 that coeducation is a superior plan of education and they recommend that the legislature of Florida plan to provide this opportunity for the students of Florida as soon as possible," was the resolution adopted by Student Senate at its meeting in the Student Alumnae auditorium Friday afternoon.

Peggy Lu Thomson, sophomore senator, brought resolution before the senate to be sent to the legislature giving the results of the student poll that was held at the college two weeks ago as evidence that the student body favored coeducation. Out of the 918 votes cast in the poll 840 were in favor of coeducation, with 477 as a majority. In favor of coeducation at both the University of Florida and Florida State College.

Peggy Lu's resolution suggested that coeducation be adopted at the University of Florida as the academic year of 1945-46 and that the final poll be conducted in all the institutions. The reason given

Cigarette Shortage Shows Up 'Bummers' As Unpopular Girls

"Sorry—nothing but Kools and Spuds," is the familiar reply to many distressed students at Florida State College who search in vain for their favorite brand of cigarettes. It is very evident that the cigarette shortage has struck the campus, since a package of the most popular cigarettes is almost impossible to find.

Miss Parker, manager of the Soda Shop in the Student Alumnae Building, attributes this sudden shortage to the ever-increasing demand for the boys in the service overseas.

Students, who frequent the Jennie Murphree smoker, have organized a "Non Bummers Club" to prevent a cigarettiess smoker from "bumming" from anyone!

Pan-American Week Planned

Illday to Span on Latin American Government

Pan-American Week, which has been celebrated throughout the Western Hemisphere during April 8-15, commemorates the founding on April 14, 1890, of the Pan-American Union. The purpose of the union has been to promote better understanding among the countries of the Western Hemisphere. This year special interest has been centered on all aspects of the life of Latin America, on the accomplishments of the recent Chapultepec Conference held in Mexico.

Various departments of the college have arranged for the week-end. The political science department will present Dr. Charles Isley lecturing on Latin American Governments in the Student Alumnae auditorium, Monday, at 7:30 p.m.

Committees from Latin American history class are arranging for the display of Latin American publications, maps and charts to be on display during the week. They are also sponsoring the Pan-American film "Our Neighbors the Brand" shown Tuesday by the auspices of the War Activities Committee. The film will be shown in the Augusta Conradi

Coffin Gives Talk On Ballads Friday

Poet in Residence Surveys His Book of Ballads

Robert P Tristram Coffin spoke Friday at 10 a m in the auditorium Conradi theater. This was his last scheduled talk on the Florida State College campus for a week, for he is now in the hills and ballads and read from his book Primer for America, a collection of ballads of Revolutionary days on varied subjects.

He was prompted to start this book three years ago sitting in the middle of four walls right in the middle of the war. He said that he began to think of all the things of which Americans have to be thankful.

The ballads themselves are written in lighthearted vein with regard to those of the poet Horace. "When I have a terrific headache," phones, swimming holes, boys named after presidents, ancestors who missed the boat, and the old people who came to be Americans and learned to love it. Ballads, he said can tombstones—most any plain, everyday subject.

"Hen Edward" is a humorous ballad about a boat that "put about" to get a drink of water and had fallen overboard. Mr Coffin said, "They used to do it for roosters. I like to think they'd do it for a hen, too."

He said that when he was ready to write a ballad, he found that he had to write two. The two ballads were about Mr. Lincoln" Jackson and Abraham Lincoln, a great deal of research went into them.

"Country Doctor," the last ballad which he read, was identified with his own childhood. He called it words in telling of the men who so "where only God can go."

Flag To Be Sown

The Florida State College flag dedication service will be held April 24 at 2 p m in front of Landis hal. The flag will be presented to Dr Campbell by the students and alumnae.

Dr Campbell will give an address following the presentation. To complete the ceremony, the FSC band will blar and drill.

ROOSEVELT DIES

Harry S Truman took the oath as the nation's chief executive and became the seventh vice-president to succeed to the presidency following the death of the nation's leader. This action moves Secretary of State Stettinius up to next in line for the office, while Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, president pro-tempore, becomes permanent presiding officer of the senate. The vice-presidency now remains vacant until the next presidential election.

Funeral Plans

The funeral party will be in the White House east room in Washington on Saturday. Burial is to be in Rose Hill cemetery beside him at Hyde Park, N Y, Sunday. The 63-year-old executive was taken back to Washington at 9 a m this morning accompanied by Mrs Roosevelt who left the White House last night at 7:15 after informing their four married sons of COA: Lucy with a brief message.

Biz Three Situation

The death removed from world councils one of the Biz Three—Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill—who worked together to win the war and laid joint plans for keeping the peace. It is reported that Truman likewise has stressed the need for international cooperation.

In Memoriam

The students of Florida State College join with the citizens of the United States and people all over the world as they mourn the sudden death of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt was perhaps the greatest figure of our times. Senator Blackwood, democrat of Alabama, has said, "This is a terrible disturbance for the whole world. No other living man will be missed at this time as Franklin Roosevelt."

Unfortunately President Roosevelt died before the victory which he so well deserved to see had been won. However, he has left a large part in directing the war and in planning the peace which will follow.

Our departed chief executive leaves an imperishable imprint on the history of America and the world.

Two Concerts to Be Given Off Campus

Two concerts will be presented away from campus within the next week by faculty members of the School of Music.

Mrs Ramona C Beard, associate professor of organ, will give a vespers organ concert at the University of Florida, Gainesville, on Sunday afternoon at 4 p m, and the recently - organized faculty piano quintet will give a program of chamber music for the St Cecelia club of St Augustine next Thursday.

Mrs Beard's concert is one of an exchange of concerts made with the University of Florida. Claude Murphree, U of F organist, recently gave a concert in Florida State College in conjunction with this exchange.

The faculty piano quintet has not yet performed on campus, but has been present in numerous State National Music Week, which will be observed on campus from May 6 through May 12. The quintet is composed of Miss Mary E Windsor, associate professor of piano, at the piano; Mr Karl O Kuerstteiner, dean of the School of Music, first violin; Rachel Crotwell, second violin; Miss Olga Reiner, associate professor of violin and theory, viola, and Mr Frank Sykora, associate professor of cello, cello.

First Presentation Of Student's Song Given at Minstrels

"I wrote the melody about six or seven years ago", said Mary Lou Norwood, of "Here's All That's Left of My Heart", her original musical composition which was publicly presented for the first time in Junior Minstrels last Friday night.

Against a background representing the steps of Westcott, a chorus of twenty-seven girls in a harp plus saxophone, sang Mary Lou's song.

The melody of the song was written when Mary Lou was in junior high school and it has been running through her head ever since. It was just recently that she completed the composition by adding the motif and the words.

"Though Mary Lou has written many pieces, most of which have been given no names, this is the first song that has been presented before an audience.

Murray To Talk

Miss Ellen Fenton Murray, instructor in history, will be guest at tea in Broward hall on Wednesday. Miss Murray will tell of her experiences as an undergraduate student at St Andrews University in Scotland.

Chinese Play To Have Final Performance

'Yellow Jacket' Presented In Little Theater, 8:15 Tonight

Large Cast Gives Oriental Drama in Three Acts

The last performance of "Yellow Jacket" will be presented tonight at 8:15 in the Augusta Conradi Little Theatre. "Yellow Jacket" is a Chinese fantasy in three acts produced by the Speech Department and directed by Miss Evelyn R Bowman.

"Yellow Jacket" is a Chinese drama, written by two American authors, Hazelton and Benrimo. They have retained the form and spirit of the Chinese drama but have modified the Oriental traditions of the drama so that they may fit the limitations of the modern stage conventions.

The authors present in a very simple and highly imaginative manner a Chinese philosophy of living that is universal in its appeal and individualized in its treatment.

Although the American theater is essentially a realistic one, the Chinese theater depends upon the imaginary rather than the concrete. The Chinese theatre assumes that the audience has an imagination and is willing to use

Co-Ed Bill Is Voted Down

House Committee Defeats Senate's Bill 12-5

The senate committee on education reported the bill providing for the establishment of women in the University of Florida during their last two coll-ege years to the floor Wednesday afternoon, but the house committee defeated the measure by a vote of 12 to 5. This action followed a joint hearing during which committee members, the secretary of the State Board of Control, representatives of the student bodies of Florida State College for Women, the University of Florida, alumni of the two schools and other speakers presented discussion on the issue.

The bill, introduced in the upper chamber by Senator Wallace E Sturgis of Ocala, will now be considered by the senate and, if passed, will be returned to the house committee. A two-thirds vote of the house membership will be required in order to have the measure reported to the house for possible passage.

Emphasizing that the proposed legislation did not constitute hasty or ill-advised action, the committee's tiburate referred to a report made in 1927 by officials from Southern American colleges following an exhaustive study of Florida's educational system. This report recommended that the law be amended to allow the state to extend the U of F during their last two years of college.

Senator Wallace E Sisley of Tallahassee, who spoke in opposition to the measure, pointed out that the provision of adequate personnel and facilities for women students at the U of F would cost the state approximately $1,500,000. The Florida senator termed such a high scholastic position because of the present non-competitive situation. He said that the college bill should not be forced into a system unrelated to the existing situation he said.

Kirn Will Lecture On Silk Paintings

An exhibition of silk screen paintings from the Collection of the National Serigraph Society will open in the club room of the Student Alumnae building, with an art tea at 5 o'clock Wednesday.

Miss Ann Kirn of the fine arts department will explain the history and present-day trends in silk. She doesn't even set out of Dresden combining pirouettes with Carl Sandburg. Miss Page says she has never taken an elocution lesson, but her voice is full and expressive, her diction clear and unaffected. Added to the ballet dancing and poetry are the beautiful costumes designed by Nicholas Remisoff, and Miss Page's own dainty beauty and well-seasoned flair for comedy. A case in point is her rendition of Dance Magazine, in excerpt.

Maurice Hindus Will Lecture On Russia Tomorrow Night At 8:15 in Westcott Auditorium

Students May Obtain Tickets at Box Office at 7:15 To Hear Noted Novelist, Lecturer, Author And Expert on Russia

Maurice Hindus, noted author, lecturer, novelist, and expert on Russia, will present a lecture in Westcott auditorium on Saturday evening at 8:15 p m. A and B Series tickets have been distributed, but those students who failed to obtain theirs may do so by presenting either ticket at the box-office, which will open at 7:15 Saturday evening, announced Dean Karl O Kuersteiner of the School of Music.

Noted Author

Mr Hindus is Russian by birth, and has just returned from one and one-half years in that country. He is the author of several books on Russia, among them, Mother Russia, Russia and Japan, Humanity Uprooted, Red Bread, and To Sing With Angels, Sons, and Fathers. He has also recently been a foreign correspondent for the New York Herald-Tribune, reporting only on both the fighting front and the diplomatic scene. Considered an outstanding American authority on Russia, he has been a prophet of political and social change and an interpreter of one people to another.

Concert Course

The W Colston Leigh corporation, which gathers material on lectures such unusual books has published the following comments: "As a lecturer, he has carried over into the spoken word the same knowledge and understanding which has made his writings so monumental. As a novelist—"To Sing With the Angels," "Red Bread," "Humanity" brought a reporter's sure touch and he who has come by the information first hand in his frequent visits to Russia. He gives an accurate and graphic picture of Russia today, as a military machine, as a people, as a world power."

"He is one of the most distinguished lecturers on the platform platform today," said Dean Kuersteiner. "He is an important personage and a superb lecturer, and no student can afford to miss this talk."

Joint Concert Given on Monday

First Performance Was Given Of 'Feminia Perfecta'

The college orchestra, in conjunction with the college glee club, and assisted by Mrs Ramona C Beard, associate professor of organ, Mrs Mary Lou Tyson-Treharne, organist; Elisabeth Martin, pianist, and Margaret Rose Miller, soprano, gave a joint concert Monday evening.

The orchestra was under the direction of Mr Walter R Cowie, professor of theory, and the glee club was under the direction of Miss Etta L Robertson, professor of voice.

The glee club opened the program with a group of songs: "English Gothic Music of the 12th and 13th Centuries," "Alleluia Psallot" (Alleluia Let Us Sing), and "Ubi Caritas Vera Virtus" (Where Virgin), accompanied by Mrs Beard; "Femina Perfecta," Karl Kuersteiner, "Spring Serenade" Spider," arranged by Now; and "Sea Moods," Tyson-Treharne. Marjorie Rose Miller accompanied the glee club in the latter two numbers. Each song was applauded by the audience, they presented an encore, "Battle-Hymn of the Republic."

This was the first performance of "Femina Perfecta," which was written by the glee club by Karl Ahrendt, Florida State College professor now on leave of absence.

After intermission, the orchestra presented Schubert's Symphony No 5 in B-flat Major, in four movements: Handel's Concerto No 6 for Organ and Orchestra, in which Mrs Beard was soloist; "Rondo in the Strand" by Percy Grainger, was next played by Elizabeth Martin, pianist, in conjunction with the orchestra.

The glee club and the orchestra combined in the next number, "Irish Tune from County Derry" ("Danny-Boy"), arranged by Percy Grainger. The program ended with "Huldigung's March" by Grieg, conducted by the orchestra and assisted by Miss Mary M Reeder, harpist.

Ruth Page to Offer Unique Type Dance

Artist's Style Is to Recite Poetry as She Dances

Ruth Page, ballet director of the Chicago Opera Ballet, will present a program of dance in the Westcott auditorium on April 23, at 8:15 p m. Tickets will be distributed in the basement of the Student-Alumnae building to holders of A Series tickets. Distribution will take place during the week beginning April 16 and ending April 20. Only those with reserved seat tickets will be admitted.

Miss Page's style of dancing is rather unique, in that she recites poetry as she dances.

"Ruth Page has turned the trick! Something new under the sun! She dances to recited poetry all the while she dances, and doing it much better than most professional poetry readers do. She doesn't even set out of Dresden combining pirouettes with Carl Sandburg. Miss Page says she has never taken an elocution lesson, but her voice is full and expressive, her diction clear and unaffected. Added to the ballet dancing and poetry are the beautiful costumes designed by Nicholas Remisoff, and Miss Page's own dainty beauty and well-seasoned flair for comedy. A case in point is her rendition of Dance Magazine, in excerpt.

Spirit of the Week

● INDIFFERENCE OR WHAT?

Tomorrow evening we have an opportunity to hear a great figure on the lecture platform, Maurice Hindus who is an authority on Russia. He has distinguished himself in the world of literature because of his books, Mother of Russia, Russia and Japan, Humanity Uprooted, and Red Bread, and should be able to give us another angle on our ally about whom we know too little.

It seems that when we receive opportunities such as this we would be overwhelmingly enthusiastic and grateful to be able to widen our scope of learning and understanding, but reports from the Artist Series booth in the book store we learn that only 77 students have secured tickets for this occasion!

It is true that tickets may be obtained at the ticket office of the Westcott auditorium the night of the performance; so let us hope Mr Hindus will lecture to a more live audience than a mass of vacant seats.

From accounts of his lecture tours he has had large turn-outs and if we students don't take advantage of this occasion we will certainly be hurting ourselves and at the same time casting a bad reflection on the college.

The Artist Series committee, headed by Dean Karl Kuersteiner, has worked hard and in turn succeeded in bringing prominent artists to this campus. Only last week Mr Robert P Tristam Coffin visited our campus for a week and conversed informally with the students and faculty every possible minute. Since the beginning of this school year we have had Li Ling Lai, Chinese lecturer; the Don Cossacks, Russian chorus; Bart Harwell, naturalist; and J Norman Lodge, AP reporter; and before the end of this semester we will have the chance to hear about three more artists. Also, for the first time, this committee has arranged for one program for each of the summer sessions.

Let's show Dean Kuersteiner, and his committee composed of Dr Anna Liddell, Miss Evelyn owman, Dean Olivia Dorman, and Mrs B B Williams that we do appreciate what they have done for us by providing extra treats during our stay in Tallahassee: let's fill up all the seats in our auditorium to hear Mr Hindus tomorrow night.

● WHAT HAPPENS NOW?

The highly discussed question of co-education still has been rapidly coming to a head, to judge from the actions of Legislature this week. Further discussion on the floor of the Senate will take place in the near future. But if Senator Frances Ohle bill, it will be returned to the House committee on education, which has not reported the hill favorably. Only a two-thirds majority of the House can bring a hill "killed" in committee to the floor.

It has been said that another bill for co-education here and at the University will be introduced, but no action has been taken.

Predictions have been made that final disposition of the matter in this session of the Legislature will be in the form of a survey of the Florida educational system. If so, certainly a survey of the situation will be profitable, and facts and figures beyond those known will be welcome.

FSC students have commented favorable on some of their impressions of Wednesday's co-education hearing. They are convinced that Legislature and citizens realize that co-education is a superior plan, and that the crux of the matter remains where and when. Students appreciated the democratic handling of the hearing, and were glad that student viewpoints were given expression.

The co-education hearing reaffirmed faith in a democratic form of government, wherein even in wartime citizens of the state can calmly discuss their mutual problems. The proceedings of Legislature, although occasionally legalistic and involved, recognize the democratic process, and students have benefitted from observing government in action.

● PEACE PLANS

The United States, England and Russia under the Crimean charter assumed joint responsibility for developments in Europe, and will see to it that the liberated people of Europe will have a fair chance to hilarity and self-government through the democratic form of free elections under conditions of internal peace.

This goal can be achieved only if hasty and hateful conclusions are avoided. A peace which will last longer than twenty years can not come from the hands of a revengeful nation.

For the present and until V-E day, Germany is our enemy and must be bombed and shelled until she has reached the point of unconditional surrender. But nothing is to be gained from demanding overly severe reparations of a defeated and devastated country.

In the position of conquerer the United States and her Allies must make a livable and strong peace which will last —not one that will encourage the secret re-armament of Germany and eventually involve our children in a war more horrible than the present one.

We failed at the peace conference following World War I. To make the same mistake twice would be unpardonable.

● E PLURIBUS UNUM

Geographically and historically the 21 republics of Latin America have much in common with the United States. Situated as they are in a common hemisphere, separated from the rest of the world by broad expanses of water, it would be supposed that unity for the common defense would be highly established. Having similarly wrested their independence from European nations whose ideals and policies were not in keeping with their own, it would be supposed that sympathies and interests within the nations would be much the same.

But such has not always been the case. Culturally and linguistically the hemisphere has been far from unified, and considerable tension has arisen through misunderstandings from these causes. Suspicions and jealousies have arisen between nations whose representatives could not speak the same language; there developed in weaker countries the face of overwhelming power and stability in stronger nations, and particularly in the vacillating interpretations of the Monroe Doctrine by the United States; lack of a basic cultural understanding afforded little opportunity for tolerance or for sympathy for the motivations of actions in other nations.

It has been the purpose of the Pan-American Union, and Pan-American week in particular, to establish the cultural basis for understanding which will cement relations within the hemisphere and do away with just such suspicions. By making the people of the United States more aware of their neighbors to the south, by promoting the study of Spanish and encouraging the exchange of students between the nations, the Union has done much toward cementing friendly relations and creating good will within the hemisphere, toward emphasizing the common bases on which good neighborliness can be established and reaching understandings on points of friction.

Through realization of the purpose and power of the Union, the scope of its work, a further realization of the importance of Pan-American week becomes evident to persons in the United States as well as in Latin America. In its efforts to establish international co-operation on a basis of equality and understanding, the Union is fully worthy of nation-wide attention, and the week which commemorates its activities should be widely observed. Throughout the years Pan-American week has become the symbol of a step toward unity politically, economically, culturally, and socially. It has become evidence of the ability of many nations to unite for a common cause—to make of the many one.

1945 Minstrels Portrays FSC Life in 1910 By 3-Act Fantasy

"Florida College for State Women," was the scene for the 1945 Junior Minstrels which portrayed FSC in the year 1910. The title of the play was, "Who's Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage," or "She's More to Be Pitied Then Censured." The fantasy in three acts reconstructed the fictitious lives of the students then.

With the leading roles Katherine Jackson played the part of L S who's Corrine Johnston was MPT. In 1910 Miss Ellen Parker Junior Minstrels was going to be like, the two fall asleep and dream of FSC in the year 1945. L S and MPT find themselves in the midst of the two biggest days in their time. After she is finished, MPT gives the 1945 version of "Hi There, John," after which she and LS litterbug. This promptly lands them in the "College Bureau of Investigation for Young Ladies Moral Protection," where they are surrounded by other prisoners, not only for stealing and dancing but also for the way they dressed.

When MPT learns of the decision, she exclaims "Oh, no not again."

The bureau reconsiders and puts LS and MPT on full restriction until 1945, after which they adjourn to watch the Monstrosities practice for its 1910 presentation.

Act three comprises the 1910 Junior Minstrels and their singing and dancing sets. Two duets are presented by Betty and Bobby Usher, Alice Phillips and Barbara Overn.

Alice Gehan, "the little girl with the big voice," was a featured accordinist in the resounding applause of "St Louis Blues." Lois Cottrell succeeded in making the audience take notice with her operatic version of "L'amour." In a number by Betty Hallett, "My Mother Told Me," a soldier, sailor and marine corps lieutenant were featured. Another number, in which Jere urged Dale Mabry not to "fence him in" brought loud applause.

Jeanne Harris and Marilyn Ward, adagio dancers, brought forth remarks of approval. Other dancers were Mimi Cherry, Betty and Bebe Daniel, rumba. Ruth Brokaw and Betty Bryson, soft shoe; Marian Welch, Marguerite Cherry, tap. A humorous touch was added to the 1910 scene by the can can dancers. Evelyn Stuckey, Bebe Daniel, Louise Persons, Betty Hallett, Barbara Boyles, Nancy Gleaton and Dot Tucker.

Costumes for the production were furnished by a committee headed by Audrey Perry. Margie Torres was in charge of make-up and the lights were provided by Jack Hall. Dot Tucker was producer and director of the production.

Students to Give Recital in Annex

A student recital will be held in the Practice Room of the Music Annex on Monday afternoon, April 18, at 5:05 o'clock.

The program is scheduled for the first time two piano-duet numbers. Selections on the program will be: piano duet, "Come to the Fair," Clarice Thomas and Helen Bannister; piano solo, "Jesu of Man's Destrine," Mary McCormack, voice, "Going Down to London," voice, Ruth Ann Scarborough, by Betty Barber; piano duet, "Sonata in Sonata in C Minor," Irene Perutier, voice, "The Way to Town" and "Gypsy Moon," Betty Ruth Authenbaugh, accompanied by Joanna Bistrink; piano solo, Beethoven's "Concerto in G Minor," Eleanor Poyless, accompanied on orchestral part on second piano by Miss Mary B Winslow on the second piano, piano duet, "Scherzetino" and "Malagueria," Sylvia Snell and Betty Barber.

Plan Splash Party

A splash party, the first to be held in over two years, will take place this Saturday night at 9 o'clock in the pool of the gymnasium.

About 50 girls, members of the Lifesaving Corps, will stage a swim for fun, according to Evelyn Berry, president.

The party, planned by the executive board of the Lifesaving Corps, is being held to honor newly elected officers.

Relays, a palama race, water basketball, water parents, and impromptu water skits will be presented by various girls who belong to the Lifesaving Corps.

US Meets USSR In Manchuria

The alternate policies which the United States may follow and the possible fate of Manchuria are discussed in the article, "US Meets USSR In Manchuria," which appears in the current issue of Foreign Affairs.

Supposedly the question of Manchuria was settled 8 months ago by the Cairo Declaration which stated that "Manchuria shall be returned to China" and that "Korea shall eventually become free and independent." But, states the article, with the United Nations Conference starting in San Francisco on April 25, the touchy diplomatic question of Russi and the U S's cooperation in the Pacific war arises. There is "less talk of simple restitution and more talk of who besides the rightful owners shall be in on what deals."

Although Russia has denounced her neutrality pact with Japan since this article was written, her military interests are the best possible aims toward Manchuria regards as purely Pacific. A party neither to the Cairo Declaration nor to the Nine-Power Treaty of 1922, Russia has been and is distrustful of the Chinese Communists. It would seem likely, however, that she would like to dominate a separate government of Manchuria and Korea.

Importance of Manchuria

Although Manchuria produces Russia agriculturally and China in the field of industry Manchuria's greatest significance is in its strategic position. China has a "potential" industry in Manchuria in order to make progress in her economic and political policies she must look to Russia for foreign invasion or interference. This secures the Chinese where without the control of Manchuria for all had invasions of China have come from the North. Russia, on the other hand Russia looks at Manchuria with her mind on Vladivostok, her year-round Pacific port which is wedged between Manchuria and the ocean and on the Trans-Siberian railway which skirts over a thousand miles of Manchurian border.

The questions arise as to what position the U S will take between these two allies and does Russia have any desire for the U S to participate in the Manchurian policy toward China when it has been the U S policy in defeating Germany that Russia has followed? Will Russia use the Chinese Communists to establish a "friendly" government? Or will she use them as a railway which skirts over a thousand miles of Manchurian border.

The questions arise as to what position the U S will take between these two allies and does Russia have any desire for the U S to participate in the Manchurian policy toward China when it has been the U S policy in defeating Germany that Russia has followed? Will Russia use the Chinese Communists to establish a "friendly" government? Or will she use them as a railway which skirts over a thousand miles of Manchurian border.

U S Policy

Since the issuing of the formal expression by John Hay in 1899 1, has been the policy of the U S not to allow any one power to control China. Charles Evans Hughes, Secretary of State, restated the open-door thesis and Stimson's policy in 1931 was noncommittal in the Manchurian question of Manchuria although aside from that the open door action was taken. During the war U S traditional policy has abolished interfering with the territorial rights, practiced the Cairo Conference, and smoothed over relationships with the Code of General Stilwell. Through all years Russia has done or less followed the American policy.

The culmination of the old policy is that the U S can allow no sort of China to be ruled by hands of a foreign power. The question now is whether to follow the old policy or to develop a new attitude which has arisen possibly through mistakes arising from an awakening China by American standards. Although not with Russia, a new attitude helped to exclude the Chinese from the second Quebec Conference in September. Successful U S intervention in Chinese political affairs has been and women who hold this anti-Chinese attitude are the same ones for the new administration for Russia. In regards to China itself they lean toward the Communist party. What many people do not realize, says the writer of this article, is that the majority of Chinese dislike both the Kuomintang and the Communist party and that the Chinese people are devoted to freedom from government.

Diplomatic fishing at the present time consists in trying to promote Sino-Soviet relationships, using friendly relationships with the Soviet Union as a lever in an attempt to get her into the war. But for the sake of Manchuria alone Russia could simply move in at the end of hostilities and establish an autonomous Republic with Chinese sovereignty and Russian control.

One of the sol..tions offered is to permit Russia unilateral action in Manchuria, but as Hughes advises, what the U S really

By GLORIA REED

President Franklin D Roosevelt died at 4:35 yesterday afternoon at Warm Springs, Georgia.

As the Allied armies are continually driving nearer and closer into Germany, the German people are learning the horror of global war. When the Axis planned this global war, it was believed that the Allies would be tied down into two great theatres, three armies so thinly spread that they could not turn back the tide. West and east, the Axis world rule the two ways.

However, during this last week, global war has brought to what is left of the once such an onslaught of physical and psychological warfare, that the former conquerors have been hung out to sag and divided and its supplies blocked from getting through.

The western Allies, in the ten months since D-Day, have hammered the Wehrmacht 150 miles from its Atlantic wall, through its West wall and on the very heart of the Reich itself. Every natural barrier has been broken. The great industrial resources of the Saar and the Ruhr have been knocked out. The vast German transportation system has been smashed. Germany's last defensive line has been slashed almost to the point of guerrilla warfare.

General Eisenhower has launched his "victory offensive" which, so far, has been a strategy of brute-force, not of finesse. Following his plan, Eisenhower has struck hard, fast, and on many points and then sent them in multiple drives to cut Germany into a dozen small pieces.

This last week's success showed the tremendous flexibility of this strategy. It was based on the coordinated efforts of the three Army Groups under the command of Montgomery's Twenty-first in the north; General Bradley's Twelfth in the center; and General Devers' Sixth in the south. The Twenty-first's spearheading forces sped across the North German plain to slice German land communications between the Baltic and North seaports. These forces then turned north to German naval base of Wehlhmanshaven on the Baltic and directly toward Berlin, the ultimate goal. These troops, together with those of General Bradley, in the center of the Reich and directed toward Berlin.

General Devers' armies drove east and south breaking through the Bavarian Hills and onto the Bavarian plain. At last report, they were striking for Nuremberg, which is on a direct route to Vienna. Some observers believe that this group will join with the Russians in a junction to cut the Reich in two.

On the Eastern front, the Russian Army has in the last ten months driven the Germans back some 600 miles from within White Russia to within 30 miles of Berlin and within Austria itself.

The partial capture of Vienna by the Russians, capital city of Hitler's Reich and southeastern bastion of the collapsing fortress of Germany, has had a profound psychological as well as a military effect, some observers believe. Vienna has stood for the highest in Teutonic culture, once the capital of the Holy Roman Empire, later of the Hapsburg Empire, finally coveted prize of Hitler's first foreign conquest.

Strategically it is the hub of the south of the whole upper Danube Valley, dominating the approaches to Germany through Bavaria and through Czechoslovakia. It also appears to be the key to the Balkans, the area where the defeated German armies might make their last stand to delay complete Allied victory.

At last report, the Soviet troops along the Danube had encircled the long-besieged East Prussian fortress of Konigsberg. On Wednesday night, the Red Army had taken 27,000 prisoners, including their commandant, General Lasch in the blazing ancient fortress of the Teutonic knights who founded Prussia as a Nazi militarism.

The last death battles of this sector raged, the Germans again predicted that Marshall Stalin would launch a final "final heave" on the central frontline Silesia on Berlin—with Berlin as the objective.

Asiatic Operations

On Okinawa, reinforcements from heavy Japanese oppsition held the beach-head between American soldiers and marines to a small area, but to the north the marines punched out advances. Here, too, the Japs have appeared using only scattered resistance.

During the fighting on the island this week, hard-hitting Mitscher fleet, with its flying Philippines, running an aerial blockade of the China Sea, smashed a Japanese bombing and patrol screen per and from Formosa to Borneo.

To the aerial war escalating Japan, twin raids were carried out by two fleets each of about 100 Marianas-based B-29's. These huge planes struck at Nagoya and Nagoya. For the first time in more than four months of fighter operation, they were protected in land-based fighter planes which took off from air fields on recently won Iwo Jima.

Bombers from Philippine bases struck Japanese airdromes, shipping, supply, defense and fuel areas and troop concentrations from Formosa to Borneo. Big fires raged at Formosan airdromes and in west coast supply areas.

World Organization

Two big events occurred this last week which seemed to hasten the United Nations peace and spurred hopes of delegates working feverishly for harmony before the scheduled conference: the Soviet denunciation of its neutrality pact with Japan—which contradicted talk of disunity among the Big Three—and the President's decision to abandon his request for extra votes for Russia.

The chief issues still facing the conference were voting, amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks Plan and Poland's representation.

The United States, as the President agreed at the Yalta conference, was for three votes, Great Britain and her Dominions for six votes, but this three votes in the assembly of the world organization to be set up at San Francisco. However, the President has changed his mind and decided to ask for only one vote each for United States in the Assembly. Though Russia has made no response to oppose the Soviet request, the delegation as a whole apparently feels committed to uphold the President's support of Russia's claim to three votes "if and "when" the request is made.

Russia pressed unofficially last week for the future acceptance of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals. However, many of the 44 nations invited to the conference have drafted proposed amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks plan, and delegates to Moscow last week. However, these delegates suddenly left Moscow, and Poland is still unrepresented at the conference.

President Franklin D Roosevelt died at 4:35 p m, yesterday, at Warm Springs, Georgia.

● WHAT HAPPENS NOW?

We know a happy girl who has recently had her appendix out in the usual spring daze. Her only excuse for it is that in the past she has been a pain in the neck to men who she hasn't seen in about a month of Sundays, and to others from far away places. The calls always make her beam like mad and she goes around thinking about them the next day and then she realizes that she has been listening to his charming voice and hasn't paid any attention to what he was saying. Maybe it is all very sweet, but it sounds like a horrible waste of time to us. Then again maybe we've been in Tally so long we can't put a true value on sentimen.

This is submitted with all humble apologies to the girl who by this time probably is sorry he ever saw a tree.

I think that I shall never see
An FSC belle like me.

A bed when I can get sufficient rest
In preparation for tomorrow's test.

A bed that really feels OK
When I lay me down to hit the hay.

A bed should always banish care
Mine lends itself to a night mare!

Upon its muddle I have lain
A dull and body wracked with pain.

Beds are made by fools like me
I want a soft bed, don't you see?

We wish the people who write articles like "Get Slim with Salads" or "Oh, Vigor, Vitality with Vitaminized Lettuce" wouldn't leave them around campus where people can see them. Please don't think even for an instant that we don't love salads, should do is to stand by the Cairo Declaration.

Cafeteria Chatter

but after eating four in one day we got a little tired of them. Besides we were bothered by everyone turning to us and saying, "Pass the salad to me, Pallid."

Last Friday night there was a little power-failure in some of the dormitories. As it turned out it was only a new janitor who had gotten his signals switched, and had come to work too early. But why should we worry about a prowler? If he dares to risk the wrath of our 2400 girls he deserves anything that happens to him. After all "the female of the species is more deadly than the male"—and we've been in Tallahassee an awfully long time.

We don't like to brag too much, but we were in the library the other night, and we have a suspicion that we have ideal study conditions there. Whenever we go over there, we get a wild desire to scream or shout or stamp our feet. In supressing these desires we become frustrated and can't concentrate on our studying very well. Perhaps if we could have an annual Library Contin..ued on page three

Odd-Even Practice Continues Pace

Practices for all the Odd-Even games are going on now with practices for each sport being held several times a week.

The Even softball team has about 35 people out, four of these girls having been on the team last year. Since the beginning of practice on March 26 quite a bit of progress has been made, according to Frankie Hall, team leader. She says, "We'll be hard to beat—if we are beaten."

Odd softball practice is held on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons at 5 o'clock and there are about 20 girls participating in the sport. Miss Calliope Papatsos who has had charge of the practices, has emphasized technique rather than plays.

Since there are only nine girls out for the Odds tennis practices a plea for more girls to participate has been made by Blanch Faver, leader. Qualifications are that a player have no more than six hours of U's and that she come out to practices on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons.

Carolyn Bourland, leader of Even Archery team, states that the archery team will be selected the last of this month after practice points have been gotten in and grades investigated. Practices are on Monday, Wednesday and Friday and so far there are about 25 girls out.

Odd archery, according to Carolyn Forehand, is progressing quite well with the practice days on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. She says there are a large number of girls participating in these practices each time.

AAUW Cites More Winners

given to those holding first place positions.

Winning fine arts, crafts and photography will be exhibited in Gilchrist hall beginning April 25 with a special tea.

The creative arts committee of the AAUW announced that it was extremely pleased with the number of students who entered the contest this year. The entries totaled 148 distributed as follows: poetry, 14; short story, 13; essay, 11; drama, 1; fine arts, 54; crafts, 21; photography, 13; modern dance, 3; tap dance, 3; songs, 11; piano, 3; and organ, 1.

"The enthusiastic response among our students is proof that appreciation of the arts is vigorously alive today," stated Dr Carmen Rogers, chairman.

Eight Are Tapped For Music Group

Eight new members for the Music club were tapped last Monday afternoon in the Music Annex, immediately following the student recital there. They were: Eleanor Bragg, Rachel Crotwell, Frances Duckworth, Nannie Ruth Durrance, Jere Farnsworth, Marjorie Jones, Marian Najarian, and Alice Wheeler.

Roberta Leonard, president of the club, gave a short talk on the history and purpose of the club, after which she read the pledges' names. As each name was called, two senior members of the club brought the pledge from the audience and pinned on her the pink and black ribbons of the club. The ceremony closed with the singing of "Garnet and Gold".

The pledge period will last for two weeks, after which a formal initiation will be held.

The Music club is an organization entirely within the School of Music, and is composed of music majors. Requirements for membership are a 1.5 scholastic average and a classification of either junior or sophomore, or the equivalent.

WAA Gives Banquet Wednesday Night

A banquet for all the new and old officers of the Women's Athletic Association was held Wednesday night at 6:30 at the Cherokee Hotel.

Members of the physical education faculty and all sports leaders for the past year were asked to attend this dinner.

Margaret Fridy gave a toast to the new board which includes Jo Guthrie, president; Clarice Trueblood, vice president; Nancy Ward, secretary; Roses Mareoux, treasurer and Teresa Monroe, intramural manager. Jo Guthrie then gave a toast to the old board. Anne Widerquist, past junior athletic manager toasted the physical education faculty and Dr Katherine Montgomery made the return.

CGA Officers Are Installed

Mendoza, Landis hall; Juanita Krentzman, Gilchrist hall; Roberta Perkins, Broward hall.

The members of judiciary are: seniors, Ruth Dismore and Dot Jean Glass; juniors, Rosetta Carver, Jean Ann Graham, and Betty Schwartz; sophomores, Babs McCarthy and Dalia Santos.

Lifesaving Corps Votes On Officers

The election of next year's officers of the Lifesaving Corps is being held today and tomorrow by issuance of individual ballots to each member, according to Eya Berry, president of the Lifesaving Corps.

At a meeting held last night at 7:45 in room 402 of the Student Alumnae building the following girls were nominated as candidates for president, Gladys Lester; for secretary-treasurer, Joyce Cayce, Vera Cone and Betty Bureh; and for captain, Anna Horne, Margery Holm and Jo Dawkins.

Members are urged to mail ballots immediately after checking their choices to box 702.

Intramural Finals

Bryan and Reynolds, Delta Phi Epsilon and Pi Beta Phi will play this afternoon in the volley ball intramural semi-finals. Finals will be played Monday by the winners of today's games.

The next sports, which will begin about the middle of next week, will be bridge and ping-pong. Further announcement will be made Tuesday in convocation.

Broward Girls Get 'Bd' Sports Letter

Warner Originates Award To Outstanding Students

Students living in Broward who have taken part in intra-mural sports this year have been awarded the letter Bd, in garnet and gold. The Bd letter is not a real letter given to the individual students, but the letter is posted on Broward bulletin board under which all names of the outstanding girls are listed. Mrs Ray Warner, Broward counsellor, originated the Bd letter because she felt that girls who did not make an F by playing in Odd-Even sports should be given some honor for participation in intra-mural sports.

Through the cooperation of Betty Gardiner, the intra-murals manager, and all of the active students in Broward, they are forming a volleyball team also for intra-mural competition. As each outstanding girl wins the Bd her name will be posted under the Bd on the bulletin board.

In Broward's house meeting of last week the following students were given honor for their good sportsmanship in basketball: Warrene Porter, Gwenith Duden, Louise Peeples, Mary Frances Clopton, Martha Jane Tison, Vivian Mercer, Catherine Sessions, and Marilyn Burch; in tennis: Gloria Basila and Thelma Yonge; in Tarpon Club, Ann Richardson and Patricia Millican; in swimming, Louise Illinsworth; in softball: Thelma Yonge, Gwenith Duden, Louise Peeples, Warrene Porter, Mary Frances Clopton, Voncelle Baxter, Doris Hill, Vivian Mercer and Catherine Sessions; in archery, Doris Hill.

Majors to Attend Corn Husking Bee

A "Corn Husking Bee" is being sponsored for the physical education majors by Miss Henrietta Greenberg's recreational leadership class on Monday night from 7:30 to 9. About 200 girls are expected to attend since each major is to invite one friend.

The major and her guest should come dressed as a country boy and girl. All the girls will come in couples. Blue jeans, Daisy Mae costumes, straw hats, sun bonnets, corn cob pipes and pigtails will be fitting for the occasion.

Hog calling, chicken calling, husband calling and corn husking contests are scheduled for the evening. The physical education majors and their "date's" are to sign up in the lower gymnasium either Friday or Saturday for the contests they wish to enter.

There will be square dancing at the beginning of the program and community singing at the end. Prizes will be awarded to the contest winners.

College Comments

Pandemondium Hour during which we could whistle and clatter around it would relieve some of the tension. It really isn't so hard on us, but we're just thinking about the brilliant girls who spend half of their waking ours in that place. We can stand most anything for a half hour a week.

Mayby you've never thought much about it all, but there is a very decided split in many groups on campus. Just recently we heard about one group of girls who has a very pretty song that goes on melodiously until it gets to the line, "She's in love with her——man." Half of the people scream, "Navy Man" and the other half yell for the Army. We hope it isn't serious, but it does seem to be significant of something or other. When we have more time we're going to sit down and do some Constructive Thinking about it, so don't you all worry and we'll just let you know.

About this time of the year everyone begins to realize that the five weeks until exams isn't very long. It is going to be sort of hard to get in all the term papers and parallel and book reports that we've known about all year. But then, if we were smart enough to get this far without doing them we should be smart enough to get them done somehow or other. Wouldn't Aladdin's lamp be useful now? Or even a brain cell or two . . .

Legislature in Brief

veterans expected to return to school under the "GI Bill of Rights".

Proponents of the bills emphasized that coeducation was a far more normal way of education than segragation, that the University is operating far under capacity at present, that the physical setup at the school could easily accommodate women students, as it has done during summer school, and that opening the school to junior and senior women will not injure FSC.

Opponents of the bill urged no hasty action, said that the bill would entail great expense, that the University would not be able to accommodate returning veterans, that both schools were maintaining excellent records under the present system, and should not be changed without serious consideration and study.

Proponents pointed out that the state of Florida in 1929 paid 75,000 to out-of-state experts from Columbia, Peabody, and other schools to survey the higher educational system, and that their completed survey had strongly urged immediate coeducation. Speakers said that further surveys at this time were an excellent idea, but that the bills under discussion, if passed, would in no way interfere with an investigation of further changes to be made.

It was also suggested that in event of large numbers of veterans returning, money would have to be spent for additions to the University and that such additions should provide for coeducation.

Opponents seemed to urge consideration of a proposed House resolution that a long-term and inclusive survey be made of the Florida educational system, and that recommendations and conclusions of the surveyors in regard to coeducation be followed.

Representative Burke Floyd, of Franklin County, told the assembly that he had proposed a two-year survey to be made and reported back to the 1947 session, which could be made either with coeducation existing at Gainesville for junior and senior years, or could be made of the present higher educational system. His resolution has not at present been introduced in the House or sent to the House education B committee.

After brief consideration of a bill to allow servicemen's wives to attend the University and husbands of servicewomen to attend FSC, the joint session was adjourned to committee rooms for a final vote.

Students flocked to Committee room F, where the House education committee B, composed of 17 members, met for a brief discussion and vote. The final vote was 12 to 5 against the bill, and it therefore will not be sent to the floor of the House for discussion.

Voting for the bill were Representatives Morgan of Duval, Jenkins of Alachua, Curtis of Marion, Elliott of Palm Beach and Walker of Volusia.

Against it were Representatives Wotitsky of Charlotte, Hardin of Polk, Harris of Pinellas, Holland of Hillsborough, Jernigan of Escambia, Lambe of Jackson, Midyette of Leon, McAlpin of Hamilton, Oelkers of Dade, Poston of Bay, Stewart of Lee and Williams of Holmes.

In the Senate committee, the bill was reported favorably by a vote of 6 to 2. Dissenting were Senators Mathews of Jacksonville and Barringer of Sarasota. In favor of sending the bill to the floor of the senate were Beacham of West Palm Beach, Johnson of Tavares, McArthur of Fernandina, Shands of Gainesville, Sheldon of Tampa and Clarke of Monticello.

Further action on the Senate bill has not been definitely scheduled, and may be today or later. The Senate sergeant-at-arms will have the information later.

Representatives have stated an intention to introduce a bill calling for coeducation at both University of Florida and FSCW. To date such a bill has not been introduced.

Yesterday afternoon the House education committee B met to discuss the proposed resolution for a long-time over-all survey, but no record of their action is yet available.

Senate Votes On Co-Education

for FSC not being made coeducational in 1945-46 was that the job of conversion would be more difficult at Tallahassee than at the University and could not be completed in time for the fall quarter.

A motion was made that this resolution be adopted, but various objections were raised to it. Some said that it was too detailed, and it would be better to send a more general statement saying that Student Senate favored coeducation as a plan of education.

Isabel Rogers, senior, said she didn't think it wise to vote on such a resolution until the facts were known as to the expense of the change, and the educational values. Other Senate members and visitors contended that the Senate had had ample time for research and that it wasn't the job of the Senate to consider the expense but rather to let the legislators know which plan the students preferred.

Peggy Lu's motion was defeated by a vote of 28 to 11, and Robin Hill, sophomore, proposed a resolution saying that Student Senate of FSC resolved that they thought coeducation a better plan of education than the one now practiced in the state colleges of Florida. Ann Carolyn Allison, president of Senate, amended the resolution to include the actual vote by which the resolution was passed, if passed, and it was voted on. This resolution was adopted by a vote of 31 to 9.

A report on the point load adjustments to the quarter system was given by Irma Lee Shepherd, freshman. The adjustments were: six points for demonstration chairmen, five points for script committees of the demonstrations, and four points for the committee chairmen of the demonstrations. All of those points will be in the first quarter alone.

Four points are to be given in the second and third quarters to the chairman of Junior Minstrels. Freshmen counselors will have three points for the first quarter and two for the second and third quarters. The handbook committee will carry one point for the first quarter and four for the second and third quarter. Chairman of the Sophomore-Senior Breakfast will have one point for the third quarter, and Chairman of the Sophomore Hop will carry one for the second quarter. Since the date has not been decided for the Junior-Senior Prom, the quarter for the point load has not been set.

Betty Lewis, chairman of the committee on Goldbook changes, made a report on the activities of her committee. She said that the committee had investigated every rule as to its history, its necessity, and its effectiveness. Betty reviewed the procedure that the committee went through considering each rule but did not give all the changes they had decided to make. However, she stated that some of them would go into effect next year.

The committee to consider these rules asked that Student Senate provide for a permanent committee to be set up each year to study the rules. It was their suggestion that the committee be made up of the class presidents. The motion was made and adopted.

it; therefore no scenery is necessary. The property man and his assistants in full view of the audience rearrange and move the tables and chairs to represent the necessary setting.

A Chinese chorus is seated on the sidelines in full view. Each new entrance, change of setting, and different parts of the play are announced by the chorus. In a traditional Chinese play they play music continuously throughout the play. However, in the "Yellow Jacket" Oriental music is used only to herald the entrance of each group of characters and to create a definite mood during the course of the play. The orchestra is composed of four musicians and a leader. They sit in the center of the stage during the entire play.

The Chinese audience during the regular Chinese performance sit at long tables which are perpendicular to the footlights and eat rice or drink tea. The entire performance is quite a noisy affair.

The plot deals with the story of a young man (Wu Hoo Git) and his journey through life in an effort to find the meaning to his life. The play begins at his birth and passes through all the critical periods of his development. The audience follows the hero from a youth, to a lover, and finally to a mature man. In his journey he finds adventure, excitement, and finally satisfaction.

The cast in the order in which they speak are: Betty Lewis, property man; Edith Dunn, chorus; Bonnie Hunt, Wu Sin Yin (Great Sound Language); Kay Moore, Due Jung Fah (Fuchsia Flower); Betty Shirley, Tso (Fancy Beauty); Bette Fletcher, Tai Fah Min (Great Painted Face); Jean Thomason, first assistant property man; Evelyn Badcock second assistant property man; Louise Illinesworth, third assistant property man; Clair St John, fourth assistant property man; Anne Hunter, Chee Moo Kind Mother; Julia Ann Banks, Lee Gu First Farmer; Sara Norman Suey Sin Fah (Lily Flower); Gloria Wells, Line Won (Spirit); Betty Ames, Wu Hoo Git (Young Hero of the Wu Family); Mary Anne Cannon, Wu Fah Din (Daffodil); Muriel Aptel, Yin Suey Gong (Purveyor of Hearts); Jimmy Rogers, See Quoe Fah (Four-Season Flower); Janette Fountain, Mow Dan Fah (Peony); Nell Crawley, Yong Soo Kow (Hydrangea); Louise Sweeney, Chow Wan (Autumn Cloud); Carolyn Fixel Moy Fah Loy (Plum Blossom); Maureen Petty, See Noi; Ethel Parramore, Tai Char Shong; Doris Wells, Widow Ching; Betty Jo Beechie, Maid; Sarah Lewis, Git Hok Gar; Eileen Smith, Loy Gong; Toy Fleming, Kom Loi; Mary Jane Inabnit, Leader of Musicians; Rachel Crotwell, violinist; Patty Hill, cellist; Marilyn Dewey, flutist; Jerry Farnsworth, bassoon player.

Miss Ann Kirn of the art department, acting technical director, was responsible for the staging and the lights, while Mr Frank Sykora had charge of the continuous oriental music accompaniment.

Debate To Be Held April 18

War Activity Committee, Hillel Are Sponsors

The oratorical contest's deadline for all entries is April 18. This contest is sponsored jointly by the B'nai B'rith Hillel foundation, headed by Gerry Halpern and the newly-created Student War Activity Committee, composed of heads of 27 campus organizations. The topic of the contest will be "World Citizenship; Challenge to Complacency". Talks will be limited to eight minutes or 800 words and any subdivision of this topic can be used as a theme.

This is the first oratorical contest at Florida State College, and all students who are interested in expressing their opinions on this subject are urged to enter.

This contest will be an annual event on FSC campus.

All campus organizations have been asked to enter one candidate to compete for the prizes.

Prizes will be a silver cup for first, a $25 war bond for second, and $10 in war stamps for third.

Semi-finals will be held Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in the Student Alumnae auditorium. The judges will be faculty members and all students are invited to hear these talks by the entrants.

Finals are April 28. To judge the final competitors will be four officials of the state of Florida: the Honorable Roy Chapman, chief justice of the Florida Supreme Court; the Honorable Colin English, superintendent of education, Secretary of State Robert A Gray, and Dr Doak S Campbell, president of FSC.

Cordelia Barclay, Virginia Holmes and Gerry Halpern will take all entries. Faculty advisers will aid any candidate in composition or in oratory.

Wedding Reception Held at Broward

Broward lounge was the scene of a wedding reception for Serreant and Mrs William J May, last Sunday afternoon, following the ceremony at the chapel at Dale Mabry Field, where Chaplain Leon Mann officiated in a double ring ceremony.

Mrs May was formerly June Powell, a resident of Broward Hall at Florida State College. Mrs M L Povell of Cedarville, New Jersey, mother of the bride, and her sister, Mrs Romano were present. Among the wedding guests were a number of men from the Dale Mabry band of which Sgt May is a member, as well as faculty and friends from the campus. The maid of honor was Ann Richardson. Brides maids were Betty Jean Thomas, editor; Betty Kuehnebaugh and Betty Ruth Wagner.

Mrs Doak S Campbell, chairman of the arts and crafts committee, was assisted in arranging the exhibit by Mrs Leles Allen, counselor in Reynolds, and Mrs Louise Cox Crawford, counselor in Gilchrist. Other committee members were Mrs Ernest Dorsett, Miss Margaret S Rogers, and Mrs Ward Wartzog, counselors in Reynolds, Landis, and Broward Halls, respectively.

Several girls from the various dormitories were very helpful in collecting the crafts from students and assisting in the exhibit. Sonya Heyman, in Gilchrist, headed the committee of the crafts; Catherine Ficcio headed the collection in Landis; Beatrice Travis in Reynolds; and Jean Krentzman in Jennie Murphree; Estill Mahjorim in New Hall; Betty Ruth Wagner in Broward; Gloria Sealls in Broward.

The purpose of the exhibit was Miss Emily Wilburn, professor of industrial arts. She explained that the idea behind the handicraft as being "anything made by hand that is put to use or for the use of other people." She stated also that there are three ways one can express his private handicrafts: by reading about them; by selecting and buying them; and by making them. By making them, she says that one derives the most pleasure.

Not all of the crafts that Miss Wilburn discussed came from far away. In fact, there was available of crafts made up of pottery made by Florida State College students. Miss Wilburn emphasized the fact that to make crafts one did not need to be a practice. She hopes that FSC students will become more interested in crafts and have more interest in the AAUW contest next year.

Leon Schools Hold Field Day At FSC

Last Friday from 10 a m to 3 p m the Florida State College gymnasium was the scene of the Play and Field Day for the Leon county school children.

Between 200 and 300 children participated in the games. Both boys and girls from the fourth grade through the ninth grade of the rural schools of the county took part.

The Play Day was held in the morning and a Field Day was held in the afternoon. The Woodville School received the banner as the final winner. Physical education majors were the officials of the day. Softball was also sponsored by the physical education department in conjunction with the Florida Demonstration school.

She hopes that FSC students will become more interested in crafts and have more interest in the AAUW contest next year.

Parties Highlight Dance Intermission

Coffees and informal gatherings, given by the different sororities, characterized the intermission parties during the big Pan Hellenic dance last Saturday night.

Alpha Delta Pi entertained with a coffee. Sandwiches were generously used throughout the house. Mrs A T Black and Mrs Val Giesen, of Gainesville, were honor guests.

An informal party for the Alpha Chi Omega members and their dates was held at their house.

Delta Zeta pledges served refreshments at their intermission party. Merrill Long was in charge, assisted by Betty Johnson, Lou Taylor, Carolyn Smith, and Carol Avery. Cecil Arrangements of spring flowers decorated the house. Lt Com. commander and Mrs Lachman, of Jacksonville, Mr and Mrs J F Johnson, of Jacksonville, and Mrs James Padgett, of Orlando, were guests.

Vickie Mott, assisted by Ann Wright, was in charge of the Alpha Xi Delta coffee. The colorful decorations were used to bring out the spirit of spring.

Sigma Kappa's party centered around an April showers theme. Decorations coincided with the dance. Ernestine Jackson was in charge, assisted by B B Winters; Dorothy Hahn acted as hostess.

Zeta Tau Alpha gave an informal coffee for the members and their dates. Spring flowers decorated out the April showers theme used at the formal. In charge of arrangements was Ruth Ervin.

KO-Ed Bill Is Voted Down

the student body of FSC, and Bill Hall and Jack Murray from the U of F presented views of students at the two colleges concerning the co-education issue. They stated that the majority of students at both colleges favor the proposed legislation.

"Although the resolution concerning co-education recently passed by the FSC senate has wrongfully been interpreted to mean that they oppose the bill under discussion, members of the senate have expressed their surprise and disturbance at such interpretations of their attitude," Hall said. "FSC senate was in favor co-education and ask the legislature to give it to girl students as soon as possible," she concluded.

That Florida veterans favor co-education and that women students should not be required to go out of state to attend a co-educational university were statements made by FSC junior man, a member of the U of F student senate.

"The U of F does not have proper facilities to accommodate all those applicants," declared junior Murray P Adair, chairman of the state board of control, in addressing the accumulated body of the board. "Every girl admitted to the U of F would mean an extra chair, a serviceman," he said.

Mrs Frank T Moore, secretary of the FSC Alumnae association, ingured careful consideration of the measure and also suggested that the legislature appoint a special citizen's committee to study the situation before passing any levidation concerning the state colleges.

Representatives from the alumni association of the U of F and the junior chamber of commerce stated that these organizations favor the co-education bill.

Senator Murray declared that the wishes of former U of F students now in the armed services and modernize Florida's educational system," said Rep Clifford Beasley, president of the U of F alumni.

Bryan Formal Has 'Heavenly' Theme

At the annual Bryan formal dance last Saturday night from 9 to 12 in the Bryan parlor, a theme, "All This and Heaven Too" was used. The downstairs represented "All This" and the balcony, "Heaven Too."

The decorations consisted of cut-out stars and angels of silver and midnight blue, with flowers and vines decorating the walls. Punch and cookies were served on the balcony throughout the dance.

A program given at 10 o'clock with Jeannette Bolliter acting as mistress of ceremonies highlighted the evening. The program opened with a flute solo by Frances Downing. This was followed by readings of "Seventeen" and "I Like Men" by Peggy Butler. Jimmie Rogers sang "Whispering" and a short skit, depicting the change from a Freshman to Sophomore and Junior to Senior, was given by Dusty Rhodes and Betty Field. "Boogie Woogie" and "Sugar Shack Rose" were played by Mary Nicholas, pianist. Vonnie Fitzgerald and Sara Parrish gave a duet of "Don't Fence Me In" and "Hawaiian War Chant." The program closed with a Communism, Democracy, and Republicanism skit. Mary Nicholas, assisted by Marie Dozier, Margie Grace Hendricks, Elizabeth O Andrews, Anne Fielding, and Shirley Cummings.

Twenty-one girls were present, each of which worked on a committee. Committee chairmen were: Doris Fleming, decorations; Marion Hill and Lydia Moore, the dance program; Martha Cordray, finance; Virginia Bradley, music committee; Joyce Cave and Mildred Williams, refreshment flower committee; Mary Charles Skipper, invitations; Margaret Harper and Rose Miller was their accompanist.

with a full package. Another method which these students have adopted is to acquire the habit of only carrying around one or two cigarettes at a time.

It is extremely unusual for a student to be offered a cigarette, but if this occasion should arise, the surprised smoker would probably find that he is being offered an inferior brand, or either the package was "swiped" in front of him in such a hurry that he could not have gotten one if he had tried.

All manners of economy and conservation are being put into practice, for the cigarette shortage has become quite serious, both on the campus and in the entire country.

Radio Program to Be Given from Westcott

Students Will Direct Florida High School Glee Club

A special radio program featuring the Florida High School Glee Club will be heard from the college auditorium this afternoon from 2:30 to 3:00 o'clock.

The glee club, directed by Mrs Cecile Strang, instructor in public school music, will have two Florida State College student directors for the radio show, and will be announced by a third FSC student. The directors are Mart McCormack and Rosemary Thrasher, and the announcer is Roberta Leonard.

Selections from the cantata "Caravan" by Richard Kountz and Edmund Spear Hunt will comprise the program.

Members of the chorus from the college this week have included a special personnel office program presented last Monday night from the college studio, and participated in by Elizabeth O Andrews, director of personnel; Miss Marguerite Dressler, assistant director of personnel and Mary Margaret Bachelor, student assistant in the Personnel Office.

Last night's regular Garnet and Gold program from the studio featured the public school music chorus of the college, under the direction of Miss Zadie Phipps, associate professor of public school music. Rosemary Thrasher, Florida State College student, Jean Blackburn were student directors of the three songs presented by the school. Marjorie Rose Miller was their accompanist.

Correction Item

The time was nearing 8pm flash: the place was still burning around the Sweet Shop and office Stories were still to be written and headlined so because I was in a hic hurry I didn't check the Junior elections story — consequently I wrote a headline saying "Brown Heads Juniors," when it should have been stated "Brown Heads Seniors."

Legislature in Brief

By CORDELIA BARCLAY

FSCW's interest in the Legislature was most noticeable last night, when the members of the house and Senate were among honored guests at the biennial banquet for of scials of the state. Many of the guests hurried from the committee rooms in the house and Senate in the capitol, to the pre-seate dinner. Girls from the sixteen state colleges, representatives and districts of the senators were present to act as hostesses for the occasion.

The dinner came after a week of legislative activity, during which the officials introduced, passed, and considered a number of bills of state-wide interest.

Shortest in importance this week was what is for this season probably the final action on the bill to make the University of Florida coeducational in its junior and senior years.

Co-education Defeated

Last week was the final hearing of the Senate and House education committee about the bill, introduced by Rep Holmes Mahon, of Leesburg, and Senator Wallace Sturgis, of Ocala. The Senate committee reported it favorably, making it available for discussion on the floor. The House committee, however "killed" the bill, reporting unfavorably and making House action on the floor more decisive without a two-thirds vote of the House.

According to observers, the Senate delayed action on killing the bill until it could be seen whether the House would take the two-thirds action, since chances of passing the bill were more slim without such action. The proponents of the bill in the House did unready to ask for the two-thirds vote, and the Senate action favoring the bill encouraged House action.

The seeming stalemate was broken Tuesday, as Senator Sturgis withdrew his co-education bill from consideration. Sturgis stated to the press that he had withdrawn the bill at the request of high backers because the administration leaders of the house committee on the identical proposal of Rep Meiton made it impossible that the legislation can pass at this session."

Rep Meiton said that he considered it finished for the session.

Shortly after Sen Sturgis withdrew his bill, a telegram was sent to the House the Bayhead bill, which will permit hunting of migratory birds on Sundays. The bill was introduced by FSCW and wives of veterans to stand the University. Members of the House approved the bill and it will become law after the Governor's action.

Spending

Also holding interests of collegiate students this week was the series of actions taken about spending and revenue appropriations. Legislating action was taken. But a state committee yesterday, after a heated meeting of members, the house committee members voted two, 7-6, a proposed 4 mill tax rate per bottle to tax on beer. The House committee delayed action.

The House, continuing to vote appropriations, has agreed to make a $600,000 deficiency in old age pensions, requested by Governor Caldwell to replace for race track funds.

The Sorority Ban

The controversial ax banning both school fraternities and sororities in Florida high schools, again in effect at least two months. The House education committee, defeated by a unanimous vote Wednesday, a bill to repeal the 1941 law making the secret associations. The bill was considered on the house floor only after a two-thirds vote, and spon- ors doubted if it had the necessary strength.

In the committee hearing, Miss Marjorie Morse, of St Petersburg, former president of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke against the repeal, saying that the secret societies encouraged social discrimination. Several high school students and high school students spoke for the repeal of the bill.

No Jury Service.

Also of interest to FSCW girls is the house committee action which will serve on Florida juries was killed by the House, 59 to 34, the bill providing that women

Hindus Says Friends For USSR Needed

Soviet People Want Peace After Wartime Losses And Privations

Will Want to Destroy Steel Industry of Germany

Maurice Hindus, author, lecturer, and war correspondent who recently returned from Russia, spoke last Saturday night in Westcott auditorium about his native country.

In this speech Mr Hindus stated that the ties that bind Russia and the United States remain on friendly terms la to tell one about the other, thereby giving them a greater sympathy and understanding for the troubles of their ally.

Mr Hindus emphasized that in Russia no one speaks of a third world conflict although in the United States such thoughts are heard. This speaker felt that inconsistency as it seems possible that such a conflict would be between the United States and Russia.

According to the reasoning of the Russians, when one side of the other war we are challenging them as Germany will be too weak to cause the United States trouble during the next 20 years and the United States will not fight England who stands with her as the bulwark of democracy.

"The Russians don't want nothing so much as peace when the war is over. The country has been enormous, a million dead, millions more left without homes and whipped to the ground during the cute in the ground. The standard of living has dropped very low.

Coon's Appearance Contributed to Ivy Trimmed Buildings

"Easy there, boys!" "O K Pull 'er down!" Crash! And a huge mass of ivy comes tumbling down in traditional place of honor.

Mr Herbert Mendenhall, FSCW engineer and architect, still smiles when he recalls one occasion of excitement probably caused by the disturbance of the ivy walls. It seems that he was urgently summoned by the art class one day and on arriving at the room, he found himself face to face with a coon! Who knows, maybe the next time it would have been a lion!

The ivy which has long remained on the walls of Florida State College is rapidly disappearing. One look at Westcott and the stu-

Senate Makes Yearly Report

Committee Heads Are Nominated for 45-46

Nominations for the chairmen of the standing committees for the next year were made by members of the committees for the 1944-45 period.

Annual reports from the three standing committees for 1944-45 were the main part of the meeting at 4p m meeting Wednesday afternoon in the Student Alumnae auditorium.

The Social Standards Committee, the Usher Committee, and the Auditing Committee reports were given by the chairman of the committees.

The Social Standards Committee report was given by its chairman Mary Florence Fox. It was stated that the Social Standards Council was "the duly authorized body for co-ordinating all phases of social and recreational life and is responsible for publicizing all social regulations and encouraging participation in them."

The duties, functions, and suggestions of the chairman were also outlined. It was suggested by the chairman that the "Campus Wise in Campus Ways should be looked up or a new list of activities and functions should be compiled, published, and distributed. Emphasis was suggested that the social chairmen at the end of the year should turn in a list of their activities functions to assist their successors in choosing their chairmen.

A Social Calendar of the Week will be placed on the wall across from the Social Chairmen's office next year. The board will be changed each week, and it will state the time, place, and event of the college year.

Meetings of the Social Standards Council will be held once a month since the organization is so large. The Social Chairmen will have a special meeting to discuss their own particular problems.

Extensive Post-War Erection Program on Campus to Include Completion, Remodeling and Construction of New Buildings

By LOLA ROSE

The layout of the foundations for the wing of the History building is a continuance of an extensive plan for campus growth on the architecture of the Florida State College campus. This program will include the completion and remodeling of buildings already in existence and the construction of new buildings.

The wing on the History building is the first current phase of these successive construction plans, the difficulty lying chiefly in obtaining material for foundations are being laid for the fine arts building, which when completed, will make the wing equal in height to the rest of the building. For the present the first floor only will be completed. According to Mr Herbert D Mendenhall, the resident architect, it will be a long time that the rest of Florida can hope to do on the Florida State College campus before the completion of the wing.

If any other major building plans are authorized before the end of the war, the first one will be the completion of the gymnasium. As the plans are now, the auditorium will be a north wing which will extend to the road to the north of the building. It will include space for bowling alleys, shower rooms, offices, a gymnasium floor, and the modern dance floor. In the basement floor, which will be on a level with the present laundry room, there will be eight standard size bowling alleys, a modern locker storage of equipment; the second floor will consist of offices, classrs, and office rooms to increase the present locker space on the swimming pool floor. Above this will be a sports floor, 60 feet wide and 88 feet long, with two offices and also an orthopedic office. Similar to the present indoor gymnasium this will be one stories in height. The next and top floor will be the modern dance floor. This arrangement is a trend in the latest buildings on the campus this one will conform to the architectural plan of the present building in construction and appearance.

Another important chance at the list of future construction plans, one sees an addition to the Student Alumnae building which will include a cafeteria for the convenience of the day students. This addition will enable an expansion of the soda shop. There is a need for this addition because of the unsatisfactory location of the present one and the lack of room to convenient space, according to Mr Mendenhall.

To take care of the increased enrollment in the college, plans for a complete new auditorium and music hall are being drawn up. The auditorium will be of sufficient size to seat 3,500 people. Near it will be a small auditorium to accommodate 1,000. The two auditoriums will form an acute angle with each other, and will be connected by a transfer of pianos and equipment from one stage to another, the two stages will be joined. The building will be erected where the Music Annex is now in order to enable it to be easily accessible to the Tallahassee residents who attend the music programs of the college.

All of the new buildings and repairs will conform to the present architectural scheme of Modernized Collegiate Gothic design which is similar to that used in Oxford, Yale, Harvard. Even with the present building restrictions the buildings differ because of the construction materials used in each. There is a marked evidence of the evolution of the design in the difference in appearance between the East and West wings of the dining hall. The East wing, built about 25 years ago, lacks the distinguishing main entrance and the flat simplicity of the front of the West wing, which was built about 5 years ago. In 1918 the Modernized Collegiate Gothic

Dr Carothers Goes to Tampa

Education for Service Men And Women Is Topic

To discuss current topics concerning education in Florida, particularly concerning returning service men and women, a meeting of the Florida Association of Universities and Colleges was recently held in Tampa.

Representing Florida State College at the conference were Dr Milton W Carothers, registrar; Dr R y Eraan, dean of the School of Education; Dr R L Goulding, superintendent of the demonstration school; Dr Guy L Diffenbaugh, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and Mrs Diffenbaugh.

Dr W T Edwards and Mr Paul Eddy of the State Department of Education attended as well as representatives from the University of Florida, Rollins College, University of Miami, Tampa University, and deleeates from the various junior colleges throughout the state.

The major topic of the conference was "Educational Opportunities for Returning Service men and Women," and other topics under discussion were "Citizens Committee on Education and Plans for State Study on Education," "Florida Resources-use Education Project," "Sloan Foundation Project on Human Food and Clothing." Speakers included Dr Guy R Hawley of New York, executive director of the American Association of Colleges; Mr Paul Eddy of the State Department of Education; Mr S F Montague, Veterans Administration at Bay Pines; Mr Alan Graham, Petersburg, of the Florida Citizens Committee on Education; and Mr E Wutter of the University of Florida.

At a banquet on Friday night at the Floridan Hotel, Dr Roarke led the discussion of various plans for the returning veterans, both men and women under the G1 Bill of Rights. Mr Montague who is dealing with these returned veterans at Bay Pines and who has been counseling and advising under the G1 Bill in Tampa, also spoke on this subject.

Mr Granier of the Citizens committee explained the government on school problems, gave a discussion on diversity of experiments of the committee in making up the recommendations that were satisfactory to the state, and told of the advantages that would accrue to the state if these improvements were made in primary and secondary schools in the state.

Dr Carothers attended as representative of the conference which was held at the Floridan Hotel in Tampa, and also at the Tampa University. The first of the meetings began at 2 p m on Friday and the last one ended about 11:30 on Saturday. Dr W S Allen was elected chairman for the next year's meeting which will be held in Miami and Dr Carothers was elected vice-president.

Meeting To Be Held

The Florida High School Associations meeting will be held in Tampa on May 5. Among items for consideration will come the problem of organizing a women's and girl's division. Plans for the girl's division were made at the state association request by a committee of women in the state whose chairman was Dr Katherine Montgomery and among the members were two former college members, Miss Gladys Rush of Ocala and Miss Martha Twitty of Gainesville. Miss Grace Price of FSCW was also on the committee.

sign began to take the place of the medieval architecture with the erection of Reynolds hall. A remnant of the castle type architecture can be seen in the appearance of Bryan, Westcott, and Broward. When Bryan hall was built after the war the new building will retain the fortress appearance for sentimental reasons.

In addition to the constructing of new buildings there is a constant need for repair and reconstruction. An example of this was the complete rebuilding of the Education building and the north side of Westcott. Defects of the original constructions could be seen in the cracking of the walls. Upon investigation the original buildings were found to have been built upon unsatisfactory foundations. Then t.ad been no allowance made in the construction for the settling process of soil. Running underneath the buildings and across the area were earth-filled trenches from which the workers dug old cannon balls. Mr Mendenhall thought that they were more likely to be remnants of old Spanish fortification and not Civil War relics because at the time of the Civil War the building was occupied as the site of a small military school whose only building stood where the Westcott building now is. It is not very likely that trenches would have been built within a few yards of these school. Also during the war the students from the school went to the Suwannee River territory in order to aid in the defense against the union army.

All of the ground west of the military school where the residence hails now are was until the early 1900's in forest. Near the turn of the century a road which was made to the small school building extending it to Copeland street. In the early 1900's dormitories were constructed on the present site of Reynolds building and Library, east hall and west hall. As the campus began to grow it was given its name and is now the co-educational one. In 1908 it became a girls' school under the name of the Florida Female College and remained such until 1909 when the name was changed to Florida State College for Women.

Plans for the post-war campus of Florida State College include the construction of a dormitory to accommodate about 150 students. This dormitory will be a state school unit designed to make easier the management of the dormitories. The largest dormitory on the campus at the present time is Reynolds building which is about 370 students. According to reports, stated Mr Mendenhall, there are many students for good management in such a large building.

Tentative plans for war construction after the new dormitory will include the aforementioned complete re-building of Bryan hall, a new demonstration school, the re-building of the present science building, and a new home economics building in order of their listing.

Episcopal Students Attend Conference

Hill Elected State President Of Canterbury Club

Members of the Episcopal student vestry attended a state Canterbury Club conference held in Gainesville the week end of April 13-15.

The theme, "The Nature and Function of the Church and Churchman," was discussed under three topics, "What Is the Church?" "The Church in the World Today," and "What Is Our Function in the Church Today?" Three speakers were led by the Rev George Alexander from Palatka.

The results of the Florida Canterbury Club elections are: Robin Hill, state president; Alan Sherban of Gainesville, vice-president; the Rev Alvin Bullen, temporary clerk.

Representatives from Rupe Hall were Dorothy Jeanne Mott, Dorothy Sterling, Lisella Rouse, Robin Hill, Margaret Stout, Jo Hawkins, Nancy Lee Wheeler, Betty Phillips, Letitia Croom, Joan Shaner, Eleanor Boyd, and Rev and Mrs Alvin Bullen.

This third conference for Episcopal students was also attended by representatives from Weed Hall, Gainesville, and the University of Tampa.

mittee was given by its chairman Sarah Lawrence.

Sara Jane offered a group of suggestions which would aid the Fisher Committee. Their will be a system worked out to prevent students who have left the class from entering the auditorium until after intermission. The standard of freshman and All Artist Series for those sitting in the main auditorium will be enforced. Sara Jane asked for stronger cooperation of all students in working with the Usher Committee and Dean of Music by supporting the Artist Series and other college functions. The report was accepted by Senate.

Betty Cobb as chairman of the Auditing Committee gave the annual report, which was accepted by Senate.

Dorothy Boardman nominated the following women for chairman of the Social Standards Council for 1945-46: Sara Jane McKelvey, Alice Walton, and Mildred Turner.

Sara Jane McKelvey nominated the following for chairman of the Usher Committee for the coming year: Helen Alford, Helen Berg, Margery Woodberry, Marjorie Miller, and Barbara Wickham.

Betty Chasel nominated Margaret McCain as chairman of the Auditing Committee for the coming year.

Sarah Lewis, chairman of Senate, appointed a committee of three to receive further appointments for committees until second light flash Wednesday night.

Anne McInnes was elected house president of New Hall and Lally Rogers was elected house vice-president of New Hall.

Wednesday afternoon the Senate meeting will meet in 305 Westcott to take the Constitution test on student government. Every Senate member must take and pass the constitution test to serve as an active member of Senate.

may so serve. The bill, which was also defeated last session, was sponsored by Miss Mary Jo Baker, only woman legislator this session.

Sociology students were interested spectators yesterday at a public hearing of the juvenile court bill, which proposes to establish separate handling of juvenile delinquents and special separations from probation officers in the state. Only seven of Florida's 67 counties have any provision for separate handling. Young offenders have often been kept in jails for weeks waiting for an adult trial. The bill will give county judges exclusive legal authority over children under 17 whose offenses do not include murder, armed robbery, or rape. These judges will devote part time to juvenile matters and will be handled informally. Detention homes will be established, and district probation officers will be created to assist with investigation of the background of the delinquents.

Court Bill Discussed

The committee on Agency A, did not vote at the hearing, at which county judges, probation officers, and institutional representatives discussed for and approval of the bill. It has been reported that committee vote will be favorable, and that the bill will be discussed on the floor of the House.

Criticisms of the bill include the fact that qualification for the probation officer is not specified, that it is too arbitrary an ace to be the dividing line between adult and juvenile treatment, and that instead of part-time county judges there should be full-time juvenile court judges.

Marriage regulations came in for publicity before the house when it passed a bill providing for a compulsory premarital test. Certificates could be performed, after intention was listed. The Senate has passed a bill requiring premarital and pre-natal tests for syphilis.

Cockrell Features Love Seats as New Parlor Furnishings

Yes, from all reports, the Cockrell Hall parlor will have the essential comforts of home upon the addition of twelve new pieces of furniture as was announced by Miss Edith McCollum, director of residence halls. To lend that cozy atmosphere two more "love seats" will be placed in the parlor as soon as slip covers are made and fitted. Rugs have been ordered for both Cockrell and Parkside parlors.

Pieces of furniture already in the parlor are four low backed occasional chairs with flowered cretonne covers, a round mahogany table, two cream colored love seats of the modern type and one upholstered one of the early American type, two highback occasional chairs, a wing-back chair with footstool upholstery, and a coffee table.

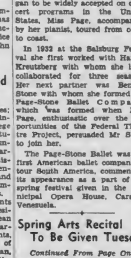
because most of the food goes to the army; most of the textiles go to the army; most of the clothing to the army; most of everything desirable goes to the army. The people want peace so they can rebuild their country and resume a normal life," said Dr Hindus.

As an expert on Russia, Mr Hindus feel that in order to satisfy the American people after the war, Germany's production of steel will have to be stopped and Germans will have to work and help rebuild the devastated Russian cities.

Stalin measures a nation's strength in her production of steel. He feels that the United States' enormous output of steel is responsible for her place as one of the leading nations of the world. Consequently, as he does not want to have to face another war with Germany, he will try to curb her strength by taking her steel away, according to Mr Hindus.



The Russians feel more than justified in wanting the Germans to help rebuild their land, the speaker explained, for when the Germans left they destroyed everything in their path, burning whole villages regardless of the human and children victims suffered horrible deaths through this brutal procedure.

"The Russians fear fascism in war aamin and that is why," said Mr Hindus, "they want to make sure that, at least along their own borders, no parties or governments arising up that will become nests of fascism."

Mr Hindus revealed that it is this fear of fascism which makes them so determined in their opposition to feudal lords and to others whom they suspect of being potential fascists.

That is why it has been so difficult to come to an understanding between Russia and the Polish government in London, and it is why it may be difficult to come to an understanding with Russia about other countries like Hungary and Rumania, which have been ruled for so long by a landed gentry and military caste, Mr Hindus pointed out.

FSC Graduate Is No Longer Widow Since Receival of News After 3-Year Period

For the first time in three years, Mrs Jean Vivian DeLong, a 1941 Florida State College graduate, no longer regards herself as a widow. Until recently, she believes her husband, Captain C W DeLong, had been killed in action during the Bataan campaign.

On a Philippine airstrip, where she was operating a Red Cross mobile canteen, she watched the arrival of a plane load of Americans, liberated from the Cabantuan prison by a spectacular Ranger raid.

One of the rescued internees was Sergeant Julius Brown, once a schoolmate in Madison. He spotted Mrs DeLong and thought he recognized her, but wasn't sure until another Red Cross worker verified the identification.

Then he ran to the uniformed woman, threw his arms about her and began to sob. But the news he had for her was joyful; he had seen her husband alive less than two months before, when the Japanese transferred him from Capantuan to another camp.

The next day brought a second plane load of liberated prisoners, and further confirmation of Brown's story. A soldier of the second shipment walked up to the Red Cross worker and asked "Are you Jean DeLong?"

"Yes, I am," she replied.

"Well, your picture was the one picture of a woman we've seen in three years," he told her. "I must have looked at it a million times."

He explained that the Japanese had confiscated all their photographs and personal papers, but Captain DeLong had managed to smuggle through one snapshot of his wife.

Mrs DeLong while waiting for reunion with her husband is now handling messages to and from liberated internees in the Santa Thomas area. She has been in the service 26 months of service with the Red Cross in the Southwest Pacific as a staff assistant in service clubs in Melbourne and Sydney, and as a mobile canteen worker in Pinchaven and Leyte.

This heartwarming story of an FSC graduate's reunion was received by Miss Louise Cohan, Alumnae Secretary, from William Saidons, of the Office of Relations, General Headquarters, Manila.

Interviewer Comes

A representative of Wheatas Photography Studios will be in Tallahassee April 30 to interview students at the College of Arts who are interested in photographic work. These studios have large chains throughout the United States.

The representative is interested in talking to any student who is interested in work in photography, and must have a reasonable personal vision, or color. Any student who would like to have an interview with this representative should make arrangements in the Personnel office.

Alumnae Report

Far from Florida comes news of three FSC graduates who have been stationed in our two most important theaters of war, half way around the world from each other. They are Miss Meta Helms, Pacific area; Sarah Cox, Iran, and Lt Mary M Miller of the Mediterranean area.

Miss Meta Helms, Red Cross worker and graduate of Florida State College for Women, is home again after spending 18 months in the Southwest Pacific. She is helping to make life more pleasant for America's servicemen at the Richmond Army Air Base hospital.

When Miss Telms went overseas in February, 1943, she landed in Sydney, Australia. For six months she worked in Sydney, Brisbane, Melbourne and McKay in hospitals and clubs. Miss Helms was then sent to New Guinea to help build, staff, operate and maintain clubs all over the island. She spent 16 months on this island, an island ravaged by battle, and equipped with few of the facilities for comfort necessary toward good living conditions.

Before beginning her job overseas, Miss Helms was director of the City Recreation Department of Tallahassee and taught Physical Education in the Madison County public schools.

"Join the Army and see—your husband!" This is the slogan of Suzanne Harrison, member of the Women's Army Corps and 1941 graduate of Florida State College, who met her husband in early January in a hospital in the Philippines.

"They were really two happy people when I got them together," said Tom Stewart in a dispatch from the American Red Cross in Italy to Miss Louise Gehan, Student Alumnae secretary.

Since her arrival overseas in March, 1943, Mrs Harrison has worked in Red Cross clubs in North Africa, Sardinia, Corsica, and Italy. In her present assignment she is program director of a large enlisted men's club set up in a former palace in Leghorn, Italy.

Mrs Harrison says one of the most interesting of all activities she has started are the fencing classes. "This town is the home of fencing, and the man who instructs our classes four days a week was the champion of Italy in 1936. We have one class made up of 10 WAC's."

Her home is in Miami. Before coming here she was chief civic and publicity for the City Recreation department and was active in Red Cross activities there.

A promotion for a 1937 graduate of Florida State College took place when Second Lieutenant Mary M Miller of Orlando was awarded the Air Medal recently, where in the Italian theater of war.

Lt Miller is a hospital dietitian with the 17th General Hospital unit. Before her enlistment in the service she entered the service in June, 1943, she was employed as a therapeutic dietitian at Emory Hospital. Her sister, Mrs L C Wigglston, lives in Orlando. Lt Miller has two brothers in service, 1st Col Kenneth Miller, serving with the Army Air Corps, and Capt Roy A Miller, with the ATC in Cincinnati, Ohio; and WO Charles Miller is in the Navy, stationed in San Francisco.

Lt Miller has been overseas since July, 1943, serving in North Africa before moving to Italy.

FSC Alumnae Gained Recognition In Various Fields During Past Years

Many of the alumnae of Florida State College have gained vast recognition in the country.

In 1945 the Alumnae Association of Florida State College established the Award of Honor and Citation to be conferred upon those graduates of the college who have attained such recognition in their professional careers.

According to the provisions, achievement may be attained in the field of science, of liberal arts, of professional accomplishment, of civic and social service, and of distinguished service to the college.

Since this was started FSC has conferred one Alumnae Honorary Degrees and 15 awards of Honor upon her alumnae.

The two alumnae receiving Honorary Degrees were Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde and Rowena Lamar.

The first annual ceremony for conferring the Award of Honor was held by the Alumnae association at FSC on May 23, 1936, in the Augusta Conradi theatre. The Roll of Honor was as follows: Caroline La Pontaine McCollum, Diploma, 1901, for distinction in civic and public welfare; Shirley Virginia Long, A.B., 1907, A.M. 1908, for distinction in literary and professional accomplishment; Rowena Lamar, A.M. 1915, Honorary, FSCS Ph D, 1924, AM, 1922 (Chicago), for distinction in service to FSC; Irita Bradford VanDoren, AB, 1908, AM, 1909, for distinction in literary and editorial work; Clara McDonald Oliver, AB, 1914, AM, 1923, (University of Florida), for distinction in music; Mary Bailey Sloan, BS, 1918, MD cum laude, 1922, (Woman's Medical College of Philadelphia), for distinction in the profession of medicine.

The second annual ceremony for conferring the Award of Honor was held in the Augusta Conradi Theatre on May 29, 1937. Those alumnae honored were Eugenia Tatum Davis, Diploma, 1881, for distinction in the field of civic and social service; Carol Perrenot Lonsone, BM, 1912, for distinction in the field of music; Inez Ollis Heiseth, AB, 1914, AM, 1920, PhD (Columbia), for distinction in the field of education.

In 1938 there was chosen but one recipient for the award, Helen Mae Carter, who received her AM from FSC in 1914, and her Ph D from New York University in 1932. Dr Carter was honored for distinction in the field of science, with specialization in the province of home economics.

The fourth award recently received the award in 1939. She was a member of the class of 1918 graduation with an AB degree. She received her Ph D from Indiana University.

The Award of Honor was not conferred upon any alumnae in 1940. However, in 1941 the award was received by Mrs Beth Walton Moor for distinction in the field of civic and social service and for distinguished service to the college. Mrs Cecil Jenkins Beeson also received the award for distinction in the field of civic and social service and for distinguished service to the college.

In 1942 the award was made in 1942, but in 1943 Miss Mary Martini was honored with the award for distinction in the field of art etc. Miss Martini received her BS from FSC in 1918.

The year 1944 passed without conferment of the Award of Honor. It is yet to be seen whether or not any awards will be made this year.

Hebrew Volumes Are Given to Library

The Jewish Tri-State Sisterhood, including the Sisterhood of Temple Israel of Tallahassee, has given the library 10 volumes of Hebrew history and literature.

Rabbi Alex Goldstein, Mrs A J Gross and Mrs Ben Gilbery of Tallahassee presented the books on April 12. Among the volumes are the History of the Jews by Graetz, and a History of Jewish Literature by Dr Meyer Waxman, who has been called the greatest scholar in the field of Jewish arrangements. Members are asked to meet in front of the new dining hall at 5:30 p m for this event.

These volumes, as well as others received, will be on display as soon as they are catalored and ready for use. Seven years ago the Tri-State sisterhood made a gift to the library of some 15 volumes.

Five Officiate

Four physical education majors and one faculty member will go to Gainesville to officiate for the volleyball games of "Big Sports Day."

"Big Sports Day," sponsored by the P K Yonge school, will be held on the University of Florida campus for the schools of Gainesville.

Dance To Be Held

Broward Zell will hold a formal dance in Broward lounge, Saturday evening, April 21, from 8:30 to 11:30. The girls are asking their dates and a limited number of tickets have been sent to men in service.

Martha Abbott is chairman of the dance committee. Mary Nell McFadden, Sadie Campbell, Katy Bell Jones, and Mary Walker are working to make this dance an outstanding event of the Broward social program.

Interest Is Renewed In FSC Field Day

Sports Celebration Based On Inter-Class Rivalry

This year an interest in Field Day has been renewed. This day of sports will be classed as extra curricular activities in which the physical education majors ran set competition in this line as participants as well as directors.

Field Day on Florida State College campus was once a spring celebration of sports almost as big as the Seminole Barbecue and Thanksgiving, but because of the lack of participants in the last few years it has passed into oblivion.

The games played on Field Day, which will be held April 21 at 5 p m, will be based on inter-class competition and not individual competition. The athletic management of each class will be responsible for seeing that the class is represented. Each participant must have at least three sections points before being qualified to take part in the games. Practices will be held every day at 5 o'clock on the hockey field, but individual practice may be scheduled any time of the day. Those who practice for points must check with their athletic manager. Freshman check with Tommie Thompson; sophomores with Dorothy Lancaster and seniors, Anne Widerquist. Also, before the end of next week, all girls will be required to take the gym bulletin board for the events to be entered.

There will be major and minor events. Major events will be 50-yard dash, 75-yard dash, 200-yard relay, standing broad jump, running broad jump, shot put, and basketball throw. The minor events will be: three legged race, obstacle race, and basketball free throw. Students may enter three major and all minor events—or less.

All physical education majors are asked to practice all events and then enter the three of their choice. For participation in each major, can enter if they are in "A" health. Seniors majoring in physical education majors have charge of the meet.

Sims Is Elected President of Club

New officers of the Home Economics club were chosen in final elections Wednesday and will be presented at after dinner coffee May 9 in the Student Alumnae building. Grace Sims was elected president of the club, Esther Dale, vice-president, and Margaret Dannshower, secretary for the coming year.

Miss Edna McIntosh, assistant professor of foods and nutrition, will be faculty advisor. Bobbie Glenn, treasurer, Carolyn Flewellen, senior class representative; Barbara Irving, junior class representative, and Jo Parker, sophomore class representative. Barbara McKinney was chosen social chairman; Elisabeth Harper, publicity chairman, and Emily Harper, chairman of posters.

The annual tea for Master's Plantation is on the calendar of club activities for Thursday with Barbara McKinney in charge of arrangements. Members are asked to meet in front of the new dining hall at 5:30 p m for this event.

There are nearly 800 pulp and paper mills in the United States today.

FSC Students Voice Their Opinions On World Conference

The death of President Roosevelt has focused the public attention more strongly on the San Francisco Conference on April 25. A question in the minds of most of the people of the country is "What will be the result?" and one of the students is "What will be the results of this conference?"

Students have been asked what they hope will come out of the conference, and most of them said that there were so many things to be discussed that it was hard to be specific, but all of them had a few reforms in mind.

Rose Huntley, senior, remarked, "There is so much that I want to come out of it that it is hard to put it in a few words. Mainly, I guess, world peace and things like international trade."

"The biggest thing I'd like to see come out of any conference for the duration is that we find out about other countries and to need to be considerate of them and their ways," stated Georgia Jaeckel, freshman.

Dorothy Lancaster, junior, said "I think the real thing I want to see is peace. That is, no more wars. I don't care what means they use to insure it," while Ann Barnes, Sophomore stated "I'd like for them to decide what they're going to do with Poland and Italy after the War. They should come to a better agreement among themselves."

Dorothy Dodd, psychosis, which, I think, will have to be a revision of the Dumbarton Oaks Conference," was Margaret Baugh's junior, idea.

To Ruthe Grimsley, Dumbarton thinks "Peace, World security, and I hope an outcome that is better than that of the last war."

Particularly hope that from the San Francisco Peace Conference will evolve the cooperation and understanding necessary to maintain eternal peace among nations. But "mind it," remarked Alla Daniel, senior,

"Greater cooperation and understanding among the Allied powers concerning their basic aims. The basis for a stable world organization. The only necessary," Martha Abbott, sophomore thought.

Kirn Tells About Screen Paintings

At the opening of the display of serigraphs in the clubroom of the Student Alumnae building Wednesday, Miss Ann Kirn of the fine arts department spoke on the history and making of the silk screen paintings. In her talk, Miss Kirn expressed the hope of inspiring laymen to become interested in the making of serigraphs.

The exhibit, which is being sponsored by the Spring Arts Program of the AAUW, will be open to the public through tomorrow. On each day of the exhibit different members of the AAUW are serving as hostesses. Mrs Harold Richards is hostess for Thursday, and Mrs Guy L Diffenbaugh, today, and Mrs Arthur Seymour, tomorrow. In the coming two last Wednesday, Miss Margaret Rogers and Landis hall girls served as hostesses.

Anyone interested in buying copies of the serigraphs may order them through Miss Cynthia Reeves by sending a request to her through campus mail.

Corps Will Swim

Demonstrations will be given by the Senior Life Saving Corps for the freshman orientation swimming classes which are being held and will continue through the next five weeks.

The demonstrations will include the different kinds of strokes, safety measures in the water and water skills.

ARC Announces Aquatic Terms

Prompt Enrollment Necessary For Attendance at School

Immediate enrollment is essential for students and faculty members of Florida State College who wish to attend one of the three American Red Cross aquatic schools being conducted in the southeastern states this summer, according to American Red Cross headquarters in Atlanta.

Enrollment is expected to be closed soon due to the limited capacity of the schools, the announcement stated.

Conducted in vacation settings chosen for their natural facilities and equipment, the schools will offer 10-day instructor training courses in water safety, first aid and accident prevention. The first school begins May 26 at Northwestern State College, Natchitoches, La. the second at Camp Carolina, Brevard N C, on June 6. The third, a special lake instructor school will be held at Brevard on August 19 for the convenience of applicants who cannot attend the earlier ones.

The short-term all-around aquatic training, obtainable only in Red Cross aquatic schools, will be of especial interest to physical education majors and minors, and also prospective waterfront directors and summer camp counselors.

Red Cross instruction in each field will provide the institution. The courses are designed primarily to train instructors for Red Cross chapters, colleges and universities, youth and adult organizations, and organized summer camps. They combine study, discussion, demonstration and practice.

Subjects offered in water safety will be swimming, functional (military) swimming, diving, canoeing, boating, life saving and first aid. In first aid the courses will be junior, standard, advanced and instructor's first aid. The accident prevention study will include home, farm, water, farm and junior accident prevention courses.

Tuition for the school will be $35, which includes food, lodging registration and all material used. Applications should be made through the local chapter or Southeastern Area, American Red Cross, 230 Surlngt St, N E, Atlanta, Ga.

About 10,000 workers were killed in work accidents in 1944, and 23,500 killed in off-the-job accidents.

Campers Take Time To Relax and Play

With past burdens of study forgotten, with the ordeal of final exams and the end of school looming ever closer, and with the near-summer sun blazing warmer and warmer with each succeeding weekend, campers have flocked in ever-increasing numbers to Florida State College's camp-spot on Lake Bradford.

Some of a school-girl's most vivid memories have come from experience at camp. Things seem to happen at camp that could happen nowhere else. You catch yourself doing things that were heretofore unheard of, even in you. Waird things, like sand, toothpaste sandsnps, or even frogs may be put between strangely short sheets if you happen to be a weekender, and tie things: you do to other unfortunate campers' beds are even more weird. You learn canoeing or splashing around the lake in a canoe, just to be splashing around the lake is the hope. And then what? Sore muscles. You lie in the sun for hours, and when you apply the prescribed liberal coating of mineral oil, you can hear your skin frying like an egg. What for? A stealing sunburn? You sizzle happily in the lake, pomade floating limply about the head behind you. Why? Do you really like to look like a hag?

People have been known to go about wantonly catching baby turtles from the water's edge of course, they let them go again, and there has been a rumor to the effect that certain girls have went swimming in the moonlight, without benefit of bathing suits. One girl actually lost the top piece of her bathing suit, although this was quite unintentional and unexpected. Although one of the things college girls dream about on such trips is not having to get up early, a surprising number of them make a practice of paddling sleepily across the lake to observe the sunrise.

No, there's no explaining why people do the things they do at camp. There is undoubtedly something about the atmosphere of the camp that inspires them to such actions. For only those who have visited camp on a perfect day or weekend, or seen the lake and the sky the same shade of blue and divided only by the dark jagged line of cypresses, or felt the warmth of the sun on the winter-whitened back, can understand why one always returns to camp after the first visit.

3 Faculty Members To Attend Contest

Kuerstteiner, Davis, Winslow Will Judge Musicians

Three members of the School of Music have been asked to judge at the Young Artists' Contest, which will take place in Jacksonville on April 14. They are Mrs Mildred R Davis, voice and piano instructor, Miss Mary E Winslow, assistant professor of piano, and Mr Karl O Kuerstteiner, dean of the School of Music.

The Young Artists' Contest is sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs. Competitors in this contest will be young artists in the several branches of music, who are from the southeastern cashoard district of the United States. They have taken part in two contests prior to this one, and each will present a complete program rather than the usual single number.

The winners from each department will go next to New York, where they will compete with winners from other parts of the nation. A $1000 prize will be awarded the winner of this final contest of the series.

Mr Kuerstteiner announced that he has been offered, and has accepted, chairmanship of the Composers' section of the Florida Federation of Music Clubs. The Florida Federation contains over 100 clubs in all branches of music, and is affiliated with the National Federation of Music Clubs.

FSC Alumna Now In Mediterranean Area

"Seeing the Holy Land was like marching through the Bible. I'll never forget it." These are the words of Miss Janet W Cook, a member of the American Red Cross who was graduated from Florida State College in 1934.

The quotation is from a letter addressed to Miss Louise Gehan, alumnae secretary, and dated Tripoli, March 22.

Miss Cook, who was stationed in Cairo, Egypt, was there after a year and a half, she managed to get a two weeks leave and went til Palestine.

When she returned to Cairo, she was thunderrred to a spot "right on the shores of the Mediterranean." She says that she is looking forward to getting back home in July or August, and closes her letter with the words, "I think of Tally often".

Spirit of the Week

WHY DO THOSE PLANES FLY SO LOW?

● THE SOUTH STEPS FORTH

Commendations are certainly in order to a group of southern college students. Last weekend seventy-five delegates, both white and Negro, from fifty colleges in the South attended a conference at the University of North Carolina to discuss the part southern students can play in promoting world peace. Two of these delegates were appointed to be sent to San Francisco World Organization conference as observers.

This movement on the part of a student group is highly encouraging. Only seldom does a conference take place which has as its purpose the discussion of issues of such wide importance, and even more seldom do meetings of this nature have their origin in the much-criticized South. It is true that there are always small groups of students on college campuses whoare concerned enough to think about and study international problems and situations, but all too true seems to be the general apathetic air that prevails among the carefree college people.

Plans were made at this first session for the organization to become permanent with the hope that other regions of the United States will join the South in their efforts. With the return of the war veterans to the halls of learning, the colleges will increasingly come out of their vacuum and become much more world-minded than they have in the past. More and more, through the varied and enormous experiences these boys and girls have had, students will be capable of taking stands and making decisions. One is safe in venturing that immaturity will be less a prevalent characteristic of the college student.

There at the conference, too, it seems that democracy was actually put into practice. Delegates were students who were concerned with what should happen in a future world, and not with the color of the skin of the person on his right or left. It is hard to believe that it happened here, but one of the delegates appointed to attend the conference at San Francisco was a Negro veteran of this war who is now a student at Meharry Medical College.

We are glad that Florida State was represented at such a conference It is our hope that this is only the beginning of many more similar meetings and action on the part of American students to show that they do have interests that reach beyond the foothall stadium.

● WE TURN TO TRUMAN

The eyes of the students of this country as well as those of the citizens are forced on our nation's new president, Harry S Truman. He has before him a great task which he must complete in accordance with the unfinished ideals of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Although the people of America have regarded President Roosevelt's death as one of the greatest catastrophes that could have occurred to our nation, President Truman has indicated that he is capable of carrying on the job.

During his brief one-week span as the nation's highest leader, he has indicated that the country will not falter under his command.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the House of Commons and President Truman was "a successor who came forward with a firm step and sure conviction to carry on the task to its appointed end."

Mr Truman's new job is one that will receive more criticism than praise. Only the forthcoming months can show how he will cope with the problems of war, peace and national policies.

In his address to the Armed Forces, Mr Truman quoted Lincoln, who he says, had enough eloquence to speak for all America. "With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the Nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borns the battle, and for his widow, and his orphans— to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves, and with all nations."

● PRACTICAL SURVEY

While political tenders busy themselves with plans to make work to provide employment for returning service men and those now engaged in war work, the City of Daytona Beach recently conducted a survey to determine just what conditions would exist in that community como V-day.

A Chamber of Commerce survey was conducted in which 20 percent of the communitics population was actually interviewed. All classes of citizens were contacted.

The results of the survey were interesting. It was revealed that approximately $3,892,500 was earmarked by citizens for the purchase of new cars. $2,093,500.00 for building of new homes and $500,000.00 for painting and repairs.

The survey determined the approximate number of radios, refrigerators, vacuum cleaners and many other household and office appliances that residents planned to purchase as soon as restrictions were lifted and they became available.

From this information it was possible to estimate the amount of labor that would be employed, the amount of material that would be needed and the number of sales that might normally be expected in many lines.

Such a survey provides invaluable information and if conducted by other communities ought to give a very clear picture of V-Day prospects in Florida.

Short Change

Tra la la, spring has sprung the flowers has ris and we're wondering when vacation is. Let's see spring when everyone wants to duck out of classes and just sleep and sleep. Let's see this annual spring feeling get us down. Instead of taking a tonic we should follow our animals: read our column.

A few profound statements—

All students at Agnes Scott are urged to wear blue jeans as much as possible. Faculty members say they apply their college as droop hat does Stetson, as sloppy overalls do Wellesly.

They maintain that blue jeans show their cooperation with war efforts. They last longer, they say, and they look much better on everybody. "It's not the clothes you have, it's the way you wear them that matters," said one wise sage.

The Students Speak . . .

Because the Flambeau has recently been placed in the hands of a new staff and because we want to consult with students, this week's column is open for suggestions to the question, "What type subjects do you want to have discussed in this column"?

"I think subjects that are of interest and importance to the college girls should be discussed. We should have an opportunity to express in writing our views on such subjects as student government, co-education, and the like. Since this column consists mainly of student opinions, the subjects that affect them should be used."
ALENE GOODMAN.
Freshman.

"I would like discussed in one issue something of importance such as the student body, by this time in the college government. As a freshman I would like to know more about the offices of the college government and the work that they do for the college."
MILDA FERNANDEZ.
Freshman.

"I think different students should be able to give their unbiased opinion on the various controversial subjects of this campus. In a college of this size there are many individual as well as group opinions and each student would be better off if she could see and understand the other students' viewpoints, regardless of whether she approves of it or not."

Talk about absent minded professors, here's one case when a student went and reared for the faux pas of the semester. It all happened when a conscientious student at Western Michiean college decided to filter a solution that was contaminated almost entirely of sulphuric acid (concentrated) For a while he just couldn't figure out why the filter paper disappeared.

He: "Hello, I've been calling for hours."

She: Oh, I've been at church all morning."

He: "Oops. Wrong number."

Cop "No parking. You can't loaf here."

Voice from rear: "Who's loafin'?"

No matter how hard you study these days, the profs will get you if you don't watch out. A bewildered student went up to Prof. Jens Dehsan of Michiean State college the other day to find out what on earth he had given him for a philosophy test. It seems that an absent-minded prof had crept in, and there she was confronted with question on manic depressive.

Magazine Jottings . . .

By MARGARET SHEDD

In this article Margaret Shedd, who has spent many years in Mexico and other Latin American countries gives an analysis on one of the many political elements which are striving to control Mexico. There is a need to understand Mexico's political turmoils for whatever elements gain control of the postwar Mexican government may well control the rest of Latin America.

"The eight year old Sinarquismo element is not a party," says Miss Shedd. "but an armed political movement based on the leadership, or jefe, principle." Its acknowledged purpose is to demolish the present government and its ultimate goal accordating to a pamphlet written by Juan Ignacio Padilla is a corporate clerical state

Background

Although the Sinarquismo movement was organized under the aegis of a German professor at the University of Guanajuato, the roots are as old as Mexico itself. The followers and leaders alike, like the peons exited in the poor shall always remain in poverty and the rich in wealth. Funds for the organization were first secured from local Nazis. The real drivers are still unknown but the visible leaders are young and come from the leisure class. The headquarters are in Mat. Santa Ana, Iterbide and Cortes.

The Sinarquismo present today consists of one half to one million men, well-trained and disciplined. Their leader is Salad, Miss Shedd, but no discussions or votins is allowed. The elements of secrecy and self-sacrifice are of prime importance.

The two principal reasons which Miss Shedd gives for the success of the Sinarquistas are the organization functions of Saints and Saints and the appeal which the leaders have been able to make to the peasants. The Sinarquista method is where the government project for the distribution of land has not yet been successful. A cleverness of method is another important factor importance but also have succeeded in turning them against each other.

The Sinarquistas have opposed completely Mexico's government said "is the war and on the whole they have maintained a consistent line of criticism about the United States. In April, 1944, they began rallying the Yankees and hating the Russians. In October of the same year Miss Shedd says the Sinarquistas turned against the U S and violently against Protestantism.

The fallacies and fallacies of the news letter agencies are discussed at length in an article which appeared in the March issue of the Alantic Monthly.

Walter Lippmann in his prediction about forecasters Mr Wecter says that prophecy of the future is not the province politics will during and after this war almost completely dominate the international horizon, selling and stock market predictions. The service of news letters were first started by men like John Moody. James H Brookmire and Roger Babson who were trained in journalism and statistics. They attempted to antiquate the hazards of the future by charting curves, compiling manuals and drawing conclusions. In the front of the First World War, says Mr Wecter, the news agencies sought to please their public by printing forth "forecasters' with the crisp air of communique and "barometer charts' that were less meteorological than clinical in their foretells. One got a lot of the pressure of 1929 which discredited many of the prophets who had so confidently drawn conclusions in order to give out confidence and optimism.

There exists a way of ascertaining future developments by eliminate the news and the news—a system which held over from the period of wartime censorship. In 1918 the late Walter Lippmann, Percival Wisley and Henry Eaton, formed a service which during the war service has a "checkered" record. "Unlikely enough," says the author "Wisley's confidential bulletin on the historic date of December 6, 1941, was devoted to minimizing the momentary situation in the Far East . . ."

Following the experiences of the Whaley-Eaton service Willard Kiplinger's Washington Newsletter and financial writer started in 1920 his "Washington Letters" which, despite its many mistakes has thrived and is today, according to Mr Wecter giving "valuable service, advising those who want or have war contracts, discriminating. Information about Federal controls and regulations that local newspapers miss, and explaining tax laws in a popular style."

Jottings . . .

Franklin Delano Roosevelt has died in body but not in spirit. For the ideal of the man to whom the world had come to look upon as a democratic bulwark against fascism are realized today to be the guide to permanent peace among nations. It is well then, in passing, that as the United Nations so ever closer toward victory, to remember tha President's last message to the people:

"The only limit to our realizations of tomorrow will be our doubts of today. Let us move forward with strong and active faith."

Advances in Germany

On the European front, Germany victory has been bisected. The Allied strategy has been: drive ahead at several points, join forces at an advanced point, thus encircle and trap enemy troops which would otherwise present strong face-to-face opposition and whittle down these encircled troops while driving ahead into enemy territory. That the Allied command has used this plan to a great degree of success in the west is shown by the capture and push ahead to the Elbe, Saar and the Ruhr. It is this latter push around the "pocket" which resulted in the dissection of German troops in the northern area of the Reich from uniting with those in the southern area to make it impossible to join in the southern mountain resion.

While Allied armies are driving ahead in the north and west and with the Russians, American units are mopping up Nazi "pockets" in the south and east. British tanks have broken into the cities of Leipzig and Nurnburg as a 22-mile sweep that carried within 25 miles of the great port of Hamburg. Patton, in command in the Ruhr still held by the Germans, also was entered by American soldiers who now have whittled down the Ruhr pocket to 125 square miles from the original 3,000 square miles.

The American Third Army, headed by General George S Patton, has stabbed to a point within 60 miles of Czechoslovakia's Bohemian border, with its lead column of tanks under a news blackout. To the south the Seventh Army, continuing with Russian positions on the Danube, is within 20 miles of Berlin in two sectors while another Soviet force spearheaded in he "Nazis" southern escape corridor through Austria.

Moscow has maintained silence on the operations along the 150-mile front from the Bohemian border to the Oder estuary, except proclaiming in a late communique that all of the remaining area of the Samland peninsula, in east Prussia, except the escape port of Pillau has been captured.

Radio Berlin said the Oder offensive was clutching at Berlin from the northeast, east and southeast. Soviet troops crossed the river west of Zehden was reported sending tanks to the main Berlin-Stettin road, 18 miles from the German capital.

COLLEGIATE COMEBACKS

We bravely battle through the chins [illegible] and at last it wasn't morning and afternoon, and it is so discouraging. We don't mind having our toes stepped on and our ears pierced, but when one of our eyes poked by various and sundry elbows. We don't even notice being bumped unexpectedly, but when we are shoved into our mail box on the bottom row. Our box isn't empty by any means. That would be too simple. The only trouble is that the mail in it is always for our roommates except for the notices to appear at the Registrar's office. It was some sort of pun about not minding the male shortage if there was more girls. But I'm not going to be intellectual to stoop to that. We'll just stop.

One girl we know is biting her lip to a bloody pulp and trying to smile courageously at the same time. too! over her almost unfathomable trials. She got a letter from a sweet little Navy man who said he was sending her a picture. She haunted the post office every day looking for it and her heart jumped as it arrived. She hurried back to her room so she could gaze in peace on his rare smile and dreamily sigh. When she opened it she was at a progress picture of her sweetman's ship. She's trying to comfort herself by saying that it is really flattering because his ship does mean more to him than anything else—and at least it wasn't a picture of a pin-up girl. Let's have a minute of silence while we will all be thankful for small favors.

One of our more clever friends won't be around for a few days. She didn't like to be completely ready for a class one day so she pulled off early to the infirmary for a few hours rest on account of her cold. They sent her back to her room for her things, and told her to prepare to stay there for a few days. She has sinus troubles. She is just another example of true Southern hospitality.

At times life seems dreadfully complicated, but we think we have found a complete four word summary of our war-time activities. Just ask any soldier, sailor, marine, war-worker, or college girl —life, pure and simple is "Hurry up and wait." Hurry up and get

If you smell something burning don't be alarmed. It's only the flesh of an hour which is expiring toward a glorious end. We will look so well in that new white dress. Better watch it, children of the sun. You might get in the mouth. We know. We did. We should see us now. Ugh! What a mess. Who said, "What fools we mortals be?"

Press Club

A meeting of the Press Club will be held Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Flambeau office, to elect a new president, it was announced by Betty Dowd, secretary.

The former president, Doris Pepper, has withdrawn from school.

Tickets Available

A special opportunity will be given this afternoon from 4 until 5 o'clock in the Student Alumnae building to obtain artist series tickets for the Ruth Page performance on Monday evening. Those who are on the A (red) series may procure their tickets at this time.

Sorority Chit-Chat

This week Wakulla Springs is the most popular spot for sorority and pledge outings. The entire chapter of A D Pi went to Wakulla Springs last Wednesday and spent the morning to spend the day. Mrs Barrel, their house mother, was chaperone the picnic. Last Wednesday was Founder's Day for Alpha Xi Delta members. In honor of the occasion they had breakfast together at the Apalachee hotel.

Miss Eileen Nord, mother of one of the members, who is from Ocala has been visiting the city for several days. She, Mrs Nord, the Alpha house mother, and all the members went out to the play last Sunday afternoon.

Tri Delta Rose

A Tri Delta Corporation meeting was held last Saturday afternoon at the house. Afterwards Carole Degree of Initiation was given to qualified alumnae from all over the state.

Mrs Frank Bisbee, district president from Jacksonville, came here last Thursday to take part in the Corporation.

In honor of Mrs Olive Cross, new faculty advisor of Tri Delta, a faculty tea was held on Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the house.

Tomorrow Mrs Morgan, the Kappa Delta house mother during night for members, pledges and their friends. It was a buffet supper, and the serving tables were in the yard. Jeanette Chapman and Clara Nolan were in charge of arrangements.

The arrangement committee is composed of Betty Hunter, Jean Longstreth, and Sylvia Berkmon. On the food committee are Eddie Pat Stokes, Mary Ellen Scarborough, Zilda Hastings, Alma Hamilton, and Tommy Kobozayski. Betty Speer and Rutil Mary Bliss are in charge of the Hawaiin arrangements.

Serving on the banquet committee are Anne McInnes, Shirley Glover, Lucile Matthews, Jo Melvin, Margaret Cook, Mary Ellen Miller, and Mae Diamandes. Peggy Lou Thomas and Neva Delgado will direct the entertainment on Sunday morning.

Joy Little, vice president of the classics club, is in charge of the outing. She has requested that all members attend. Time for the outing meet promptly at 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon on back of Bryan hall. Rain or shine will return Sunday afternoon.

Chaperones for the outing will include Dr Odivia N Dorman, dean of students; Miss Edith W West, associate professor of classics, and Miss Lynette Thompson, instructor in classics.

Classics Club Plans Weekend at Camp

The Classics club will leave for camp Flastacowo at two o'clock Saturday afternoon to begin a week-end which will include games and sports, a Saturday night banquet, and a Sunday devotional.

Committees which have made progress for the outing are as follows: Jane Anderson, publicity; Dorothy Lide, chairman; Rose McLain, Kay Moore, Nell Caro, Barbara Wickham, and Lillian Pagen. Joy Little is chairman of the entertainment committee which includes Helen Ross, Betsy Zurelle, Suzenie Anders, and Betty Jo Bachle.

Apologies

Kappa Delta received honorable mention for their slow song in the Pan-Hellenic Sing rather than Alpha Gamma Delta, as indicated in last week's Flambeau.

Annual Breakfast Changed to Supper

Because of the war the annual Sophomore-Senior breakfast will be a supper this year, announced Harriet Kirk, chairman of the affair. It will be held on April 27 in the old dining hall.

This year for the first time sophomores will be allowed to come without senior sisters since there are more sophomores than seniors. The theme is a secret but the chairman said that it would be unusual.

The committees for the supper besides the chairman are as follows: Nell Clark and Ann Colvin, silk; Frances Traxler, decorations; Nancy Ward, tickets; Martha Abbott, food, and Barbara Wickham, publicity.

Tickets for the supper will be on sale soon in lower Westcott and the chairman urged all of the sophomores and seniors to get their tickets early.

42 of Poet's Books Sold on Campus

During the week that Mr Robert Frost was on campus the Maine poet, was on campus the book store sold its entire stock of books which amounted to about 42.

Ballads of Square Toed Americans and Complete Poems by Be Bread and Love proved to be the books most favored by the girls. However, during the week a year Maine Ballads has ranked with There Will Be Bread and Love as his most popular books.

In addition to the above mentioned books the book store sold copies of Books of Uncles, Captain Abbey and Captain John, Lost Paradise, Mainstays of Maine, Primer of America, Salt Water Ballads, Singing Sailor, Singing Salt Water Farm, Strange Holiness, Substance That Is Poetry by Thomas Francis Hornady and Thomas.

Beard To Play

Ramona Cruikshank Beard gave an organ recital at the University of Florida Sunday.

Her program included two Bach numbers, "Fantasia and Fugue in G" and "Sheep May Safely Graze."

The remainder of the program was composed of the Con moto maestoso and andante movements from Mendelssohn's "Sonata in A major," "Lamentation" by Guilmant, "Preiude-Toccata" by Pierne, Rene's "Joyful stella la portun," the "L'Arlequin" by G B Nevin, and Yon's "Hymn of Glory."

Council Ushers

The newly selected members of Sophomore Council performed their first official duty, Saturday morning at 11 a.m. when they ushered at the memorial service held for the late President Roosevelt.

At the present time, Jean Cole is acting as chairman of the group until they elect a new one for the coming year.

Their immediate duties lie in ushering at flag dedication next Tuesday and helping with the sophomore-senior supper.

Soldier Dance Held

Last Friday night the last soldier dance of the year was held in the Student Alumnae building, with the music furnished by the college swing band. Quite a large crowd attended the dance which was strictly informal and only for upperclassmen.

Dance Concert Tonight in Westcott

Program Features Original Dance Compositions

A spring concert of contemporary dances will be given in Westcott auditorium tonight at 8:15 p m. Directed by Miss Margaret Clements, instructor in physical education, the program will feature original dance compositions presented by the advanced and beginning modern dance groups.

"Greetings" to the music of "Holiday for Strings" given by the advanced group will open the performances. The stylized action of a machine will then be depicted by the beginning group in a dance entitled "Machine Age" composed by Miss Calispe Papatsos, instructor in physical education. A "Doll Dance" will follow, portraying two dolls in a toy shop who come to life and enjoy a flirtation during the absence of the toy keeper. An interpretation of Brahms' "Hungarian Dance Number Five" will conclude the first portion of the program.

"The Dawn of Day", "Those Low Down Blues" and "Bolero" will then be presented, followed by "Street Scene", interpreting a series of popular songs. The advanced dance group will conclude the program with "Rhapsody in Blue" to the music of Gershwin's composition. This dance, composed by Miss Clements, will portray a kaleidoscope of American dance.

Members of the advanced dance group who will participate in the program are Catherine Barrs, Muriel Copinus, Hasnilla Parrior, Carolyn Forehand, Jo Guthrie, Sarah Lewis, Nancy MacEdwards, Mary Louise Perry, Margie Platt, Alice Tarr, Marion Welch and Ann Widerquist.

Book Club Elects

The Book Club, sponsored by the Bookstore Wells staff, elected officers for the coming year at the recent meeting, April 6, in the club room of the Rovena Longstre Alumnae building. The officers who will take over their duties next fall will be: Mrs Winifred Dodge, chairman; Miss Edith McCollum, program chairman, and Miss Lella Allen, social chairman.

College Hothouse Grows Plants, Flowers for Year-Round Needs

The greenhouse, located about one thousand yards west of Lanton, is one of those campus institutions whose effects are seen daily about campus, but whose self seems to know anything about it.

"Gardening," said Mr Herman, gardener at the greenhouse, "is just like any other agricultural work, but you must be a little more particular with the details of soil, location, method and time of planting."

At present there is nothing much growing in the greenhouse itself, for the weather is now warm enough for the plants to be grown outside. The only plants that are grown in the greenhouse are those that actually cannot stand the harsh winter weather, and enough out-of-season plants to insure an adequate supply of flowers through the winter. Calendulas, larkspur and snapdragons are started in August in the greenhouse so that they will bloom in December.

The greenhouse is only a protection against frost said Mr Herman, and not insurance against freezing, for flowers have several times been frozen during severe cold spells. He plans soon to clear the greenhouse and work and fertilize the soil to prepare it for next winter.

The main gardens are located on the north side of the greenhouse and the flowers have begun to bloom in earnest with the coming of spring and warmer weather. Golden California poppies, varicolored phlox, and snapdragons, and pastel larkspur are the main attractions, and zinnias, asters and gladioli are expected to bloom within the next two weeks. Day lillies and lemon lillies are blooming very prolifically here as well as in plots about campus.

An interesting fact about both the day lily and the common poppy is that a new set of blooms opens each morning, closes at night, and never reopens.

Over half of the garden space is given over to the cultivation of many varieties of roses, among which is one white bush that came as a sport from a very old red one growing in the garden. Mr Herman has lately acquired the patented rose-bushes: "Madame Chiang Kai-shek" a white hybrid rose, "Smoke Dance," a lovely deep rose shade, and "Miranda," a velvety black-red color. These are not to be used for grafting purposes, and the flowers will be used only for special occasions on campus.

He has also gotten a number of well-known varieties for grafting stock, among them "Dainty Bess," a light pink, "Luxembourg" salmon, "Edith McFarland," bright pink. "Kaiserin Viktoria," the only true white flower, and "Paul's Scarlet," a fiery red. There is a separate garden exclusively for Radianee roses of all colors, and several rows of Etoile de Hollande, a huge deep red rose. Mr Herman does his own grafting on the roots of the Japanese honeysuckle vine which is also grown in the garden.

A few flowering shrubs are also grown about the garden, gardenias, camellias, honeysuckle, and pyracampher, which has a fragrant white bloom in summer and a bright red berry in winter.

One of Mr Herman's prime is a real orchid plant. It frose this winter, he said, and he clipped off a large part of it. Soon after, however, it bore six orchid blooms on one of the naked stalks and eight on the other!

Parkside Residents Hold Wiener-Roast

Residents of Parkside dormitory were entertained at a wiener-roast in the backyard last Saturday night by Mrs J B Barksdale, house mother. Refreshments, and boards supplied sitting place around the fire, and place cards and flowers were used in the decorations. The group played games after roasting marshmallows and wieners over the open fire.

Committees in charge of wiener-roast were: Gloria Hughs and Edna Earle Baker, food chairmen; Eloise Roddenberry, in charge of decorations; Nilda Fernandez, fire; Peggy Pearson, Gladys Collins, and Jo Mingola, placecards, and Helen MacDonald directed the games.

Outing Committee To Elect Officers

There will be a meeting of the outing committee next Tuesday night at 7:30 in the Student Alumnae clubroom to elect officers for the coming year.

Amarine Thompson, recently elected sports manager of next year's sophomore class, automatically replaces Maxine Warner as chairman of the outing committee.

Plans will be discussed at this meeting for another outing at Wakulla Springs within the next two weeks. A poster will appear on the bulletin board in Westcott giving the details and exact time of this outing at a later date.

Also under discussion will be plans for next year, including the WAA Handbook, which will have the names of the outing committee officers printed in it. According to Amarine, there will be at least one outing every month next year.

Murray Speaks

An informal discussion over which Miss Ellen Murray presided was the main event at the Broward tea Wednesday afternoon. Miss Murray, instructor in history here at Florida State College, related very informally the customs and many traditions of St Andrews University in Scotland, where she attended school. The talk was based on the social customs of the students there and Miss Murray compared them to the social life here on the FSC campus.

55 Trays Added

The card catalog has been extended by 55 new trays. Between 200 and 300 new guide cards have been added, and the trays have been reiettered outside.

The new section put to student use had formerly been used by the librarians for the shelf catalog. There is still another section which may be converted into card catalog space when it becomes necessary.

Over 240,000 cards had to be moved in the rearranging of the cards in the new and old trays.

Enthusiastic Students Throng Capitol for Co-Ed Controversy

No doubt everyone has noticed the sudden appearance of students dressed in their "Sunday best," attending classes and hurrying across the campus. In fact this burst of enthusiasm has been noticeable since the beginning of the 1945 session of the State Legislature. Students have shown decided interest in their state government with many being present at committee meetings and the regular convening of both houses and looking as if they had "just stepped out of band box," commented a member of the House.

At a joint committee meeting of co-education held in the Senate chamber the afternoon of April 11 students filled every nook and cranny and even "standing room only" was available. Representators and representatives seached the faces of its unusual audience which were expressive and responsive to the various speeches and comments. Groans ensued at portions of else, and explosive applause resounded throughout the chamber.

After the meeting had adjourned the group stood in the aisles, representatives and senators to gain more information meet their home town members, and make known their personal views on the subject. Such remarks were heard as "I've just got to meet my Senator" and "Do you really think he'll reconcine me?" as the students combed the Capitol building.

After the students had deserted and quietness once more reined, notice might have been made of the quantity of empty packs of cigarettes and candy bars, but whose disappearance was probably only somewhat to the public sense of "gremlins." These gremlins have been known for years to lobbyists, and "goats" (appearing in classes with heels, hats and other accessories.)

Recitals Scheduled

The Speech Department will open a series of Spring Recitals Thursday, April 19, at 8:00 p m in the Conradi theatre. The public is cordially invited to attend these recitals.

Joint Junior recitals will berin with Barbara Holt and Maurine Twiry on Thursday, April 19, followed by Bonnie Hunt and Sara Norman on Thursday, April 26.

Senior recitals are scheduled for Friday, April 26 with Sana Jane Taylor followed by Betty Lewis on Monday, April 30, and Betty Lou Christian on Thursday, Nov 2.

Club Will Elect

Nominations for offices of the Classical club were made Wednesday night at the last table in Gilchrist dining hall by the present officers: Peggy Lou Thomas, president; Joy Little, vice-president; Dorothy Luke, secretary, and Betty Speer, treasurer.

Nominations will remain open and the election will be held the early part of next week, according to Joy Little.

The nominations for next year's officers are Anne Mac Inness, for president; Betty Hunter, for vice president; Ruby Pate, for secretary and Lucile Matthews, for treasurer. Nominations for bulletin board chairman was Kay Moore ,and for publicity chairman, Mary Ellen Scarborough.

Texas A & M Plans Postwar Education

Twin Goals Include Shorter Training in Schools

College Station, Tex.—(IP)—A Twin postwar goals of Texas A and M College are to provide short, practical education for tens of thousands of Texans, including war veterans, who otherwise would not have such schooling, and to conduct intensive research for the benefit of Texas agriculture and industry, according to President Gibb Gilchrist.

A postwar program of technical education at A and M-sponsored schools scattered over Texas, similar to those through which the college has trained more than 25,000 war workers, was outlined by Gilchrist. It is contemplated that three new centers will cover 65 mechanical fields and as many or more in agriculture, he said.

"In these local schools," he said, "we propose to give young men a two-year terminal course divided between general educational subjects and vocational training. The work will not be preparatory to any higher study." The president pointed out that of the freshman class of 1941, three-fourths did not fall to finish school.

"For instance, we want to teach boys how to be better salesmen, better technical men—to fill the gap between the common laborer and the highly trained professional man," Gilchrist said.

Texas A and M Research foundation, recently chartered, already has received $100,000 for industrial research. Research activity at the college includes acquisition of 3196 acres of land on the Brazos river for demonstration and experiments in agriculture, and the establishment of a department of range management. Texas has 132,000,000 acres of range lands and this is the first time any institution in the state has attempted to train ranchers, President Gilchrist commented.

A constitutional amendment will be offered the state legislature by the college board of directors, calling for issuance of $5,000,000 in bonds for a postwar A and M building program. In addition, the school now has $400,000 annual oil income for repair and renovation of existing buildings, the president continued.

A and M's military science branch has been elevated from the rank of a department to that of a school, he said, looking toward training regular army officers if such a program is approved by congress. "We feel that some form of military service will be enacted, and we're going to be ready for it."

The college engineering and agriculture schools now are headed by vice presidents, and there is for the first time a full-time director of student affairs under whom the former responsibilities of 12 to 15 individual officials are consolidated.

Another new adjunct is the college aeronautical foundation, centered around a wind tunnel and laboratory now under construction, and the college's millions-dollar airport, largest in the United States under college ownership, Gilchrist said.

ALD Selects New Officers

Honors Freshmen With High Scholarship

Alpha Lambda Delta, national scholastic honorary society for freshman women and branch of Phi Beta Kappa, elected officers for the coming year yesterday at its first meeting since initiation of 81 new members in initiation, celebrated last Wednesday night after which members attended a banquet in the dining hall, followed a convocation when the girls were first recognized by being called to the stage.

Marsha Peacock was chosen president of the organization; Juanita Krentzman, vice-president and Lallie Rogers, secretary. Iris Parsons will serve as treasurer, and Adrienne Blumberg, as historian for the coming year.

Alpha Lambda Delta, first founded at the University of Illinois in 1924 by the National Council of Deans of Women, was established on the campus of Florida State College for Miss Agnes Ellen Harris, dean of women, as national counselor at that time and formerly a member of the home economics department at Florida State. The pledging of 19 charter members here took place on October 17, 1941. Only freshmen are required to maintain a 2.5 average throughout college but it was decided that the local chapter would have to make a 3.5 average the first semester of their freshman year.

The initiates for this year are: Betty Fielding, Winifred Lane, Annie Dias, Juanita Krentzman, Mary Louise Folsom, Dolores Arias, Laura Lee Butler, Margaret Stingfellow, Connie Bake, Ruth Hamby, Jane Cullen, Adrienne Blumberg, Joyce Petty, Elaine Segal, Audrey Evans, Josephine Sloty, Maud Partridge, Pat Pattishall, Lola Ann Narver, Jean Rogers, Lucy Felden, Anne Singleton, Martha Jo Dunaean, Iris Parsons, Adeline Yess Martha Furgerson, Betty Sue Gray, Elinor Gresholm, Maude Bradley, Mary Ann Herring, Martha Peacock, Connie Savage, Beulah Tilton, Fay Bass, Aenn Lindsey, Leah Selzer, Catherine Sullivan, Lela Marilyn Van Netta, Rita Gendzier, Irma Lee Shepherd, and Barbara McCarthy.

Aiken Attends Chapel Hill Conference

lins College in Winter Park and Bethune College in Daytona Beach, as well as FSC, participated in discussion which centered about the part students can play in the formation of peace in individual schools, in the organization and in the nation as a whole.

In reference to endorsement of the Dumbarton Oaks peace plan, the conference recommended that an international Bill of Rights be incorporated in the plan, that there be a complete check-up followed by any necessary revisions after a five-year period and that the general assembly of the proposed league of nations be permitted to function on matters before the security council, according to Pat Aiken. Stating that this peace plan constitutes the minimum requirements for a political setup that would prevent future wars, it also suggested that the term "peace-loving nations" be more clearly defined, she said in reporting measures decided upon at the conference.

The delegates elected to represent the organization at the San Francisco conference are Douglas Hunt, law student at the U of NC and a leader in planning the student meeting and Sat Clifford, medical student at Meharry Medical College and a veteran of overseas duty. These representatives will report back to students at southern colleges the proceedings as seen through the eyes of the student.

The permanent organization, which will be called the Conference of Southern Students, will consist of all colleges in the South, headed by an executive council which will be composed of the president, executive secretary-treasurer and 13 representatives, one from each state in the southeast division.

Concerning the purpose of this organization Pat Aiken stated, "It was the concensus of opinion at the meeting that the students in the colleges and universities of the country have a vital part to play in the coming peace, and consequently they should demonstrate an active interest in the planning o fthe peace. It was considered important that the youth of the South set up some permanent means by which they can be informed of the decisions particularly relevant to their interests, and through which they can influence, to some small measure at least, the peace planners themselves. It was for these reasons that the organization was held in

Varied Souvenirs From Abroad Are Library Features

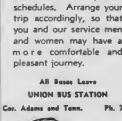
This past week, ' book shelf in the library a the display cases have features information concerning both allied and enemy countries.

Articles on display from England, France, Belgium and Holland have been lent to the library by Lt Col McRory. These include: a "swoon bottle" from England which was probably used about 1835, a hand-painted blue cup from Holland, a bedside pocket watch stand from England, and a .am's horn silver-mounted snuff box with the inscription, "John Bullar, from his friend William Collins, R A, February 29, 1844." On display, too, is a snuff box for table use, and one for individual use.

An old French book dated 1738, and two French franc notes, "Insasion money" are featured in the lower case. Also, there is a piece of metal from a German dubbed Venezuela Wrasco 2, which fell on September, 1944, in the vicinity of Liege, Belgium. A pewter cup and saucer from the quarters of Von Schiben in charge of the defense of Cherbourg when it fell to the Allies in June of 1944, is also featured.

Mrs Hunter P McKey, assistant librarian, placed several articles sent to her by her husband in the library for display.

These include red and blue fabric candle shoes worn by Italian women together with shoes of rubber and leather, a hand-wrought filigre bracelet, a pair of scissors, a crucifix, and a coral necklace.



Promote active student interest in international peace, to stimulate thinking in regard to the attainment of that peace, and to establish a permanent organization through which southern students can work more constructively toards peace in the most effective way."

"The rules for organization of the conference were as follows," the communique stated, "president will hold office for one year, and serve as the official head of the organization. A permanent chairman of the executive committee and acting on ideas submitted by the secretary-treasurer will hold office for two years, and will be a student at the University of North Carolina. This was considered necessary in view of the fact that permanent records, kept by the secretary, should remain in a particular place. It is the primary function of the secretary-treasurer to disseminate material among the members of the conference. The state representatives, in addition to serving on the executive committee, will call meetings within the individual states when it is deemed necessary.

"It was further decided that there be annual meetings of the southern students, and that we work towards the establishment of similar organizations in other parts of the country, and eventually a national group of students vitally and actively interested in the formation of a plan for peace will insure permanency."

William Rittenhouse set up the first paper mill in America in 1690, near Philadelphia.

Ignored at Sophomore Council Tapping, Murphree Freshmen Start Unique Club

Never say the Jennie Murphree girls aren't on the ball! Not, at least, until you hear what they've done now. It's a new club which arose spontaneously out of the fact that not one of the girls living on the third floor of Jennie made Sophomore Council. It's a rather unique organization in that it doesn't exactly have a name, it keeps no records, it has no great, soul-filling ideal or purpose, and its officers stay elected on the average of one day.

Members, who are all those living on the third floor, were formally and officially tapped on the next night after Sophomore Council tapped. Its "pin" consists of two matches, which represent two of the three torches of Sophomore Council, and their meaning is that two torches are down, and the third is being carried. Its motto is "Two Down, One to Carry." Its tree is the weeping willow, and its flower is the last rose of summer. The two theme songs of the organization are "I Don't Want to Set the World on Fire," and "Maybe It's Better This Way," paraphrased on the sour "How Little We Know" from the movie "To Have and Have Not." Everyone's name is Tess (remember, "Tess's Torch Song"?)

Election of officers was a prize of expediency. Elections were held at last limit flash, and all those who stuck their heads out their doors were appointed to an office.

Teeny Langston, third floor counselor, said, "We had so many bids to our little organization, but it's strictly third-floor."

Waist Line Concern Is Not the Reason For Salad Servings

Some Florida State College girls have been very pleased with the presence of a number of salads in the menu at the dining room lately, but others have voiced a loud and lusty disagreement. It has been observed, that from the figure standpoint, a strict diet of salads wouldn't hurt a green many but some still feel they are being slighted if they sit down to a meatless meal more than once a day.

The dining room hasn't been leaving out meats from the menu because it was concerned over the waistline, however. There has been this absence because the girls at FSC rate on the same level as the rest of America in the distribution of food, reported Dr Ann May Tracey, head dietitian. There is a definite shortage all over the country and the only priorities are held by the armed forces.

It is known that as countries are conquered, the peoples inhabiting them must be fed, therefore, FSC, as well as the rest of America, must tighten its belt and not complain.

● Over the ravaged ground of war-torn Europe, trudge 125 million men, women, and children who have given all but life itself toward the same permanent peace we all are striving for.

Their need for clothing is as great as that for food—in some areas deaths from exposure equal those from starvation.

These people need something you don't. They need your spare clothing.

150 million pounds must be collected this month. Will you give your share?

What YOU Can Do!

1. Use inspection of the serviceable used summer and winter clothing you can spare. This includes: Men's, women's, children's, and infants' wear, and shoes. Overcoats, topcoats, suits, dresses, skirts, jackets, pants, shirts, work clothes, gloves, underwear, sleeping garments, robes, sweaters, shawls, and all knit goods. Also blankets, bedclothes.

2. Take your contribution to your local COLLECTION DEPOT now or arrange to have your LOCAL COMMITTEE collect it before April 30th.

3. Support these requirements not only with your clothing contribution but also with your time, effort, and energy.

Legislature in Brief

By CORDELIA BARCLAY

Florida's institutions of higher learning are in the news of Legislature again this week, as a committee and the state cabinet acted investigations of the death of a student veteran and the firmery of the University of Florida last March 25.

Coinciding with the launching of official inquiries was an announcement by P. K. Yonge, member of the state board of control, that he had resigned as a member of the board in protest against "neglect" in attending the student and "waste and extravagance" in operating the university.

Seven members of the investigating committee planned to go to Gainesville Sunday to take testimony. They will report to their committee in the Legislature Wednesday. Senator Richard of St. Petersburg is chairman of the committee, which has asked Scott to write charges to give them "something definite to go upon."

Death of the student, Howard Bartlett, Jr. of Winter Haven, a discharged World War II veteran, already was under study by Governor Caldwell.

The probe was ordered by the house and senate appropriations committees after they were sitting in joint session to consider the university's budget. The committees heard Scott read a report on the death by the Dade Veterans college organization composed of World War veterans. It charged, without naming Bartlett, a diabetic, died after he was unable to obtain prompt medical attention.

Scott gave his opinions on the war and charged there was much of "waste" in the operation of the school.

"You get more for 25 cents at FSCW than you do for a dollar at the university," Scott said. He also has orally criticized the administration, but has heard nothing from the governor's office about it.

Dr. John Tigert, president, attended the hearing and discussed the school's financial affairs briefly to comment on Scott's assertions.

Also concerning higher education was the appropriation of $50,000 appropriation for Florida A and M college's proposed $1,000,000 hospital. President Rose of the Senate and Speaker Cary of the House are to be asked for their approval at the college's biennial demonstration and musical program for members of the legislature. If the legislature appropriates $50,000, President William Gray, college president, said, the rest of the money can be obtained from other sources. If the hospital is built, students of the A and M will be able to receive certificates as registered nurses. The present plan is that after three years of study at the college students must take another year at a Baltimore hospital.

In a session behind closed doors held by Legislature Wednesday night as a memorial to the late president, Senator Claude Pepper, ex-state speaker, made public a letter he had received from the president three days prior to his death.

Roosevelt expressed belief that the senate should not be committed in the appointing of assistant secretaries of state. The late president should do the "spade work" of negotiating treaties and eliminate personal cases of career officials.

The letter concluded with the late president expressing the hope that the next trend of public opinion would not condemn, "under theory, nations are cowards, and therefore are treaty built scraps of paper."

Praising Roosevelt, Pepper termed him one of the world's few despite what "some of them said of him." Pepper said that when the president spoke of the needs as the number one economic problem of the country he did so with knowledge.

Pepper ending saying that he had talked with Truman before leaving, who said that he asked for the prayers of the people of Florida. "I think you can depend that supporters of Roosevelt should continue to give all their strength to Truman."

On the financial side, the cigarette tax and beer tax proposed by the state administration seemed to show recuperative strength this week. Administration supporters by a surprise parliamentary tactic prevented the beer tax emergency committee's defeat of it by beer lobby opposition and got it up by indicating enough strength to pass the measure when it came up for final consideration.

The Senate Wednesday defeated, by override its committee's defeat of the bill to levy an extra "luxury" tax. The measure was relieved and may place the bill on its calendar for discussion.

The Senate and House has con-

Grainger Will Appear in Two Piano Concerts

Reserve Seat Tickets May Be Obtained with Red, Blue Series

Composer, Born in Australia, Has Traveled Widely

Percy Grainger pianist and composer, will appear in two Artist Series concerts, May 7 and 8 at 8:15 each evening.

Tickets for this concert ,which is for both red and blue series tickets, may be obtained this afternoon from 4 to 5 in the Student Alumnae building basement. Tickets will go on sale in the college box office April 30 at $1.20 each. Students may attend the concert either Monday or Tuesday evening .

Mr Grainger was born in Melbourne, Australia, on his sixth to his tenth year he studied under his mother, a very good pianist, who was devoted to music according to Mr Grainger. When he was 12 he went with his mother to Germany for further musical studies.

By the time he was 19, he had toured Europe, South Africa, New Zealand and Australia. In 1914 he came to America.

In 1907, Grieg heard Grainger play and he was followed to the Scandinavian press: "What is natural with him is the spirit of the peasant dances that none of my own countrymen could play, and he possesses the power to create and interprets them as they should be played. He is a genius such as we Scandinavians must love." Grieg chose Grainger to play at the celebration of his Leeds (England) Festival of 1907.

When Mr Grainger was serving as Sergeant Major in the U.S. CAC at Fort Hamilton, South Brooklyn, during World War I, he was often called upon to play piano solos for the Liberty Loan and Red Cross drives. Accordingly, Grainger would try to think of something that would have an appeal to every class of listeners and the English Morris tune, "Country Gardens" occurred to him as being "typical of the English people of its tunefulness. He would improvise upon this melody as often as four or five times an evening, as his band moved from one Li-

Traveling Secretary Speaks to Y W C A

Purpose of Organization Is Stressed in Talk

Evelyn von Herrmann, traveling secretary of the National Young Women's Christian Association, spoke to the branch at Florida State College Monday afternoon. She explained that the purpose of YW should understand the purpose of the organization and be interested in furthering its purposes.

The purpose of the secretary's talk was primarily to acquaint the students with the organization. She outlined the history of the movement and said that it was first organized in the United States in December women in London for the purpose of forming a branch similar of the factory girls in England. At first these women just met to pray for the girls, but in 1855 they decided to take some definite action to determine their working conditions. "Since then," said miss von Herrmann, "YWCA has been an organization for the betterment of women."

The questions concerning opportunities in professional YWCA work, Miss von Herrmann said, could be very encouraging because since the war the organization had been using workers just out of college. In addition to a good background and professional education, she urged students who are interested in the work to prepare in all of the other subjects. As to the salaries of the workers, she said they usually ran from $1800 to $4500.

Miss Von released the varied kinds of work possible under the employment of the YWCA. She also had specialized in education there is work with high school girls or in adult education. Health education, she thinks, would interest the physical education majors. Personnel jobs are many, she said as are case work jobs.

She divided summer work of the Y into three major groups. First is the "industrial summary" movement in which students may

Pattishall Wins In Oratorical Contest Here

Barclay, Bail Place Next; President Presents Final Awards

"Spirit That Is China" Rates Silver Loving Cup

Pat Pattishall, who spoke on the "Spirit that is China" was awarded the silver loving cup in Florida State College's first oratorical contest Tuesday night in the Augusta Conrad theater. Cordelia Barclay placed second and Rachel Bail was awarded third prize in the contest, which had as its general subject: World Citizenship: Challenge to Complacency."

Sponsored and arranged by B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation and the Student World Affairs Committee, the contest also presented speeches by Frances Traxler and Janice Richey and a welcoming address by Rabbi Alex J Goldman, director of the foundation. Percy Pat J. Vance, assistant professor of journalism, and Dr Raymond Bellamy, professor of sociology. The Honorable Ray O. Mallard, chief justice of the state supreme court and the Honorable Robert A. Gray, secretary of state, were to have served on this panel but were unable to attend.

Stating that the basic principle for international cooperation is understanding, Pat said that regardless of the perfection of proposed peace plans, they can succeed only through application of this principle. She spoke briefly on the culture and spirit of China and stated that the Chinese and American peoples are very much alike in their beliefs inpaying freedom and equality of opportunity.

"Although some contend that China should not hold an important position in the international organization because of illiteracy," Miss Ruby Dunstan, instructor in piano, and will sing her original composition of "The Lord Is My Shepherd." This song won first place in the local composition section of the American Association of University Women creative arts contest.

Elizabeth McFarland, another AAUW prize winner, will read selections from her poems which were judged by Robert P Tristram Coffin, Pulitzer Prize poet, to be the outstanding poetry submitted in the contest.

Next week's Garnet and Gold program will begin a series of programs sponsored by the business, it was announced by Mr H P Dare ,chairman of the board. These programs, scheduled meetings are usually held in Jacksonville, but due to wartime conditions, it is necessary that they meet in Tallahassee.

The Board of Control is the governing body of Florida State College, University of Florida, Florida A & M college, the State School for the Deaf and the Blind. It consists of Mr H P Dare, chairman, and four other members, Mr N B Jordan of Quincy; Mr Ben Hill Griffin of Miami, Mr T L Tyrant of Lakeland and Mr T T Scott of Live Oak.

Chairman Dare stated that the Board was very much pleased with the college and the way it is operated.

President and Mrs Doak S. Campbell were host and hostess at a lunch given the members of the Board in the Student Union room on Wednesday. Board members also attended a barbecue given at 5 M at Lake Ella by Dr W H Graves, president.

Flambeau Represented At San Francisco

Miss Vocelle, who held the position of picture editor of Flambeau during her senior year, is on a Red Cross work in San Diego, California.

Dancer Attributes Career Beginning To Russian Artist

"I think that acelig Pavlova, Russian ballerina, made me decide to take dancing as my career," answered Ruth Pare when asked what influenced her to be a professional dancing. "Although I saw her before I even studied dancing, I was greatly impressed."

All through her dancing study she said that she remembered the performance of the Russian star. When Pavlova asked her to make a tour with her she accepted and remained with her for over a year.

A few hours before Miss Pare's performance, Florida State College, she received a message of her mother's death. She insited upon going ahead with the performance, but left Tallahassee on the same train. She returned immediately after the dinner which was given in her honor.

When asked where she got the idea of combining poetry with her dancing she answered that she didn't exactly know. "When my partner entered the services three years ago, I started reading lots of poetry. I don't know why I did then because I have never read much of it before. Then I got the idea that I could mix dancing and poetry together.

Schornherst Speaks To Club in Palatka

Dr Ruth Olive Schornherst, assistant professor of botany, recently went to Palatka to address the Garden Club there. Her talk on the "Origin of Ornamental Plants Used a Florida Gardens."

She gave the origin of certain plants and how they happened to be introduced into Florida. Some of the tropical forms are South American or West Indian, and have gotten here from Florida. Some of the tropical forms are South American or West Indian, and have gotten here from Florida. Some are Mexico or Central America and have come via the Gulf Coast or from Yucatan to Jamaica. She said that two of the best known ornamentals grown in our southern gardens of East Asian origin are camellias and camellias. At present there are at least 50 species of camellias, many of derived by a Japanese and brought into America at the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in 1920.

The camellia was named by Linnaeus in honor of Georgian Josephia Camellus. He devised a classification of plants according to the character of the fruit and it was in honor of this new system that Linnaeus chose his name. There are about ten species of camellias, but many varieties.

X-Rays for TB To Be Offered At All Units

U S Public Health Service Is Sponsoring Exame In Landic Rec

Early Discovery of Cases Is Objective of Tests

Beginning Monday, all students, staff members, and employees of Florida State College will have the opportunity of being given X rays for tuberculosis.

The examinations, which are being financed by the United States Public Health Service, are to be given in Landis recreation room and kitchen with Miss Helen Neely as technician in charge and Miss Dorothy Fulton assisting.

Day students are asked to come for their test at their convenience during the hours scheduled for all students. Those students living on campus will be notified of the time of their appointments through campus mail as well as by a list posted in Westcott. It is urgently requested that no one for his appointment as the technicians are to be in the room one hour. The schedule telling the days that different groups of people on campus are to report will be found in a box elsewhere in the Flambeau.

With early tubercular case finding as an objective, the United States Public Health Service and the State Board of Health is sponsoring the program in cooperation with the Leon County Health Department, Leon County TB and the Florida State College. Officials of Florida State College. Spirit of the Week

● ARE WE HEELING?

Time and time again one hears comments about college students not being interested in national and world events, with Florida State College students just as guilty as the next group. Immersed in the artificial collegiate world around our lives revolve, we pay little heed or attention to the swirlly changing world outside.

Sporadic emotional remarks are liberated when some great catastrophe has occurred, but for the most part we act though we are living in a land far away from the troubles and calamities that beset mankind. We all of course knew that Franklin D. Roosevelt passed away a couple of weeks ago, that the Russians are in the heart of Berlin, and that there is a conference going on in San Francisco, but we give too little thought or study to the significance of events like these. Our thoughts are so completely taken up with collegiate activities and happenings that we have little time or inclination to think of anything else.

For instance, how many of us have studied the Dumbarton Oaks proposals and have thought about problems that are undoubtedly arising at the San Francisco Conference today? Then, too, now that we have a new President ideas and policies of various countries are changing—do we see the significance behind these changes?

We reported last week that two college representatives are attending the Conference to voice their opinions, and that in itself is a marvelous thing, but this step alone is not enough.

Public opinion is one great factor in a working democracy. Public opinion by informed persons is the best for which our country can ask; and the logical breeding place for such opinion is at American colleges and universities.

If there weren't newspapers, magazines, radios, and lecture series, there would be some excuse for average college students lacking knowledge on current events. But living in the scientific age that we do with every opportunity open for us to learn about what is going on, we deserve only rebuke and scorn. Scorn for our foolish preoccupation that keeps us from taking advantage of the opportunity to learn while we have the chance.

College activities, curricular and extra-curricular, should be important to us, but not so important that we divorce worldly interests from our shaping minds. How can we handle so little and so trifle after college" if we do not keep up with its actions and acquire in insight on its ways?

● WORLDLY EDUCATION

A proposal to establish an International Office of Education has been suggested to the San Francisco conference representatives by the presidents and chancellors of five hundred American universities and colleges. Delegates of thirty-four foreign countries, meeting in the International Education Assembly in New York City and the National Education Association have adopted a similar proposal.

It is thought that a world education office, to serve as a clearing house and advisory center, could prove effective in maintaining peace. Hitler very well knew the importances of education, as did all of the occupied countries who can attest in pointing to their devastated schools, tortured teachers, their plundered books and other supplies.

American educators urge that the cultural institutions be enlisted "to heal the torn world and to turn men's minds and emotions to the creation of a common well-being." In order to create better understanding between the peoples of the world it will be obligatory to dissolve the barriers that have kept nations apart culturally. It is felt that this is a positive approach to a field in which cultural values have exploited for destructive purpose through propaganda.

A statement concerning the establishment of such a world education says significantly: "International interest in education must now include not only the instruction offered by universities and furthered by meetings of scientists and scholars, but also elementary, secondary and adult education of a more informal character."

San Francisco will be discussing and deciding numerous important problems but it is to be hoped that this proposal for an international education office as an effective way to strengthen the peace, will receive serious attention and consideration.

● THE SIXTY-FOUR DOLLAR QUESTION

Were editorials written daily concerning the uncoucern of college students to stimulating events on campus It would not be overdone.

The latest evidence of apathy was the scarce attendance that attended the oratorical contest sponsored by B'nai B'rith Hillel foundation and the Student World Affairs Council Wednesday night. Not more than 75 members of student body of over 2,000 found time to be present.

Perhaps it is being overly optimistic to expect students to be interested enough to spare a precious hour listening to such weighty topics as world citizenship or expose their complacency to challenging statements. In view of this fact, presumably seven people interested enough 'o go to the effort of entering the contest is an astoundingly large number.

In this student's opinion, we should not only feel a personal shame, but a shame for the student body as a whole for the apparent lack of interest on our part when busy state officials give their time to act as judges for the contest.

The subject was one of the most important things students have had a hand in this year. Response, as usual, was practically nil. How can the few who sponsor like functions be expected to continue their valuable work when support is not forthcoming? What means can be employed to arouse student interest is the $64 question.

Short Change

This has been a hard week for everyone, all right. Not that it was the weather and we can't say much for it except that it was weather. Then we made a rain attempt to catch up on our work which is always hard on the feet and last of all those strange creatures called "goat." I believe haven't made it any easier. What a horrible shock to our system to wander over to the bookstore with just enough time before the 10 o'clock class to eat a breakfast of a coke and cheese sandwich and be confronted by hundreds of weird human beings yodeling or limping around. As for the waiter's very enough forces on this campus working against our sanity already.

Won't life be dull this summer when we all get a chance to start eating in a small dining room the way ordinary people do? There won't be any excuse of people dressed in white, or green and white, or black and white, or any other specific combination you can think of marching around our tables looking anxious while they "tap" some lucky child. At least we'll be vaguely surprised if there are.

Then there was the girl who couldn't figure out how to stop writing on the sweet little boy without hurting his feelings until she hit upon the bright idea of telling him she was so pleased she did it all beautifully and even got a very stiff little note back from him giving her his best wishes and stuff, but now she's almost convinced herself that she is engaged and we're afraid she'll be awfully disappointed when she finds out she's not. Life is complicated.

The pockets of small boys and women's pocketbooks have long been reputed for their wide assortment of contents. But these two catch-alls are as nothing compared to the conglomeration collected in our notebooks. You know: we cleaned ours out the other day. It was better than what we had been fuming about not having received an answer to, our best handkerchief, and our safety series ticket which has been lost for weeks. Also there were our tweezers: we know our roommate had lost them. And there were three nombs, some cracker crumbs and odd assortments of gossip notes. We found a dollar bill too and those pennies we took at the lake last summer. There were also two pencil stubs and a mess of mail ages ago. Our notebook held untold horrors and surprises. We're going to do that more often. Maybe some day we'll uncover a small fortune.

In these last days before exams we suddenly become apprehensive of the gigantic task before us—of the few days remaining we should have been doing all along. Our minds wander to the tips just like tennis arms or swimming legs or dancing feet. They need rest and relaxation to better our books, but people have lived through marathons before—and the next few weeks are going to be the worst marathon for most of us. But home is in sight for the long lassies, only a short while longer to be singing "The Worn-out Blues."

We absolutely deny all responsibility for this poem. We just found it lying around and thought it would look cute or something.

Refrain:
For we are now in college.
I remember that last afternoon
When buildings met my eyes—
Solid red brick monuments
To raise the hopes of many.
Refrain:
I remember once still later
After a year had passed
How I dreaded every day
And wished I were the last.
Refrain:
I remember once o student.
The one I almost met.
I wondered what became of him,
And I am wondering yet.
Refrain:
I remember once o teacher
Who spoke a liberal thought
And dismissed from the faculty
Was all the action brought.
Refrain:
Oh, I remember fun and frolic
Along the path of knowledge.
But I can't remember much
That I've learned in college.

Pattishall Will Speak In Oratorical Contest Here rights at the peacetable?" she asked.

That war is rooted in ignorance, which, in turn, must be blamed upon lacks within institutions of culture, constitutes the theme of the contention of Cordelia Barclay, who spoke on "The Crisis for Education." Evidence shows that schools, foremost among these institutions, are not accomplishing people who are well informed or eager to learn, she said. Concentration on the curricula unrelated to daily living, poorly educated teachers and inadequate salaries for instructors are among the factors primarily responsible for this, Miss Barclay asserted.

"We must aid in arousing schools to educate our future generations to keep it wisely," she concluded.

Speaking on the topic "Hate or Peace?", Rachel Bail said that never cannot be powered as long as Americans have a vendictive attitude toward the German and Japanese people. Liberal reeducation and re-habilitation of these people are difficult tasks, but they offer the only assurance of a lasting peace, she stated. Racial and religious tolerance will also do much to prevent future conflicts, Rachel concluded.

The goal of gaining an understanding of proposed peace plans will be made "a practical challenge to complacency, stated Janice Richey, who spoke on "Dumbarton Oaks in Public Opinion." That the Bretton Woods peace plans must be supported by international trade agreements, a world bank and an international monetary fund was the contention of Frances Tucker in a speech entitled "Foundations for the Peace: Economics."

A student trio, composed of Elenor Hall Cretzell, Jean Cretzell and Patricia Hill, presented musical selections during the intermissions and following the speeches. Second prize in the contest was a $25 war bond and third place award was $10 in war stamps.

France Without the Gestapo

By MONICA STIRLING

In the April issue of the Atlantic Monthly Monica Stirling an English writer, cites some of her experiences in France since the liberation. This article "France Without the Gestapo," is the second in a series which Miss Stirling is writing for the magazine in order to give the public a picture of how the French people and the Allied soldiers are living and working in that war-torn country.

Behind the advancing armies remain the usual evidences of war, wrecked vehicles in fields and ditches, ruined bridges, and demolished towns. Otherwise, says Miss Stirling, the country is beautiful and again peaceful. Reims she found that the buildings had not been destroyed and the countryside was in full cultivation. The Germans had not wished to destroy this section because the sugar beet production provided alcohol which was used as a substitute for petrol.

At an Advanced Communication Zone Miss Stirling found soldiers and civilians salvaging clothing and field equipment from the formerly German occupied warehouses. Much material had been the targets of Allied bombing raids. Soldiers were busy unloading boots from captured German leather, sorting clothes and working in the laundries, and "cannibalising" which is the term for taking apart damaged and discarded machines and using them for repairs. There were also small shops for repairing individualized personal effects. These were being sent to boys in hospitals or to prisoners of war or to soldiers' families. At another depot Miss Stirling found a lot of officers and men working to ship captured medical supplies to disabled prisoners-of-war camps and prisoner or war stockades.

While visiting the hundred square miles of forest devoted to installations which were said by British workers to have been the "missing of engineering efficiency and advancement generally" Miss Stirling astonishingly well camouflaged with factitious hayricks, and with painted green paint-ed to look like bricks. It had taken two years to build these camps, but by the time of the occupation just at the time the first Allied armies arrived in France.

Near the installations live a number of Poles who were imported by the Germans. Though these people are now entitled to go to displaced persons' camps many prefer to stay on in the Allied Zone of Germans and eat American meals.

Gestapo Museum

At a small house in the Marne Miss Stirling visited a former Gestapo headquarters. In the spacious hall which had been occupied the Frenchmen had reserved the cells for torture. In order that Allied soldiers might have a chance to see and understand the nature of Gestapo's instruments of torture. In another room in the cellar there were on display farewell letters from the men who had been executed by the Nazis, all of them were of love for wife exhortation to the world "It is necessary that one man could not stand up. In this cellar which was partly filled with water French-men died without the aid of German assistance.

Miss Stirling tells of traveling by train, meeting seven American Red Cross girls-on-duty, and of group spirituals with them and dividing a bottle of Scotch which a farmer famished with hunger. Back in Paris she visited the painter, Picasso, who told her of the Germans had killed many of his friends while in the air field and some of the quarters which the men had made for themselves from the ruins. She also called "Mabel's House" the men had a fine lighted tree decorated with matchboxes in colored wrapplings and packets of gum.

In another section of France Miss Stirling found Frenchmen in Canadian uniforms and many British trucks for the American army. She felt that this was an example of a cooperation that is helping to make nationality a source of inspiration.

A camera that takes three dimensional pictures has been developed for the use of the armed forces. The photographs show jumbled masses to the naked eye, but the film takes on depth when viewed through special lenses.

Action in Germany

The fighting in Europe this week has climaxed in the battle of Berlin. How long it will require to take the entire city and its numerous suburbs, the over the Allied Command will venture to say. But the fighting men of the Russian armies know that the Germans will fight to the last man because of the order from Hitler which called for fanatical resistance and demanded a fight to the death. He told Nazi troops: "Whoever gives a command to retreat is, unless you know him well, to be arrested immediately and if necessary, to be executed."

At this writing, the German army troops, with the aid of the fanatic SS troops at their backs, counter-attack in vain since the Russians have already encircled over approximately one half of the capital.

Russian troops entered the city in three main columns and have continued fighting in full circumvation. The column in the north of Berlin is attacking the Pankow section a workers district. The central column has advanced along the Unter den Linden to its present position in the heart of the city. The southern one is the famous thoroughfare down which Nazi troops used to march to review. The Russian third column is attacking the Tempelhof air field. So far, the Russians have broken the field fairly heavily garrisoned with troops, but the Nazis have not yet didn't take off, which is thought will be due to the fact that aerfares are now virtually impossible. Throughout all Berlin there is wholesale destruction because the fighting troops are split up into two by fast advancing American forces. General Douglas MacArthur reported.

Also in his report, General MacArthur said that 1,000 Japanese had been killed during the last week, making a total of 40,000 Japanese casualties in that archipelago to 335,000.

During the past week American air power was working out a four-fold pattern for the destruction of Japan's war potential. The attacks took three forms: Tokyo's heavily blasted industrial section was bombed several times by Superfortresses from the Marianas. Airfields and installations on the main islands were riddled by Superfortresses at two. The enemy's remaining air strength was further smashed when it rose to test off these attacks. Army planes from strips recently won on Okinawa took a similar toll.

Meanwhile in the Ryukyus, action aimed at gaining bases from which to launch further air and amphibious assaults was entering its final action. American forces on Okinawa and Ie to the west began their push against the remaining Japanese, well entrenched in strongly fortified position. To date, the Americans have captured five airfields.

American infantrymen was mentioned briefly in dispatches as fighting to reconcile Kakazu, near Naha, heavily defended Okinawa capital. The Japanese took the town in close bitter fighting after infiltrating American lines at night.

Peace Organization

President Harry S. Truman opened a conference of statesmen of 46 nations and exhorted them to make the "architecta of a better world". He said that the delegates of the nations represented at the San Francisco conference had the choice between the continuation of international chaos—or the establishment of a world organization for the attainment of peace.

The only dark cloud on the horizon was the still dangling question of the representation at the conference. Russia, after Foreign Commissar Molotov's talks with President Truman and English officials, still demands that Poland be represented by delegates to be members of the Lublin, Russian backed government in Warsaw. The United States and England, on the other hand, are demanding that Polish delegates be chosen from both the Lublin government and the Polish Government in Exile in London. And it seems that both sides of the question have good reasons for not wishing to give in. However, a new government in Poland that will be friendly to her is case the Nazi dominator invades it again. However, the English and American officials stand firm. The Lublin government is not truly representative of the Polish people. For that reason, they believe that the Polish representatives to the conference should be chosen from the Polish government and the Polish government in exile. Neither side has shown any sign of giving in, and in some quarters this is taken as the first step in further deceitions between Russia and the United States on one side and Russia on the other. Yet others say that the situation is merely a minor difference that can easily be ironed out with a little effort. To date, there is no indication of how the problem will be worked out.

Legislature In Brief

cured in a bill No grant a $500,- 000 state appropriation for which it has been sent to the governor to his signature. The original sum asked was $1,000,000.

Other bills to regulate Florida public utilities companies and their sales—one by expansion of the state railroad commission and the other by setting up a new commission—were introduced.

In face of opposition, the House passed a bill to call a special session to revise the state constitution. Written in 1885, the present document of a drafting committee is permitted. If the amendments is ratified in the November election, the 1947 session's speaker of the House will join the governor and supreme court in naming the commission. The commission's draft would be submitted to the 1949 session, where it could be changed and approved by a three-fifths vote, and be subject to ratification in the 1950 general election.

Such lengthy procedure meets objections that the constitution needs revision at once. Bills men are in the armed services, provision Rep Murray of Polk said. A shorter method was rejected by the Senate.

Spirogiras Hear Negro Spirituals

A plantation home in the Florida State Prison Quarters from assembled Negroes entertained the guests present at a party given for Spirogira members last night by Nancy Carter. Nan, president of the honorary was asked to a supper party at the Parker home near Tallahassee. After supper assembled on the porches of the historic home heard spirituals, sung by workers on the big farm.

Spirogiras, led by president Nancy, sang in return to the colored group.

From investigations of caves, refuse dumps and lake dwellings, it is known that Europeans of the New Stone Age possessed dogs.

ed the alumnae. She gave a short presentation speech thanking the members of the flag commission.

Miss Lynette Thompson, chairman of the committee and instructor in classics; Miss Bertha Woodworth, publicity secretary; and Miss Louise Gehan, alumnae secretary; and the members of the student flag committee: Sarah Stewart, Bez Weaver, and Janet McDonald for the college flag.

Isabel Rogers, past president of the College Government association, represented the students. She said that the flag would be "the spirit of our college femine perfecta". "It will be s symbol to all of us now as students and later as alumnae."

Dr Doak Campbell, president of Florida State College, made a short address accepting the flag as the college flag and honored on campus. Dr Campbell "officially pronounced it flag and pennant of the Florida State College for Women.

Miss Tryon and Isabel Rogers presented the flag to Dr Campbell who in his speech accepted it on behalf of the college. The color guard, "Garnet and Gold" was played by the band during the presentation by the color guard. The school flag was placed beside the flag of the state of Florida in the color guard. The color guard and the band then marched from the main platform around to the back of Landis and then to the front of Bryan.

The flag was the main platform were Dr Campbell, past and present COA presidents, alumnae officers, the student flag committee, the alumnae flag committee, and the members of the executive council.

The flag will remain in Dr Campbell's office.

Betty Martin will be her accompanist.

Methodist Groups Visit Nearby Towns

Week-end deputations will be sent to Monticello and Lake City from the Methodist student house this week. Miss Florence Jones, methodist deaconess at the Tallahassee district, who has charge of the deputations, announced that they will leave Friday and return Sunday night.

The purpose of these deputations is to stimulate interest in the smaller churches in the district by sending a group of students out to talk with the young people about the possibilities of youth work in the church. The methodist deaconess stressed that by the girls are worship, community service, world friendship and recreation.

While in the communities the girls conduct the worship services and instruct interested persons in the various commissions. Also in order to get acquainted Miss Jones said they gave a party on Saturday night for the entire community.

The girls who are going to Monticello this week-end are: Lillian Blackwelder, Wilma Humphrey, Joyce Carlton and Dot Carwell. Those who will visit Lake City are: Betty Bell, Margaret Clayton, Betty Labree and Eleanor Bories.

Baptist Girls Give Party for 'Mothers'

Friday night at the Baptist student house, the college students will honor the ladies of the town who act as their foster-mothers for this school year.

The girls are going to meet their "mothers" at the student house and bring them over to hear the certificate recital of Mary McCormack, a senior who has directed the Baptist student choir this year. After the recital she s to will take their guests back over to the student house for light refreshments.

Jean Satterwhite, publicity chairman of the Baptist student is, said that this party would be to show the ladies that the girls appreciated the many kindnesses to them during the year.

College to Observe Music Week in May

Percy Grainger Asked to Be Guest Pianist-Composer

National Music Week will be held for the first time on the campus of Florida State College May 8-13, Mr Karl O Kuersteiner, dean of the school of music is in charge of the planned events.

"I thought it would be best to have a well-known person on the campus to get acquainted with the students," Mr Kuersteiner said, "I thought of Percy Grainger for several reasons. He is known and recognised as an accomplished pianist, and composer the world over. But more that that, he reaches back into the past because he was a good friend to Edvard Grieg, noted Norwegian composer. Grieg said of Grainger that none of his own countrymen interpreted his folk songs as he could and did."

"Grainger is also a good friend of Cyril Scott, who composed the "Tallahassee Suite." When I found that he could come here, he asked Scott's permission to play the suite for the people of Tallahassee."

"I know the students will like both Mr and Mrs Grainger very much," Dean Kuersteiner said.

Broward Hall Gives First Formal Dance

Broward's first formal dance was held last Saturday in the lounge.

Music was provided by a juke box with some of the latest records.

Bouquets of lilies, stock, daisies, delphinium and phlox were scattered around the room in accordance with the spring theme of the dance. The punch bowl was in a small parlor off the main lounge. The silver crystal bowl was backed with maidenhair fern and large daisies. Tall white tapers in silver candelabras illuminated the punch table.

Guests included dates, men from Dodson, Cawthon and Dale Mabry, Mrs Lazelle Dickens, Miss Daisy Parker, Miss Edith McCollum and Colonel Hatton, commanding officer of Dale Mabry hospital.

The committee in charge of the dance was headed by Martha Abbott. Other members of the committee were Mary Nell McFadden, Mary Walker, Von Celle Baxter, Sadie Campbell and Kathleen Palesner.

Intramural Bridge Finals Completed

The finals of the intramural bridge tournament have just been completed with Ann Hendricks and Sandy Owens, representing Broward hall, as winners. They competed with Edith Cone Bailey and Jean Anne White of Tri-Delt in the finals.

The two-pong series began yesterday, with the elimination tournament to be finished today by Sunday. Semi-finals will begin on Monday with finals being played either on Wednesday or Thursday of next week. All the games will be played on the ping-pong tables at the gymnasium with all the game-room of the Student-Alumnae building.

Since the games are in the form of singles, no practice points are required. As yet only 16 entered, each one representing a residence hall or sorority, have signed up for competition.

Club to Initiate

Members and goats will meet in back of Byrah hall tomorrow at 1:45 p m to leave for camp where formal initiation of the goats will take place. The goats, dressed in various costumes, will hike the five miles to camp after first having given the members of the club different types of entertainment.

F Club goats entertained the members of the club at a banquet in Landis dining hall Wednesday night. The members wore regular F club uniforms and the goats livened up the scene with evening dresses, saddle shoes and goat horns.

After the initiation of the students into the club the new officers recently elected will automatically take over their positions.

Seven YW Groups Meet in Jacksonville

National Y Secretary Visits Campus After Meeting

Of the eight student YWCA's in the state, seven were represented at the area meeting in Jacksonville last Saturday.

The theme of this meeting was "The Times Demand" which was the subject of a lecture by Dr William H Gray, Jr, president of Florida A and M college.

Students from Florida A and M college gave the worship programs under the leadership of Lavinia Perkins, president of the YWCA at A and M college.

Two talks, "I Am the World" by Miss Irene Harris, and "What to Do This Summer" by Miss Evelyn von Herrmann were given in the afternoon to present ideas of the organization for which are made possible through YWCA.

Miss Harris and Miss Herrmann are national student secretaries for the Southern Area of YWCA. Miss Harris is the executive of YWCA secretary of the state group. Formerly she was Racoma YWCA and What It Does."

Recreation leader was Miss Lulu Barzley, member of the faculty of A and M college.

The finance committee for the meeting was Ruth Cameron, chairman, FSC; Lavinia Perkins, Patricia Ann Mc Williamson Chalker, Rollins college; Margaret Cockerell, Stetson.

After a follow up of the meeting the students from Florida State College include Miss von Herrmann back to the campus with Miss Harris who was the guest of the YWCA Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Student-Alumnae building. Following dinner with some ideas for future use. One such idea is to form small interest groups of freshmen next year with upper classmen advisors.

In her talk to the association, Miss von Herrmann told the origin, history, purpose, scope, and outlook for the future of the YWCA.

While she was here on the campus, Miss vonHerrmann had conference with religious denominational secretaries, and with the faculty advisory board which includes Dr Doak S Campbell, Dean Lucile N Dorman, Dean Elizabeth G Andrews, Dr Anne P Liddell, Miss Daisy Parker, Mrs Malone Mac Kaye, Mr. Blankenweiler, Dr Raymond Bellamy, Mr Earl Vance, Miss Marguerite B Dressler, Mr. Ralph Glevelander, Mr Merville R Johnson, Dr Robert Strozza.

Tuesday morning the cabinet members of the YWCA entertained Miss von Herrmann with breakfast in Landis kitchen.

Margaret Mc Williamson, president of YWCA says, "We were especially glad to have Miss von Herrmann visit on the campus, because it is the first time we have been visited by a national secretary."

Confirmation Held

Last Sunday three students and two faculty members of Florida State College were presented for confirmation by Bishop Frank A Juhan by Rev Alvin A Bullen, chaplain of Buze hall.

These five persons were the special guests at the Sunday night supper in Rupe hall. They were Edwina Wiggins, Betty Riddle and Gloria Reed students, and Misses Isobel McKinnon and Percy Parker, faculty members.

Pictures Overdue

Dr Elizabeth G Andrews, director of personnel, requested that prospective graduates let the Personnel Office have their application pictures as soon as possible, as these pictures were due in the office on January 15. In order that graduates receive effective service, Miss Andrews said, their co-operation is necessary. If a position in any field is desired, six pictures should be filed in the Personnel office, and only one if no position is wanted.

Typists Needed at Veterans Hospital

Graduating seniors and students who do not plan to re-enter Florida State College may make application for government employment at Bruce General Hospital, Thomasville, Georgia, by seeing Dr Elisabeth G Andrews of the Personnel Office, second floor of Westcott, and filling in Federal Employment blanks at once. Finney General Hospital has reported an "extremely urgent need" and has made a request for stenographers and typists who can qualify under Civil Service rules and regulations.

A speed of at least 35 words per minute (preferably 50) is the typing requirement and 80 words per minute in shorthand for stenographers. Positions pay $1440 and $1620 per annum which amounts to $146.50 and $165.00 per month including overtime, respectively. The majority of appointments made for the duration of the war and not to exceed six months thereafter.

A letter from the Army Service Forces, Fourth Service Command, requesting applicants states, "It is respectfully requested that you canvass your commercial students and attempt to them the importance of filling these positions at this station at the earliest practicable date. Wounded soldiers from combat areas are being regularly returned to this hospital to be administered medical treatment and attention. Civilian employees serve in a very patriotic capacity as 'civilian soldiers'."

Parkers Entertain

Daisy Parker, instructor in public science, and Nancy Parker, president of Sigmorita, gave a party at their home yesterday afternoon for the members of Sigmorita.

The party began at 6:30 p m and consisted of a supper and special entertainment. The guests were unexpectedly entertained by a group of nine negro singers from Lake Jackson. The singers gave a pantomime on "Dem Bones, Dem Dry Bones."

The members met in front of Bryan and left together for the party.

Prison Camp Widows Rejoice as Allies Advance in Germany

Recent government announcements of the release of Allied prisoners in German camps were joyfully received by many Florida State students whose brothers, fiancees, and friends interned over there.

Names like Stalag Luft, Oflag, Stargard, Dulag, Lazaret Bad Sedan, and Bursaurthumheil, which are only unpronounceable words to most of the college, are actual locations painfully found on a Red Cross map to these "prison camp widows."

They hope that Allied victories will change the unsatisfying once-a-month postcards that prisoners are allowed to send to the former once-a-day letters.

One girl, however, is a little worried about the progress of the war. Too many things happen at one time. On the same day that she received news that the Navy man in the Pacific to whom she is unofficially engaged to, was to be home on 30 days. She can imagine a meeting between both of her supposedly future husband and is not too ambitious for such a reunion.

Clothing Drive Ends With Good Results

An appreciable contribution of clothing was collected in the United War Relief clothing drive which was sponsored on the Florida State College campus by the YWCA.

Margaret Clayton, president of YWCA, says that she is very proud of the number of articles. Many articles contributed, and that the good sweaters and winter clothes are all especially needed. Margaret also stated that when girls are packing up their clothes to go home they may bring anything they do not need to room 8 Bryan and it will be sent in to the clothing drive late.

The final count of articles of clothing contributed shows the following figures: 283 wool sweaters, 88 wool skirts, 72 winter suits, 64 cotton and rayon skirts, 33 cotton suits, 28 pairs of pajamas, 3 bathrobes, 150 blouses, 75 pairs of socks, 2 pairs of slacks, 5 jackets, 20 dresses, 3 pairs of gloves, 2 rain coats, 8 pairs of trousers, 10 scarfs, 8 men's vests, 36 long women's coats, 20 short coats, 61 articles of underwear, 2 cotton quilts, 4 blankets, 20 miscellaneous sports articles, and several boxes of shoes.

Esteren Picks New Members Tuesday

Thirteen Outstanding Events Selected by Honorary

Esteren, Even honorary, tapped 10 juniors, two freshmen, and one faculty member last Tuesday noon in the college dining hall.

The new members include: Dr Coyle E Moore, professor of sociology and director of social work, Margaret Baugh, Babe Brand, Jo Guthrie, Madelyn King, Jeanne Kresy, Jane Lyles, Audrey Perry, Ella Mey Quinby, Louise Silkes, Anne Widerquist, Ida Lee Rentz and Jimmie Rosen.

After tapping was completed the members and the goats met in Landis parlor where the goats were welcomed into the orientation and were told their new duties.

The goats honored the members and faculty guests at a banquet in Landis dining hall that night. The tables were decorated with centerpieces of daisies in green vases, place cards in the form of caldrons, and green ribbons. Later on in the evening the goats entertained the members with some "formal rushing." They ended the goatting with a session of eating and singing in the Soda Shop.

The faculty guests at the banquet included Dr Katherine Montgomery, director of physical education; Miss Dorothea Marsh instructor in physics; Miss Lynette Thomason, instructor in the classics; Miss Grace Fox, instructor in industrial education; Miss Elizabeth Lynn, assistant professor of physics and counselor to senior hall, and Miss Lottie Bonham, alumnae secretary.

This weekend Esteren expects to see most of the alumnae on campus including Mary Lippitt, Elde Rives, Marie Lambert, Ulma Peggy Lee Walker and Dottie B McGlashan.

time winner of the AAUW poetry contest, read five of her poems: "The Mountain," "Exiles," "After Reading Wordsworth," "Here In This Room," and "The Old Home." Poetry Lit Thomson's prize winning short story, "Saturday," was read by Maurine Petty.

After the readings, the original dance numbers were performed. Betty Bryson gave her original tap dance to the tune of "St. Louis Woman." A bit of comedy was introduced on the program by Jinx Parish and Nancy Mac-Edwards as they gave their modern dance, "The Dance of the Murres." To add to the effect of the dance, these two girls were dressed in costumes that represented murres. In conclusion, Marzery Holm and Anne Hustler gave their modern dance interpretation of Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C-sharp Minor." The dance represented two despairing souls who saw a ray of hope, strove to attain it, but failed.

Certificates of Merit engraved with the national seal of the AAUW were awarded to the following prizes winners: Myra Patchball, Mary Ann Waller, Betty Troop, Dorothy Mayhew, Jacqueline Maree, Mildred Zindler Sarah Boswell, Juanita Cooper Martha Lawson, Beverly Watkins Gertrude Noxtine, Margery Holm, Anne Hustler, Anna Watkins, Alice Phillips, Peggy Lu Thomson, and Elizabeth McFarland.

Meeting to be Held

Saturday afternoon from 2 to 6 a vestry conference will be held at Rose Hall to select a theme and plan a program for the coming year. Both the old and new vestry members will be present.

The newly-elected vestry members will be installed at communion service on Sunday morning at 8:30.

Outing Club Elects Officers Tuesday

At the meeting of the Outing Club last Tuesday night in the clubroom of the Student Alumnae building officers were elected for the coming year They are as follows: Tommy Thompson, chairman; Chubby Clubb, Evelyn Breedlove, food committee chairman; Charlotte Bourland, chairman of the finance committee; Jeanne Marie Perro, publicity chairman, and Anne Nelson, reporter

Definite plans were made for a trip to Wakulla on Saturday afternoon. The cost will be a fee of 30 cents to all who wish to go. Swimming is included in the fee.

For those who wish to belong to the Outing Club next year, there will be a list of all committees posted on the bulletin board in Westcott next week. Students are requested to sign up for the committee they wish to be on.

Dancer Gives Navel Recital

red and white checked skirt, long white ruffled pantaloons, and red and white hose. Miss Pare kept romping back to the stage to recite a few more nursery rhymes every time she received an encore to this number.

In her rendition of "Juliet" Miss Pare did not try to tell the story of Juliet, but merely to evoke the mood of poetic romance that is found in the character of Juliet. To music by Shubert she danced, dressed in a pale pink, flowing, silver sprinkled costume which fell to the floor leaving on one side from the waist.

Miss Albrecht played two solos, "Will-o-the-wisp" by Phillipp, and "Clair de Lune" by Debussy and two encores by Walker.

At the close of her program, Miss Pare was entertained at a dinner given in her honor by Rosemary Hubble at the Rainbow Dinner Room.

Those attending this affair were Miss Pare, Miss Albrecht, Dr and Mrs Milton W Carothers, Dean and Mrs Katz G Koerstetter, Mr and Mrs Van H Pevenson, Miss Roberta Ackerman, Miss Ann Atwood, Bonnie Kindle, and the hostess, Rosemary Hubble.

Miss Pare told a story at dinner about an incident that happened to her not long ago. She had made the acquaintance of a German dancer many years ago in her travels and had occasionally corresponded with him. Not very long ago she received a letter from him and answered it without a thought. Soon after the FBI came to see her to find out what connection she had with the dancer who had become an influential member of the Nazi regime since Miss Pare had last seen him. She said that it took her husband, who is a lawyer, to convince the authorities that the whole affair was harmless.

Dunn Will Present Piano Recital

Miss Margaret Dunn, instructor in piano, will present a piano recital in the college auditorium on Sunday evening, April 29, at 6:15 o'clock. Miss Dunn is the newest member of the music faculty at Florida State College, having come here in the spring semester of this year.

She was formerly at Baker University in Baldwin, Kansas. Miss Dunn is an experienced artist, having played professionally in London, Boston and New York. The program Sunday evening will be her first appearance in a recital at FSC.

She will first play But Du Bei Mir (originally for voice) by Dunn-Bach, Dorian Toccata-D minor (originally for organ) by Chiapusso-Bach. Following will be the Sonata-Fantasia G sharp minor, by Scriabine; Chopin's Nocturne-opus 27 No 1, and Nocturne-opus 9 No 2.

Also Ravel's Ondine, Albeniz's Almeria and Triana from Iberia by Debussy, and Rondo D-flat major by Scriabine.

43 Students Attend BSU State Retreat

Forty-three Baptist students of Florida State College branch of Baptist Student Union attended the annual BSU state retreat at Camp O'Leno near Gainesville last week-end.

This retreat, according to Jean Satterwhite, publicity chairman, was for the purpose of training the new officers of the BSU's over the state.

The theme of the retreat this year was based on the phrase "Are Ye Able" from the Baptist hymn name.

The major speakers were Dr Labialau Biro, pastor of the University Baptist church of Coral Gables; Ruth Hollis, secretary of the First Baptist church of Quincy; Dr Jackson Pitt, Baptist state executive secretary; Mrs John Maguire, Baptist youth leader in Jacksonville; Rev W C Strickland, associate pastor of the First Baptist church of Gainesville; Rev Joe Alabance, city-wide Baptist student secretary in Alabama; Rev Clyde B Lipscomb, Baptist state student secretary; and Rev Thomas Walker, Baptist student secretary at Florida State College. Also also given by John Ford, State BSU president and a student at the University of Florida.

ilre on the campuses of one of five universities, and while they work in the city for the purpose of understanding the problems of a certain group of working people, they will be taught by professors or visiting professionals in their field of study. The five universities being used this year for this study are University of Chicago, University of Connecticut, University of Michigan, University of Washington, and the University of Minnesota.

The second phase of summer work is the relation classes at Columbia University. In addition to the theology and Christian ethics classes, there will be a course in YWCA organization.

The last phase is the summer camps to which representatives are sent to get ideas and plans to bring back to their local Y's.

Miss von Herrmann, according to Margaret, is the first traveling secretary to visit FSC in many years. While on campus she was entertained at a breakfast given in Landis kitchen.

After attending the Jacksonville YWCA convention with the FSC delegates, Miss von Herrmann returned to Tallahassee for another two days.

Snow to Lecture On Peruvian Articles

Sidney Snow, artist who is to classify the Peruvian relics sent to Florida State College by Mr and Mrs John Victor Carter of the Canal Zone, will speak on the collection on the fourth floor of the Student Alumnae building at 8:30 May 3.

Thirteen cases of the Incan and pre-Incan relics have been sent to FSC so far. In addition to being very rare, the collection will be the largest accumulation of early South American art in this country. The only collection to surpass it in size is the one at the University of California.

Plans are being made to build a new art building after the war to house the collection and give room for other art activities and exhibits. The exhibition as part of the AAUW Creative Arts Festival Program, the collection will be closed indefinitely except by special permission.

Mr Snow will be at the college for several months to arrange a museum to house the collection from an artistic standpoint. The arranging of the collection is regarded to be an important aspect in the new trend in museum work. It is expected to be a great attraction when the museum is opened to the public.

The only event to follow this Peruvian exhibit in the Carter Art program will be Music Week, May 6-13.

tried it the next day. I have been doing it ever since."

While down on her knees straightening out a tangled veil, she replied to a query about her activities: "I have enjoyed ice skating very much. "I read quite a lot too," she added, still busy with the veil, "and I am quite interested in modern art of all kinds. I suppose I'm just interested in everything that is done today."

Miss Pare said that "Lament for the Death of a Spanish Bullfighter" by Garcia Lorca was the favorite poem of her ballet dances. She added that she always likes modern dance best, though, "I hope to do one of Lorca's poems in the original Spanish some day, as I speak Spanish, too."

The dancer has been doing a ballet in the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo during the past winter, and FSC was the first stop in the tour this season. From here they were going to Jacksonville.

At the dinner after the performance, Miss Pare told of her experiences on he tours in Germany and Japan. She recounted an experience of the month ago when she wrote a cable to a German dancer, a former partner of hers. The FBI considering the cable suspicious came to investigate her hotel room. Miss Pare pushed her hair back off her neck as she laughed and said, "They talked as if they thought I was a second Mata Hari until my husband, a hard-boiled lawyer, came to explain it to them. They believed him, but I never could have them understand it."

Grainger Will Appear In Two Piano Concerts

erty Loan meeting to another. One day at the Barracks at Governor's Island, New York City, Grainger put his adaptations of "Country Gardens" upon paper. This little piece has since broken all G Schirmer's sales records for the last 75 years, and is at present selling at the rate of over 27,000 copies a year in the United States alone while it is also appearing in British, German, Scandinavian and Australian editions.

Mr Grainger says that both diet and exercise are important for keeping fit and for an artist who has to give his best to the world He says that his piano practice is so vigorous that he sweats freely while at work and finds that this sustained effort continued for 2 to 3 hours each day near an open window makes other exercise unnecessary. He is also fond of sports, trotting in particular, which he does instead of walking almost all of the time. He was called the "trotting pianist" in London.

Mr Grainger feels that Americans should develop a national musical style, and it is of the opinion most of his articles in "Etude" a national music magazine, deal. He says, "There is nothing worse than to neglect your own, as well as other national styles. Foreign geniuses are coming to America continually and unless something is done to foster and preserve American music, and musicians as well, there will never be a characteristic American music."

Grainger's democratic tastes and love of "doing things for himself" sometimes lead to complications. Recently he selected a tall metal piano lamp as a gift and, in his eagerness to present the gift personally, waived the services of Stern's shipping department and staggered to Grand Central Station on his way to White Plains, bearing the heavy metal lamp himself. While at the station, waiting badges for the train for Grainger despites hats' he aroused the suspicions of the station detectives who approached Grainger by asking him where he had gotten the lamp. Fortunately he had Stern's receipt for the lamp in his pocket, and it was only after he had produced this and told them who he was that the station detectives were entirely satisfied that the perspiring, baleful person before them, bearing the huge lamp of a not a shoplifter, but the composer of "Shepherd's Hey", and "Country Gardens."

Once when Mr Grainger visited a peasant who he had heard knew a version of a folk-song in which he was interested, the peasant was so enthusiastic over the idea of helping the young Australian to get what he wanted that he ran out to the barn, took an ax from the wall and then ripped off nine feet of wall paper and gave it to Grainger. The celebrated pianist still has this interesting "Snatch of Song" among his most cherished possessions.

During his stay here on the campus, Mr Grainger will give two concerts, rehearse the orchestra, band, glee club, speak at the School of Music dinner, conduct the Gala Concert of Glee Club and Band Tuesday evening, and ... morning at 10 in the Music Annex on "Creativeness in the ...

Journalism Students Will Edit Democrat

The one issue of The Daily Democrat which is put out annually by Journalism department will be the Sunday edition May 6 this year.

This edition is part of the training of the journalism students and the Flambeau staff of 1944-45 will take over the editorial, business and advertising positions of the Democrat staff.

Sophomore reporters of Journalism 201 will do the r. orting, which they have already started by getting up material for features, interviews, and informative articles. On Saturday before the Sunday issue the reporters will get the regular daily news assignments that the Democrat reporters receive each day. Then they will cover the news of the town.

Local organizations and clubs will have late permission as usual to set until the paper comes off the press.

The faculty direction for this issue of the paper will be under Mr Earl L Vance, associate professor of Journalism, and Miss Pearl Shepard, instructor in English and Journalism.

bassadors of Good Will," made its first appearance at FSC in the spring of 1937. It reissued for 16 consecutive years, until the present war. "I would not be surprised if there may have been girls in that first audience who today are the mammas of girls who will be there Saturday night," said Director DeBruyn.

The Glee Club last year was a skeleton organization of about 15 men, and Director DeBruyn had been recruited to teach English to prospective members of the Army Air Forces. The outlook for a vocal organization was discouraging. Last fall the AAF teaching was discontinued and the enrollment of civilian students increased. But we new members of the Glee Club were untrained, and there were few of the older experienced men left to help show them the techniques employed. However, the new men began to work faithfully four times a week Each man was entitled to one brief voice lesson in return for his efforts. The club began to show promising signs at the beginning of the second semester when help came from discharged veterans. In the group sometimes might be with singers with etiations, and others who have served a not inconsiderable number of Nipponese planes.

In March the Club had progressed enough to make appearances at Starke, Camp Blanding, and at the City Veterans Hospital. The colonel in command of the Camp Blanding hospital wrote to the administration in Gainesville that his patients had enjoyed "one of the finest programs ever heard here."

YWCA Big Sisters Will Meet Tuesday

Wilma Humphrey, vice president of the Young Woman's Christian Association, is calling a meeting of the Big Sisters of next year Tuesday at 2 p m in the room of the Student Alumnae building, since there will be a convocation because of holy meetings on that night.

A paper has been placed on the bulletin board in Westcott so all girls who wish to be Big Sisters next year are urged to sign on it. However, girls who have signed the paper, but who want to be Big Sisters, may come to the meeting.

The chairman and secretary of the Big Sister group will be named at this meeting, and plans for the Big-Little Sister party during the 1946 orientation week will be discussed. Wilma also says that plans would be discussed for continuing activity between groups after the party.

Legislature in Brief

By CORDELIA BARCLAY

Florida's educational institutions of higher learning were in the news again this week, as the issue of representatives passed a bill concerning the status of the University of Florida, and as a legislative committee continued investigation of the death of a student in the University infirmary and subsequent charges of "neglect" and "waste" at the school.

The Senate-approved Baynard bill, which provides that wives and husbands of war veterans may, under the bill of rights, attend either the University of Florida or Florida State College for Women, if the bill is approved by the Governor, husbands of WAVES or WACs may enroll here, and wives of ex-servicemen can attend classes at Gainesville.

State attention was attracted by the investigation at Gainesville by a special legislative committee of the death of Howard Bennett, veteran student, in the school infirmary. Charges were made by Dr. Fred C. Cody, member of the Board of Control, that the death was due to neglect.

Monday night the investigating committee heard Dr T. Z Caron of Jacksonville, specialist on diabetic cases, say that Bennett, a diabetic, had received adequate treatment.

"Everything was done that medical science could do," said Dr Caron who examined the records for the Alumnae Association. He said that Dr Walter Murphree, physician in charge, stated that every attempt to find a fulltime physician had failed.

The charges of neglect made by Board of Control Member Scott were followed by charges of waste, in addition to the protest against the infirmary. Scott charged "waste and extravagance" in the operation of the university.

H P Leavins of Jacksonville, board president, attempted today the investigating committee that the waste charges were unfounded and unwarranted and unfounded in fact.

Acain's testimony came as the university presented its evidence in the continuing investigation's three-day hearing. Monday and Tuesday saw the Bartlett Smith legislative committee hear top of the university budget cut pulled three times, and Wednesday, Scott had testified for two hours of direct examination. The committee's 11 to 10 decision retained the college budget, and kept testimony from President John J Tigert in the record.

Tigert, in reply to Scott's statement that the university budget limit set by the budget had been paid to teachers and to the staff of the University of Florida, WRUF, said that the budget for the institution had been cut to meet the minimum requirements of peacetime conditions.

Acain, in opening testimony, said that the four other members of the Board of Control had been working on the budget since 10 24 hours after Scott had told a group of legislators in Tallahassee.

He explained that in his opinion the changes were made because "Mr Scott wants to run the University and the state treasurer members won t let him do it." The statement brought loud applause from many of the student members of the audience.

Acain added that the University had to continue its large budget, even though student enrollment had dropped, because during the end of the biennium "the University will be housing students in temporary barracks and teaching them in temporary classrooms."

If we haven't extra money available to meet these needs, the boys will do when they come back," Acain said, pointing out that of the 11 million dollars we will revert to the state treasury.

State finances and taxation were headline news this week as opposition continued to block passage of administration sponsored bills adding taxes to cigarettes and beer.

The administration's 4-cent cigarette tax was defeated last week when the Senate refused to override an unfavorable report of the finance and taxation committee.

Snow Tells Of Incan Relics

Pottery, Weaving, Carving Included in Exhibit

A South American atmosphere enveloped the informal crowd as it gathered Wednesday night on the fourth floor of the Student Alumnae building to see the rare collection of Incan relics.

As the visitors looked at the collection, Mr Walter Bone, the artist who arranged the exhibit, classified the relics consisting of pottery, weaving, wood carving, leather weaving, and various other handicrafts of the Incas which are said to be from 500 to 3,000 years old.

The relics which caused much attraction was a group of wood carvings from the Amazon valley, a verb, "See no evil, speak no evil, and hear no evil." It was that of the familiar Amazon monkeys.

Irish Is Appointed Special Consultant

Dr Marion Irish, professor of Political Science, has been appointed technical consultant by the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce, in a nation-wide survey of county government organization.

This survey has been initiated in response to the need, long recognized by specialists and now by Federal and other officials, for information about a level of government that is important both in itself and in relation to other government levels.

Dr Irish has also recently been elected to the national council of the National Civil Service Reformacy. The council is the policy forming body of the league. It is composed of personnel technicians in various parts of the country who are interested in the improvement of the merit system and its extension throughout the public service.

Coeducation Comes To Florida State

Florida State College for Women has become co-educational. After years of deliberation and months of controversial writing, the only remaining state in the union not to have a state supported institution of higher learning has at last changed its policies, and co-educational students will gain status permitting wives or husbands of ex-servicemen and women to attend both the University of Florida at Gainesville and Florida State College for Women at Tallahassee.

To have the hard-fought-for legislation, a student of FSC has only to join the WAC, WAVES, Marines or SPARS, get married and when she is discharged from the service, she and her husband may attend Florida State College together.

If a girl does not wish to join the service to get co-education, she may marry a serviceman and when he is discharged from the service they may attend the University of Florida.

The name of Florida State College for Women will not be changed.

College Girls Lead Local Church Groups

Methodfist leaders on campus are making examinations for the large the deputation program between Fresh an and Sophomore, who go into surrounding towns to present a weekend of youth emphasis in Methodist churches. Over thirty girls have been chosen surrounding churches since February 24 when the first team went out.

Before any deputation group left the college there was a special afternoon of training and inspiration led by Miss Florence Flinn, committee secretary and director of the college group. At the close of the training period the Reverend Mr Culverhouse of the district director of the surrounding area, led the service of consecration.

The majority of deputation weekends are arranged by Miss Harvarying only in small details. The team arrives at the local church on Friday night for a conference with the pastor and key young church leaders. Afternoon is taken up with detailed plans for the weekend and getting familiar with the local situation.

The team leads a business meeting and fellowship supper with the local young people on Saturday afternoon. Often the group breaks into four divisions for classes concerning various parts of the work of the Methodist Youth Fellowship.

Saturday night the college girls lead the recreation for the group.

Sunday is a full day. Team members are available to lead any part of church school activities. Usually they substitute for the morning sermon in the forms church service. Sunday afternoon is the occasion for Junior church afternoon activities. Just before they leave on Sunday night the team presents the tree, a cedar, at the Landis green corner nearest the dormitory.

University Glee Club Gives Show

Jo Anna Olson, Formerly Chicago Opera Singer, Is Featured

Al Alsenjo, Blind Pianist, Plays Original Song

The University of Florida Glee Club, directed by Mr John W Dobrum presented a vocal show last Saturday evening in Westcott auditorium.

Jo Anna Olson, a former opera and concert singer from Chicago was featured on the program. Mrs Olson, who is a member of the Civic Music Club of Gainesville, was one of two women who appeared in the cast. The other feminine member of the show was Ann Tucker, a student of Florida State College.

Mrs Olson sang the aria "On bel di Vedersa" ("One Fine Day") from Puccini's Madame Butterfly. She also sang "I'll See You Again" by Noel Coward, and "Wanting You" with Richard Kinney. Both were arrangers of the Glee Club.

Also featured on the program was Al Alsenjo, blind pianist who has made records with Paul Whiteman, Benny Goodman and Xavier Cugat. He introduced a number of his own composition, "Star Dust in Heaven." The words which have reference to light and dark were written by Alsenjo's brother Ben Kinney and Betty Jennings and David Sapp. As the song was dedicated to Jennie Murphree. After playing his own composition Mr Alsenjo agreed to show the girls how a classical number should be played and he played "La Cinquintaine" and starting with Shubert's "Unfinished Symphony" and developed "Accentuate the Positive."

Mr Dobrum said Mr Alsenjo's performance may be interested in knowing that within a week he is going to France to have an operation performed on his eyes. The doctors give the operation a seven to one chance of success.

The performance of "Faith's New Birth" was the practical presentation of a theory held by Susan J Bryan, University of Florida student. Fred Thomas Bryan is the baby while Mr Bryan played the piece. Mr Bryan also played "Rachmaninoff's "Polichinelle."

A skit called "Gwendolyn" was given in which David Braun, Ellen Braun and Jackie Braun

Students Approve FSC Ring Changes

A majority of students voted yesterday to accept the changes in the class ring design for Florida College ring. This action was taken by the Student Council.

In the new design, the flowers on either side of the stone will be changed, and the class year will be made narrower and shorter. The "FSC" on the front of the ring, with the present small size becoming the larger.

The changes were suggested as a result of the recent Junior Senior class meeting. They were made at this time because the present contract has expired and the change can be made when it is renewed.

Betty Lewis announced to the student body that contracts and invitations are now in the College Shop. Orders and books to be worn at commencement should be ordered through the Book Store as soon as possible.

Seniors Plant Tree At Annual Ceremony

The senior class sponsors, Mrs Laurie Hall, instructor in physical education, and Dr W H Rogers, professor of English, gave the class gift tree during the ceremony held by the sophomore-senior classes last night.

Following the planting of the tree, the seniors held their traditional ceremony to burn their books. This year, they decided to burn notes and notebooks which would be of no use rather than books in good repair because of the paper shortage.

The ceremony around the tree, a cedar, at the Landis green corner nearest the dormitory.

Past Flambeau Staff Honored at Banquet

Speeches Given By Advisers, Barclay Makes Awards

The theme of the annual Flambeau banquet, which was held Wednesday night at the Rainbow Banquet Room in honor of the outgoing staff, was "The Revolution." Humorous speeches were given by the faculty sponsors and members of the staff on subjects suggested to them by the toastmistress chairmen.

Mr Basil L Vance, associate professor of Journalism, was issued on the program as "Ambassador" Vance and designated to speak on "My Life in a Concentration Camp." Mr Vance, however, did not include this in his talk but enumerated Florida State College for Women's faculty giving on large daily papers throughout the country by virtue of their positions.

"I escaped but Returned" was the theme chosen by Pearle Crozier, instructor in English and journalism, who was identified on the program as "Commando."

X-Rays for TB Tests Given

Machine Adjusted to Take 150 Students an Hour

X-rays for tuberculosis, sponsored by the United States Public Health Service, are being given all this week through Wednesday May 9, in Landis recreation room and kitchen with Miss Helen Neely as technician in charge and Miss Dorothy Fulton assisting.

Students were notified of the time of their appointment by campus mail and a list was posted in Westcott. Day students are asked to come for their test at their convenience during the time scheduled for all students, which is through today.

The University of early tuberculosis cases as the objective the United States Public Health Service and the State Board of Health is sponsoring this program in co-operation with the local County TB and Health Association officials of Florida State College.

Though a similar series of examinations was conducted in the year 1942-43, this year's machine has the advantage of increased facilities and the latest type of x-ray expected to benefit a larger number than before.

Over a thousand students had been X-rayed by May 5. The X-ray machine was adjusted so that an average of 150 students an hour could be taken.

The pictures are taken on a 35 Millimeter film and are being developed in the college dark room. There are 350 X-ray pictures to one roll of film.

Dr Dorothy Cruess, physician at the college infirmary, stated that the plates will be read some time before the end of the term. A certain percentage of those showing positive signs of the chest film will be X-rayed again on large film. She also stated

Sophomores Honor Seniors at Supper

Sophomore-Senior supper, held in the old Gardner Dining Hall last night, featured a "heavenly" theme.

The theme was carried out by a small replica of the gates of heaven, over which hung a large wedding cake on each table. Wearing halos, wings, and white dresses the new sophomore council members, who served the tables.

After the supper a skit was presented by the sophomore council, and a quartet made up of Betty LaBree, Jackie Sievers, Jonnye Petty, and Marilyn Dewey sang the original song written by Daphne Rowe in honor of the seniors.

Special tables were reserved for the class officers and the faculty guests.

In former years, the supper was a breakfast, but wartime conditions made it necessary to change this year's plans slightly.

Watkins Will Give Recital Saturday

Anna Watkins, pianist and composition major, will present a recital for her graduation in Landis Saturday evening at 8:15 in Westcott auditorium.

Assisting her will be Rachel Crotwell, violin student, who is concert master of the college orchestra and a member of the band. Rachel will play several violin selections on the program. Anna has already received her certificate in voice, and will receive her certificate in piano. She will be qualified to teach both voice and piano.

The program will include two selections from Beethoven, "The Lark" by Glinka-Pakiirev, "Nocturne" by Reighdt and Copeland's "Prelude and Fugue" played by Anna Watkins. Rachel will play "Slavonic Dance in G Minor" and De Beriot's "Scene de Ballet."

Grainger Will Be Featured In FSC Music Week Opening Sunday Afternoon At Four

Week Will Be Cantered Around Pianist-Composer; Opening Concert Will Be Presented By Florida State College Band

Music week at Florida State College, featuring Percy Grainger, pianist and composer, will be formally opened this weekend by an outdoor concert of the college band under the direction of Frank Sykora, conductor. Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock and a recital by Ramona C Besard, organist, Sunday evening at 7 o'clock in the college auditorium.

OUTDOOR CONCERT

The outdoor concert will be given from the front steps of Westcott building with the audience seated in chairs on the lawn. A program of marches, operatic numbers and light classics will be given at this time. In the event of rain, the concert will be held in Westcott audit.,ium.

RECITAL

Mrs Beard's recital is the program planned for last winter which was put off because of the breakdown of the big organ in Westcott. It will include groups of classic, romantic and modern selections.

Recently Mrs Beard gave a program at the University of Florida and has also been active in the Music Week activities here at FSC.

Sunday morning Percy Grainger and his wife will arrive to be guests of the college for a week. While both Mr and Mrs Grainger are very fond of the out-of-doors, the college has opened Service and the State Board of Health is sponsoring this program in co-operation with the local County TB and Health Association officials of Florida State College.

George Moss appeared. Just before the skit went on a last minute change had to be made, the gun that was to be used in the play was missing. A knife was substituted and in the few minutes in which the scenery was changed the actors had to memorize new lines that referred to a knife instead of a gun.

Among the specialty numbers were some selected accordion numbers by James Busse who aroused the ire of the Evens by remarking, "You've got me at odds. I don't know what to play." Also included under specialty were some dance numbers by Elmer Allen and some Boogie Woogie played by Al Carlton.

Among the soloists was Frank Grafton who sang "Water Boy" a Negro convict song arranged by Avery Robinson, and William Goehring who sang Kern's "Ole Man River." Frank Grafton who elicted cries of "Frankieboy" from his audience will belong to Uncle Sam in a week or so.

Among the numbers which the Glee Club sang was Dett's "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jericho," Humfley's "Ole Gray Robe," Bach's "Benedictionn," and Frimi's "Song of the Vagabonds." "Sweet Marguerite" was sung for an encore and due to slip of the tongue Director DeBruyn accidently gave George Moss, a member of the Glee Club, credit for writing it.

Members of the Glee Club are Fred Dennis from Pensacola; Richard Kinzey from Winter Haven; Gene Masters from St. Augustine; Rush Pappy from Key West; Sam Payne from Milton; Even Cameron from Havana, Cuba; Joe Kaliba from Ocala; Dale Plammer from Milford, Illinois; Ralph Sexton from Vero Beach; Ray Townsend from St. Petersburg; Elmo Valdes from Tampa; Edward Walker from Tampa. DUKE UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF NURSING

DURHAM, N. C.

The next class will be admitted September 27, 1945. Only one class is enrolled each year.

Basic entrance requirements are intelligence, aptitude for nursing, and character. The academic requirements are 16 units of High School and at least one semester each of College Chemistry and Biology or Zoology. Annual tuition cost is $100 and covers the cost of instruction and maintenance.

Duke University School of Nursing offers the B.S. in Nursing upon completion of the 3-year nursing course and 60 semester hours of acceptable College credits.

Duke University School of Nursing also participates in the U. S. Nurse Cadet Corps program. Under this plan, students who pledge themselves to continue in nursing throughout the war, receive free tuition, uniforms and a small monthly stipend.

Application forms and catalogue can be obtained from: Dean, Duke University School of Nursing, Duke Hospital, Durham, North Carolina.

Legislature In Brief

mittee. A new three cent tax was proposed Wednesday, but an attempt to waive rules and have the bill considered on the floor immediately was blocked.

Blocking was accomplised by the passage earlier in the week of a rule demanding a two-thirds majority vote to get discussion on the floor of a bill killed in committee. Administration forces have not been able to get a repeal of the rule, and opposition groups threaten to filibuster until June if necessary to block the repeal.

The house has been engaged in filibustering action on the senate-approved beer tax. There has seemed to be enough strength in the house to eventually pass the bill, according to observers, and Senator Sheldon, who opposed the bill in the senate, conceded in a public statement that it will pass.

Also of interest in the Legislature this week was the favorable report in the house health committee of a bill to create a present federal law providing for enrichment of all flour made in the state. The majority of southern states have already enacted such a law. Another house committee killed a bill providing for regulation of plate bakeries and prohibition of return to bakeries of bread unsold by groceries.

Action on the floor of both the house and senate is expected for the juvenile court bill, providing for establishment of detention homes, separate courts, and probation officers for juvenile delinquency cases. The bill has been reported favorably by house and senate committees.

House public health committees approved senate bill calling for premarital and premarital syphilis tests.

The senate passed a resolution calling for a new move to revise U S house and senate treaty ratification process.

Ashton Named Head Of Senate Group

Legislative Committee to Aid In Regulation Changes

Student Senate met Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of appointing a committee for the nomination of the Legislative committee, and a chairman and members of the Codifying committee.

Martha Jane Brown, chairman of the nominating committee presented Maurine Ashton for chairman of the Legislative committee. This was approved by a unanimous vote. It was then suggested that members of the Legislative committee and chairman and members of the Codifying committee be nominated and elected at that meeting, but this was voted down.

It was finally decided after a debate that the presiding chairman of Senate, Sarah Lewis, appoint the nominating committee for this purpose. Their names to be presented at the next meeting of Senate on Wednesday, May 9. Martha Jane Brown was appointed chairman of this committee.

The Legislative committee was divided for several weeks ago, its purpose to be the study of the Gold Book so that changes may be suggested which will clarify and bring up to date the college constitution. The purpose of the Codifying committee will be to rearrange and revise the Gold Book, and to approve changes suggested by the Legislative committee.

There was also some debate on the suggestion that the Codifying and the Legislative committees be combined into one committee, since their work will be so nearly parallel. However, since both committees would retain separate chairmen and the work of both would remain the same, it was decided that they need not be combined.

The appointment of a "pool" of those qualified to substitute for absent members of Senate also was discussed, but was not decided.

Men Invade FSC; U of F Glee Club Here to Give Show

Hair came down out of ker... chiefs—prettiest dresses were donned—brightest lipstick put on. This could mean but one thing—MEN. Men, lots of men, from the University of Florida, just wandering around until taken in hand by a certain group of warblers who had a priority. There were hundreds of free peering and wondering and giving the boys in college togs or faces the thrill of their lives, as the girls made holes of approval and appreciation.

And what did these "absent but not forgotten" creatures have to say about their recent visit to FSC? Well, listen—

Bill Bryan: "Isn't Betsy Marvin about the best pianist on the campus?"

Joe Katiba: "Have you made any last stands like Custer's?" after being told that Bryan was the campus fort.

Elmer Allen: "Such a lovely campus and girls."

Ralph Sexton: "Why don't more girls come to Glville and take pharmacy or something?"

Frank Grafton: (He sang "Water Boy.") "Did you really like it?"

And all agreed: "Why, oh why didn't co-education go through?"

Jennie Murphree Hos Costume Barn Dance

Jeannie Murphree girls participated in a barn dance or "loose pearl" party last Wednesday night from 7:30 till 9:30. The tickets were five cents apiece, and the girls were asked to come dressed as couples.

The prize for the couple dressed in the most appropriate costumes went to Peggy Stanaland and Nell Carro.

Frances Cannon was in charge of the arrangements for the dance and Babe Evans was the official "caller."

Chaperones for the occasion were Miss Louise Creamer and Mrs Adelaide Wax, resident counselors in Jennie Murphree hall.

Legislators Speak

At the house meetings last Tuesday night, the guest speakers were senators and representatives from all parts of Florida, who spoke on the varied duties of state legislators. Some told of some of the bills which come up before them.

Representative Evans Crary spoke in the Auguste Conradi theater to all residents of off-campus and sorority houses. Senator John E Mathews, District 18, Jacksonville, spoke in Bryan, Representative Mabry A Carlton of Duval county spoke in Broward, and Representative George E Oakes of Dade county spoke in Reynolds. Members of the legislature were to have talked in the other dormitories but were unable to be present.

Price panel assistants, working with local CWA boards, make about 400,000 calls a month on retailers to check ceiling prices.

Positions Offered

Seniors interested in positions as Systems Service Operators with Remington Rand Inc are asked to come to the Personnel Office for additional information. The duties include training personnel, installing punched-card systems and sales work.

Sun Goddesses on Landis Deck Have Special Suntan Processes

Now that the rain and the cold weather have ceased, and the golden Florida sunshine, sun-tan lotions are once more among the more important things of life at FSC. They vary widely, but their users all agree that their own especial choice is best for their own use.

One of the most popular of these lotions seems to be Noxema. Applied before and after it prevents redness and promotes a smooth even tan.

Among the unusual tan lotions are a mixture of tincture of iodine and mineral oil, mixtures of vinegar and water, olive oil and several other oils of great variety in the usual proportions. Sun-tan lotions for sale at drug counters and beauty shops are of course in great demand.

As well as lotions used as aids to a lovely coat of tan, there are a number of other procedures that are considered very helpful. Some advocate the use of a cool shower immediately upon returning from exposure in the sun, while another group insists that a cold shower is the thing. There is a belief that the chemical action of soap on the burned skin causes peeling. Hence for a period of time no soap is used, the shower: are taken frequently, but completely.

The time of exposure to the sun is also another point of wide disagreement. The most prevailing practices and beliefs are the following: A short exposure in the hot sun of early afternoon is quicker and most effective. A long exposure in the cooler and milder sun of the late morning sun is not quite so quick, but produces a more even and lasting tan.

When an extremely brown girl was asked what her particular practices were, she replied, "I just lie out on the sundeck at 1 p m the chance, and the sun does all light by itself."

WAVE Reports

There is never a dull moment for L Marie Crouch Y2-c, FSCW alumna, who is stationed in Washington, D C. A graduate of 1941, Yeoman Crouch has had many experiences, "sad and happy experiences, also quite exciting," since her enlistment into the WAVES.

Working in the Bureau of Naval Personnel has enabled her to meet many interesting Navy men such as, Lieutenant Bob Crosby, S1-c Gene Kelly and Tyrone Power. Says Yeoman Crouch of the Navy, "You can see it is never dull—not when you are in the Navy and especially when you are in Washington."

Methodist Council Hears About China

Cyte Tells of War, Inflation, And Scarcity of Books

Miss Sylvia Cyte of Canton, China made a short talk to the Methodist council Wednesday night on the subject of the activities and hardships of the Chinese girls since the beginning of the war with Japan eight years ago.

She spoke especially of the great scarcity of books for the students who are now living in caves and studying in the daylight because they do not have the kerosine fuel to use at night. Also the students could not buy the few books that were available because of the inflated prices. Inflation was so extreme in China that a loaf of bread about $200 and one egg could not be bought for less than 720. Miss Cyte said.

She closed her talk by singing one of the war songs that is quite popular in her native country today. She said that the girls were not neglecting their singing, and their often sang to the wounded soldiers in the hospitals.

Miss Cyte came to America six years ago when her family sent her over to get her college education. She received her master's degree from a Boston college and is now engaged in social work. At present time, she is in Jacksonville doing lecture work.

Seriousness Will Prevail on V-E Day

There will be no general dismissal of classes or holiday atmosphere because the total war will not be over, announced the recently appointed committee to make plans for campus activities on V-E Day. The committee is composed of faculty and students and is headed by Miss Edith West, assistant professor in classics.

If the announcement of V-E Day should come during a class hour, the students present at that hour will be dismissed for a college community service lasting 30 to 45 minutes. This service, which will be led by President Doak S Campbell or in his absence someone designated by him, will be held in back of Westcott building, if time and weather permit. If no outdoor gathering is not advisable, the service will be held in Westcott auditorium.

Should the news came at night, the announcement to the campus will be made at a time that the president of the college decides best.

The chimes will announce V-E Day by the Star-Spangled Banner. This will be done only in the authorization of the president or someone designated by him. The National Anthem will not be played here before that occasion.

Staff Has Party

New reporters of the Flambeau were given an outdoor weiner roast by the Flambeau staff last Monday night at the home of Miss Pearle Shepard, instructor in journalism.

The reporters entertained the staff members with a skit, introducing themselves. Imitations were also given as part of the entertainment.

Mr Earl Vance, professor of journalism, was also present.

Betty Dowd was in charge of the committee for arrangements.

Ashton Named Head Of Senate Group

Legislative Committee to Aid In Regulation Changes

Student Senate met Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of appointing a committee for the nomination of the Legislative committee, and a chairman and members of the Codifying committee.

Martha Jane Brown, chairman of the nominating committee presented Maurine Ashton for chairman of the Legislative committee. This was approved by a unanimous vote. It was then suggested that members of the Legislative committee and chairman and members of the Codifying committee be nominated and elected at that meeting, but this was voted down.

It was finally decided after a debate that the presiding chairman of Senate, Sarah Lewis, appoint the nominating committee for this purpose, their names to be presented at the next meeting of Senate on Wednesday, May 9. Martha Jane Brown was appointed chairman of this committee.

The Legislative committee was divided for several weeks ago, its purpose to be the study of the Gold Book so that changes may be suggested which will clarify and bring up to date the college constitution. The purpose of the Codifying committee will be to rearrange and revise the Gold Book, and to approve changes suggested by the Legislative committee.

There was also some debate on the suggestion that the Codifying and the Legislative committees be combined into one committee, since their work will be so nearly parallel. However, since both committees would retain separate chairmen and the work of both would remain the same, it was decided that they need not be combined.

The appointment of a "pool" of those qualified to substitute for absent members of Senate also was discussed, but was not decided.

Journalism Students See Mabry War Room

The 201 journalism reporting class went to Dale Mabry last Saturday to see the war room. Arrangements for the trip were made by FPC Clyde Small of Dale Mabry.

Sgt Lloyd B Vaughn explained the war in Europe, using the map in the war room for the illustrations. He brought the war up to today.

The education facilities of the army were discussed by Pvt Holton. He explained the completeness of the plans for education.

While the class was at Dale Mabry news of the rumored came over the teletype machine. This aroused the excitement of the class and made the visit more interesting.

The army's heard foreign records that go overseas to the soldiers, enabling them to hear every sound of foreign words.

Men Invade FSC; U of F Glee Club Here to Give Show

Hair came down out of ker... chiefs—prettiest dresses were donned—brightest lipstick put on. This could mean but one thing—MEN. Men, lots of men, from the University of Florida, just wandering around until taken in hand by a certain group of warblers who had a priority. There were hundreds of free peering and wondering and giving the boys in college togs or faces the thrill of their lives, as the girls made holes of approval and appreciation.

And what did these "absent but not forgotten" creatures have to say about their recent visit to FSC? Well, listen—

Bill Bryan: "Isn't Betsy Marvin about the best pianist on the campus?"

Joe Katiba: "Have you made any last stands like Custer's?" after being told that Bryan was the campus fort.

Elmer Allen: "Such a lovely campus and girls."

Ralph Sexton: "Why don't more girls come to Glville and take pharmacy or something?"

Frank Grafton: (He sang "Water Boy.") "Did you really like it?"

And all agreed: "Why, oh why didn't co-education go through?"

Demonstration School Has Drives and Celebrations

May Day festivities, paper and clothing drives and a bond selling campaign comprised the many activities of the Demonstration school pupils this past week.

Last Tuesday afternoon the elementary grade pupils held their annual May Day party on the east side of the Demonstration building with Tom Patterson as king, Dorothy Fararo as the May Day queen and Rose Mary McLemore as Lady Spring. Songs and dances were given by the various elementary grade children.

The annual May Day program for the high school division was held last night in the college physical education building. Students from the seventh through the twelfth grades and letter men to numbered over 200. Virginia Cook, elected by the grade-school children, was Queen of May.

Mrs Ramona C Beard, organist, will appear in recital Sunday evening at 7 o'clock as part of Music Week.

Desirable Qualities of Future Husband Subject of Psychology Student's Poll

Martha Cowan, for her term paper in adolescent perchology, has been conducting a survery among students on campus to see what they considered the five most desirable qualities in a husband.

Martha interviewed 50 freshmen and 50 upperclassmen (juniors and seniors only). The most desirable quality in the freshmen was found to be humor, the fourths of them agreed on this. The upperclassmen placed a sense of humor most important by a majority of 98 per cent.

The four other most important things according the the freshmen were in order of rank a sense of responsibility, fondness for children, broadmindedness and ability to be a good provider. The ranking given by the juniors and seniors was a sense of humor, ambition, broadmindedness and intelligence.

Among the qualities considered unimportant by freshmen were good-looks, fondness for music, fondness for dancing, resemblance to the girl's father, habit of smoking a pipe, service record and officer's ranking in service. Of these, fondness for dogs, resemblance to the girl's father and the two service items were not considered important by upperclassmen either. Other things that the upperclassmen did not consider important qualities in a husband were "a way with the women," worldliness, fondness for sports and ,bettneess from alcohol and cigarettes.

There were several striking differences between freshmen and upperclassmen. While 78 per cent of the upper classmen thought a sense of humor essential, only 48 per cent of the freshmen classed it so. Though none of the juniors and seniors placed abstinence from alcohol among the top five qualities, 21 per cent of the freshmen did. Twenty per cent of the freshmen thought a husband should have no pre-marital relations, while 4 per cent of the upperclassmen considered other things more important.

Forty per cent of the freshmen would not marry against their parents' will, but only 26 per cent of the upperclassmen made this statement.

Only 24 per cent of the upper classmen disapproved of divorce, while 44 per cent of the freshmen did.

It may be interesting to note that neither freshmen nor upperclassmen placed food-lcocks or abstinence from cigarettes or alcohol among the five most important qualities.

Perhaps one of the most significant things is that while the freshmen agreed on the five most important qualities by majorities ranging from 78 per cent down to 56 per cent the upper classmen agreed on their decisions by majorities ranging from 64 per cent up to 96 per cent.

New Books Are Now In Browsing Room

The browsing room in the Library has made a number of recent additions to its collection of books.

One addition is a thin volume containing Nathaniel Hawthorne's famous story of King Midas. The title is Golden Touch. It is bound in cream-colored, fine silk, and the illustrations are illuminated with gold paint. The volume is decorated by the artist Valenti Angelo.

Numerous examples of Rockwell Kent's illustrations are seen in the new copy of Herman Melville's Pea-hard's Paul Banyan. Among other additions are "Russia at War and Peace, illustrated by the Russian artist, Verestch; The Clocks of Strasbourg, illustrated by Andre Durenceau, Currier and Ives, Prints, known to the American People," by Harry T Peters, contains many plates, both colored and black and white, and a few pages of explanatory text.

Honorary Initiates

Pi Delta Phi, national French honorary, initiated seven new members at a meeting on April 23. They were Miss Ruth Campbell, honorary initiate; Ann Holbrook, Joyce Funke, Dorothy Bowman, Mary Florence Ivey, Mary McRory and Ruby Plant.

Attendants to the queen were Winifred Spear, Jeanette Smith, Dolorees Wayman, Mary Nicholoson, Lila Kathryn Turner and Frances Jane Hall.

The program, held to honor the queen and her court, included a ballet dance, zuhlo selection, milk maid dance, tap dance, and sones by a trio presented by various Florida State College girls. Helen McCann sang a number of songs. There were also songs by Jack Golden and Jack Boykin. The seventh and eighth grade girls held a May Pole dance, and a grand march was led by the queen and her escort. The processional and crowning of Virginia Cook as queen preceded the enter.ainment.

After the grand march, there were seven special no-break dances, one honoring each of the members of the court beginning with the queen's dance.

Miss Mary Jane Medlin, physical education teacher, was chairman of a committee of teachers and students who planned the May Day program. Serving on the teachers' committee were Miss Rose Mae Williams, Miss Lou Cockrin and Miss Ruth Smith, Miss Catherine Turner, Deora Calloway and Winifred Spear were on the students' committee.

A clothing drive sponsored by the Key club, a national boys' organization at the Demonstration school and the Red Cross, day, Dean Eyman estimated that over one pound of used clothing was contributed.

Last Sunday morning, local Boy Scout collected the week's accumulation of waste paper from the salvage bin on the west side of the Demonstration school.

A bond drive for the public school students will be inaugurated Monday and continue until the close of school. The quota for the Demonstration school has been set at $3,000 and a sale of at least one bond to each school child.

The junior-senior banquet was held at the Woman's club last Friday night. Speaking at it Dr R L Eyman, dean of the School of Education, over 200 people attended the banquet. The dance which followed. Among those present were: Dr and Mrs R L Eyman, Dr and Mrs R L Goulding, Mrs Marion W Black, Miss Lou Cockrin, Miss Ruth Bonury, Miss Clare Goertz, Mrs Cecil Strong and Mrs Nina Mae Williams. Tenth grade girls assisted in the serving, and mothers of students in the 12th grade assisted in the preparations for the banquet.

● PIGEON-HOLE OR PROGRESS

Student Senate appointed a committee Wednesday to make nominations for members to serve on the reeodifying and legislative committees for the coming year. It is gratifying to see that these committees to examine the rules and regulations and the organization of the Gold Book will continue their work.

Progress made by the legislative committee in the first year of its existence, as shown in the chairman's report to Senate two weeks ago, has been slow. This is understandable, realizing the studying of the many laws in our statutes is a huge task. But now that the groundwork has been laid, it seems logical that the committee for the coming year will be able to come to many more definite conclusions, and that it will not be a process of revision which will necessarily span several years.

Dangers, however, as well as advantages are brought about by having such a committee. Several instances during the past year have shown very definite tendencies to refer any controversial discussion on rules in Senate to the committee to be considered at their leisure. It could easily become a block to action on rules that Senate itself could take immediately.

Even if the legislative committee sees need for changes and suggests that these revisions be made, Student Senate does not have the final power to see that these changes become new rules or replace former ones. The reason: powers delegated to Student Senate are limited. The Faculty Committee on Student Affairs reserves the right in the CCA constitution to make final decision on all legislation. With such a set-up, the years of work of the legislative committee might well be wasted, should their recommendations not happen to agree with the opinion of those with whom the final power rests.

Furthermore, no provision has been made for the legislative committee to study our constitution for improvement. Neither has a separate committee been appointed for this purpose. There is a definite need for such a committee. As has been pointed out, the legislative committee can't simply as one of investigation, not one of legislating as the name suggests. Also, this committee has unearthed numerous regulations during the past year for which they can find no specific origin.

Until the powers of the constitution and the specific powers of each branch of CGA have been more clearly defined . . . which could be the objectiv eof a committee to study the constitution . . . very little headway can be made.

● SYMBIOSIS

This coming fall our college is changing from the semester plan to the quarter system. To make this change takes lots of planning, discussion, and work, and one of the principal changes to be worked out is the college curriculum.

Because all students will be affected by whatever results are obtained, because many students have little knowledge of the workings of the quarter system and only a vague idea of course arrangements, it might be profitable to stage an open forum. In such a forum students could submit their idea on the molding of the curriculum to fit the new system and together with the faculty could arrive at a more satisfactory conclusion. Organized as a joint meeting of the faculty and students to express each others ideas and to receive new insights to the pertinent problem which faces us, such a forum, if successful, might pave the way for atunt representation on the Curriculum Committee.

In an informal discussion the students, by virtue of their position, could voice opinions which faculty members might not realize; and in turn the members of our faculty, because of their position, could explain and answer questions in regard to proposed plans for courses under the quarter system.

It seems to be the opinion of some persons that students should not be enlightened on the program until it has been completely worked out, but because we are the ones who will be most affected by it and because we have the right to express our point of view we feel that a forum of this kind could act as a sample of "symbiosis."

● SAN FRANCISCO

The declared purpose of the San Francisco conference is for the United Nations to understand one another and come to agreements on international organization which will help to establish a lasting peace throughout the world. It has not been instituted to see which nation can out do the other or win more prestige.

We feel that the best way to assure "friendly co-existence of nations" is through democracy. We feel that because we are Americans and through 150 years that has been the American way.

In view of the heated controversies which have already arisen at the conference, we wonder what sort of international organization will be produced. Are we as United Nations strong enough within ourselves to resolve national differences and to establish a security organization based upon the equal sovereignty of all nations, great or small—an equality which will conform with our basic democratic ideals?

If we are not strong and wise enough to agree and solve the problems existing among the United Nations, how can we expect to achieve and maintain peace in a world which must inevitably include our enemies. We must recognize that the Axis exists in our world, and we must approach the present situation with realistic and practical ideals.

Neville Chamberlain thought we could find "peace in our time," and he was an old man who had lived a full life. The question is can we who have a lifetime remaining before us prevent a third World War in our time?

Once it was curly; now all curl has gone

It's always in my eyes, both day and night
It's so stringy, what a sight!

The Army Takes Over
By John Fischer—

The final triumph of the army in the battle to decide whether military or civilian authorities would administer the machinery which controls the nation's economy is discussed by John Fischer in the current issue of Harper's. Mr Fischer, at present on Harper's editorial staff, has spent the past ten years in Washington working as a newspaperman and government administrator.

After waging four successful campaigns during the beginning of the war, the military finally succeeded in seizing possession of the dividing forces of the country's economic administration during the early months of this year. From beginning to end the issue has been whether the military or the civilian administration should direct the war economy. But, says Mr Fischer, it is not a fight between the army and New Deal, and has little to do with political issues. The positions taken by men like Harry Hopkins and James Byrnes who support the military and Leon Henderson and Robert Nathan who oppose it. Neither is it between civilians and the fighting army but rather between civilians and supply officers in Washington. The military is led by Under-Secretary of War Robert Patterson. General Somervell, commander of the Army Service Forces, and General Lucius Clay.

The final "battle of Conversion" took place at the organization of the Defense Advisory Commission in 1940. Here and thanks to strong isolationist sentiment neither the army nor the Commission knew exactly what was expected of it. The Committee was to "mobilize" the economy and "co-ordinate" for the War and Navy Departments did the actual purchasing. In this manner the military won by simply refusing to take responsibility for the job of holding down military requirements to the economy's ability to produce and to fight for equipment for civilian industries even those intimately connected with the war effort.

The third conflict came over who should decide how available supplies should be allotted out. Under a decision reached in the fall of 1941 by Donald Nelson, chief of WPB, and the military over Nelson's reconversion policy. After this decision military officials last December it was realized that the war economy machine had been a mistake. In spite of the fact that Army officials admitted that it was transportation difficulties and not shortages as Nelson claimed, delaying with the required supplies reaching the troops, the military set out to take charge of the war effort. With the excuse that civilians might lie down on the job after the defeat of Germany the military finally succeeded in gaining the control they desired.

Results of Military Control—

Almost at once, says Mr Fischer, the army went on a buying spree, storing up warehouses of goods for the future. One result "will be the most colossal waste of the entire war in essential civilian supplies." For the past 18 months the military has been striving to pare the civilian economy as close as possible to a "bare level of subsistence". Although civilians would willingly give up anything to shorten the war one day they see no excuse for impossible hardships for the sake of making the civilians "feel" the war. Moreover, he says, in such cases as denying badly needed steel for railroads the transportation of food and war materials is also hampered.

The development of mistrust of this situation between the home front has been followed by Congressional investigations. The author believes that perhaps President Truman, who has formerly shown interest in these matters will "restore civilian management to war production" if not then it may be Congress that will take over the side of the civilian administrators.

Demobilization and Common Sense From Fortune's The Job Ahead—

Under Fortune's "The Job Before Us" the editors establish "Demobilization and Common Sense" in which Justice Byrnes' theory for demobilization is set forth.

Reconversion will definitely be in effect on V-E day, says the author, in spite of the fact that there will still be Japan to defeat. Already the United States Army has cut its program for small arms ammunition and the Navy has abandoned its plan for building an "insurance" fleet of seven-

In This Our Time.

By GLORIA REED

Valley and the big industrial cities of the northern plain came about after the sudden drive of General Mark Clark's Eighth and Fifth armies. The strategy of the drive followed this plan: Instead of continuing wearying face-to-face combat with the enemy, a mighty American armored column accelerated the Po river and drove straight north toward Switzerland. This move cut the Nazi troops in the Italian Riviera sector off from those in the east, thus depriving them of supplies and making surrender imminent.

While the world awaited the official announcement of the end of hostilities in Germany on Wednesday, a truce was reported signed to the surrender of all German forces in Italy to the American forces.

The surrender of the monthslong German defense of the Po area, most important of the Russkrya and only 362 miles from the Japanese homeland, American forces launched an offensive which appeared to be the first blow to push the enemy off the island. In the north Marine divisions reached the island's northern tip, but in the south American troops had not progressed as far inching toughier going. A dispatch said heavy reinforcements had been sent to the area.

Allied invasion of Dutch Borneo was reported by official Australian sources while General Douglas MacArthur remained silent on this and announced that American troops had reached within six miles of Davao on the vital port of Mindanao in the Philippines.

Radio Tokyo reported that Allied assault troops had landed near Tarakan, great oil shipping port just off Borneo's northeast coast. The Japanese claimed the invasion had been beaten back.

The Japanese army in southern Burma—estimated at 30,000—is cut off from escape except toward British and Indian armored forces who took Pegu and severed the main road and rail line leading to Thailand. Pegu is 50 miles north of Rangoon. During the British-Indian advance on Pegu, Allied planes bombed and strafed Japanese troops, killed pioneers, 100 of whom were Americans airmen who were shot down in that area.

Peace Organization

The United Nations conference in San Francisco, put Belgium, South Africa, Norway and Venezuela in charge of three of the commissions which will draft the charter for a world organization. Australia and Canada have also had their place in the conference.

However as real work is underway, it was yet to be determined whether questions would be decided by majority or by two-thirds rule. Foreign Commissioner Molotov said he favored the two-thirds rule, because the American republics alone could constitute a two-thirds majority and he was eager in allowing a proposal to be adopted by a mere majority. Secretary of State Stettinius and British foreign Secretary Eden did not give their opinions on the matter.

The Students Speak . . .

Since the announcement of VE Day is being eagerly awaited by everyone and is expected to come at any moment, this week's column is concerned with the question "What do you think people will do on VE Day?"

I think think that people will want to be at home with their families. They will want to spend that day in prayer.

GERTRUDE GARRETTS, sophomore

Since VE Day will be the first step toward final victory, I think that everyone should keep in mind that the war is not over and dedicate themselves to renewing their efforts to doing everything they can to end the war. They will probably spend that day in giving thanks for the end of one phase of the war.

Mickey Fountain, senior

I think that people will be calm and not do much celebrating. They will stay at home listening to the radio and newspapers.

Lonnie Friday and Sara Polhill, juniors.

We have been waiting for the news of VE Day so long that we will probably be speechless about it and take it in our stride. Naturally everyone will want to spend the day in prayer.

Ann Nicholson, sophomore

I think that everyone will be so excited that they won't know what to do.

Jo Wilson, freshman

This is term paper season and everyone is hard at work. Well, anyway this is term paper season. We decided that the seniors who have stood many term seasons ought to be allowed to speak. It is their last time to write in this things that have been going on all year been to set on your typewriter. If not, then it may be Congress that will take over the side of the civilian administrators.

Demobilization and Common Sense From Fortune's The Job Ahead—

Under Fortune's "The Job Before Us" the editors establish "Demobilization and Common Sense" in which Justice Byrnes' theory for demobilization is set forth.

Reconversion will definitely be in effect on V-E day, says the author, in spite of the fact that there will still be Japan to defeat. Already the United States Army has cut its program for small arms ammunition and the Navy has abandoned its plan for building an "insurance" fleet of seven-

Odd-Even Softball To Be Played Today

Each Team Has One Game To Credit Before Finals

Odd and Evens will again renew their rivalry when they play today at five o'clock on the soccer field, in the Odd-Even softball game.

This week, the class games were played with the senior-sophomore combination winning the opener on Monday, 4-3, while on Wednesday the freshmen and juniors won the game with a 13-8 score. Battery for the sophomores-seniors were Louise Fernandez, pitcher, and Mary Louise Fernandez, catcher, while the freshmen and juniors Rosie Whitaker was pitching and Sarah Bennett catching. Anna Glese pitched for the Evens during the last inning of Wednesday's game.

Allene Trieste, Odd leader, declared that the Odds had shaped up well this season. She also commented that the Evens were in for a surprise in today's game.

The Odds have already seen our surprise," was Frankie Hall's remark when she learned of the Odd's impending victory. refering to the Evens pitcher, Anna Glese.

In case you are planning to go to that May Day dance don't forget to fill out Form 8a3 in triplicate. Send one to Miss Ellis' secretary capa and fill them with the information plucked from a multi-colored goose and send them to someone Important who will send back a letter of permission. You can then comply with before the moon changes and get something. We aren't sure that these rules are quite exactly right, but we are pretty sure something like you can't go wrong in doing this.

...

We've heard some people complaining about that little pile of boards and stuff in front of the Science Building, but we can't see like it. We stumble over it on our way to the library all the time and we don't count how many times we've been there by checking the scratches on our knees. In years to come a few pieces of wood will make us nostalgic for dear old FSC.

This has been a comparatively quiet week, even though people trotting around decked out in red berets, and a couple of thousand hectic looking girls trying to read three books at one time or trying to make up 10 plume periods in one week.

The little piano is missing from Landis parlor. No one knows what happened to it but it is Dr Cockrell. The indignant girls have protested but still it is gone with a "whatdoesitmatter" in its place. Will somebody please bring the little thing back and let it rest in its rightful place?

There is a sweet little boy at home that we've started writing to like mad this week. He has a lot of personality and we really don't mind wearing low heels when we go out with him. Maybe he can't rhumba—or even foxtrot, but we have been away from home for a long time and all those cute boys got transferred. Anyway he's one of the NICEST boys we know and he is SO dependable. At least we hope he's dependable.

Tuberculosis X-rays Are Among Health Services Offered Students and Faculty

As one of many health services offered at Florida State College, all students, faculty and staff members and employees of the college have the opportunity this week and next of being given X-ray tests for tuberculosis. Machines being used for the examinations, which are financed by the United States Public Health Service, are equipped to X-ray 300 students per hour, as compared to only 20 to 40 when facilities were first brought here in 1942. Also for the first time this year, faculty members as well as students may receive tests. All students are aware of this opportunity, but many do not realize the volume of work performed throughout the year by the institution.

"Our chief objective is to cure patients and allow them to return to duty as quickly as possible with a minimum of danger to other students," stated Dr Dorothy Chayes, college physician, referring to this work.

In carrying out such an objective, the infirmary has given 131 chest X-rays since January 1, has successfully treated a wide variety of serious illnesses and has given four units of plasma and one blood transfusion during the year. College physicians have, moreover, performed 12 appendectomies and treated one skull fracture and numerous other cases requiring minor surgery. Every prospective graduate has the opportunity to receive a complete physical examination, including a hemoglobin test, urinalysis and Kahn test and also a chest X-ray if indicated. In addition seniors are given a Schick test, vaccinations against small pox and inoculation for typhoid fever. It is hoped that next year, more vaccinations will be available to all students who wish to take them, according to Dr Chayes. Plans are also being made to replace the clinic now with limited facilities, as soon as each patient by appointment only, Dr Chayes said.

Equipped with 80 beds, the infirmary has 26 double rooms and three wards. In case epidemic facilities are also available to accommodate students of the fourth floor which is not in use at the present time. Everyone has seen the reception room, doctor's office and clinic which greet the visitor upon entering the infirmary door, but not everyone knows that the infirmary also boasts a pharmacy. An X-ray room, equipped with an X-ray machine convertible into a fluroscope, a complete kitchen and a laboratory, where a technician is on duty daily. The latest addition to the infirmary is a new diathermy machine, which is used in the treatment of muscular disorders, sinus troubles and all other ailments for which heat is indicated.

Dr Dorothy Chayes and Dr Minerva Gorden, college physicians, are assisted at the infirmary by a staff of six nurses on full-time duty and by eight other personnel. Special nurses are also employed in cases of serious and prolonged illness.

Smokers Have Trying Problems Even After They Obtain Fags

When spring made its appearance early this year, the girls were very glad to leave the stuffy smokers for the outside smoking area. Between classes and after every meal, the arcades were crowded with students enjoying a cigarette or perhaps a bit of the sun and exchanging the latest gossip.

But this week rain and cool weather descended and the girls were glad to seek the protection of smokers again, only to find the air so thick with smoke that the habituees of this den think that this was done because they didn't keep the room clean, while some are sure that it is because they made a trifle too much noise.

However, the fact that this cozy smoker was closed gave rise to the rumor that all smokers were closed. Most of the freshmen, however, went to the same room of the Student Alumnae building without even investigating.

Neither Bryan nor New Hall has a smoker. No one seems to have an explanation of this lack in New Hall, other than that it may have been an oversight. But the general opinion as to why Bryan is without this very popular room is that it really isn't safe to strike r match in the dear old fortress.

New Hall Has Dance In Dormitory Parlor

"And a man broke on me," was the unfamiliar remark heard after the New Hall Ball last Saturday night, held in the parlor.

New Hall girls were hostess to the Army, Navy, Marines, and Gainesville Glee Club amidst decorations of Magnolia blossoms. Punch was served from an attractive table during the evening. A "juke" provided the music.

Carol Sherman is in charge of general preparations for the dance. Other committee chairmen are Frances Hines, decorations; Anne Hayn Davis, business manager; Marguerite Rost, ticket distribution; Katherine Welch, chaperones and student hostesses.

Chaperones and guests for the occasion will be: Dr and Mrs Doak S Campbell, Professor and Mrs Walter R Cowles, Dr and Mrs Milton W Carothers, Dean and Mrs Karl G Kuersteiner, Dr Olivia Dorman, Miss Katherine Warren, Miss Edith McCollum, Dr and Mrs W H Rogers, Miss Elizabeth Hodges, Dr and Mrs Cuyle H Moore, Mrs Beverly Stevens, Miss Joyce Bevis, Miss Celia Sesserman, Miss Margaret Rogers, Miss Anne Page, Lt and Mrs Panatier, of Gordon Junnin, and Mr and Mrs J Frank Miller.

Carol Sherman, general chairman of the dance, announced that there will be a 45-minute intermission, beginning at 10:15, after the presentation of members of the May Court. She particularly stressed the fact that this is to be a "signing out" dance asking that everyone remember to sign out when leaving the dance floor, whether for smoking or at intermission time.

Annual Tea Honors Members of Faculty

Campuside, Hillside and Parkside dormitories held their annual faculty tea Wednesday afternoon, April 25, in the parlor of Campuside. It was sponsored by Mrs Eleanor Clarke, dormitory director for Campuside and Hillside and Mrs Harriet Barksdale, resident counselor for Parkside.

An unusual feature of the tea was that each girl from each faculty member as her special guest. In addition to the regular faculty members: Dr Olivia Dorman, dean of students, Miss Katharine Warren, assistant dean of students, and house counselors sorority chaperones and house counselors.

The social committee, acting as hostesses, were Doris McIntosh, Phyllis Hadley, Patricia Ann Ruby Richburg, Faye Caliebe and Gloria Hughes. Also assisting in the hostesses were Junior Counsellors Fessy Pearson, Janie Redfern, Margaret Mitchell, Lyndon Bouriand and Katherine Welch.

Those on the serving committee included Edna Earle Baker, Mildred Mann, Eloise Bridgewater, Dorothy Cooper, Beverly Crocker, Fessy Awes, Ann Hoffman and Blanche Brownsmet.

Tarpon Plans May Day Demonstration

Two dozen girls will swim to the rhythm of Tarpon Club music when the Tarpon club presents its annual May Day demonstration at 8:30 p.m. tonight in the pool of the Physical Education building.

According to Mary Louise Perry, president of the Tarpon club, there will be 24 girls in the formations, plus a Minnow formation and diving.

Members who will present the water version of the "Merry Widow Waltz" are as follows: Carol Claus, Virginia Collins, Nell Cooper, Anjel Hall, Mary Ann Margie Holm, Anna Horne, Mary Delta Gladys Lester, Nancy Mc-Edwards, Patricia Millican, Victoria Mott, Frances Pease, Mary Louise Perry, Jean Richardson, Betty Jane Singleton, Maxine Wagner, Mary Ann Watts and Tryse Thompson.

Minnows who will participate in the demonstration are Jeani Harris, Jo Guthrie, Barbara Lindsey, Moira Long and Anna Lou Rivers.

The schedule is as follows:

Monday, May 7 4 through P.

Tuesday, May 8, G through N.

Wednesday, May 9, O through Z.

Announcements for the junior counselors have not been made.

Gala Dance Highlights May Activities Tomorrow Night in College Gymnasium

The annual May dance will be held tomorrow night in the Florida State College gymnasium from 8:30 'till 12, with the introduction of the Court scheduled for 10 p m.

The gymnasium will be appropriately decorated with bright May poles and flowers, and Dr Gordon Johnston "Harbor Craftsmen" will provide the music.

Carol Sherman is in charge of general preparations for the dance. Other committee chairmen are Frances Hines, decorations; Anne Hayn Davis, business manager; Marguerite Rost, ticket distribution; Katherine Welch, chaperones and student hostesses.

Chaperones and guests for the occasion will be: Dr and Mrs Doak S Campbell, Professor and Mrs Walter R Cowles, Dr and Mrs Milton W Carothers, Dean and Mrs Karl G Kuersteiner, Dr Olivia Dorman, Miss Katherine Warren, Miss Edith McCollum, Dr and Mrs W H Rogers, Miss Elizabeth Hodges, Dr and Mrs Cuyle H Moore, Mrs Beverly Stevens, Miss Joyce Bevis, Miss Celia Sesserman, Miss Margaret Rogers, Miss Anne Page, Lt and Mrs Panatier, of Gordon Junnin, and Mr and Mrs J Frank Miller.

...ty-two vessels. War spending is stated to fall nineteen billion dollars in fiscal years 1945-46. However reconversion will not mean the immediate vanquishment of the civilian shortages or will it be possible to simply drop control over prices and wages. The records of 1918 show that after the cessation of hostilities prices advanced in the following year.

Justice Byrnes in his last report to the President and Congress allowed for a 30 per cent cut due to the production of civilian goods in the first year after V-E day. He was in favor of allowing individual firms to use their initiative in resuming from WPB reconversion rights and he pointed out that the war in Asia and the Pacific will still require much lease although on the whole lend-lease has already dropped 50 per cent since the Normandy invasion. He also warned against immediate transformation of production to provide employment. "We should not be stampeded into large public works."

Moderation was the key note in Byrnes' report for domestic and for foreign economic policies. Whether his policy will be followed by his successors remains to be seen, but, the author maintains, the goal seems to be for "less deficit spending, more government planning, and more individual initiative."—Patricia

"This," he says, "is the voice of common sense."

Florida Glee Club Honored at Party

An informal party honoring members of the Women's Glee Club of Florida Glee Club following their concert Friday night in Woman's auditorium was given by members of the Florida State College Glee Club at the Sigma Kappa house.

A punch table clustered with spring flowers was placed in the west parlor. A crystal punch bowl and colored candles adorned the table; dainty cookies and assorted nuts were served throughout the party.

Jo Anna Olson, one of the guests of honor, entertained with piano and songs while other guests danced in the east parlor which was lighted with tall lilies, snapdragons and gladiolas.

Margaret Smith and Rosemary Thomas were in charge of the arrangements. Committee chairmen were Miriam Angell, intermissions, and Renee Hedgecoth, publicity.

Methodists Elect Leader

Council Will Be Installed And Honored Sunday

Dorothy Binger, in-coming senior, will head the Methodist student organization for the year of 1945-46. She and other members of the Methodist student council were elected last Sunday at their regular Sunday school hour. The council will be installed at Trinity Methodist church this Sunday night at 7:30, and a recognition breakfast will be given for them at 7:30 Sunday morning.

Miss Alpharetta Leeper, student secretary, announced that Rev Claud D Hinton, Methodist minister, would make a short talk at the installation, and the retiring senior officers would give the new members of the council their pledges.

Dorothy Caswell, senior, is in charge of the breakfast that will be given by the old council. It will be held at the Student house and all members of both the councils have been sent invitations.

Those who will be assisting Dorothy as officers of the student organization are: Catherine Welch, vice president; Wilma Humphrey, secretary; and Carolyn Fiewellen, treasurer. Jean Cole was elected president of the Sunday school class. Her assistants will be: Grace Sims, vice president; Elizabeth McLean, secretary; Frances Cannon, treasurer.

Martha Jane Brown will serve as the deputation director in charge of all the trips to neighboring churches. The rest of the committee heads are as follows: Julie Ann Banks, dragatrix; Pat Pattishall, choral reading; Doris McIntosh, alumnae; Joyce Carlton, music; Kathleen Johnson, sorority; Joanne Newman, editor of the Fourth Torch; Grace De Wolf, week-day worship; Jane Redfern, fellowship; Betty Ruth Goode, world friendship; Betty Bell, community service and social action; Babe Evans, recreation; Joyce Petty, personnel; Eugenia Gregory, publicity; Ruth Clark, campus-church; and Mattie Lou Alford, the house.

Intramural Yearly Awards to Be Given

Theresa Munroe, who is in charge of all intramurals, has announced that if time allows, awards will be given out for the year's intramurals in convocation on Tuesday.

Merrill Long, playing for Delta Zeta sorority, won the ping pong intramural singles last Tuesday afternoon in the finals at the gymnasium.

Leading up to the finals, Patsy Adams, Chi Omega, won over Joyce Gardner of Parkside. Bryan and Reynolds Halls defaulted; Betty Jack Strouse, Delta Delta Delta, beat Bessie Setzer of Delta Phi Epsilon. Chi Omega then played Tri-Delta and lost.

This left Pi Beta Phi, Tri Delta and Delta Zeta in the semi-finals. The three sororities then drew, with Delta Zeta drawing "watch." Dottie Young, Pi Phi, played Betty Davis Shouse, Tri-Delta, and won. In the playoff between Delta Zeta and Pi Phi, Delta Zeta won with the scores 21-18 and 21-18.

Telegraphic Meet To Be Held Soon

The National Telegraphic Archery Tournament will be held in a few days according to an announcement made by Miss Frances Crean, instructor in the Physical Education, Florida State College placed third in the Southern District in 1943, but did not enter the tournament in 1944.

The Columbia Round, which consists of twenty-four arrows shot from 50, 40, and 30 yards respectively, will be the approved method of shooting in the contest. Each team will be made up of eight archers. Those entering the tournament from Miss Crean's class are: Betty Jo Kaczinski, who made high score for FSC in the 1943 tournament, Irma Shephard, Bobbie Rees, Sarah Ellen Glenn, Harriet Winkleman, Bobbie Carter, Julia Perkins, Jay Knipe, Helen Stone, Mary Ann Hopson, Anna Mae Monson, Juanita Nord, and Priscilla Clark.

All others interested in entering the tournament are urged to get in touch with Miss Crean as soon as possible

Anyone placing in any one of the three classifications in the tournament is awarded a certificate.

Party to Be Held

All students and faculty members are invited to attend the annual garden party at Ruze hall, Episcopal student center, on Saturday afternoon from 4 to 5.

Rev and Mrs Alvin Bullen will be the host and hostess at this affair, which will be held on the grounds of Ruge.

Beard Gives Impressions of FSC Campus; Thinks College Camp Most Outstanding

"Camp Flastacowo is one of the outstanding parts of the college," stated Mrs Ramona C Beard, associate professor of organ, piano and theory. Mrs Beard is going to present her formal faculty recital at the organ Sunday evening at 7 o'clock in Westcott auditorium.

Many of Mrs Beard's friends and relatives have told her, and she herself thinks, that the FSC campus is one of the most attractive campuses that she has visited. Because she likes sports so well, she went out to Lake Bradford nearly every evening in the early fall season when she first arrived in Tallahassee from Chicago.

Mrs Beard is a new member of the music faculty staff. She came to Tallahassee last September. She had been teaching organ, piano and theory in Ferry Hall, Lake Forest, Ill. While in that position she was also the director of music in the St Lukes Lutheran Church where she directed three choirs and played the organ.

Upon coming to FSC Mrs Beard took the position that Miss Margaret W Dow, former professor of organ and theory had. Both came from the same home town, went to the same college, and are both members of Phi Beta Kappa.

After Mrs Beard received her first music degree from Carlton, where she graduated with honors in the field of music, she taught three years. Shortly after that she married Mr Parker S Beard and they went to Europe on their honeymoon, where they both studied pipe-organ in Paris with Marcel Dupre. Mr Beard studied voice and they both went to Alliances Francaises. Upon their return from abroad they lived in and around Chicago.

Following Mr Beard's death, she started teaching in Eureka College, and later went to Ferry Hall to teach.

Mrs Beard's first college degree was an AB in biology. Although she is qualified to teach biology and French, she only teaching she done other than piano, organ and theory, has been English. She has received her master's degree of music in piano and composition and of arts in organ and theory.

She has played concerts in and about Chicago, and she is a member of the Society of American Musicians, Chicago Club of Women Organists, and the American Guild of Organists. In the Tallahassee chapter of the latter she is the present resent.

When asked of her first impressions of FSC, she stated that all the student leaders seemed to her sincere and worthwhile and that she was impressed with the student ability on the campus.

Political Science Instructor Speaks

Miss Daisy Parker Talks At Jacksonville Luncheon

The International Relations Department of the Woman's club of Jacksonville, Florida presented Miss Daisy Parker, political science instructor at the Florida State College, as guest speaker on its luncheon program on Wednesday.

Miss Parker had as her subject, "The United States Constitution and World Organization," and subdivided her talk under two general headings, namely, the problems that confront the San Francisco Conference and the Constitutionality of the United States' entrance into a world organization.

Miss Parker outlined four major problems, headed by the possibility that the conference may not be a success. However, she pointed out that, whether it is a success or not, it will have proved that nations can argue instead of warring.

With regard to problems within the United States, Miss Parker said the major concern is the acceptance of the charter of world organization and the membership therein when the charter is offered to the nations of the world for acceptance or rejection.

"Although there will be many arguments in San Francisco," the speaker pointed out, "we hope that this will lead to a peace which will afford to all nations assurance that all men in all lands may live out their lives in freedom from fear and want.

Library Work to Be Discussed Tuesday

Students who are interested in investigating library work in any field are invited to meet with Miss Louise Richardson, librarian and professor of library science and the faculty of the department of library science next Tuesday at 5 p m in 304 Library.

Students who cannot go at the specified time may arrange for conferences with Miss Richardson, Miss Elizabeth Hodges, acting associate professor of library science, Miss Eulah Mae Snider, acting associate professor of library science, or with other members of the library staff.

According to Miss Richardson, there are many openings in Florida as well as in other states for librarians, and the demand for them is so great that many scholarships are being offered to those interested in going to library school. There are many fields in library work including medical, hospital, business, technical, college, school and art libraries.

Pictures of two Florida State College alumnae who are now doing hospital library work are shown on the Library bulletin board in Westcott.

Club Has Outing

Wakulla Springs was the destination of the Outing club last Saturday afternoon. The truck left the new dining hall at 2 o'clock packed with 35 students seeking the outdoors. Swimming, diving, volleyball, and water games constituted the afternoon sports.

This week a poster will be placed in Westcott for all those who wish to sign up for next year's Outing club. All students are eligible for membership.

F Club Elects Hall Of Fame Members

F Club Hall of Fame has been chosen, and the club is giving a dinner for the senior members.

Election of members to the F Club Hall of Fame and a talk on sportsmanship by Priscilla Gillette, past president of F Club, was the main business of he club's meeting last night at 6 o'clock in the Student Alumnae building auditorium. The members chosen for this year's Hall of Fame are to be announced at a later date.

The Hall of Fame is composed of seniors in the F Club who are outstanding for their sportsmanship. One or two members of the senior class are chosen each year by a majority vote of the members. The president of the club automatically becomes a member of the Hall of Fame since she is nominated and elected by the club to lead their organization.

F Club is planning to give a dinner next Wednesday for all of the senior members of the club. The entire club and members of the faculty are invited to the dinner. It is undecided as to whether the affair will be held at camp or in town.

Nancy Parker Chosen Queen Of May at FSC

Celebration Has Pastoral Theme With Music And Flowers

Court Includes Nine Seniors Chosen by Student Poll

Nancy Parker, Queen of the May, was crowned in the annual May Day celebration which was held Saturday afternoon, May 5, behind Westcott building on the campus of the Florida State College for Women.

Musicians, dancers, Maypoles, flower girls and singers lended atmosphere for the theme, a rural village, before the arrival of the royal party. They decked the queen's throne with flowers, gathered dances, to the accompaniment of the musicians, and the rumbling acts on the village fair. One of the dances was performed by four milkmaids and four rural-ville cows.

All activities ceased when the center of ceremonies, Corinne Stanton, arrived in top hat and cane. She introduced the May Queen and her court to the villagers. The Royal Court preceded the queen in twos and each couple was announced as it arrived. The blessings started from Ruth Bryan Owen and preceded through the aisle between the rows which were arranged in the middle of the street and up the queen's throne. The court was arranged themselves on either side of the throne.

The May court in the order of appearance were: Mary Vest and Eleanor Friday, Jean Kendall and Beverly Bowers, Mary Ann Hutchison and Lucy Mendenhall, Betty Smith and Frances McHarry, and Beth Lewis. They were dressed in the pastel-colored dresses and brief bouquets of roses. Then the crown-bearer followed the court carrying the crown on a pale satin cushion. The queen arrived in an old-fashioned horse drawn carriage a profusion of white spring flowers.

The queen was crowned by the Queen of ceremonies. She was followed by the lester who was seated for the flutist and both sang in turn followed by two dogs

VE Day Is Observed Quietly on Campus

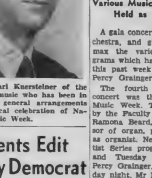
Chimes Play National Anthem, Campbell Leeds Worship

V-E Day was observed at Florida State College on Monday with a brief period of thanksgiving and the continuation of the day's

The chimes played the "Star-Spangled Banner" to announce to faculty and students the surrender of Germany's unconditional surrender after which a worship program was held on the green between Westcott.

At 9 the band gave a concert of patriotic music following decade around campus. Westcott auditorium was open to students prior to the Percy Grainger

The worship program was led by Dr Doak S Campbell, president of the FSC. He was assisted by the Rev. Alvin Kershaw, minister of the Hall; Mrs Mildred H Davis, minister of the and piano, of the Glee Club.



Following the singing of "America" Dr Campbell read a portion of the news of the end of the war in Europe had been announced, briefed, rechecked and found to be true. He asked the faculty and students to join their families with the idea of making V-E Day one of prayer and quiet work.

Mrs Davis sang "The Lord Is My Light". Dr Campbell read a psalm and then led the group in a litany of thanksgiving prayer of dedication.

Reverend Bullen lead in another prayer. The audience joined in the singing of "Faith of Our Fathers." After the saying of the Lord's Prayer by the audience, the Glee sang the "Three-fold Amen."

Distaff Delayed

Elizabeth McFarland, editor of the Distaff, reports that the Distaff will be delayed due to difficulties in preparing it for publication. One of the main causes of the delay was the remodeling of the dummy. Students did not know when the Distaff would be ready for publication.

Students Edit Daily Democrat

Know Your Tallahassee Was Theme Followed

"Know Your Tallahassee" was the theme of Sunday's Daily Democrat which was edited by students of the journalism department headed by Cordelia Bellamy. More than 50 students assisted in writing, reporting, copy-reading, proof-reading and managing the teletype news.

From early Saturday morning until the paper rolled off the press Sunday morning, these students assumed full responsibility in editing the paper. There were hopes up until the last minute that V-E Day would be announced. All waited patiently for the great news which did not come. This would have been a great honor and privileges long to have been remembered.

There was never a dull moment while the girls composed the Democrat office. Even Mr Earl Vance, associate professor of journalism, was an assistant to society editor. There were far more people than available chairs. The ringing of the phone, typewriters and teletype machines drowned the sound of fountain pens and pencils writing furiously added to the atmosphere of a typical newspaper office at work.

The paper included many full-length features on Tallahassee institutions and activities done by well as the usual news, society, editorials, and sports news.

Shirley Rubin served as managing editor, with Janet Pancoast and Rachael Hall in charge of teletype news. City editors were Peggy Cay and Anne Gaither.

Convocation Brings Program by Seniors

Talented Girls Are Featured In Varied Numbers

The seniors took advantage of the opportunity to display their varied talents in convocation last Monday afternoon. Tra Marie Platt goes the credit for arranging the entire program, which included a play by Beth Lewis, Sanford and Jean Lewis, playing their own arrangement of "Dizzy Sticks."

From the physical education department came the "Dance Symphony" starring Jesse Durden, Carolyn Forehand, Margaret Pridy, Marie Hall, Betty Jo Fountain, Marion Welch, Ethel Fields and Sybil Studd. Jerry Hall played a piano solo, a composition department and sang first a slow and lazy "Deep in the Heart of Me" Sweet Little Alice Blue Gown." For an encore she sang "Sunny and Day."

Although the speech department was rather speechless. Pete Pender read the last will and testament of the class of '45. Betty Ruth Auchenbaugh, opera star of the occasion, rendered a dramatic selection "L'Opera." "The Grecian Dance" was performed by Mary Florence Fox Isabel Rogers and Priscilla Jones.

Dot Tobias and Alice Trieste sang "Let the Rest of the World Go By" with the rhythm of the with diamond rings on third finger left hand, and to all the girls who wish they had them. The "Spider Dance," featuring Marie Lemmis as Little Miss Muffet, Mary McRory as the tuffet and Betty Lewis as the spider, was repeated for an appreciative audience. Tedy Parker performed, of course, on the piano, playing "The Double Eagle." Diana Washburn was master of ceremonies.

Panhellenic Makes Plans

Meeting Will Be Held First Tuesday Next Fall

Although the quarter system will be in effect, rushing next year will be on the same Panhellenic basis as it has been in previous years. All sororities will be under formal rushing regulations during all three quarters.

On the first Tuesday after school opens in September, there will be a meeting of all sorority presidents, rush chairmen, and Panhellenic representatives in order to make last minute plans for rush week. With the opening of the quarter in September, rush week will be held during freshmen week, starting with a general meeting of all freshmen and transfers the first Monday after school opens. Jean Clifford, Panhellenic president, will be in charge of this meeting to explain all rushing rules.

On the first Friday night, there will be formal receptions in all of the sorority houses on campus.

Saturday night through Monday the remainder of rush week, there will be engrossments at all houses. The same plan of having five engagements with rushees on Saturday, four on Sunday, and three on Monday, will be followed next year. It is announced that each sorority is responsible for the activities of the alumnae during the summer and rush week, and that these alumnae must be under the same rules as the college girls. They will also not be any contacting of rushees by wires or telegrams.

Pledge day will be the second Saturday after school opens Jean Clifford states that "We rushed last year under strict preferential system and we will do the same in September." The main idea in this system is that there will be no promising for bids or engagements during rush week.

There will not be a great deal of change with the quarter system in rushing as there will be a formal rush period at the beginning of each quarter. However, during the winter and spring quarters, there will only be three days of rushing. At these quarters, there will be the regular Friday night formal receptions with

YW Reveals Future Plans

Activities Include Forums, Recreation, Worship

The YWCA plans for the coming year have as their theme "Individual activity directed forums, discussions, group recreation, and group direction to worship are just a few of the many activities planned by the "Y."

All freshmen are to be grouped according to dormitories, each dormitory being divided into sections. Each section will have a chairman, elected from the freshman group. These will probably be ex large as last year's and more individual activity and assistance will be given to freshmen. Each group is to have an upperclassman sponsor, who is to advise and help in preparation of these activities.

An invitation will be given to all freshmen to become members of one of the five standing committee formed, to which all upperclassmen are to belong. The five committees, as set forth for the coming year, will be as follows: Worship Committee—Betty Smith, chairman. Worship committee will work on Convocation devotion, sponsor forums on religious beliefs and practices and instruct in the leading of group and individual worship. A meeting room is to be set up somewhere on campus for the use of all the members.

Social Action Committee — Betty Dowd and Mary Lee will act as co-chairmen. This committ-

Library Displays Steps To Peace

A special table in the reference room of the library has been set aside for the display of pamphlets and pamphlets arranged to show the various steps taken toward world peace and organization. This material is available for reading by all interested students.

The pamphlets are divided into four sections: first, those pertaining to international organizations such as the Moscow Conference, the Dumbarton Oaks Conference, the Atlantic Charter, and others; second, the proposals of the United Nations Conference at San Francisco; and fourth, the problems facing the world after the conference, such as world federation, the United Nations organization.

These educational articles are published by the United States government and organizations concerned in keeping the citizens of America interested and informed in the progress of peace. Among some of the sponsors other than the United Nations conference is Post War World Council, World Citizens Association, World Federation, Inc, Peoples Policy Association, Air-Age Educational Research and News-week Educational Bureau.

Also on exhibit in the library is a display showing the various opportunities in library work and the part played by librarians in the war effort. It includes pictures and articles concerned with the training and duties of the librarian. This exhibit was arranged by the senior library science students.

Legislature in Brief

By CORDELIA BARCLAY

Controversial state tax bills supported by Governor Caldwell, were the main feature of legislative action this week. The cigarette and liquor tax bills were prima donnas of bitter house and senate disputes, which both action completed on both of them.

The senate yesterday passed and sent to the house a bill, endorsed by Governor Caldwell, placing an additional five to fifteen cent tax per bottle on liquor. Proponents of the bill say it will add $7,200,000 to the state revenue fund. Opposition forces said the lifting of the racing bill would bring in the needed extra revenue, and in many ways is responsible that the tax collections would be needed for setting up a post-war building fund.

Tuesday the much-debated four cent cigarette tax bill was passed by the house without discussion. The senate had previously passed the bill with an amendment to limit life of the measure to two years. The house struck out the limiting amendment, putting the bill in its original form. The tax bill is to be sent back to the senate for concurrence.

Following the federal announcement of the lifting of racing bans, bills to extend the dog racing season 40 days in one-track counties, and 60 days in three counties possible, were introduced. They were approval of administration leaders and racing operators.

Coeducation

Coeducation was in the news again, as the legislature Wednesday completed action on a house resolution asking the State Board of Education and Board of Control to undertake a two-year study of Florida college needs, including coeducation and the proposed medical college. Recommendations and findings both will be reported at the next legislative session.

The bill was proposed as a compromise measure between the coeducation battle raging during April.

Also before legislature were a series of recommendations from the Governor's Interracial Commission, volunteer surveyors of the Florida Development Commission were appointed by the Governor. The recommendations asked that counties of 50,000 population now elected be appointed in the future; that teaching education scholarships for negroes be given; state regulation of private schools and tutors; and distribution of state funds to schools over a ten month's period instead of nine.

Monday the house passed Governor Caldwell's bill to liberalize

Writing Experiment Proves Successful

Teachers Advise Expansion In English Courses

At the beginning of second semester this year, the English department added a one-hour writing laboratory period to three freshman English sections with the aim of developing the students' writing skill.

The experiment has been such a success that the teachers of Miss Grace Woodward, Miss Gordon, Mrs Margaret Blair and Mrs Lou E Miller, are suggesting that the laboratory period next year, and that it be extended to all freshman English sections as soon as facilities can be made available.

Miss Herndon states that any type of writing may be done in this laboratory period for those who have any time beyond the regular assignments. There is no "theme" but the faculty member is there to assist when needed.

There is no time limit for the use of the laboratory. Sometimes the student to use the unbroken period for writing whatever she wishes, in spite of speed.

Miss Herndon, Mrs Blair and Mrs Miller believe that the favorable surroundings are encouraging. The classes are held in 307 Westcott which is equipped with five tables, each accommodating six girls. Reference books are available in the room. One of the students has made curtains worked with the punctuation motif to be used next year.

S Club Girls Urged To Be at Initiation

All S Club members are urged to attend the final initiation of the sheep which will be held tomorrow directly after lunch.

"Although we are in mourning for the lost sheep who has gone astray, all members are expected to attend this initiation" Nancy Parker, president of S Club, requests.

Members and sheep are asked to wear traditional brown and white.

Campbell Speaks

Miss Margaret Campbell, instructor in the Modern Language Department, spoke last Wednesday in Madison, Florida, where she spoke to a group of girls-teen about her experiences in Chile.

Miss Campbell was in Chile on fellowship given by the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs and The International Institute, which are for the furtherance of better understanding between the Americas.

Miss Ruth Campbell also an instructor in the Modern Language Department, is to spend the summer studying language et Columbia University in New York City.

In This Our Time . . .

German Capitulation

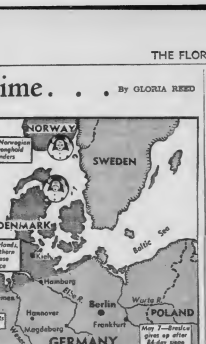
The last week has seen the unconditional surrender of the Nazi forces in Europe to the victorious United Nations. And observers throughout the world who are perhaps wondering if the German people will be taught a hard lesson for the last time may be comparing this military victory to the one in 1918.

Germany's World War I ended when the ferment, and, foreseeing defeat and her allies collapsing, sought peace by ridding itself from the Kaiser. Germany's soil had not been invaded and the defeated German Army, though weakened, still held together its Prussian officer corps.

Now Germany's World War II has drawn to its close in a very different fashion. The Reich has been overrun, its cities devastated, its capital wrecked. The Nazi holy cities are in Allied hands. The Army has been destroyed. There is no real functioning central government. There is no armistice—only the strongly worded results of unconditional surrender to the Allies. The end was utter chaos. The nations in the history of the world have gone down in such an unparalleled military and political defeat.

The once mighty war machine of that had controlled almost all of Europe has been cut to pieces. Its centralized control destroyed. The result was a series of separate and isolated surrenders by the corps, by the sector, by the Army. Last week the Alpine redoubt, where the Nazis had hoped to prolong the war, collapsed. So did Hitler's northern pocket, including the Netherlands and Denmark, surrendered. The result of these two victories was a prisoner toll estimated at 2,000,000 men. Norway and Bohemia were the last Nazi strongholds to capitulate.

When the beaten German leaders signed the unconditional terms demanded by the United Nations, they, of course, surrendered all the German forces. And by this act acknowledged the defeat they became, under international law, war criminals who are not entitled to the privileges which are granted prisoners of war.



Marshall Carl Gerd von Rundstedt, whom General Eisenhower once called "the greatest German strategist of World War II," last week told why Germany lost the war. This captured, stiff-necked and typical Prussian officer gave these reasons: (1) The Allies' strained and tactical bombing campaigns; (2) Germany's lack of oil and gasoline for motorized transport; (3) The power of the Allies' naval guns, which reached deep inland at the time of the Normandy invasion, making impossible the bringing up of reserves needed to hurl the invasion troops back into the Channel. "Had it not been for these factors", the Marshal said, "and had I been able to draw divisions and reserves together I am positive that the first Allied landings would not have been successful and I could have knocked out the Allies".

Quiet of V-E Day

V-E Day, which can call us the expenditure of $185,000,000,000 and more than 10,000 casualties a day, of about which 150,000 were killed, seemed to bring about an attitude of quiet thankfulness throughout the Allied world in which, except for parts of London, the business of the day proceeded as usual. In his brief V-E Day proclamation, President Truman's message to the people was summarized in one word—"work".

Peace Operations

As V-E Day was announced to a war-weary world, American marines on Okinawa stood in for holes half filled with water and celebrated the occasion by bloody retaliation to the Japanese arsenor. At the times the advances were a few yards and the casualties ran very high. Since V-E Day, the American forces have Warsaw regime.

From May 2, when Northern Italy and Western Austria surrendered, to May 7, when unconditional capitulation brought about the fall of all remaining enemy strongholds, pockets, the map above traces sporadic surrenders that culminated in victory.

which also conquered the remainder of the island, but the opposition continues to be fierce.

In the German collapse, the Japanese have been given stern warning of their own impending doom, either or eventual destruction.

On Mindanao Island in the Philippines, the Japanese Tenno penetrated the thin American lines and took Libby airdrome and captured by the Nips some time ago.

On Tarakan, Aussie and Dutch troops were a mile from the Djoeata oil field.

In the eighteenth raid of Superfortresses against Japanese airfields on Kyushu from which the Nipponese have mounted sizable plane attacks against Okinawa, 275 miles southward, the Japanese offered no air opposition.

Peace Organization

On Wednesday Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov left San Francisco for Moscow, leaving the Big Three still deadlocked over the Polish question. And high diplomatic sources said there was no immediate prospect for resuming negotiations for a new Polish government. These were broken off after Molotov insisted that Germans and Nazis be arrest of 16 Polish leaders some of whom had been accepted by the American and British as members of a possible broadened

Committee Chooses Bond Drive Motto

"A quarter a girl for the peace of the world" is the motto of the Social Activities Committee in their drive for the 7th war loan.

Eugenia Avant, publicity manager, said that the committee was asking each girl to buy at least one 25c war stamp before the last day of the drive, May 26.

She said that this would enable the student body to exceed for the 7th war loan drive, and she urged every girl to do her part.

Dietitians Get Free Training

Students Learn Dietetics At Government Cost

The War Department, Veterans Administration, and United States Public Health Service are offering professional training in dietetics at government expense.

As a student in an army hospital it is possible to advance to an apprentice position and later to be appointed a Dietetic Department dietitian; as a student in Veterans Administration or U.S. Public Health Service hospital it is possible to advance to Staff Dietitian. To become a Medical Department Dietitian in the army with the rank of Second Lieutenant, it is necessary to begin as a Student Dietitian in the War Department at $1,753 a year. After six months, one will be advanced to Apprentice Dietitian at $1,971.6 per year, and 18 more months will be eligible for appointment as Second Lieutenant in the Army.

Army Hospitals where training programs are now under way are: Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, D C; Lawson General Hospital, Atlanta, Ga.; Percy Jones General Hospital, Denver, Colorado; Brooke General Hospital, Ft Sam Houston, Texas.

To become a staff dietitian at a Veterans Administration or U.S. Public Health Service Hospital, one will start as a student at $1,753 a year. After six months she'll be promoted to $1,970 a year. After twelve months of training one is then eligible for appointment as staff dietitian at $2,190 a year.

Veterans Administration trains students at Hines, Illinois; at Los Angeles, and at New York City. US Public Health Service trains students at Marine Hospital, Staten Island, New York.

In order to apply for one of these positions, applicants must have completed their dietetic interior hours of study in a college or university of recognized standing. Of study must include twelve hours in chemistry, six hours in biology, six hours in foods, six hours in physiology, six hours in disease, and six hours in institution management.

All applicants must pass a written test, consisting of two parts. The first is a general test, and the second is a technical test.

Applicants must be at least sixty inches in height without shoes and at least one hundred and more than one hundred and five pounds.

Those selected for training will be required to have a certificate of a physical examination by a licensed doctor. The final physical examination will be made by a board of medical officers at the station of first assignment.

All students who are eligible for one of these programs must file their applications with the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D C.

Esteren Will Play Hostess at Camp

Goats Prepare Invitations, Placecards and Skit

The traditional Esteren-Spiro-tira camp will be held Friday night to Saturday noon of the last week-end before graduation at Camp Flastacowo.

Esteren is hostess this year, since the organization which is not graduating plays hostess to the seniors of the other group, according to tradition.

The goats of both organizations are in charge of camp and are now preparing invitations, placecards and a skit. Food and transportation problems will also be worked out by the goats.

It is the custom for the junior hostesses to serenade the others with the seniors' group songs.

Ever the first named if you have some girls clad in green and white wandering around campus singing "Stripping a Friend and Pal Forever"—they are just practicing! says Sarah Bennett, president of Esteren.

Esteren was honored this week by their receiving honorary membership with the appearance of seven Jeanne Smith of the class of 1944.

teacher retirement benefits.

The house also authorized the state board of control to build institutions, presumably including colored homes.

The house appropriations committee also voted an increased appropriation for the Florida farm colony yesterday, on the basis of reports of a staff of investigators for the Gainesville institution.

Other action by the committee reported unfavorably a bill to provide free milk and arrange juice for the school children.

As news of oil discoveries at Citronelle and Pollard reached committees of the legislature and Attorney General Tom Watson prepared bills to tax the oil wealth and to provide laws to regulate the drilling industry, the severance tax and a definite tax per barrel are being considered. Proposed measures would tax production and income from state-owned oil lands, we gathered.

Majority of bills discussed in the house and senate this week seemed to be of little general interest. Among the minor bills were the following:

The house passed bills to:

Make 10 years of insanity grounds for divorce.

Resolve that an international language should be set up a three per cent income tax to provide for a national old age pension fund.

Allow for increases in sheriff's fees. The bill had been concurred by the house, and is to be sent to the governor.

It's Either Too Cold or It Rains Is Girls' Lament

With this changeable weather college girls are having quite a time trying to decide upon a suitable wardrobe. One minute the sun will be shining brightly and so with hopes soaring, many a lassie will step forth in a brightly colored plaidfore only to find that the rain clouds have preceded her. Soon comes the first distress in the fact after many hours of tireless packing away of winter clothes and blankets, the temperature will drop to a temperature most unbearable to be left only with thin summer dresses.

Because of such unreliable and unpredictable weather, many have had to be temporarily postponed. A few possessive souls are rumored to have adopted as their theme song, "It's Either too Cold or It Rains."

Intramurals started earlier in the spring are beginning to fade and many have resigned themselves to the possibility of remaining white all summer.

One particular theory is held by many as to the cause of this freak weather. They seem to attribute all of the unseasonable to the worse of she song, "Spring Will Be a Little Late This Year."

Redecorated Smoker Opened in Reynolds To Joy of Habitueses

The Reynolds smoker which has been closed for the past two weeks was opened Wednesday morning to the pleasure of its many participants, especially delighted over the redecorations which have been done.

The smoker room was closed previously because of excessive noise that arose from the bridge tables and nearby auditorium during examinations concerning vacation plans.

Wednesday at 9:00 o'clock, a crowd of girls could be seen that day after breakfast cigarette, and bridge race. With this opening committee of girls that have organized in an effort to keep the smoker clean and in order, and then they brought signs and posters that have proved very successful in brightening the room and in entertaining relaxing smokers.

On one wall is a poster covered with pictures of the current and popular movie stars (of course). On another wall is a very long piece of wrapping paper with the signatures on it, and it is entitled "On the Coming Home of Sgt. Joe Blow," type of thing."

There's still hope." The pictures portray, in a crude manner, the various activities of the college girls from the time she boards the home-bound bus, happy and smiling, until the reluctant girl, in the fall of the year, dejected and still reminiscing over her happy holiday.

Many of the more artistically inclined girls have offered to add some piece of art to the collection and all of the girls have agreed to keep the smoker clean and reasonably quiet—as quiet as can be expected with the holiday spirit in the air.

Photography Girls Will Give Exhibit

The photography department of the Florida State College for Women will give its biennial exhibit from May 18, 19, and 20 in the Union building this year. This exhibit will be hung in the clubroom of the Student Activities building.

The majority of the photographs have been taken by the subjects of architecture, scenic views, group pictures, clouds and miscellaneous subject matter. The better samples of work will be presented by 22 photography students.

"The first exhibit was given as an experiment, but so many people were interested in the work of our students," said Miss Elizabeth Lowry, head of the department.

"The interest shown then made this department decide to continue the exhibit every five years, each semester thereafter," said Miss Lyon.

Students Participate

In accordance with President H Truman's setting aside next Thursday as a holiday day of prayer and thanksgiving, Episcopal students are urged to take part in the church services on that day.

Gardinias for All

"Gardenias—want one? Help yourself," said Mr K E Ouflick and scurried to his paper covered with huge, fragrant flowers on the north side Westcott. The girls gathered quickly and energized from the crowd beaming and thanking Mr Ouflick profusely.

According to Mrs Ouflick, who works at the information desk in the Student Alumnae building, "He just gets up early and goes out and picks them. There are so many now that he brings them in and gives them away. I'll bet he's the nicest man on the campus right now." Though this might be telling the place where gardenias are found in such profusion is the college camp.

Last Will and Testament of Class of '45

We, the class of 1945, being in relatively sound mind and body, despite approaching exams, suffering from senioritis and obsolescence, W-E day, do hereby make and bequeath our last will and testament.

We, the seniors in all our traditional dignity, leave collectively to the class of 1946 the following: The So Sissy Sad Sacks, our four-year-old storage boxes (due to the paper shortage, of course), our secret formula of wrinkle eradicator, our unpaid debts, Dr Richards and his wife Hazel, the other half of Knowledge (the library reference), and one half hour, and the stenographic test about three hours.

DEAN WITHERS leaves her formula for keeping girls in line to event Mary Lee replaces her.

EVALYN KEMP AND ELIZABETH FISHERHART leave their love for a gay time to DOOLEY AND DOLLY JONES.

ROSEMARY THRASHER leaves the Glee Club—that's all she has.

Pianist Entertains Wounded Veterans

Percy Grainger, visiting pianist-composer, played for more than thirty wounded war veterans at the Maxey Hospital last Wednesday afternoon.

Among the various musical selections which he played for the benefit of the soldiers were "Claire de Lune" by Debussy, "My own "Country Gardens", "The Man I Love" by George Gershwin, and the "Second Hungarian Rahpsody".

Mr Karl O Knesteinet, dean of the School of Music, accompanied Mr Grainger on his trip to Dale Mabry Air Field.

May Makes Request

In recent weeks an unusual-ly large number of campus notices have been dropped into the campus mail box without proper addresses and in all types and sizes of paper, Mr W H May, clerk in charge of the post office, requests that all notices be written on a 3x5 card or placed in an envelope. This will facilitate prompt distribution. Also the student's name and box number should be correct.

Variety of Signs Decorate Freshmen Dormitory Doors

Anyone who has walked through the freshman dormitories this year must have noticed the variety of signs decorating the doors of the different rooms. It is not uncommon to see "Private" or "Room fr Rent." The girls have, however, that they don't have much room.

In Reynolds, one door advertises, "Wee's Place, Company—The Rexall Store—Don't Walk." Another sign asks that "Players Please Use Back Entrance." And another advises "To Escape Kick Out This Panel."

Other doors give indication of their inhabitants' indgtriousness, proclaiming, "Quiet, Genius at Work!" or "I'm Studying!" Others announce that "Apply Here for Reservations at Chatahoochee —It's Co-ed!"

Ensign Smith Taps Ebert for 'F' Club

When Ruby Ebert was tapped for F Club by Ensign Mary Hinson Smith, 1944 graduate of FSC, Monday at lunch in the first special ceremony ever held in the club, the long history of a certain F at last came to light.

Upon graduating Ensign Smith, daughter of Dean and Mrs R L Hinson and former member of P Club, gave her letter to Ruby and since then it has hung in a place of honor in her sister Sharnia Ruby's surprise, therefore, when Monday morning the revered letter was brazenly absent. Following the tapping, however, it remained just as mysteriously and was presented to her, officially this time, by the former owner.

For three days after this Ruby was the only F Club gost. Wednesday night, however, her initiation ceremony was held, followed by a banquet at the Three Torches tea room.

Ensign Smith, who is now in the Supply corps department of the WAVES stationed in Washington, D C, will be the guest of her parents Monday and Tuesday.

Advisor Elected

Margaret McCain was elected senior advisor of Alpha Lambda Delta at their meeting Monday afternoon, announced Martha Pollock, the new president.

A special service was held this week to initiate Mary Louise Vaughn, who was unable to be present at the regular initiation.

'S American Way' Is Theme of Tarpon

Latin Scenes Decorate Pool In Aquatic Exhibition

"The South American Way" was the theme of Tarpon Club's annual spring performance, presented last Friday night in honor of May Day.

The walk of the swimming pool were decorated in a mural effect with typically South American scenes pictured along one side and a large colored map of South America placed at one end. The South American theme was carried out further by the use of music in Latin rhythms.

The program began with "Cuba Libre", an aquatic version of the conga, "Begin the Beguine" was presented next by four Tarpon-ettes and Tarpon Minnows. "Amazon Valley" followed, presented by nine Tarpon in white suits. "Three Caballeros," the next number gave an exhibition of comic diving. The final three numbers were "Poincianas", a formation for six swimmers in red suits, "Adios", a trio, and "Conga del Mosaic", the finale.

Tarpon club was assisted in this performance by Martha Mazie Wagner and Gertrude Noutze, formation committees.

● HOPES FOR NEW YEAR

With the changes to be inaugurated next year at Florida State, we sincerely hope the improvements or perhaps reforms advocated by the Flambeau during the past year and years will come.

We strongly believe in democracy, for we believe in fair play; and we do not consider it unreasonable to ask for these standards in our government on campus. We want to conform with the ideals set up in the preamble of our CGA constitution—we want practical application of these ideals.

To quote the preamble of our CGA constitution:

"Whereas, the students of Florida State College for Women desire to assume individually and collectively a responsibility for the conduct of students in their college life, and

"Whereas, it is believed that such responsibility if given to the students will make for growth in character and power and will promote loyalty to the best interests of the College, the president and faculty of Florida State College for Women do hereby authorize the College Government Association of Florida State College for Women and do charge this Association to exercise the powers that may be committed to it with most careful regard both for liberty and order, for the maintenance of the best conditions for scholarly work and for the development of character."

But the following articles of the constitution tend to take away our "growth in character and power (that) will promote loyalty to the best interests of the College . . . " The president and faculty entrust the management of all matters concerning the conduct of students in their college life that are not academic in nature to the student government except "in cases of conduct serious enough to involve the possibility of suspension or expulsion from the College, this association shall act by presenting a recommendation from its judiciary to the faculty committee on student affairs." Another reserved power is (p. 13 of the Gold Book) "The authorities of the College reserve for themselves the regulation . . . " Continuing along the line of our "student" government, "it shall be within the power of the authorities of the College to withdraw all or any part of the powers granted in this document, or of the College Government Association of the Florida State College for Women formally to relinquish the same, thirty days' notice being given in either case."

Undr such a system we are not turning out graduates who can think for themselves. But rather they are stereotyped and their initiative has been lost beneath the restrictions and rules of four years of regulated living.

We want to be proud of our college, we do not like to hear outsiders jokingly refer to the Florida State "Prison." We want to defend it from statements like that, but all we can do is repeat the well-worn statements, "I'm sorry, we can't go there," "We can't do that—there's a rule against it." "No, we always have to be in at eleven."

As already pointed out, the faculty committee on student affairs or the executive council or college council is involved in all the details of our "student" government. The Gold Book shows the majority of rules do not come from Student Senate; therefore, they must come from one of the other two branches of legislative bodies—either the faculty committee on student affairs or the executive.

We doubt the democratic organization of Student Senate when the same ex-officio CGA members of senate outnumber the regular class-elected representatives.

Students do not have much chance for student government when the legislative work of the "College Government" Association shall be performed by three bodies acting conjointly namely—the student senate, the college council, and the faculty committee on student affairs." All rules passed by Student Senate must eventually in some form be approved by the faculty committee or student affairs or the college council. That is not student government and it is not democratic.

We are in college preparing to go out into a world where college graduates should be leaders. The problems which face us, of maintaining a world peace and taking part in our American government will not be easy to solve. We think the college at least owes us a fair start, and education in the ways of democratic living.

● BOYS COME HOME

Today Bill came home. Twenty months ago in the midst of a successful football season, he had hung up his gold sweater with its huge school letter emblazoned on the chest, had bade an embittered goodbye to his high school crowd, and had gone none too happily to war. To others in the crowd, going into the service spelled adventure, but to Bill it foreboded disaster.

Big, rugged Bill came back home today . . . that is, all of him except his right arm. Those of us who remember his skill in handling a football and a basketball and a baseball; those of us who remember that Bill didn't go to war for glory or excitement, or even because he was filled with patriotism, but because he had no choice but to go, what can we say that will alleviate his bitterness? What can we do to help?

This serious problem is one which all of us must face—those of us who meet him in his home and family life, or those of us who meet him in his social servicing planes, reds of thousands of men like Bill have already been returned from the service and are yet to come.

Their coming will bring us face to face with the problem of providing adequately for their physical needs through medical care; for their educational needs in the cases where their schooling was interrupted; for their rehabilitation for new employment in stage where they are no longer physically able to pursue their former line of work; for their emotional re-adjustments.

The GI Bill of Rights has made provision for meeting their financial and educational needs, but it will take more than money and legislative support.

Not all of these men, of course, will return armless like Bill, or otherwise disfigured for life. Many will return scarred, even broken perhaps, in spirit. These wounds are often the deepest and hardest to heal. Most difficult to dispel is the emotional despair of the handicapped whose prolonged illness has induced an apprehensive fear that life will be profoundly changed for him, or the bitter resentment of the boy drafted from college, who finds his post-war plans shattered.

Are we college girls prepared to meet our boys who thought we would be "so nice to come home to?" While our "Joe" has been piloting, navigating, or sitting behind with a machine gun, hours on hours of human life and vital war materials entrusted to his knowledge and skill and his application of it, we have been at college learning to punctuate a sentence a bit more correctly, to interpret the history of Greek literature, and to discover the causes of seasons and of earthquakes. Will our divergence of knowledge be too great?

Our limited pre-war travel will seem insignificant in comparison with the distances he has covered in his training and in his overseas assignment to "adventure" in the European theater or Pacific area—in tiny places we've never heard of, or seen on a map, and with more difficulty can pronounce. Have we at college also been re-learning our geography of the world?

Furthermore, have we taken the trouble to know how the "other half" lives? We know little (if anything!) of the life in these places, the nature of the people, their customs, or of Joe's adjustment to them. But we will be conscious that all of this has left its mark on him when he comes home to find our people and our ways almost as foreign to him as theirs.

To bridge this gap and to assure him an intelligent audience and sympathetic understanding, there must be a deepened interest on our part about the things which have been his interest while away from us. Only in this way can we again speak the same language and renew the bond strained by the enforced diversity of interests over a period of time.

It will take patience and sincere concern on our part to bridge the gap that comes back to the life he longed for as he went about his assigned job in the engine room of a submarine, waded through mud or snow, endured centuries in a foxhole under bombardment, or knew only the comfort of a barren tent. Back to the family he idealized, the town he bragged about, the life he glamorized in his dreaming. To the man out in a foxhole or in the engine room of an American sub, home is a fantasy. To the returning veteran, unless we take some steps in the right direction, home may not live up to the dream image created in his mind.

Frequently it will be a bitter shock for the veteran to come back and face the realization that family life has its downs as well as its ups, that Mom's good old home-cooking is not as tasty as he had remembered, and that the home town has gone on its busy way, changing the old familiar places to which he so tenaciously clung in his dreaming. Today often he forced to acknowledge that the dreams he dreamed are not so rosy in reality. It will be a shock—and a shock that hurts deeply. Such hurt it will be for GI Joe unless we make it our business to prevent it.

As young women we have been challenged to see this problem through. This task presents an opportunity as well as a challenge to those of us on the home front. Only with thorough knowledge of the readjustment difficulties which these men will face can we possibly solve the problems to our mutual benefit. It's up to us to prove to our men that what they left behind was worth fighting for.

● SNAFU

It is paradoxical indeed that the announcement of the triumph of democratic ideals in Europe should be the occasion also for the curtailment of freedom of speech, one of the main principles of the democracy for which the victorious nations fought. Yet the announcement of the unconditional surrender of the German Wehrmacht by veteran news correspondent Edward Kennedy resulted in a 24-hour news censorship even blackout for the Associated Press, which he represented in Paris.

In reporting the event, Kennedy was basing his information on no false assumptions or vague rumors; he himself was present at the signing of the surrender in Reims, France, by both German and Allied military leaders. He wrote and filed to the Associated Press the information which was later cleared through field censorship and had long been publicly known through the radio of a defeated Germany. The truth of the dispatch was even admitted by the Supreme Headquarters in allowing it to be quoted by other American correspondents. Yet as a result of the disclosure, all privileges of the news service he represented were suspended in the European theatre of war for almost seven hours during one of the most critical periods in world history, and Kennedy himself has yet to be reinstated as a correspondent in good standing.

With the surrender an established fact, it was a natural assumption on the part of Kennedy that there was no longer reason for military censorship in the European theatre The censorship had been imposed for reasons of military security, in order to insure the confidential nature of any information which might prove of service to the enemy, and as Germany laid down her arms, the purpose and power of the censorship was also put aside. As military motives were supplanted by political, the army commands no longer had authority to exercise any restrictions on the transmission of news dispatches, and the duty of the newspaperman was no longer with the military but with the reading public the world over.

In the announcement of the German capitulation, American readers were interested not in the triumphal speeches of political leaders, but in an early assurance that there would be no further bloodshed on European battlefields. They wanted as prompt an announcement of this assurance as was humanly possible, and it was absurd that with fighting ended at 8:41 p m Sunday night, the political leaders of the three powers should mull over this as a great secret known only to themselves, withholding for thirty-six hours the news the world has fought five years to hear. In reporting the event, Kennedy may have violated a military trust, he may even have gone against professional ethics, but he was true to the people for whom he wrote. He gave them the news they deserved to hear, and he gave it to them without delay.

Feeding The Forty Million—

By ARTHUR MOORE

The existence of poverty in a country which is capable of producing more than enough for its people, is discussed by Arthur Moore in the article "Feeding The Forty Million", which appears in the current issue of the Atlantic Monthly.

Mr Moore cites examples to show that approximately one third of the draft rejections were due to "Wholly preventable" defects. The chief of the Medical Division of Selective Service observed the following: "Almost seven out of ten men examined in Colorado were accepted while a three out of ten men from the poorer southern states were accepted. In a pre-war survey the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture found that among 2008 wage earners and clerical workers 79 per cent were rated as a "good" diet and 46 per cent did not even have a "fair" diet. At least 10 million in 1936 did not find pupils in one of New York City's poverty area schools had a high deficiency in vitamins.

After careful studies nutrition has brought forward the fact that 60 million Americans suffer from poverty diets. Mr. Moore, like Mr. Moore, a certain number of these people suffer from poverty diets through their own laziness or lack of interest in eating the proper foods.

The author believes that in the post-war era a new radical will appear who will try to limit production to the people who have enough money to buy the more profitable prices, but who will say, "Let us produce enough food for everyone and then find a way through to the consumer by public ownership." Instead, he suggests that we take into careful consideration such questions as to his own ability and interest in academic subjects. his freedom from other obligations, and his state of health and age.

COLLEGIATE COMEBACKS

Lettie Sullivan

We aren't in a very good mood this morning because we haven't had any mail since last Saturday. Mother's day is almost here, but what can you get for 39c? One thing that worries us and our family might forget about us completely and not send us any money to come home on and it is such a long walk. Maybe we'll run away to sea to be a sailor. That would cheer them.

Then there is the girl who was a little upset when she learned she had 18 plunge periods to make up next week. She could have sworn it was more than that.

In case one of your dearer friends with a peculiar sense of humor doesn't already, we'll let us be the first. To begin with you have to be sitting comfortably in a big chair. Then ask where to find one? reading the latest serial in the Ladies Home Journal for a reasonable facsimile. thinking very happily that now that you've finished your term paper you can relax for a while. Then we come quietly up behind you and say, "Did you know that there are just five more days of school?" Even if you did realize it you feel a little guilty about finishing your story so you climb back to your room, put up a study sign—and when it happened to us we put up the study sign and went to sleep.

The cigarette shortage must be getting worse. Today at noon we walked out of our cottage and freshmen sitting nonchalantly on the back step of Bryan and what do you think? Nothing—literally between her lips was a real-live pipe. We couldn't tell what kind of tobacco was using, but it was powerful. Wonder what the tobacco will introduce to FSC next year?

As the end of school approaches we find a number of our college girls left almost penniless. Their funds didn't stretch quite as far as they had expected. One child in particular, who attended the last till FSC closes it doors on this session, to get laundry, dry cleaning, and the numerous bills that just seem to pile up, to buy a ticket home, and to enjoy life in general. Let us all quietly hope that to secure their degree Mr Waller may, through some kind fate, be fruitful only to those who have the qualities of mind and personality that will make him a good teacher. "It is more helpful in making a life than in making a living."

Under the GI Bill of Rights it is up to the colleges to decide which veterans shall attend. It is almost universally agreed that for the nation's fighting men and women, standards of admission will be relaxed. Most colleges will accept "Certificates of Equivalency" in lieu of high school diplomas. "In trying to select men and women who are capable of doing college work, the colleges will be careful, but they will make mistakes," says Mr. Waller.

"The veteran and his family will avoid the 'educational racket,' he says, "by deciding truthfully whether or not he has the right material." The veteran must also weigh the cost of spending four years of life in college against the profits which he will reap in the distant future. The author suggests that he take into careful

We've been all confused about the days this week because everything started on Monday. Today the people that should have worn white on Friday got all decked out in white, and we just assumed it was Friday. When the next day was Tuesday instead of Saturday we were completely lost. The only thing we could think of was that Mary's Peruvian Museum was white the Friday before. We hope everything gets straightened out this week because we have enough to worry about with exams without having to worry about what day it is.

We suppose everyone else has been thinking about what to do on a good luck on your exams (that's what it takes. Here's hoping that you have a most exciting summer! *

Peruvian Museum Will Remain Open

The Peruvian Museum at Florida State College will remain open to the public every Sunday afternoon through the month of May from 2:30 until 5:30 o'clock announced Mary Snow, designer of the museum room for display of the valuable collection of Peruvian art in the Lonsmire Student-Alumni building at the college.

Mr Snow will be on hand to conduct visitors through the museum on these occasions. The announcement comes in response to much public demand since last week's all-day showing of the display. Mr. Snow spent last night on the Garnet and Gold campus working on the large studio, giving a brief history of the collection which he said is perhaps the most complete of its kind on the continent.

Assignments Given

Miss Edith McCollum, director of residence halls, announced that conferences with freshmen girls will be ready Monday morning from 8:30 until 12 and Monday afternoon from 2:30 until 5.

Students returning for the school term in September should get their assignments last Monday through Wednesday.

Sororities Have Last-Minute Flings Before 'Dead Week' and Exams Strike

At "Dead Week" begins and exam loom up in the immediate ture, sororities are having a ay last flings, consisting mostly banquets honoring graduating ors and pledging ceremonies.

In honor of seniors: the Alpha Phi party at the Floridan ond last night . . . the Pi Beta party at an informal supper at the Three Torches, following the ceremony.

Visitors: Alpha Xi Delta alumnae, Muriel and Avis Thomas, of Gainesville, visited the chapter last week . . . Betty Hickman, alumnae of the Kappa Alpha chapter of Kappa Delta, visited here last week-end. Betty, who is now president of the KD Alumnae Association of Pensacola, is in charge of the War Service Project for the state of Florida.

Pledge Party: Tuesday night, Delta Zeta president, plans to return next week for a short visit . . . Mrs Frank Bates, Pledge advisor for Delta Delta Delta, visited on campus last week . . . Mrs Sam Murinson, a guest at the Delta Phi Epsilon house, is here for the pledge party by Mrs Whitfield and Mrs Frank Miller.

Tomorrow afternoon their house-mothers, Mrs O B Lanier, will honor the seniors and other graduating members at a party at Wakulla Springs.

Last Tuesday night, Mrs George Lewis gave a party for her daughter, Betty, and invited the entire chapter to be guests at her home on East Park street.

Kappa Alpha Theta members and dates had a picnic Sunday at at Wakulla Springs. Wednesday night honored Hester Hammond, who will marry in June, at a dinner and shower.

Seniors of Kappa Delta honored their house-mother, Mrs Barbara Hareen, at a coffee last night at the home. Pledges and actives were friends of Mrs Hareen.

Miss Kay Warren, assistant dean of students, spoke at the Delta Zeta banquet last night on "The Future of Sororities". Sunday afternoon members of Delta Zeta honored Miss Ruth Bronson, an alumna who recently announced her engagement, at a picnic.

Sigma Kappa is making plans for a house party to be held at Jacksonville Beach, beginning on Saturday, May 26.

Officers Initiated By Classical Club

The Classical Club held initiation services for its five officers last Wednesday at 7:30 p m in Broward parlor. These new officers will hold office during the year 1945-46.

The newly elected officers are: Mary MacThom, president; Betty Hunter, vice president; Ruby Pate, secretary; Lucille Matthews, treasurer; Mary Ruth Miller, bulletin board chairman; Kay Moore, social chairman; and Mary Ellen Scarborough, publicity chairman.

Retiring officers are: Peggy Lou Thomas, president; Joy Little, vice president; Del Lake, secretary; Betty Spear, treasurer; Betty Hunter, bulletin board chairman; Rose McLean, social chairman; and Barbara Wickam, publicity chairman.

In 790, Emperor Charlemagne granted rights to all monks of the Sithin Order to procure skins and make gloves, girdles, parchment and book coverings.

Tenant Inn Brings Home Atmosphere To Dorm Corridor

There is nothing like a good home atmosphere in a dormitory hall—so thought Renee Brown, Ann Lindsay, and Reba Jones last week as they proceeded to drag the furniture in the hall on the third floor of Landis.

These three seniors, with several of their neighbors, decided to make a home-like function and make a home-like room out of the hall. They named it the "Tenant Inn" to accomodate about twenty people who were tired of dormitory rooms.

The "Tenant Inn" was, at first, made up of a living room with chairs, magazine racks, books and a radio; a game room in which the girls played bridge in their minutes of leisure; a back porch for all wet umbrellas, rubbers, and raincoats; and most important of all was a kitchen, complete with a hot-plate for cooking a loaf of bread, a jar of mayonnaise, and a bag of onions.

Inspection of the "Tenant Inn" was reported as being no obstacle in case of a fire drill, all the girls had to do was grab up his easy chairs, a radio, and the hot-plate of bread, mayonnaise, and onions.

Girls Entertain In Cockrell Parlor

Last Saturday night Lang, Cockrell and Van Brunt houses entertained informally in the Cockrell house parlor.

Girls from the three houses spent the evening dancing to a juke and all joined in doing the Virginia Reel at the climax of the party. Refreshments were in form of punch and assorted cookies were served.

Mildred Turner, Betty Sue Jennings, Helen Atwater and Margie Dugger, representing the three houses, were in charge of the entertainment and acted as hostesses.

Softball Game Is Won By Even Team

After a thrill-packed seven innings, which ended in a tie, the Evens score tied the Even softball team eked out a victory over the hard-fighting Odd team 3-2, last Friday afternoon.

The Evens were first to score, when Cheryl Hamilton, short stop, crossed home plate in the second inning. The last of the Evens' triple combination retaliated in the fourth frame, when Betty Edwards' single sent Hamilton, short stop and left field respectively, tallied both Odd runs, with a single and a triple.

Trailing by one run, the green and golders brought Sarah Ben and home with a long fly to center to tie the count.

The game remained tied, the Evens behind the pitching of Anna Giese, and the Odds with Pat Cobb, until the seventh. Rosa Lee Davis, Even short fielder, brought home the winning run in the last of the seventh. The game ended with the last tally.

Battery for the Evens was Anna Giese, pitcher, and Sarah Barnes, catcher. For the Odds it was Louise Fernandes, pitching and Margaret Fernandez, catcher.

'Sensitive Seniors' Tap Twenty Sheep Of Ackowledged Athletic Inability

The S Club, an organization recently formed on campus by a group of "sensitive seniors," tapped 26 new members last night. Although their activities are in direct contrast to those of the F Club, members say that their club is second only to that well known organization of athletes. While F Clubbers are chosen for their skill in sports, S Clubbers are selected for their lack of athletic ability.

The instigators of this club have chosen very descriptive names for themselves. Betty Parmer (Nancy) Parker and Peebly Rogers. Initiation for the new members is harsh; a fine pail and kicking the bucket. Rather than call the new members goats, they call them "Twenty sheep." Three names chosen thus far for the sheep are Lamb Chop, Mutton Skate, and Three Sheeps in the Wind. As a bit of novelty they have chosen the painful initiation of the lamp post as do the F Clubbers) and call it "Sheep Eate."

Since the F's have chosen Friday as their day to wear their colors, the S's will wear their colors on Saturday. Brown and white are their colors because they say they do everything up in brown with flu white hands. Their motto is "Study and Socialize."

Incidently, Bert Ebert, one of the 25 members of the S, was tapped this week for F Club. The other 24 members will mourn her withdrawal from the S Club, and will all wear black tomorrow.

New S Club sheep include: Fete Pemble, Mary Pease, Helen Cloyer, Mary McAvoy, Edith Hawkins, Mary Lucy Mendenhall, Margaret Smith, Margaret Owen, Catherine Putch, Cleo Sapp, Bonnie Kindig, Catherine Lirdman, Dee Dee Sherman, Dot Boardman, Diana Washburn, Doris Headley, Elizabeth Jeffords, Rita Jones, and Bernice Scott.

Great Composers Have Power to Foresee Wars, Says Noted Pianist and Composer

"Since they are especially sensitive to evil in the world, all great composers can foretell wars to the exact month and year," declared Percy Grainger, composer and pianist, who is appearing as guest artist at Florida State College for Women next week, May 14 through 12.

Speaking in his clipped Australian accent, Mr Grainger stated in an informal interview that he is because musical art is largely a mesmeric art and the pacific life. "The object of music," he said, "is to prepare people for future catastrophes."

A frequent performer before college audiences, Mr Grainger is also famous for his folk song arrangements. He has also written many compositions which include a few unfamiliar ones such as staff bells.

In reply to a question regarding what musical composition he likes best, Mr Grainger said that his favorite is Johann Sebastian Bach's "St Matthew's Passion."

Grainger is the author of the "Marching Song of Democracy" is his favorite choral song, and "Country Gardens" and "Shepherd's Hey" his favorite compositions for instruments.

Regarding American musical style, Mr Grainger said that it resembles the music of China. He once took a missionary's book of Chinese songs, compared it with Kentucky folk songs and found that they were remarkably alike, consisting of almost exactly the same phrases. American music is English music is several thousand years behind that of continental Europe, but has a certain charm of its own, he said. Contrary to popular belief, American music is not a universal art but, as practiced is particularly nationalistic.

When Mr Grainger was a student, he have been speculating on the reason behind his name for the "Gumsucker in March" and Grainger explained that it doesn't concern the chewing gum or sap rubbers in the American sense of the word. "Gumsucker," he said, "is an American term for a country bum in the state of Victoria, Australia, and comes from the name of the eucalyptus trees, which are quite numerous in Victoria. Eucalyptus trees have little sprouts which grow at the bottom of these trees."

Mr Grainger's fine memory underlies the advantage of the unusually frequent time changes in his compositions. A very rhythmical player, this lends variety to his works. For example, he remarked that people once considered it desirable to tell and retell the same story over and over again, but today, although they do not object to telling the same story they prefer to tell it differently each time "as with time changes," he said.

"Contrary to popular belief," he stated, "all native music is very irregular and yet the impression is very rhythmical. Like all other art music is becoming more complicated. Civilization seems to give a foolproof view of life, but as doesn't attempt to make things appear easy when in reality, they are difficult," he said.

Mr Grainger has been playing in public for 52 years and has appeared in from 80 to 120 concerts per year for the past 50 years. Coming here on his present tour from Lafayette, Louisiana, he will go on to Baton Rouge and then to Rushton, Louisiana, after which he will return to New York in order to make a number of musical recordings.

Teas and Luncheons Honor Miss Bowman

Miss Evelyn Bowman of the speech department, whose engagement to Marshall L B Kennahan of Marshall Town, Iowa, has recently been announced, will be honored with a number of social events this week and next.

Mrs Ida Simmons and Miss Vela Cleveland will entertain her at a tea Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs Simmons. Miss Bowman will also be honored with a luncheon given by Mrs Mary Buford Thursday at her home. Guests will include close friends of the honoree.

A tea given at the Student Alumnae reception room will also honor Miss Bowman on Friday, May 18. Miss Sadie Young will be hostess on th's occasion.

Miss Bowman is a member of Mr and Mrs L F Bowman of Marshall Town, Iowa, plans to be married in June. Mr and Mrs Bennets sometime during the summer. Definite plans for the wedding, however, have not as yet been made. Captain Kennehan is stationed at the army air field in Lincoln, Nebraska, where he is connected with the dental corps.

Wriggling Turtle Bites to Freedom

"Look out, he'll bite you!"

"Oh gosh, what can we do with him?"

These exclamations pierced the quiet of the animal house on the gymnasium, arms outstretched, as a frightened girl came down a wiggling turtle. He was stretching his neck like an experienced contortionist.

Suddenly the procession stopped. The turtle went sailing through the air accompanied by a terrified shriek. It took little imagination to guess what had happened. Before long the turtle left the scene, one of them murmured, "I'll bet he'll bite me." And the turtle—well if some carefree lassie goes tripping merrily along the shores of some southern stream, he'll surely bite her toe, she can just remember a turtle also has his revenge.

Snow Presents Radio Alibrey

Garnet and Gold Programs Have Only One Break

The 9th edition of Garnet and Gold, Florida State College's weekly radio program, went on the air from the college auditorium today with Eleanor Loyless of Tallahasee as its music editor and Sidney Snow, designer of the college's Peruvian museum, as its personality of the week.

Eleanor Loyless is a piano student in the FSCW school of music. She played Chopin's Nocturne, Opus 62, No 1, on last night's program. Snow talked briefly on the history of the valuable Peruvian relics which were presented to the college last year by the John Victor Carters of the Canal Zone.

For the second successive week the program planned to present Daphne Rowe in her own song "Let Mo Stay in the South,' which won honorable mention in the vocal composition division of the AAUW creative arts contest. Anna Watkins in her winning piano composition, and Frances Jean Blackburn with her honorable mention piano composition were unscheduled—both members of the school of music dinner at which all three performers were selected—of the Tri Delta club. It is expected that the numbers will be presented on the program for May 17.

On May 24 the Garnet and Gold program will be accompanied by a terrified shriek. It took little imagination to guess what had happened. Before long the turtle left the scene, one of them murmured, "I'll bet he'll bite me." And the turtle—well if some carefree lassie goes tripping merrily along the shores of some southern stream, he'll surely bite her toe, she can just remember a turtle also has his revenge.

Archery Telegraphic Meet Begins May 12

Class Ratings to Be Given According to Scores

The archery classes of the Florida State College are entering the Women's Inter-Collegiate Telegraphic Archery Tournament sponsored by the National Archer Association.

FSC participants are shooting for scores during the second period of the meet. This period begins May 12 and ends May 19. Only those scores shot during that period can count in the National Competition.

The girls on the team will shoot every day during that time, having their scores checked and officially signed by Miss Frances Crean, Instructor in Physical Education, or by Captain Forehand, student head of archery.

Girls making scores over 428 will be given a blue ribbon; making scores between 350 and 434 will be given Class B rating, and those making scores between 349 and 349 will be in Class C. A certificate showing the score and the Class rating will be awarded to each competitor who makes any of the three scores.

The participants will shoot Columbia Rounds, that is 24 arrows from 60 yards, 24 from 50 yards and from 30 yards, consecutively, averaging the three scores.

Inside of the National Tournament there are Five District Tourneys for the Different Sections of the country. Florida is located in the Southern District and will participate with the other Southern States therein.

"We are entering the highest eight scores which will be made from among the 18 girls who are now entered in the contest," said Miss Crean. "The Women's Physical Education major who is interested in entering the tournament should see me this week," Miss Crean added.

Odds Take Archery Finals From Evens

In Odd-Even archery finals, the Odds defeated the Evens 2416 to 2167, Priscilla Clark was high scorer for the Odds with the total of 447 while Doris Hall was high scorer for the Evens with 333 points.

The tournament is played by allowing each girl to shoot 24 arrows from 50, 40 and 30 yards. Scores are totaled for each team and the best scores from each were compiled.

Tuesday marked the finals of the Odd-Even tennis matches with the Odds taking one game and the Evens another.

Lucy Brown, Odd, defeated Joy Little 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. While Babe Evans, Even, defeated Blanche Faver in the number 1 game 6-1, 4-6 and 6-1. Faver was by Babe gave the Evens a victory over the Odds in the whole tournament. Evens winning four games and the Odds, two.

Flastacowo Delayed

It is doubtful that the 1945 Flastacowo will be ready for distribution before school closes, according to Cleo Sapp, editor. Some of the books have not been completed at the printers.

In the event that the yearbooks are not ready for release this year, Cleo has said that they will be mailed during the summer to all seniors who graduated. All other students will have an opportunity to get theirs when they return to college in the fall.

Two Concerts Feature Artist

.cy Grainger Highlights National Music Week

.ercy A Grainger, pianist-com-.ser and musician in residence, presented his individual interpretations of well-known musical compositions in two artist series programs held last Monday and Tuesday in Westcott auditorium.

The two programs were identical, but there was some difference in the encores which Mr Grainger played at the conclusion of the various parts of the two programs.

In commemoration of V-E day, Mr Grainger opened his Monday night program with the playing of the "Star Spangled Banner." Mr Grainger then played "Toccata and Fugue" in D minor by J S Bach, followed by "Prelude and Fugue" ir C sharp minor, from "The Well-Tempered Clavier," by J S Bach.

The second half of his program consisted of the playing of "Four Etudes" by Chopin. The first was "A flat major, op 25, No 1; the second, "C minor, op 10, No 12: the third, "C sharp minor, op 25, No 7, and the fourth and last etude was "B minor, op 25, No 10.

The third part of Mr Grainger's program was the "Sonata, op 7" by Grieg which included an allegro moderato, andante molto, Alla Menuetto ma poco piu lento, and Finale, molto allegro.

In the fourth and last part of the artist series programs, Mr Grainger played the "Romance in D flat major, op 24, No 8" by Sibellus, and the "Hungarian Rhapsody No 2" by Liszt.

For encores the first night, Mr Grainger played "Country Dance," a composition written in the time of Bach, DeBussy's "Claire de Lune," George Gershwin's "The Man I Love," "Romance in F sharp major" by Schomann and his well-known "Country Gardens."

Included in the encores of the second performance were Brahm's "Lullaby" and Henry Cowell's "Olien Harp" and "Lilt of the Reel."

Blackburn Heads CGA

Mabel Blackburn was elected president of the College Government Association for the summer last Wednesday at special meeting of the summer school students. Beverly Burhans was elected chairman of judiciary.

The summer session is being considered a part of the regular school year because the college is going on the quarter system. Therefore it was necessary to elect officers for president of the CGA and other offices.

The other elected officers are Betty Ann Shiver as house president of Landis and Betty Pooser as house president of Gilchrist.

On the second night of summer school all minor officers will be elected.

Alumnae Report

Three former presidents of the Florida State College Alumnae Association have been visitors to the campus this month.

Mrs Dempsey Creary, first president of the Student Alumnae Association, spent a few days on campus. Mrs Creary was a member of the class of 1929 and is now head of the Girl Scouts in Miami. She was also the first director of the Rowena Longmire Student Alumnae building.

The second visitor to the SAA this month was Mrs J P Ashmore of Graceville, Florida, also a past president of the association.

Mrs Ashmore was of the class of 1926, and a music major at FSC. She came to the college to stay during Music Week.

Mrs Creary and Mrs Ashmore were guests at the Student Alumnae building.

Mrs Frank Bisbee, of Jacksonville, was a visitor at the Delta Delta Delta sorority house last week.

Mrs Bisbee has been president of the Alumnae Association and was a member of the FSC Class of 1919.

A member of the present board of the association was also on campus this month. She was Miss Betty Nickenson, from Pensacola. Miss Nickenson graduated here in 1941.

Sixty girls joined the Student Alumnae Association after the Senior Talent Convocation held in Westcott last Thursday at 1:45. These seniors paid their dues and Rosemary Hubbell was the first girl of the class of 1945 to take out a life membership in the SAA

Monday, Wednesday, and Friday of the week of May 8, and Monday and Tuesday of the week of May 13, 1945, the Student Alumnae building is holding open house for all seniors.

"The object of this," said Miss Louise Gehan, secretary of the SAB, "is to acquaint the girls with the files of correspondence that are used to keep the college in touch with past graduates. We also want them to know about the association and how it is run,' said Miss Gehan.

Last week Miss Gehan heard "some interesting news" about one of the 1928 graduates, Martha Branscomb, who received her Ph D degree from Chicago University in 1942, majoring in social work. She is now the Chief of the Child Welfare Section of the Welfare Division of the United Nations Rehabilitation and Relief Association.

Miss Branscomb is now in Paris conferring with the French about the post-war welfare of children, according to the letter received here. "The heads of the Italian and Greek governments are coming to confer with her in the near future," said Miss Gehan, who added that Miss Branscomb is the third one of our Alumnae to become part of UNRRA.

Miss Eunice Minton, of the class og 1930, is director of welfare in the Balkans. She is in charge of distributing clothes, food, and all necessities to the people in the Balkans. Miss Kathryn Walters, assistant dietitian here at FSC until a month ago, left this country last week on her way to Germany.

Mrs Walters was of the class of 1934. Her activities now have to do with the entire dietetics field for up to 10,000 people. She took intensive special training in Washington, D C, before going overseas.

Six of the alumnae of FSC have been accepted for foreign duty with the American Red Cross. They are: Anna Grocver, of the class of 1936, who has been in personnel work at the Naval Air Station at Lake City: Louise Prine, from Mount Olive, Mississippi, who has been in the WASP since she graduated in 1940; Doris Summerlin, of the class of 1940, from Winter Haven; Edna Earle Wilson, also of the class of 1940, from Piant City; Mary Hutchinson, of the class of 1938, from Tallahassee; and Lorraine (Pat) Bulkeley, of the class of 1938, who is now in Paris with ARC.

Song" both original compositions of Mr Grainger. The band will also play Mr Grainger's arrangement of "Molly on the Shore."

"The Thanksgiving Song" presented jointly by the glee club, orchestra, band, and organ, will begin the fourth and last part of tonight's program. The last movement of this song will be the first performance ever presented. Percy Orainger will be first pianist: Mrs Mildred H Davis, instructress in voice and piano, sopranp: Mrs Mary M Meginniss, instructress in voice, alto; Ruth P Bumford, contralto; Orant Wallin, baritone: Allen Boggs, base; and Mr Karl O Kuersteiner, dean of the school of music, conductor.

Next, the Glee club, orchestra, and band will play two arangements by Percy Grainger: the "Irish Tune from County Derry" and the "Marching Song of Democracy", Mr Grainger conducting.

The playing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by the combined groups with the audience singing will bring the program to a close.

At the Chamber Music Concert held last Wednesday night, Dean Karl O Kuersteiner of the school of music made his first Tallahassee appearance as featured violinist, when he and Mr Orainger played Cyril Scott's "Tallahassee Suite". The program, presented by the faculty piano quintet and the faculty string trio of the college, was held in the Augusta Conradi theater.

The faculty string trio composed of Dean Kuersteiner, violinist; Miss Olga Eitner, violist; and Frank Sykora, 'cellist also made its first appearance as a trio when they played Henry Purcell's Three-Part "Fantasias" No 1, No 2 and No 3.

The piano quintet has played an out-of-town engagement, but had not appeared in Tallahassee until Wednesday night. It is composed of Miss Mary E Winslow, pianist: Dean Kuersteiner, first violinist; Rachel Crotwell, second violinist; Miss Eitner, violist: and Frank Sykora, 'cellist. Robert Schumann's Quintet for Piano and Strings was the quintet's offering on Wednesday night's program.

The Purcell Fantasias by the trio came first, followed by the Fantasia No 3. The composition of many melodies into one composition characterized all the numbers.

Next on the program was the Schumann Quintet for Piano and Strings. All four of its movements were played, ending with 'Allegro, ma non troppo". The fateful, "knell-of-doom" quality of the second movement, "In modo d'una Marcia" was striking. Consultation of the program notes revealed that it had been written as funeral march.

The last number on the program was the Tallahassee Suite played by Mr Kuersteiner and Mr Grainger. The Tallahassee Suite was written by Cyril Scott, and English composer, in 1919. It has three parts: Bygone Memories, After Sundown, and Negro Air and Dance. According to Dean Kuersteiner, the idea of playing the Tallahassee Suite was Orainger's own. Mr Orainger is a personnal friend of the composer, and suggested when he was first asked to come to Tallahassee for National Music week that the Scott Suite be featured at some program during the week.

Over two hundred people at the Music Week Dinner given by the School of Muic in the Lower South Dining Hall last night. The welcome was given by Dean Karl O Kuersteiner, toastmaster, was followed by the introduction of guests. Greetings by Dr Doak S Campbell was followed by songs with Miss Etta Robertson, directing the Glee club, accompanied by Miss Margaret R Miller.

Mr Percy Grainger, guest at the dinner, spoke on "Music as a State Resource". He said that music cannot thrive amidst competition, and that if artists in the various countries would portray the individual customs and characteristics of their communities, art, the world over, would become greatly enriched.

At the conclusion of the dinner program, all present rose and sang "Garnet and Gold".

At the outdoor concert held Sunday on the terrace of Westcott building, the pieces played were: "The Man I Love" by Gershwin, "Night and Day" by Porter, "Stonthearted Men" by Romberg, "National Emblem" by Bagley, the "Light Cavalry", an overture by Suppe, and the "Stars and Stripes Forever" by Sousa.

Assistant student conductors were Betty Sanford and Rachel Crotwell. At the conclusion of the program, Mr Percy Grainger, visiting pianist-composer, congratulated Mr Sykora and band members for their performance.

Among the selections played by Mrs Ramona Beard Sunder were "Fugue in A" by Mendelssohn, the "Lamentation" by Guilmant, "Prelude" by Pierue, written in the toccata or "touch piece" style, and "Romance sans Paroles" by Bonnet. Her last number was "Symphonic VI" by Widor. In this Mrs Beard emphasized a variety of rhythmic combinations and tone colors on the organ.

Tomorrow, the last day of Music Week, Mr Grainger will give an address on "Creativeness in the Arts" at 10 a m in the recital hall of the music annex. At 10:30 tomorrow morning, he will preside at at composition forum in the recital hall. Tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, there will be an organization luncheon of "Florida Composers' League" at the Cherokee hotel with Dean Karl O Kuersteiner presiding.

At 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, there will be an initiation of Phi Chapter, Pi Kappa Lambda members of the national honorary society in music in the Student Alumnae building.

The very last event of Music Week will be a dinner honoring new members of Phi Chapter, Pi Kappa Lambda in the college dining hall at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow night. Miss Ella S Opperman, dean emeritus, will preside, and Dr William G Dodd, dean emeritus of the College of Arts and Sciences, will be guest speaker.

Honorary Initiates; 7 Students Taken In

Party Honors 34 Students, Tea Held in Garden

Spring initiation of Pi chapter of Omicron Nu was held Thursday evening, May 3, in the clubroom of the Student Alumnae building.

The decorations of spring flowers and the corsages presented to the new initiates were in pink and lavendar, the colors of the society.

At the conclusion of the initiation ceremony, Miss Margaret Sandels, dean of the school of home economics, spoke to the new members.

After Dean Sandel's speech an informal social hour was held at which coffee and decorated cake squares were served. Mrs Ruth Ferguson and Mrs Eloise Goulding were in charge of the social arrangements.

The two juniors who were initiated are Margaret Dugger and Carolyn Flewellen and the senior initiates are Eleanor Boyles, Margaret Fisher, Josephine Maniaci Mrs Ruth Perry, and Mrs Dorothy Jinks Parker.

Omicron Nu Scholarship Tea

Members of Omicron Nu, home economics honorary society, honored the 34 home economics majors whose average last semester was B or above with the society's semi-annual scholarship tea which was held in the garden of Miss Helen Richey last Monday afternoon.

Upon arrival the new initiates were given pink and lavender nosegays of spring flowers. Miss Edna Mae McIntosh presided at the punch table where fruit puncb and cookies were served. She and Miss Ellen Wright were in charge of the refreshments.

The outside guests at the tea included Dr and Mrs Doak S Campbell, Mrs Thelma Flannagan, Miss Boletha Frogen, Miss Helen Cate, Mrs Edris Butler Mrs Nina Mae Williams, Miss Dorothy Leaby, Miss Ina Van Stan and Mrs Ida Van Stan.

The 34 honorees were: Muriel Beck, Eleanor Boyles, Margaret Dugger, Margaret Fisher, Pat Howard, Mary Jelks, Dorothy Jinks Parker, Jocelyn Ziegler, Esther Dale, Orace DeWolf, Ann Parker, Juanita Ault, Jean Bennett, Imogene Boyette, Helen Cappleman, Doris Dubois, Irma Hammond, Elizabeth Harper, Helen Hasley, Mary Ann Herring, Josephine Parker, Louise Rampey, Leatrice Joy Smith, Lorna Lucille Story, and Dorothy Vincent

Packing Boxes Are Objects of Search As Vacation Nears

Heavy twine and card board boxes are becoming very precious articles on the campus. With less than one week left of this year's college session, students are becoming more and more conscious of the summer holidays, and with this vacation-wise attitude they are beginning to pack up bulky belongings to be expressed or mailed home. Every day the college post office is faced with large, sometimes not too neatly wrapped, packages which foreseeing students are mailing home—many times collect.

Contrary to earlier announcements, the Book Store has not been able to obtain the moth proof boxes for summer storage that they have sold to students in previous years. For this reason the managers of the Sweet Shop, Spick and Span, and Soda Shop are being approached frequently, manager of the Spick and Span "In the last few days, as many as 25 or 30 girls have asked me for boxes suitable for mailing "

Students Pressed to Find New Ways to Present May Festival

The students of Florida State College here tried each year to think of some original way of presenting the May Festival.

In 1936 the students went to their humanities course for a theme. They emerged with the story of Persephone. Persephone, the daughter of Demeter, the Goddess of Grain, is kidnapped by the King of the Underworld. Demeter is so angry and grief stricken at the loss of her daughter that she orders all things to die

Hermes, the messenger of the Gods, comes in and guarantees that Persephone will be brought back, the length of her stay depending on what she has eaten in the underworld. She has eaten six pomegranate seeds so she can live on earth only six months.

On Persephone's return there is great rejoicing, and Demeter chooses an emissary from this world to carry out her ideal of everlasting spring, so went the plot of 1936.

In 1932 the girls turned their eyes to their fairy tale books and produced a tale of Robin Hood in which he rescued the Princess Rosalind from the cluches of King Winter.

In 1934 with a little tampering with history produced a temperamental Queen for Alsace-Lorraine. She is bored with life and offers a huge reward to anyone who can amuse her. Everyone in her kingdom tries but to little avail. While the people are vainly trying to interest the Queen a young girl rushes in persued by a beast. The beast is killed by the soldiers, and the girl dances for the Queen. She is so talented that the Queen gives her the reward.

In 1941 a tale of Nature was told in which Mother Earth sends heralds to all corners of the earth and the heavens to search for the fairest maiden they have ever set eyes on. The Princess of Summer is not accepted as queen for time has stolen her youthfulness. Autumn is not chosen because her season is too short to grace the throne of years. The beautiful coldness of the Princess of Winter freezes the company, consequently not being chosen

A little boy finds Spring asleep, and she is immediately chosen. As she mounts the throne she proclaims her wish to make Florida the land of everlasting spring.

Who can tell from what tales of literature the plan for next May day will comes, as students continue each year to produca new ingenious ideas.

Enrollment Approaches 2500; As Registration Continues; Campus Buildings Increase

Post-War Plans Involve Two Questions Including Sufficient Building Space, Expansion Of Educational Program

The highest enrollment ever to be reached in the history of Florida State college is fast approaching the 2500 mark. The total registration at this time numbers 2,441 students, but all students have not completed registration procedures as yet, reported Dr Doak S Campbell, president of the college.

The increased enrollment has necessitated the addition of two off-campus houses, the "Lodge," and a new floor in Reynolds hall.

Last year's survey of women's post-war needs of colleges placed the second largest in the country. With the increased enrollment, although registration figures from other colleges are not available, it is believed that FSC has maintained its former rank and possibly has jumped to first place over Texas State College for Women.

Dr Campbell faced the enlarged campus population with optimism that expansion plans long delayed by the war might soon be put into effect. "Post-war plans for the college involve two major questions," said the president, "namely the developing of a physical plant sufficient to take care of the student population who normally attend the college and the expansion of the educational program to meet the anticipated needs of young women who graduate from secondary schools.

According to information received from Miss Edith McCollum, director of residence halls, the two off-campus houses have been leased. The Lodge, located on Pinckney, Pinehouse, and Van Brunt house make up the "The Village," and a new floor has been added to increase space on the top of Reynolds. She also stated that about fifty were housed at the school's camp but that they were moved in within a week after their arrival.

The two new off-campus houses are Hutchinson house and Pisher house. Hutchinson house, located at Jefferson and Copeland streets, accommodates 24 girls and has as its house mother Mrs M B Brown. Fisher house located at Macomb and Pensacola streets, accommodates 22 girls and has as its house mother Key P Hood.

"The Village," which is now operated as a dormitory, has its own office with a staff headed by

Memoirs of Conrad Are Now Published

The memoirs of Dr Edward Conrad, president and president emeritus of Florida State College from 1909 until his death last December, have been published by the Alumnae association of FSC.

A forward and biographical sketch by President Doak S Campbell, a tribute by Dr W H Rogers, a memorial by Dr Thomas Jefferson D Dodd, and an FSC faculty resolution upon Dr Conrad's death are included in the publication.

The memoirs consist of nine chapters: Election as President, Association with the Faculty, Accumulation of Land, Beautifying the Campus, The Buildings, Interesting Incidents, Development of the College, Relations with the Students, and Policies of the College.

Dr Conrad completed the writing of his memoirs shortly before his death. He wrote them upon the request of faculty members, alumnae, and other friends who urged him to write of his 32 years as president of FSC.

History Professors Publish Reviews

Dr Ventia L. Shores and Dr Robert Spencer Cotterill, history professors of history at Florida State college, had book reviews of Florida, The Everglade Empire by Sidney W Martin published during the summer.

Mississippi Valley His'orical Review carried Dr Shores' work, and the Journal of Southern History had Dr Cotterill's.

According to the context of the reviews, the book honors the centennial of Florida's admission as the 28th state in the union. There mention that it is probably an eighteenth of the author's doctoral thesis.

As presented by the reviews, the book "traces the problems and progress of Florida from its acquisition by the United States until its admission to the union in 1845.

Cut System Is Ruled Out

Students Are Responsible For Class Attendance

New class attendance regulations for Florida State college have been announced by Dr Doak S Campbell, president of the college. The new regulations are based primarily on the belief that each student should be responsible for her own class attendance. Freshmen, however, will be exempted from this plan until their third quarter.

Old "Cut" System

The old "cut" system, which "excused" a certain number of absences, has long been criticized by many members of the faculty according to the administration. Last year President Campbell appointed a committee of six, with Miss Katherine Warren was chairman, to study the "cut" system and report their findings to the faculty.

The committee found that since students felt they were free to use their cuts, they lost much more class time than was actually necessary. The system that was recommended by the committee and accepted unanimously by the faculty is explained in a letter from President Campbell which has been mailed to the parents of entering students.

It has been the belief of President Campbell that the "cuts" formerly allowed students could be profitably expended to take care of special cases or conditions when students were

Distaff Sponsors Freshman Contest

The traditional freshmen contest sponsored annually by the Distaff is now open for contributions. All freshmen are urged to participate in writing short stories and articles on any subject. The deadline for entries is November 1, and the winning contribution will be published in the first issue of the Distaff which is scheduled to appear on December 1. The winners of the contest will be chosen by the Distaff staff.

Winifred Meldrim, editor of the Distaff for this year, said she hoped that many freshmen would enter contributions. "The subject for any subject since this is her first issue of the magazine which is scheduled to appear on December 1. The winners of the contest will be chosen by the Distaff staff.

Winifred Meldrim, editor of the Distaff for this year, said she hoped that many freshmen would enter contributions. "The subject for any subject since this is her first issue of the magazine which is scheduled to appear on December 1. The winners of the contest will be chosen by the Distaff staff.

"The theme of the first issue in December," explained Winifred, "is the Distaff and its purpose. It is the desire of the staff that upperclassmen submit material on any phase of this theme. However, material on other subjects will be accepted. Poetry is especially requested. The deadline for these articles is also November 1.

Correspondent Lectures To FSC Students

Vincent Sheean, Author, Journalist, Speaks On Personal Opinion

Russian - American Relations Emphasized in Speech

Vincent Sheean, international war correspondent - and author, presented a lecture on the subject of "Personal Opinion" in the college auditorium Tuesday evening. The talk was followed by a question and discussion period.

In elaborating his theme, Personal Opinion, Mr Sheean premised a summary of, and his views on, world situations in general and on American-Russian relations in particular.

He first outlined the causes and factors of the first World War, the attempts at creating world peace that followed, and ended World War II a direct result and a culmination of that war.

"On the eve of attempting a third peace," said Mr Sheean, "let us look to the legacies of the last war." He named the Versailles Peace, Wilson's 14 Points, and the League of Nations. "Wilson and his peace," he said, "also he sacrificed many of the ideas embodied in the Forten Points. As one of the leaders of the present war, Mr Sheean stated, was the fact that the United States withdrew completely from the European continent after the failure of the League of Nations, thus leaving France to rule conquered

Amazing Quantities of Food Used Daily To Keep FSC's Hungry Horde Well Fed

The serving of an average of 6330 meals is the record set by our head dietitian, Miss Anna Tracy, upon writer each morning. Miss Tracy state that the five large dining halls and kitchen here at Florida State College have the distinction of making up the largest eating establishment in this state where individuals are served meals at a common hour rather than at cafe.

In normal times 800 pounds of meat would be required for one meal at the college, and 200 pounds of roast and 35 pounds of coffee would be used in a day. The students consume 400 dozen rolls or loaves of bread, and about 200 dozen cookies at a sitting. 150 Pullman size loaves of bread daily are used by the girls here at FSC, and two and one half barrels of flour are used in baking each day. For one dessert the girls can toss off 250 pies or 65 gallons of ice cream. Because of the seasonal inventory of milk production at the college dairy and because of the fact that refrigeration space is not available for kitchen use, the usual quota of 400 gallons of milk used daily has been cut to approximately 200 gallons for the present supply. This situation should be somewhat alleviated within six weeks, and milk will be served at every meal, according to the head dietitian. In order to give each girl one serving of butter at a meal, 300 pounds of butter would be needed weekly.

A comparison of the dinning hall facilities of Florida State College for Women as October 8, 1927, with the present facilities is quite startling. On the former date, Miss Tracy states, 45 people were employed for the preparation and care of food, 75 students employed to wait on tables, assistant dietitian, and one student assistant. To carry out the tremendous task now of feedind the entire student body of the college day by day throughout the year the dining room employs, in addition to the head dietitian, five dietitians, dietitians - assistants, nineteen to 25 full-time employees in the kitchen, and 128 student waitpersonnel.

Artist Series Opens Season With Soprano

Marjorie Lawrence Sings Gotterdamerung Aria

The final scene from Gotterdammerung was the featured number on Marjorie Lawrence's concert of October 2, which was the first event of the "A" Artist Series for this year. Miss Lawrence used this number in all of her concerts to the army of occupation in Germany because it was, she said, one of the favorites of the soldiers.

The singer is a dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, is a native of Australia, and made her debut in New York a few years ago after studying in Melbourne, Australia and Paris, France.

In spite of the emotional effects from infantile paralysis, she has made several tours for the armed services, and was decorated by Enrique six weeks ago and the FSC concert was her first for the fall season.

As a special request at FSC Miss Lawrence sang Waltzd Matilda, a folk song of her native country. As a final effort she asked that the audience join her in the Star-Spangled Banner.

Barrows to Return To FSC This Year

Major William M Barrows, Jr, associate professor of physics and curator of the physics museum, is expected to return to the Florida State College campus this week after a leave of absence of five years during which he served in the Army.

Major Barrows was on his way home from Europe when he was assigned as the physics professor at the Army University which has been established at Biarritz, France, a celebrated resort town.

He served as a reserve officer in the Army and volunteered for service before the war and was made the professor of military science in the ROTC at Lehigh, University, Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. After specialized work in military and ballistics, Barrows was then given a nation-wide assignment in the crew artillery with a team which toured the country. They toured the country as a consultant service to keep the artillery in schools, Barrows' assignment he was sent abroad where he served with in Scotland, England, France, Luxemburg, Belgium, Holland, and Germany. He was appointed as Major of Ordnance in the Battle of the Bulge. He has had the longest continuous career after having seen service with three American generals, General Patton, General Simonds, and General Hodges.

Changes Made in Handbook

Social, Academic, Health Revisions in Effect

The 1945-46 Gold Book has undergone a number of revisions due to the shortening from a semester to a quarter system. Social and academic procedure along with health quarantine rules have been affected by this change. A summary of supplement to the standing regulations also has been added.

Student Council announced that sophomores be allowed four cuts before the end of every quarter, will be allowed no weekends the first six weeks of the first quarter, and three the first six weeks of the first quarter, and three every quarter thereafter.

The requirement of an introduction of dates to residence counselors except for freshmen during their first and second quarter in residence has been eliminated. Freshmen have the out-of-town date trips with young men must return by 5:30 p m.

Rest meetings shall be called for the hour immediately following dinner and only this hour will be closed to visitors, in contrast to last year's rule which

Spirogira Sponsored Book of Oddiquette Issued to Freshmen

A "Book of Oddiquette, dedicated to the Class of 1949 and 49 from whom are expected great things," sponsored by the Odd Commandery Distaff, was issued to all freshmen at Florida State College. This book contains rules of sportsmanship and traditions, as well as the honorary.

Those names listed in the handbook include Francis Myers, president of the commandery; Odd; Nell Clark, chairman of Odd Commandery; Sarah Lewis, chairman of the Odd Commandery sophomore council adviser; Robin Hill, chairman of the freshman activities; and Rosetta Carver, head of the honor code committee. A personality sketch of each girl is given.

Freshmen were also warned of certain campus "Pollyolies." These were Ann Carolyn Allison, president of the College Government Association; Caroline Hall, chairman of judiciary; Sarah Lewis, chairman of Interviser; and Ella May Quimby, chairman of Evening Organization.

The Book of Oddiquette, which was distributed by the Junior Student Council Friday of Orientation Week concluded with a group of Odd and college songs.

Book for Children Written By DeWitt, Illustrated By Kin to Be Published

"Old Calhoun," a picture story for children to be written by F E DeWitt and illustrated by Ann Kin, has been accepted by the publishing house of Whittlesey House, Mc-Graw Hill Book Company, it was announced today by Dr Claude E Boyd.

Dr DeWitt graduated from Florida State College in 1929 with an A B in Journalism. Miss Kirn is an instructor in art at the college.

The story is a narrative that had a chance for a last trip across country before its railroad days were over. The drawings in black, white and red are on each page. Miss Kirn's drawings for the publisher of this book

Dr DeWitt's first book, as Miss Kirn's second. She illustrated "Pinky Lee for College" by Dorothy Rhoda Graham, and is now drawing for another of the Pinky Marie series.

Mrs DeWitt the former Evelyn Tyner was editor-in-chief of The Flambeau in 1928. After her graduation she worked in Washington and New York. She has written weekly published for schools all over the country. In 1941, Mrs Stones

Dr DeWitt returned to Florida to take a job with the State Advisory Board. In 1943 she married Robert L DeWitt. After he went overseas she taught art classes in the FSC Nursery school. It was after that she began to work seriously on the "Old Cahoon" A year ago she resigned her position to become unit supervisor of the State Welfare Board.

Miss Kirn who received her art training at the St Louis School of Fine Arts, the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, and Columbia University, joined the FSC faculty last year. She designed, through her class in state craft, the setting for college play productions. Miss Kirn was also a member of the crafts committee of the Creative Arts group, and, as a part of this program, discussed silk screen painting at an exhibit. She spent the summer of 1943 in Texico, Mexico studying silver craft.

SPIRIT OF THE WEEK

DOES THAT STAND FOR FLAMBEAU?

Honor

Editor's Note: This is a guest editorial by Rosetta Carver, Chairman of the Honor Committee.

Honor is a personal quality and the effectiveness of our Honor Code can come only through the united efforts of all students. The Honor Code on this campus was established a number of years ago when women's colleges were still considered "younger sisters" in educational circles, and it still was an established fact that young girls with advanced schooling ideas must be told the "hows" and "whens" for everything they did or thought. They could never hope to assume the responsibilities with which a college man was entrusted. Girls just could not manage their own affairs. And then, with time, college women began doing things for themselves. Student senates, social councils, student courts and finally, student honor codes.

Of these progressive steps in community-living on a woman's compus, the honor code and honor system are the most recent. There are still girls' schools that will not accept them, and still actually lock their gates at dusk and require student offenders to appear before black-robed "courts" for "trial."

FSC has its very own honor code established by students who believed in the personal integrity of every member of the college community. Although our code was worked out by our College Government Association, a cooperative government made up of students and faculty, the impetus for establishing an honor code came from the students, students who loved and cherished their college and who believed that the reputation and honor of the college had been entrusted to them. These students talked with other students and with their faculty, and after some time the Honor Code was established on these principles: (1) When a student registers in this college, she pledges herself to maintain a spirit of honor. (2) A student pledges herself to give or receive no aid on examinations or any class work, or to use any materials unauthorized by her instructor. (3) A student willingly obeys residence and social regulations. (4) A student is honorable in all her personal relations, for as a college woman, she looks upon lying, cheating, and stealing as the most base of all infringements of the Honor Code. (5) A student pledges herself to instruct any fellow student who may unintentionally be violating the Code, and to warn any students whom she sees knowingly violating the Code, and if the student continues to transgress, in fairness to herself and to her classmates, to report the violation to student judiciary.

This is the Honor Code, one of the most cherished traditions of our campus, and if you are a college woman, whom we define as a young lady who has reached maturity with a maximum of discretion, you will live by it.

For Freshmen

Upperclassmen come and upperclassmen go, but there's one thing Florida State college is always sure of having: freshmen, and a lot of them. Crowding the halls, the post office, and all other places on campus and downtown are the girls who are just beginning the long grind toward 1949.

It is obvious that all concerned are very much interested in their welfare. Tests, lectures, orientation tours, sorority functions have been the order of the past weeks. They have become acquainted with various campus traditions and institutions, such as Senior Hall, Torch Night, Sophomore Council and they have seen Esteren members in green and Spirogyra girls in black to emphasize the Odd-Even tradition tha tprevails on campus. Student officers and members of Senate and Judiciary are not unfamiliar to them, and most of all they have attended classes.

All of which has given the impression of bigness and importance to the college and brings up the question of how one becomes a good student and an outstanding person here at FSC. Memories of past activities in their respective high school are still vivid, but they wonder how that could mean much here in a place so large.

Unfortunately each girl's potentialities are not immediately recognized when she gets here, but there is a complicated process which is rewarding in results in the end.

Freshmen may learn the procedure of student government by attending Senate meetings, talking to the student representatives, CGA officers, and by reading the CGA constitution found in the handbook.

Student forums, class discussions, and lectures all help to give the student a picture of campus life here and at other colleges. Our professors, too, contrary to joking opinions, have invaluable ideas to offer us if we will only take advantage of them.

Articles and books about regional, national, and international problems and governments may be obtained from the library. This type of information can easily be compared and contrasted with smaller problems of the same nature here on campus.

There is no scarcity of information, but there is a danger that goes with it. That is, becoming confused and depending solely upon the opinions of others in making our decisions and drawing our own conclusions. FSC does not claim to have an infallible college government nor the complete answer to perfect social behavior. Growth and perfection come only through changes that meet the demands of a changing world of which all of us are important parts.

In the opinion of many great educators, the main function of education is to give the student a questioning mind. No student should allow the opinions of others to dominate her mind entirely, nor should mere color words and generalities be capable of swaying her.

Thinking clearly and forming our own ideas after carefully studying pertinent facts is the answer to success and knowledge here at college, just as it is after college.

From Boudoir to Laundry

Because of the factless chatter which has been circulating through campus circles since this college session has begun, we thought it wise to "get the facts" in regard to our over-crowded conditions.

Two main conclusions were drawn from a recent investigation: (1) that overcrowdedness is not a new condition here; for the past twenty years FSC has not had dormitory space sufficient to house all applicants, and (2) that this situation is not unique to this institution as so many of us seem to think. Other colleges and institutions are going through this same war time temporary turmoil.

Since the beginning of the war this overcrowded situation has been much more noticeable because of varying reasons including many parents having more money to spend on their childrens' education, young men being taken care of by government means, and a general trend of more emphasis being placed on the educating of women. The adoption of emergency means has been studied, worked over, and put into practice. Even with this inflow of college population outweighing the college facilities as they stand, the college has yet to refuse an applicant who desires to attend this institution. Students are advised that temporary conditions must be accepted until conditions permit them to get permanently settled; nevertheless, she has the opportunity to attend if she so desires.

There has been a limitation of applicants, however, since 1944; out-of-state girls who have never before enrolled at FSC may not study here, although upperclassmen who are residents of other states may continue their studies on this campus. This limitation is exercised primarily to give State girls preference, which is only fair in a State school.

We have heard about the living conditions on campus, if not witnessed them ourselves. Of course they are not the most luxurious quarters one might expect, but when we consider the war's effect on building privileges, WPB operations, ever increasingly rapid enrollment of women in college we must realize that conditions such as ours must exist—at least until we have the opportunity to build FSC up to equal her population.

This will be accomplished by next fall if blue prints go according to plan. Time and space will not permit us to "let students in" on these plans at the moment, but not too far distant we will see careful planning in action on campus. In addition to living conditions being strained, housing classes have also been taxed to the maximum. The enlargement of the History building will help to relieve this inadequacy and in time other additions will be constructed.

As a rule colleges use between 25 and 40 per cent of classroom space, but FSC has an astounding record; by intricately working out a schedule whereby at times we utilize between 80 and 90 per cent of our classrooms.

Although some people don't realize it, this college will probably grow to boast 3000 students in a reasonable length of time. Women have set the precedent that they ARE useful for other things besides washing dishes and will be gaining more and more knowledge to employ for successful business careers. We are just beginning to make a name for our sex; in making this name we certainly do not have time to gripe about petty, temporary, crowded conditions.

Not a Sword, but Peace

The smoke of four years of war is clearing. The battles and campaigns which were once headline news are fading into the pages of history. But the whole war is not yet won. In the days to come we will meet the enemy across the peace table in perhaps the greatest battle of them all.

Nor will this be a battle free from complications. There is no peacetime substitute for the cooperation which with some exceptions exists during war. Peacetime patriotism does not subdue self-interest to the extent that wartime patriotism did, nor does it carry with it the burning enthusiasm for noble ideas nobly expressed. When the fighting is over, victors begin to squabble over special advantages or, as in the case of some Americans, revert to isolationism. Men become more human and less noble, more greedy and less reasonable. The threat to the world is not now war or enemy invasion, but a lack of concerted effort to end all wars.

This is not a time for Americans to give way to discouragement or disillusionment, or to shrug off hard problems that must be solved. The war which has left America virtually undamaged leaves it with a special obligation in the struggle for peace. Europe has gazed too long at the military map and hovered too near to catastrophe to think straight now or to look ahead. Russia is powerful but has suffered loss and suspicion; England is exhausted and France convalescent. China is large, but disunited and embryonic in international affairs.

In a hungry and threadbare world we are well nourished; in a broken world we are merely worn. America stands as the logical leader, a comparatively disinterested participant in the struggle for a just and lasting peace. The time has come for us to summon our reserves of sanity, courage, and patience and use them to make peace as wholly as we used our production power to make war.

This is our chance to slough off old conceptions and make political settlements that have some relation to economic realities. This is our chance to key our social, political and economic thinking to the age of scientific thinking that produced the atomic bomb.

In This Our Time

By Gloria Reed

Military Training

General George C Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, who warned that an unarmed America will "court disaster" Monday evening, called for universal peacetime military training so that the United States can in an emergency mobilize 4.000.000 trained fighting men.

In his biennial report he said that World War III—if it comes—will strike with lightning speed and loose such destruction as the world has never known.

Declaring that the United States barely "squeezed through" to victory, he called for:

1. Military training to provide a citisen army which could mobilize 4,000,000 fighting men in a year:

2. An intensive program of scientific research to assure that the fighting force would be well-equipped;

3 Drafting a plan for the rapid mobilization of industry from peace to war

Atomic Bomb

President Truman, after declaring this last week that he would seek international agreements to outlaw the use of the atomic bomb, Monday, said that the secrets of the bomb will not be shared with "additional nations." These secrets, he stated, are industrial "know-how," since other nations have access to the scientific knowledge that led to the bomb's development. The President also asserted that he felt certain Canada and Great Britain will agree that these secrets will not be shared

Big Three Disagreement

The council of foreign ministers in London ended in apparent failure when Secretary of State James Byrnes stood by his decision that all nations which fought the Axis in Europe ought to be allowed to sit in on the European peace settlement, particularly the Balkan settlement, under the leadership of the Big Three against Stalin's stand that according to the Potsdam agreement only the Big Three ought to formulate sucb a settlement, thus excluding France and China.

Japanese Cabinet Shake-Up

Baron Shidehara, a well-known Japanese liberal, became premier of the new Japanese cabinet and forthwith disbanded the Japanese secret police The preceeding government collapsed because it had failed to carry out MacArthur's orders to release political prisoners and abolish the secret police.

Strikes

Strikes continued last week in the bituminous coal, telephone, New York shipping and oil industries. President Truman, on Thnrsday evening ordered the Navy to seize and operate 52 strike-bound plants of 26 oil companies because the situation had become so critical that "essential military operations" were already "jeopardized"

However, in the coal strikes back-to-work movements reduced the number away from work, and Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach reported "progress' in the effort to end the soft coal strikes brought about by the operators' refusal to recognise a union of foremen and supervisory employees for collective bargaining

Tax Redoctions

The House Ways and Means Committee tentatively adopted Representative Carlson's (R-Kan) plan to reduce individual income taxes by about $2.500.000.000 in preference of Secretary of Treasury Vinson's plan to reduce them by about $2.085.000.000 Both plans would relieve about 12,061,000 persons now subject to normal tax, from all income liability

Fifty-two girls will occupy the rooms on the new floor of Reynolds. Work is nearing completion and several new features are being used in these rooms looking toward their use in new dormitories to be built later.

Scores of plant diseases have been found 10.000 feet in the air by experts, in airplanes.

Venice, Italy, stands on 117 islands, formed by 150 canals, joined together by 400 bridges.

The Students Speak...

Students of the four classes, freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors express differences of opinion, some for, and some against the new quarter system which was inaugurated here at lorida State college last summer. The great majority, however, are still confused about the number of credit hours received during semesters as compared with hours of credit gained on the new quarter system.

Mary A Clemons, freshman, feels that the system is completely new to her class, and that they need to be thoroughly orientated on the new system. Many upperclassmen agree that they, too, need o little education on this new complicated arrangement of classes. Mary likes the idea of being able to finish some subjects in two quarters instead of spending an entire nine months studying the same old thing. However, few freshmen will be bored by attending the same class every day in the week for most of them are taking three and four-hour subjects.

Margaret Ann Blocker, freshman, likes the new plan. She says, "I think that when the school year is divided into quarters it is more satisfactory. We won't have to worry during the Christmas holidays about returning to semester exams. Completing each division of work in a three months period is a fine system to my way of thinking It's easier on the memory because we have much shorter periods in which to recall past work"

But Kathleen Solon, sophomore, disagreed with the freshman viewpoint. She says quite emphatically, "I don't like it! First, there is the little matter of having to register three times, instead of the customary two Second, it is much easier to plan one's schedule on the semester system, because it is necessary to carry over into next year, some subjects which are offered only two quarters this school year I am taking two five-hour courses and have homework every night in each. "The faculty" says she, "should remember we're on the quarter system when handing out such heavy assignments which must be completed in a much shorter period of time"

Roses Marcoux, sophomore, physical education major, dislikes the quarter system because it provides less opportunity for a student to make her letter in the club. Previously, a girl could go out for sports four instead of three times a year. Instead of having two out of four chances to make her letter, a girl now has only two out of three chances.

Alva Ray, junior, admits frankly that she doesn't know yet what it's all about "I felt like a freshman when I first came up here this year," she said, and several other upperclassmen present nodded in agreement. "For me, it doesn't fulfill its alleged purpose of fewer subjects and greater concentration. I am taking one five-hour course and two four-hour courses and homework in each one every night. My, my how I love it!"

Jere Farnsworth, another junior, agrees with her fellow classmate. "It's working me to death. I'm a music major and have so many more classes this year that I have less time in which to practice. This has been a hard first week, but maybe, as time goes by, things will become a little easier for us all."

Shirley Grube has a very real complaint to make against the change. "I had my heart set on a formal graduation in January. Now I will graduate in March, without the lovely ceremony" Yet, she admits, there is more continuity in attending classes every day. It's easier to remember yesterday's lesson than the day before yesterday's One-track minds should delight in this method of simplification If a girl has to work for a few months of every school year, the quarter system is a boon to her, for she can take her three months off in the spring, summer, fall or winter quarter

Ruth Cuevas, another senior, finds the change from semester hours to quarter hours very difficult in the continuation of subjects which were begun the last school year "After adjustments are made and class schedules are more evenly arranged, the new quarter system will be much more satisfactory to us all."

In the meantime, the majority attend classes more frequently, keep their lights burning later each night, and await the happy time in the not too distant future when a return to the semester system would mean a return to chaos once again.

New School System

135 hours and 132 points. These requirements in quality points are approximately one and one-half points higher than their equivalents under the semester system.

Moreover, the number of hours students with "C" averages may carry has been increased this year in order to facilitate the change-over. A student with a one point average other than a first quarter freshman may now carry $17\frac{1}{2}$ hours provided she has written permission from her dean. Previously only students with B averages were permitted to carry more than $16\frac{1}{2}$ hours.

With grades appearing three times this year instead of only twice, the "unsatisfatcory" reports which customarily appeared in college mailboxes following midterm examinations have been eliminated.

Changes Made

stated that the entire evening was considered as a closed night.

Approval of residence counselors of visits to private homes will no longer be required after the first time.

The rule concerning approval for dining in hotels has been lifted except for first and second quarter freshmen who must still obtain the necessary permission.

Students returning from overnight absences are expected to be in their places of residence between th hours of 7 a m and second light flash. Any student entering her place of residence between the hours of second light flash and 7 a m will be subject to the action of the Residence Hall committee.

In regard to day trips, it has been suggested that freshmen will be allowed no day trips the first six weeks of school, two during the second six weeks, and six per quarter thereafter.

Senior automatic late permission has been increased in time A senior may now have late permission one hour beyond light flash.

Sun bathing will not be permitted on ground level, but only on upper arcades and sun decks.

Odd and Even Season Begins

Hockey and Soccer to Be Thanksgiving Games

For the first time in the history of the State College hockey and soccer will be featured as the main Odd-Even competition of Thanksgiving holidays. Up to this time, basketball and volley ball have been the outstanding events of this season.

Odd-Even hockey and soccer practices are now being held at 3 o'clock every afternoon. Odds practice Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon; Evens, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

At the first Odd soccer practice last Monday, two teams played an exhibition game for the benefit of those who had never before witnessed one. Although many who turned out were entirely unfamiliar with the game, Virginia Palmer, leader of Odd soccer, proceeded to be able to attain positions to those practicing by this afternoon.

The Even soccer players began their season by each taking an individual kick at the soccer ball. Catherine Gallagher, Even soccer leader, takes this as an indication of the good spirit they are going to do. Many of last year's players are back, along with lots of new ones.

Thirty-five eager hockey players turned out for the first Odd hockey practice on Monday. They held some lively skirmishes, and Nita Nord, Odd hockey leader, is expecting to have a star team.

Evelyn Bloody, Even hockey leader, states that the Evens are going to pick up where they left off last year, which is first place, to even that score. All of last year's players are back and many new ones expected.

Modern dance practices of Odd-Even teams will also remain a secret until presentation. will be decided at a later meeting. A large number of freshmen as well as upperclassmen have turned out for practices.

The first tryouts were held Monday and Tuesday for Odd-Even archery. Priscilla Clark, Odd leader, and Carolyn Bouriand, Even leader have set up the basis of a winning team. The competitive meet, which will be the deciding factor in the archery optimism, is to be held November 28 and 30. Priscilla and Carolyn urge all students interested in archery to attend these practices.

Jo Gutzherie, president of WAA announces that in order to be eligible for the Odd-Even games, a player must have attended two-thirds of all scheduled practices and have participated in one class game.

Freshmen to Hear F Club Discuss FSC

F Club's first activity of the year is an outing for freshmen which is scheduled for tonight at 7:30 on the hockey and soccer field north of the gymnasium.

Around an open campfire the class of '49 will have opportunity to hear talks on subjects concerned with several phases of school life here on campus. The following talks are to be included: "Sportsmanship," by Catherine Barrs; "Odd-Even Competition," by Betty Jo McAvoy; "What FSC Can Come To Mean To A Freshman," by Scoota Lester; "FSC Traditions," by Frankie Coulter, Mrs William Macklin, Mrs J H Talley, Tallahassee; Betty Lou Long Catherine Young, Myra and Martha Pattishall, Jacksonville; Marjorie Stump, Monticello; Sarah Boswell, Tampa.

Basketball Begins Intramural Games

Intramurals will begin Monday with basketball games held to conclude the fifth day of basketball practice. The games will be held every day between 5 and 6 o'clock from Monday through Friday. Those eligible to play will be only those who have had two practice points.

Theresa Munroe, intramurals manager, has other intramural plans after a warm-up in basketball. Beginning October 22 through 26 volleyball practice will be held every evening between 5 and 6 o'clock. These practices will be followed by a week of games. Swimming and badminton, respectively, are the last two intramurals on schedule for this quarter. The exact dates of these sports will be published at a later date.

Theresa asks that all intramural captains meet in the basketball courts this afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Cut System

compelled to be absent from classes for legitimate reasons. Situations over which students have no control are "cuts" unnecessarily. However, it became increasingly evident that the system resulted in unnecessary absences from classes, where the attendance is generally felt that they must use up their cuts whether they really needed them or not.

New Policy

According to Miss Campbell, under the new policy class attendance is expected and required of all students. "Only absences or "cuts" are provided. Responsibility for attendance is thus taken from the student. Excuses for absence from classes are not to be given either by faculty members or administrative officers. No excuses will be given for illness, but a list will be posted every day so that teachers may see which excused absences. The administration feels that absence from classes, even for legitimate reasons, will usually result in some loss to the student which will have to be made up.

Dr Campbell said, however, that explanations for absences are always welcome and that the faculty member would treat such information in the manner in which he deems proper, except in the cases of first and second semester freshmen.

Freshmen Regulations

In Dr Campbell's letter to parents she explains that freshmen students who are in their first quarter in the college will be required to attend class. Students who make a "B" average at the close of their first month shall thereafter be fully responsible for their own class attendance. Those who do not make a "B" average will be required to go to all classes until the end of their second quarter at which time they will become responsible for their attendance in class regardless of grades.

According to the administration, cases of illness by freshmen who come within the above provision will be investigated by the dean of students and excuses will be issued for those which appear to be necessary and unavoidable. Students who when not excused, will result in loss of credit in the courses in which the absences occurred.

Dr Campbell believes this policy to be right from the standpoint of good education, and that it will improve the spirit and quality of the work of both faculty and students.

Hall and "What F Club Means To Me," by Barrs; Betty Jo McAvoy. Freshmen are invited to relax around the fire, help themselves to refreshments and listen to tales of FSC.

F Club will continue this year so in the past to hold their Friday night sings in front of the new dormitory hall immediately after dinner. Babe Evans, president, urges every student to attend these weekly informal gatherings.

Tarpon Club Holds Tryouts Next Week

Tryouts to secure new members for the Tarpon club will be held next Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the gymnasium pool, according to B. J. Singleton, newly elected president of the club.

Practice swimming classes have been held every afternoon since last Tuesday. "B. J." requests all good swimmers who feel they can meet the standard of the club to attend tryouts.

At a meeting held last Monday night, club members discussed the problem of new suits and the planning of new pins. Active members of Tarpon club will be the judges in the tryout contests.

Margery Holm is vice-president of the club; Anna Horne, secretary-treasurer and Captain Jane Lindsey, publicity director.

Spirogira Taps Six New Goats

Spirogira, Odd honorary, tapped six "goats" in the dining halls last Tuesday at noon. Those tapped were Nancy Ward, Clarice Truehlood, Ann Cowan, and Betty Jane Singleton, juniors, and Miss Henrietta Greenberg and Miss Calliope Pappas, faculty members.

The new goats and those tapped last spring will give a party tonight for the members in celebration of the twenty-first anniversary of the founding of Spirogira.

Goats and members have been sponsoring nightly sings in front of the east dining hall. The sings will be held even better in the future, assisted Frances Myers, president of Spirogira, who urged all loyal Odds to join in the singing.

New Counselors Are Appointed to Staff

Five Chosen for Outstanding Ability Added to Faculty

Five new residence counselors have been appointed to Dean Olivia Denman's staff. They are Miss Ruth Pyche and Miss Marie Williams in Landis hall; Miss Marie Donahue in Reynolds hall. Miss Evelyn Bramlett in the Village, and Miss Pauline Mansfield in the Lodge.

Dean Dorman stated that these counselors were selected because of their outstanding ability to do guidance and personnel work, available in assisting the students in all phases of campus life. All five of them have had special training in personnel guidance.

Miss Pryche, now the head residence counselor in Landis hall, is from Nebraska. She attended the University of Colorado where she was with the office of personnel. She also taught school in Wyoming and Nebraska.

Miss Williams is from Arkansas and attended Columbia University. She taught in the high school in Ell Dernsho, Arkansas.

Miss Donahue of New York attended Radcliffe College for two years in Boston. She finished her college education at Hunter University in Indiana.

Miss Bramlett, who is from Mississippi, also attended Columbia University. Upon graduation from the university she taught in the public schools of Mississippi for several years.

Miss Mansfield of Boston, is a professional singer and has taught singing in Boston and New York. She was in charge of a dormitory at Dennison University in Ohio for two years previous to her appointment at Florida State college.

Germany and to attempt to carry out the Potsdam plan, which, h his opinion, evolved as a most ineffective document. He said that this, he said, grew the German ideology of "we are superior", "we are persecuted", and "we must and will fight", a cause which was responsible in 1933 by the then almost unknown Hitler.

Mr Sheean then traced Hitler's rise to power, the beginning of the war, and the turning point of the war, which was in three phases. During the first phase the British held out alone against Hitler with almost no land resources. In the second period the Russians held out alone against Hitler for almost 2 years. Finally the United States became primary in importance in both a military and an industrial sense.

Hitler's one remaining hope at the end of the war in Europe, said Mr Sheean, was that the American and Russian armies would fight when they met in Germany. However, he said, these armies avoided an dispute as to occupation of Vienna and control of Germany, and there have been no serious conflicts between the Russians and the Americans. He accredited this parity to the fact that the San Francisco World Conference was in progress at the time of the German surrender.

Mr Sheean asked that the problem of conflict between Russia and America be faced and acknowledged. He stated, however, that this problem is ideological or psychological, and not practical, that nowhere on the globe is there actual conflict between what he termed "the two most powerful nations on earth, who arrived at that state through diametrically opposite methods."

He warned against the fact that the pattern of the last attempts at peace may be repeated, as signified by the disputes at the San Francisco conference. He asked if we are being entirely fair and honest in advocating a democratic system of world government which hinges on decision by vote, when it has been proved that the United States controls most of the votes and could outvote any Russian surrenders. He stated that this situation may be aggravated by the use by the United States of the secret of the atomic bomb "as a form of International blackmail", and that we may well look for the withdrawal of Russia from the United Nations organization.

Mr Sheean's opinion on the atomic bomb is that "it had no military results whatever" because it was used so late in the war, when the end was so nearly

New Construction Is Now Being Used

Classrooms in the part of the History building now under construction are being used, although some finishing work is still to be done on them. Dr Doak S Campbell, president of the college says that this work will be done after hours and on Saturdays so as not to interfere with the conduct of classes.

Dr Campbell says that at the time of the building's completion some time during the school year, there will be fifteen classrooms, a number of offices, and a special workroom for the speech department. The newly constructed wing is a permanent erection, and it comforms to the style of the rest of the History building.

Among other improvements of buildings on campus are the light changes in the library. During the last session of school the colleee authorities experimented with artificial lights in the reserved room of the library. As a result of this experiment permanent installations have been made in the periodical room and in the service area at the desk. Dr Campbell says that these installations have greatly improved the lighting of the library, and more are planned for the rest of the building.

In sight, and that "the two-ton truck was a far more important factor in the winning of the war." He stated that the United States may do a great deal of damage to world peace by brandishing the atomic bomb as a threat to those who oppose American theories. Hitler's idea "would do well to keep a civil tongue in her head regarding proprietorship of the secret of the atomic bomb."

Regarding the United Nations organization, Mr Sheean believes that it is not the best or most peace, but that the United States and Russia must support it as the best document of its kind in the world today since it offers the only hope for any kind of settlement of peacetime problems. Since the United States and Russia have emerged as the leading world powers it is necessary, he said, that they settle their differences and prepare to work together to this end.

Mr Sheean, recently discharged lieutenant colonel of the Army Air Corps and Air Intelligence, has traveled extensively in Europe, Asia, and the Far East, and acted at one time as Paris correspondent for the New York Daily News, an assignment which took him to various parts of Germany, Italy, and Spain, the immediate occasion being Mussolini's march on Rome. In 1938 he traveled through Spain and Austria and arrived in Germany in time to cover Hitler's march into Sodetenland. After Munich he returned to Germany, then went to Spain where he witnessed the fall of Catalonia.

Mr Sheean has written extensively during his career as reporter, correspondent, and author, having published several books, among which are Not Peace But a Sword, Between the Thunder and the Sun, and the international best-seller, Personal History. In addition to this, he has done freelance writing for magazines, fiction as well as articles, and at present making plans for other books.

Holmes Featured On Garnet, Gold

Miss Virginia Holmes, instructor in piano at Florida State College, was Garnet and Gold's music editor last night. She selected two of Brahms compositions for the program.

News editor and announcer this week was Sara Norman who is student radio assistant in the office of Miss Bertha Bloodworth, publicity director.

President Doak S Campbell was the speaker on the opening fall edition of the newspaper of the air Wednesday, 7:30. Miss Bloodworth acted as announcer and gave the college news. Chopin's "Waltz in A Minor" was played by Eleanor Brazy at the piano.

On the program of October 4, Miss Lucille Wagner, assistant professor of piano, rendered piano selections and Sara Norman acted as news editor.

Home Ec Majors To Honor New Students

A tea, honoring freshmen and transfer home economics majors, will be held from three to five today in the home management house.

Dr Margaret R Sandels, Dean of the School of Home Economics will head the receiving line, which will also include Miss Ellen Wright, adviser of the club; Miss Ruth Bullock, director of the home management house; Miss Grace Elmes, president of the club; and Miss Lilla Crosby, student manager of the home management house.

Freshmen and transfers will be introduced to the home economics faculty members and will be shown around the house by the seniors living there.

Goulding Announces Dem School Changes

Several changes have been made in the Democratic school faculty, according to Dr R L Goulding, superintendent of the Democratic school.

Miss Floreen Marisette and Miss Madge Clayton are supervising and teaching methods in the elementary grades and in the junior high grades, respectively, both replacing Mrs Cecil Strone, who resigned in order to become supervisor of music in Lake county. Miss Sarah Krentzman, who has returned after a year of graduate study at Columbia University, is serving as librarian. She is also part time consultant for the State Department of Education. Miss Charlotte Cooper, a graduate of Florida State college, is taking the place of Mrs Jean Scrogrin as band leader. Miss Mary Lou King is the physical education teacher in the Demonstration school and is also teaching a class at FSC.

Dr Campbell Honors Freshmen, Transfers

Governor and Mrs Caldwell Receive at Reception

Governor and Mrs Millard Caldwell joined President and Mrs. Doak S Campbell of Florida State College in receiving the new freshmen in the sunken gardens of Bryan hall, September 25, at the first evening of the annual president's reception.

On the first evening, freshmen from Jennie Murphree hall, The Village and off-campus houses, and the day students went through the receiving line and gathered in the sunken gardens for two hours.

In the receiving line with President and Mrs Campbell and Governor and Mrs Caldwell were Ann Carolyn Allison, president of the College Government association; Audrey Perry, freshman adviser of COA; and Catherine Barre, chairman of Judiciary. Introduing the freshmen to the line were Barbara Irving, president of Jennie Murphree; Anne Hunter, president of The Village; and Daphne Rowe, president of the day students' organization.

Miss Katherine Warren, assistant dean of students; Miss Ruth McCollum, director of residence; and Miss Anne Pope, head counselor for freshmen, officiated at the end of the line. At the punch bowls the first hour were Miss Louise Greasner and Miss Evelyn Bramlett, counselors for Jennie Murphree and The Village; and the second hour Mrs Ruth Geary and Mrs Pauline Mansfield, also counselors for Jennie Murphree and The Village.

Floor hostesses were counselors, the executive council of COA and approximately 100 faculty members. COA executive council members serving as floor hostesses included Sarah Lewis, Jean Cole, Robin Hill, Jo Carter, Shapes, Madelyn King, Peggy Lou Thomas and Betty Aldag.

The second evening of the reception freshmen from Reynolds hall, Byran hall and Camp Flastacowo were received, together with all of the transfer students. Substituting for some hostesses assisted President and Mrs Campbell, except that Eileen Perry, president of Reynolds hall, and Ann Parker, president of Bryan hall, introduced the line. Also on the counselors for Reynolds Bryan and Parkside presided at the punch bowls. They are Miss Leles Allen, Mrs Ray Warner, Miss Marie Donahue and Miss Dorothy Brown.

Speech Department Announces Its First Production of Year

The speech department's first play, "Time and the Conways," will be produced in about seven weeks. Miss Mary Wood, assistant Mary Elizabeth Moody of the art department, are beginning work on the play. Tryouts for parts in the play will be held the first part of next week. Miss Wood says that the exact time will be announced in the speech bulletin board in lower History.

"Time and the Conways" by J B Priestly, was first produced in London in 1938. The play begins during a party in Mrs Conway's sitting room in the year 1919. It is a happy, gay scene according to the playwright's stage directions. During the first act are introduced Robin, R A P ybot; Kay, who wanted to be a novelist; Madge, reformer; Mrs Conway, and sprite-like Carol.

Character variety is great, and the play should consequently be very effective, Miss Wood, director, believes. Tryout calls for four male parts, and Miss Wood sees the difficulty and says she is hoping that men on the faculty will cooperate. Male leads might also come from Dale Mabry or from town.

Miss Wood says of herself "I'm this year's Miss Bowman." She is a pretty blonde Tennessean, who did her undergraduate work with the Carolina Playmakers at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. She got her master's degree last year in the school of speech at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill. In between degrees she was sponsored by the Carolina Playmakers, and she was the drama department at Averett Junior College, Danville, Ky. Askes when she fell in love with the stage, Miss Wood answered, 'I was born in love with it. I've done stage work all my life and can't help loving it."

Miss Mary Elizabeth Moody, art director, was on leave of absence from FSC last year to study at Columbia University in New York City. Miss Moody did about 25 sets the seven years that she taught here. She is glad to be back in Tallahassee, but remembers with pleasure the winter of playgoing behind her. Of the plays she saw, she remembers "Carmen Jones," "Up in Central Park," and "The Tempest" as the most interestingly staged. "The Tempest" was especially "tricky," as it was set permanently on a

Senate Will Elect Officers at Meet

House, Committee Vacancies Filled on Wednesday

Senate will elect officers to fill vacancies in house governments and committees this Wednesday at 5 p m, in the Student Alumnae building, Dink Ashton and Mary White will report on the Legislative and Codifying committees.

Nominations made at the first meeting, were Mary Russell Tarr, president of Campuside, Hillside, and Parkside; Agnes Bedsole Frances Dawning, vice presidents of Campuside, Hillside, and Parkside; Anne Gelse, Irene Coleman, Magnolia vice president; Joyce Carlton village vice president; Marjorie Miller, chairman of the Usher committee; Doris Corry, Handbook committee chairman.

Senators discussed the need for better ways of learning the opinion of desires of the student body and the hope that more people would attend Senate assemblies to express their ideas.

Ann Arrington, reporting for the Handbook committee, suggested that the Handbook committee work with the property manager of the Legislative and Codifying committees.

Also at the first meeting of student senate this year which was held October 3, senators members received a copy of "Senate Sense". This bulletin contains an outline of senate precedure and information concerning the body including a complete list of members for this year.

Freshman Flunkies To Meet Tuesday

Freshman Flunkies will meet for the first time this year in the Student Alumnae building auditorium on October 16, at 2 p m. All freshmen who are residing on the campus will have the opportunity of being on the COA bulletin board in Westcott. The committee of freshmen flunkies is divided into three groups, which are typing, poster-making, and clerical-work, each includes errands and decorating.

At the meeting on October 18 a general chairman and a chairman for each committee will be elected. "This is the first opportunity for the freshmen to become an active part of the College Government association, and I hope that all will participate," said Ann Carolyn Allison, president of COA.

But Nay Not So

'Twas Reception night. Four freshmen crept up a dark stairway on Lexington street to peer through the doorway at bright lights and laughing girls. "Is this the Chi Omega House?" the bravest freshman dared. But nay not so; it was the Sweet Shoppe.

FSC Band Increases Members to Sixty

The Florida State college band has added 30 new members, increasing its membership to 60 student, and a concert has been scheduled for some time in December.

Mr Owen F Sellers, who was director of the band from the time of its organization until his entrance into the army in 1942, has returned this year as director. The assistant conductor is Miss Charlotte Cooper a 1943 alumna of FSC. New band officers for this year are Ann Richardson, president; Percy Elliot, vice-president; Frances Duckworth, secretary; Beryl Taylor, publicity manager; Betty Redd, social chairman; Evelyn Brewton, property manager; Elizabeth and Emily Harper, librarians.

A band tryout will be held Tuesday in 134 Westcott at 4 o'clock. Betty Taylor, publicity manager, invites all who are interested in playing with the band to try out.

FSC Faculty Featured in Annual Affair

Dr Campbell 'Challenges' The Student Body In His Address

Faculty String Trio Renders Selection by Kvalve

The traditional academic procession of the Florida State College faculty which will climax Thursday night, included an address by Dr Doak S Campbell, president of the college, and a faculty string trio.

This event is held each year as one of the first convocations. Its purpose, according to Dr Campbell, is to acquaint the freshman class with the faculty as a group. It is one of the many traditions of FSC and is continued, Dr Campbell said, "because we like to do it as others before us did."

Campbell's Speech

In his address Dr Campbell challenged the student body to become "pioneers" in the field of knowledge rather than mere intellectual tourists." He stressed the importance of not being the type of person who only learns facts that she did not know when he came to college in the same fine new facts in her thinking habits, and actions.

The procession consisted of the faculty dressed in the gowns and hood of their degrees from the colleges. The higher ranking faculty members entered last and left the auditorium first, with the honorary procedure On our campus it has been the practice to have all the graduate students seated on the stage and the remainder of the faculty in the first floor seats.

After the processional, "Oramo March" by Wagner, and a hymn tune by Lo Prete, arranged by D Miller, professor of religion, gave a devotional taken from the writings of Micah.

Sec Nocturne" by Kvelve was the rendition of the musical accompaniing of Miss Olga Kitzer violin, Mr Owen Belvis, violincello, and Miss Mary Lou Wallace piano.

Mrs Ramona C Beard, organist and member of the faculty played "Coronation March" by Meyerbeer as the recessional after the singing of "Garnet and Gold."

Housing Situation Now Under Control

90 Girls Await Assignments To Fill First Vacancies

The housing situation on the Florida State College campus is seeming much improved according to information received from the office of the Residence Hall.

As the last day for general classes in town was last Saturday, the task henceforth is one of moving the 59 freshmen and 31 sophomores now in temporary quarters into vacancies that occur. These vacancies will place freshmen are at present still housed in various parts of Reynolds, Jennie Murphree, Byrnes and Gilchrist halls. Six freshmen on still residing in the Student Union building and two in college-sponsored private homes pending transfer elsewhere. Two sophomores have been reassigned except for those in the Student Union and Club Rooms, and two also in private homes. Miss Olivia O'Dornan, director of students, stated that there have been fewer withdrawals this quarter than were expected, therefore the number of temporary assignees is more difficult.

The two newly added houses on Jefferson are in full operation now. Many of the girls moved in at the beginning of school, January 22 and, also, the Bailey House on Jefferson and Copeland will be opened on October 1 for 12 girls.

Dean Dorman says that there is no readjustment together with those newly acquired housing facilities on campus, will successfully absorb the weight of increased enrollment.

Flunkies Elect

The freshman Flunkies elected Pri Dillard general chairman of the group at a meeting held in Westcott auditorium Tuesday afternoon Laura Simpson was elected chairman of the social committee, and Frances Parry and Jane Nightengale, chairmen of the typing and miscellaneous committees respectively.

A discussion of the duties and skills of the Freshman Flunkies preceded the election of committee heads

Seniors to Meet

There will be an important meeting for all seniors in the Student Activities building, Friday afternoon at 5 p m. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the procedure for Investiture.

First Dance Is Scheduled

Soldier Dance to Be Held In SAB, October 27

There will be soldier dances again this year. Miss Olivia N Dorman, dean of students announced recently. The first dance will be held in the Student Alumnae building October 27. However, she said that a method has not yet been decided upon for the distribution of tickets.

Camp Gordon Johnston, previously an amphibious base, is now a separation center. There are nine or ten thousand men waiting there to receive their discharges, according to the recreation manager of the camp.

The head hostess of the local U S O and the recreation manager of Camp Gordon Johnston have recently requested that the college continue its entertainment program for the soldiers.

The recreation directors were also interested in going forward with the quiz program started last year. Five outstanding girls from the college will be chosen to participate in the soldier-guiz broadcasts. The teams will take turns preparing the questions. The first of these quiz programs is to be held November 8.

Miss Dorman said that girls would be sent to the Army hospital to talk to the men there. There will also be dances held at the hospital and at Camp Gordon Johnston.

Physics Graduates In Varied Fields

The graduates of the physics department have gone into various fields of activity in physics since their graduation.

Miss Bonnie Kindig is the new instructor in the physics department on this campus. She replaced Miss Dorothea E Marsh who has resigned to accept an industrial physics with the Eastman Kodak Company in Rochester, New York

Miss Eleanor Hamm who graduated in 1944 works in the Oak Ridge Atomic Bomb Plant near Knoxville, Tennessee. She studied chemistry and physics while she was on this campus.

Miss Florence Bentley and Miss Edith Hawkins, who graduated in the last summer session, are now working in the Naval Research Station in Orlando, Florida.

Dr Richards To Speak on Atomic Power

Speech to Be Delivered In SAB Auditorium Tonight at 8

Lecturer Attempts to Lay Scientific Foundation

"The Atomic Power for War and Peace" is the subject of Dr Harold F Richards, head of the physics department, speech will be first meeting of the year of the Tallahassee Branch of the Florida Academy of Sciences this evening at 8 pm in the auditorium of the Student Alumnae building.

Dr Richards will attempt "to lay a scientific foundation for the intelligent understanding of atomic power in war and peace," the field that a thoroughly informed public opinion is needed by the world's political leaders to utilize them for the best possible benefit of atomic power" from the atomic bomb to deciding national affairs. He thinks that the biggest job in history must now be taken by scientists and intelligent in and out of the schools and colleges. Dr Richards has presented mankind with unparalleled possibilities for either good or evil. However, Dr Richards does not feel that it is possible to calculate the majority of the people into wise and kind people overnight so "if we can't be good, let us be intelligent."

The speech, it is reported, will be an introductory one, designed to order that it may be practicable.

Everyone is cordially invited to attend and to join freely in the discussion to be held at the close of the talk.

Dr Richards came to the campus of Florida State College for Women in 1925 to become the head of the physics department. He has been connected with the University of Chicago and the Johnston University and has held the National Research Council Fellowship in Physics in 1922-23. During World War I he served as an Ens-ser technician in the United States Army in France, and during World War II he served as Ch-ser technician in the United States Army Air Forces. He is also a member of the Sigma Xi Society and College Department of Science and activity of the Civil Defense Council. He has written a book called "The Universe Surveyed" and has written many scientific articles. At present he is working on a book entitled Physical Society and of the Phi Beta Kappa.

Five FSC Graduates On Campus Recently

Five former Florida State College graduate have returned to the campus this past week, according to Miss Olivia N Dorman, director of students.

Symone M Stockbridge of the class of 1934, is here visiting Dr Jennie Tilt of the chemistry department. Miss Smith is now a dietetics at the U S veterans' hospital in Hollywood, California.

Marjorie M Morrison, who received her degree in home economics in 1940 is now Lieutenant (jg) in the U S Public Health Service.

Miss Dorothea E Marsh is a member of a special Public Health committee working with negro and southern communities and determines the cause of such diseases

Freshmen Lead Rugged Life at Camp Flastacowo During Week

"What are we, anyway, backwoods women or college career girls?" one little freshman asked another as she tumbled from her double decker bed onto the hard pine floor of the big one-room cabin.

The scene was Camp Flastacowo where 39 freshmen had their first taste of college life by the placid waters of Lake Bradford. In the gray dawn they arose, dressed hurriedly, and by 7 a m were traveling along the five-mile road to Florida State College for the hearty breakfast of ham and eggs, the beautiful mirage at the end of the road.

Watson for Changes In Negro Education

For Negroes Attending FSC, U of F, If Segregated

Attorney General Tom Watson, opposing out-of-state scholarships for Florida negro college students, said today, "we have ample means for segregation" at the state's white colleges to give .em equal facilities offered at the state Negro college.

"I believe in segregation," he added, "and believe it can be made by adopting that means" of providing the state's Negroes the same educational facilities as those the white students at the University of Florida and Florida State College for Women.

Other cabinet members cited a Missouri case decided by the United States supreme court which requires states to admit negroes to universities unless they provide the same courses in other publicly-supported Negro institutions.

IRC Plans for New Membership Drive

United Nations Charter Is Thems of Coming Year

Next week the International Relations club will hold its annual membership drive. The membership fee is fifty cents per quarter and all girls who are interested in joining may sign at the table in lower Westcott any afternoon next week.

The first organization meeting of old members was held last Friday night. Plans were discussed for the club's theme which will be the discussion of the United Nations Charter as drawn up at the San Francisco Conference.

On October 26 the club will hold a regular meeting at 5 o'clock in the Student Alumnae building club room. Two prominent speakers will be present, according to Jessie Mae Williams, president of the club.

Other officers of the club are Doris Hil, vice-president and Miriam Harwood, secretary-treasurer. Dr Mariam D Irish, head of the department of political science is the club's sponsor.

Shankweiler Speaks To Garden Clubs

Professor Paul W Shankweiler, associate professor of sociology, spoke on the "Modern Approach to Local Leadership" at the North District meeting of Garden Clubs of Florida, recently held at the Tallahassee Woman's Club. The meeting was presided over by a former professor of sociology at Florida State College, Dr Elinor Morgan, who is now the chairman of the North Florida Garden Clubs.

Mr Shankweiler emphasized the need of making a democracy work in the home town in order to assure its working in the nation and the world at large. He defined the "importance of developing local leadership for which the service club organizations in this such a fine opportunity in a world of these competing leaderships of the Big Three,' 'Big Five,' etc.," the speaker thought it "all the some reason for developing democracy on the home front through the developing of local resources and knowing one's own community and planning for the better relation of our own community to other communities."

Above all he stressed the importance through local organization of developing a thinking democracy since only the people themselves could free the world from the recurring menace of dictatorship and wars.

Senate Plans Topics for Discussion

Dead Week Continuance, Social Standards Issues To Be Debated

Vacancies in Offices Filled In Senate Wednesday

The continuance of dead week for college institutions and the strengthening of the social standards committee will be the two main items of discussion at the next regular meetinge of Student Senate, announced Ann Carolyn Allman, president of the College Government Association. Because of a change from semesters to quarters, the question has been raised as to the advisability of maintaining dead week as a part of the college calendar. It is also suggested that the social standards committee be made more effective in order to enforce its regulations and thus maintain social standards at Florida State College, Ann Carolyn stated.

Several vacancies in committees were filled in last Wednesday's meeting. They were appointments of new usher committee, Marjorie Miller; handbook chairman, Doris Corry; president of Athletic Association and Parkside, Mary Russell Tarr; dance president of Reynolds Hall, Anna Celse and Irene Coleman; vice president of the Village, Joyce Carlton; and president of Parkside, Agnes Bedell.

The vice presidency of Hillside will be conducted and will be concluded next week. The posi-

Pocket Pets Attract Attention at FSC As Students Raise Squirrels on Campus

When last seen over in the Sweet Bottom section of the Land of Squirrel, was happily poking his head out of the mouse's pocket. As usual, Jimmy Joe was the center of attraction, and had to be coerced into leaving when he he was told that it was after night lights flashed on and all the pleasant company and go back to his nice, dark closet. Jimmy Joe lives in the backyard of an FSC student during the week-ends and struck Miami last September, and since then he has lived on milk from the condensery, bread and cheese, etc. You 'n me it, he has small likes from which to make any means, Jimmy Joe is of the flying variety and at five weeks of age he started to make flying leaps. He can cover one hundred feet during his leaps which is pretty good for a little fellow. He has a preference for her room mate's closet and in his room he has constructed in her closet and in the room is large, where he has plenty room for many nooks and cranny. "He sleeps all day and plays all night," the owner commented wistfully, while sleeping he curls up in a ball and cover his eyes with his tail to keep the light out. "favorite sleeping place is in the dark srcrunness of someone's pocket or jacket. "Every time he runs across my diaphragm, he gets me," was the laughing statement of the unknown student.

Because he is a squirrel and has been raised by hand since Jimmy Joe has had rare opportunities that he has taken full dream of. He has been known to sleep through entire classes, 'n pipes down to lunch only because the inclination is lacking.

There are two more squirrels happily frisking in rooms on campus. One is a female which one has left us. His name was mentioned. Declined names are "Mort" by the Chi Omegas, with whom he made his abode. Mortimer was so named when he fell out of a tree onto the side yard and was adopted by the girls in the house. He now has a suitable ice cream carton until last Monday, when he got out and curled up asleep." He made the mistake of biting off the end of the eyedropper with which he was being fed. The girls were thus deprived of the pacifying effect of "Mort", and decided to save a funeral, after which "Mort" lay in state on the side porch for a day under a wreath of pecan leaves. Interment was under the pecan tree.

The other squirrel, called George, is living peacefully in a big box which is kept warm with a quilt lining inside it. He practices jumping on a branch his guardian thoughtfully placed in the box. Although he sleeps most of the time, he manages to rouse himself every now and then to munch a few nuts. Found by two soldiers, after he had fallen on the sidewalk, George was given to a student who wanted to keep him.

Twin Trouble Has Campus in Dither; Confusion Mounts

Are you bothered with hallucinations? Are your eyes deceiving you lately? No, your glasses don't need changing. It's just twin trouble again. The campus situation to be dotted with identicles this year and students are not the only members are sharing in the confusion.

The Fincher twins, Dorothy and Doris, arrived last year from Jacksonville Beach. Myrs and Mairo Long from Crestview were here to aid them in keeping everyone wond-ering just "which was who."

Now there are five more sets of twins enrolled. Although they are not all identicals many a person takes a second look for reassurance.

Among these "problem children" are Jean and Joy Ehmann from Daytona J-ach; Josephine and Vivian Hloodworth from Miami; the Carter twins, Catherine and Jackson, from Jacksonville, Wini-

Personnel Office Announces Contest

Madamoiselle, Vogue Sponsor Artistic Competition

Announcements of two publication contests, the annual Madamoiselle College Board competition and the Vogue Prix de Paris have been received by Dr Elizabeth G. Andrews, director of personnel. Information concerning the contests have been posted on the bulletin board in the bulletin board.

The College Board contest is designed for students who are interested in careers as writers, artists, or fashion consultants. Winners are given an opportunity to work for Madamoiselle magazine in addition to the awarding of Victory Bonds and stamps. Approximately 200 jobs for all work accepted for publication. College Board members must complete assignments within four assignments for the year, based upon the ideas and activities of the students they represent. The assignments take the form of articles and snapshots for publication.

In the late spring Mademoiselle chooses fourteen College Board members to serve as guest editors. They spend the month of June in New York preparing the August college issue of the magazine.

In order to be eligible for the College Board contest, students must follow a definite application procedure. They must maintain good scholastic standing, participate in extracurricular activities, and their instructors must file a recommendation by college officials as representative of their school.

The eleventh Vogue Prix de Paris award is offered to students of American college and university campuses who are interested in careers in fashion, decorating, interior design, and designing. A special award is given in a new division of the Prix de Paris this year for outstanding photography. Contest rules include an application for Vogue magazine. First prize is six month's work on the staffs of Vogue and six months with Paris Vogue, if conditions permit.

The contest consists of four quizzes of two questions each and a final article. In addition to jobs on Vogue staff for the first and second prize winners, jobs on other Condé Nast publications will be open to students taking honorable mention. Contest winners receive recommendations for job interviews with outstanding stores and advertising agencies.

Students who are interested in representing Florida State College for Women as College Board members and seniors who wish to compete for the Paris Prize may obtain the information from Dr Andrews. Applications and recommendations are made.

Talks Sponsored

Every Thursday at five o'clock in the music annex recital hall, the music department will present short recitals to be given by the students. Ten or fifteen talks will be given by guest speakers concerning some phase of music.

Ella Scobie Opperman, dean emeritus of the School of Music, will speak next week. Her topic, announced by "Musical Conversation." Yesterday Dr C P Heinlein, professor of psychology was the guest speaker. His topic was "Science and Music." Doctor Robert Miller, professor of philosophy and religion, will talk next Thursday. These recitals will continue throughout the year, and all students are invited.

Dr Cotterill Will Address Senior Class

Dr Campbell Will Invest 301 Seniors Tuesday In Ceremony

Processional on College Songs To Be Played

Dr R S Cotterill, professor of history, will present the address of the evening on a topic which has not yet been announced at the Investiture service for the class of 1946 to be held Tuesday evening at 8 p m in Westcott auditorium. Three hundred and one seniors will be invested by Dr Doak S Campbell, president of Florida State College, with the aid of their sophomore sisters at this ceremony.

"Processional on College Songs" will be played by Mrs Ramona Beard as the 301 seniors invest the seniors. The devotional service, led by Miss Daisy Parker, will follow, after which Katherine Cremil will sing Busni-Preeta's "Gloria," accompanied by Mrs Beard at the organ. Dr Cotterill will then speak, and the recessional, "War March of the Priests" by Mendelsohn will close the ceremony.

Guests for the service include class sponsors, Miss Daisy Parker and Miss Doyle Kelley, members of the college executive council, who will also be present. On this council include Dr Campbell, Dean Olivia N Dorman, dean of students; Miss Dorothy Shaw, assistant dean of students; Dr Elizabeth Andrews, director of personnel; Dr Allison Caruthers, registrar, and Mr R K Shaw, business manager. Dean of the women's organizations will also be guests at this occasion.

Miss Jane Brown, class president, will lead the processional followed by Ann Carolyn Allison, president of the college government association. Next will come four class officers and the class members of the Mortar Board.

In charge of planning the service were Martha Jane Bowden and Gladys Lester, vice-president of the class.

Interviews Held By Senior Girls

Over 40 freshmen flow through the Personnel office daily, three at a time, being interviewed by specially qualified senior girls, according to Dr Elizabeth G Andrews, director of personnel.

The information obtained is to be the basis of a permanent cumulative record of each student.

Four social work majors, Marjorie Ann Betty Bell, Pauline Council, and Irene Mendora are aiding the Personnel office in gathering this information. Other senior interviewers are Louise H Brown, Letilia Greene, Jacqueline Hedgecoth, Jessie McCalla, psychology majors, and Carolyn Bourdeau and Jane Dorsey, home economics majors. Janie Redfearn, art education major, also aids in the interviewing.

Freshmen Talent Is Playnight Feature

All students on campus are invited to come to Playnight this week, but freshmen are especially invited to attend since it is to be a "freshmen night," stated Jean Wildequist, chairman of the Playnight committee.

Ann announces that the program for this week will be committed entirely of talent from the freshman class. She hopes that all freshmen will sign up those who have never been to Playnight will come and find out what a good time everyone has.

Playnight is held every Saturday night from 8 to 10:30. Everyone is invited to come out and bring their dates.

Alpha Lambda Delta Has First Meeting

Plans for a supper honoring last year's actives were made at the first Alpha Lambda Delta meeting of the year held Wednesday night in the clubroom of the Student Alumnae building. New members will be initiated in a candlelight supper at the home of Dr Dorothy Hoffman. Members of the group are honorary, Saturday evening, November 3.

Another business included the election of Mary Louise Van Metta as secretary replacing Lalie Reaves, who did not return to school this year and the distribution of Alpha Lambda Delta pins and certificates. All members who have not yet received theirs may obtain them from Iris Parsons, treasurer of the organization, according to Martha Peacock, club president.

Bernice Scott Is Airline Stewardess

Graduate Sees Latin America While on Flight Duty

Bernice Scott, who graduated from Florida State College in May, 1945, has won her wings and is now a full-fledged airline hostess. She travels regularly to six Latin American countries and has been doing so for two months.

Bernice met all requirements for flight service employment last spring and then was sent to ground training school. There she learned to serve meals while flying and assist travelers in every way. She also learned something about meteorology, radio, and the handling of mail and baggage.

After this training, she and two other girls spent two weeks making short flights under the supervision of experienced stewards and stewardesses, and then at last were on their own. Eventually Bernice will make longer trips and see more sights.

"It's the little things I remember," Bernice said. "Shopping for perfume in Havana, seeing the Mayan ruins in Mexico, flying over the Florida keys early in the morning.

"I was really scared on one of my first trips when I learned that an soldier officer was a passenger aboard. But he was really nice, and I had no trouble at all. Then there was the baby girl on one trip and handed me two orchids. Of course, I knew that orchids cost a dime apiece where she came from, but my friends in Miami were certainly impressed."

Bernice's father, Claude S Scott, was formerly with the Industrial Commission in Tallahassee. While she was at Florida State College, Bernice was active in dramatics and minored in Spanish and education. She was a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma.

bility of using an upperclassman who does not have her grades or a transfer student who has enrolled in this matter. It was decided to appoint the upperclassman. This is to be an exception rather than a precedent however, Ann Carolyn said.

The regular meeting time of the legislative and judiciary committees was set at 3:30 p m every Wednesday night as announced by Dink Anderson, chairman of the committee committee.

Nell Land, chairman of the Senate Committee planning the November house meeting, outlined the program which the committee plans to use at that time. The present working of CCA and what the students can do as members will be the theme of the house meeting.

Beth Fulmer was appointed as chairman of the nomination committee to fill the vacancy left by Jean Koerr upon her election as senior representative. Connie Stevens and Betty Lavitha are serving with Beth on the committee.

as pellagra, malaria, and hookworm. The campaign, a new experiment in the Public Health service, then makes recommendations to improve the health of the nation concerned.

Another graduate who has been working here is Helen Everett from Arcadia, Virginia, who received her MS in 1936. A nutritionist for the National Cross, she is visiting her sister. Mrs Marian McIntosh, a student.

Hilda Lake Walters, class of 1931, was one of the first FSC students to receive an MD degree. She is now one of four doctors in Bethesda, Maryland.

Other visitors on campus this past week were Mary Vocelle, former junior editor of the Florida Flambeau, and Mary Parker, formerly in the American Red Cross, both 1944 graduates. Mary Vocelle represented the Flambeau at the San Francisco Conference last spring.

All for Spirogiro

Attracted by Spirogira's black and white, two freshmen decided to join the honorary club. An upperclassman kindly volunteered this advice: "...If you have to do it to sign up in the Augusta Conrad theater. Just go over there and shout "Hell's bells, where's little Nell?" Then set their name down on the list first as that you'll have priority on being considered."

It all sounded silly, but the two freshmen were game. Anyway lots of things sound silly to freshman. Their reception did not happen as they had planned for no one seemed to understand their qu stions. Sadly they left, vowing vengeance on their "friend" who was, as they later discovered, just an Esteem member.

F Club Members Tap Fifteen Goats

At their first tapping of the year, F Club chose 15 goats for members Monday night. The girls were then ushered into the cafeteria by a period of gosting, which will culminate in the club's traditional "Hell Week."

The goats, who have not as yet held their customary election of officers for the first group, include Audrey Evans, Jeanne Bennett, Jacqueline Bourland, Doris Hill, Lois Byrd, Mae Manning, Barbara Kirk, Rita Bowles, Doris Les Wells, Joy Little, Ann Mac-Innis, Eileen Perry, Eugenia Booth, Theresa Myers and Mary Nell Goldman.

For the next two weeks F Club members will be on permits for students who wish to go to Camp Flaxton. Jacqueline Bourland, Evans, club president, following the regular meeting Tuesday night.

ried the girls back to the woods in the evening.

Unfortunately, the canoeing and beach parties were not to be remained as they were before the freshman invasion. For it was here when they left and too dark when they returned to have any fun, even if they had felt in the mood after a full day's drudgery.

The shining savior of the camp was Miss Ivor Heeren, physical education teacher, who allowed each and every girl to enjoy the luxury of a tub in her home. "Only her kindness," explain Miss Mary Jane, saved us poor girls, determined to rid ourselves of a day's grit and grime from all the accumulation in the lake.

Fourteen of the girls who survived freshman week at camp are now in Gilchrist smoker, but none dare smoke. The cobwebs of the woods still permeate their minds, and perhaps, too, the fear of a fiery wrath from Gilchrist's door of their new abode bears a paper with the heading "Sad Sacks" and following is a list of the little "country cub" who finally found their way back to the city and the civilization of FSC.

Deadline Is Set For Getting Annuals

All students who have not gotten their 1945 annuals are requested to do so Friday afternoon between 3 and 6 at the Flastacowo office in the Student Alumnae building. This is the last time they will be given out, according to Margaret Baugh, editor of the Flastacowo.

Pictures of the juniors are now being taken for the 1946 Flastacowo. Appointments can be made at the u ble in lower Westcott 5-5 daily, according to Margaret. The cost of the pictures are $2.

Home Fires Caused 7,000 Deaths 400,000 Homeless Last Year

More than 7,000 persons, mostly women and children, were burned to death and more than 400,000 families were made homeless in 1944 because people ignored simple precautions against fire.

Even elementary precautions against the danger of fire will mean much to your life or the lives of your loved ones would have averted the preponderance of these fires, according to the October issue of Good Housekeeping magazine, which lists several precautions to take against fire in your home.

Flatly clothing while cooking is one of the major causes of fires in the home, according to the article, which advises cooks to wear short-sleeved dresses while cooking.

"Screen your fireplace to keep popping embers off rugs, upholstery," the article states. "Be careful where you put your cigarette. Nearly 300 fires are caused each week by persons forgetting to disconnect their electric irons. Be especially careful about dry-cleaning fluids which are highly inflammable.

"Watch out for fires starting in rubbish. Put in metal, not wooden, containers. Keep your heating pad safe by not using it in bed. Avoid spiritual burns or shock. Be careful to keep your portable heater away from curtains and woodwork where people might stumble over it.

"If you must burn dead leaves, other debris, without an incinerator, do it on a windless day in a clear space far from house or outbuildings and away from grass, shrubs and hedges."

Once a fire starts in your home, if you can't extinguish it within a few seconds after you discover it, leave instantly, the article says. Get everyone out of the house and call the fire department.

In this connection, the article points out that it is advisable, as a precautionary measure, to learn how to turn in a fire alarm from a box and also to train the family in the best method of getting out of the house, especially if the doors and stairs are blocked by flames.

Outing Club Makes Plans for This Year

The first meeting of the year of the Outing Club was held October 11 in the Student Alumnae clubroom. Here plans were made for a Guines woods hike which will be held tomorrow because of uncertain weather.

Outing Club's plans for the year include many events in which all students here in the college will be welcome to participate.

Plans are not yet complete for the first outing event, but if arrangements can be made there will be a trip to Wakulla Springs before the weather gets too cold for swimming. Students are notified to watch the bulletin boards for further announcements.

A trip to Gaines woods, a breakfast hike, an afternoon at the colonial home, and a trip to Messer estate, a hike for the purpose of seeing historic places in Tallahassee, even if you don't feel in the dance dairy are listed as coming events.

Officers and committee heads for the following year include Ambrosine Thomason, president; Catherine Bulling, secretary; Brenda Breedlove, in charge of publicity; Cheridah Bourland, in charge of finance; Rosemary Perry, publicity chairman, and Bobby Reese reporter to Flambeau.

Day Students to Meet

A meeting of all day students will be held next Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Day Students Lounge, announces Gerraldine Brumby, vice president of the organization.

A secretary and senate representative will be elected, since the girls who were in office have resigned.

Plans for a week-end at Camp Flastacowo in November are to be discussed, and rules for winning the freshman cup will be outlined."

Geraldine urges that "all members be present at this important meeting."

President W R Gray, jr. of Florida A and M college said he has "given instructions to the faculties of his institution for courses which are not offered at Florida A and M college to be made available to Negroes."

With only Attorney General Watson casting a negative vote, the Florida board of control, in commission, agreed to make available, at Florida A and M college funds to provide scholarships outside the state for Negro students and to open the graduate and professional schools of the University of Florida, but not at Florida A and M college for Negroes.

Sister Kenny Charges Plot Against Infantile Paralysis

Forces so powerful that they even succeeded in blocking a Congressional investigation are arrayed against the work of Sister Elizabeth Kenny, whose revolutionary technique for the treatment of infantile paralysis has made her the storm center of a national controversy, Representative Donald L. O'Toole of Brooklyn, charged today.

Sister Kenny, whose revolutionary method of treating infantile paralysis has brought her global attention, is convinced that all her difficulties in winning recognition are attributable to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, of which Basil O'Connor is president, and the American Medical Association, for which Dr. Morris Fishbein is spokesman, according to an article in the October issue of Cosmopolitan magazine in which she tells for the first time her own story of the rebuffs which she met in this country.

"Nobody is interested in your theories," she quotes O'Connor as saying to her at the end of a two-hour conference after she presented to him an official letter from the Premier of Australia highly commending her work. "You had better return to Australia."

Engulfed with despair at this reception she was about to return to her native Australia when unofficial recognition of the merit of her treatment won her an appointment as Special Guest Instructor on the staff of the University of Minnesota and the people of that state gave her a home and a big hospital—the Elizabeth Kenny Institute—in which to continue her work.

Although medical societies affiliated with the American Medical Association have endorsed the Sister Kenny method of treating infantile paralysis, anc. part of the treatment is even used at the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, of which O'Connor is president, the National Foundation has denied Sister Kenny any of the millions for further research, she charges.

Commenting on the blocking of a Congressional inquiry which she sponsored, Representative O'Toole said:

"I knew that such an inquiry would prove Sister Kenny, who unfortunately isn't an M.D., has the only successful treatment for infantile paralysis in all the world.

"But some of the most powerful forces in the United States threw their weight against such an investigation—weight used right up to the top. We were up against a stone wall, and, but, and I so told Sister Kenny."

FSC Grads Holding Promising Positions In New York City

Among the many alumnae of Florida State College quite a few have recently found promising positions in New York.

Elizabeth McFarland, a graduate of last year and former editor of the Distaff, is now poetry editor of "The Scholastic." This magazine is used in high schools and colleges throughout the country.

Graduating two years ago as editor of the Flambeau, Mildred Hinston is now a member of the editorial staff of Prentice Hall, New York book publishers.

Jo Ann Carrol, who also graduated last year, holds a position with the Botanical Gardens.

Mantie Theophalides is affiliated with the New York bureau of the London Daily Mail. Mantie graduated from FSC in 1943.

Another alumnae who continued her college work it an occupational degree is Carrie Stevens. Promiinent in the college plays while in school, Cherie has recently been with the New York production "Stage Door."

Dorothy Dunbar several years ago a graduate of FSC is at the present on the staff of the New York Times.

Mildred Zindler, a former artist, is now continuing her study of art in New York.

Editor of the Distaff a few years ago, Margaret Hall has recently been employed by the Office of Censorship.

Also a holder of the FSC diploma is Marian Conner. While in school she took an interest in radio work and is now engaged in that field at Radio City.

BSU Sends 66 Girls To State Convention

The State Baptist Student Union convention is meeting today through Sunday in Gainesville with seven Florida colleges and universities represented, including 66 girls from the local BSU. The theme of the convention is Christ, the Imperative.

A fellowship group gathering has been planned for 10:30 this morning of the week-end. Students from each college will present a talent at this time. Miss Mildred, state social director, will have charge of this meeting and will also be in charge of the banquet Saturday night.

Scheduled for Saturday will include a council demonstration program for the girls and a talk by Margaret Winton in charge, a gathering of all conferees that afternoon at which time Jimmy Sorrows will give a vocal solo, and a banquet is planned for Saturday night. Lila Lee Rentz is to be the guest speaker at this occasion. The theme of the banquet is to be "World Brotherhood."

Miss Ruth James, Baptist student director at FSC, is in charge of the conference Sunday school. The week-end activities will close with Sunday morning worship.

Library Exhibits Versions of Bible

"National Bible Week," October 15-21, was the week's library exhibit.

In the glass case in the center of the vestibule of the library were various versions of the Bible which are housed in the library.

The versions included: "The Living Bible," edited by Polton Hall, which gives the whole Bible in its fewest words; "The Modern Reader's Bible" presented in the modern literary form and edited by Richard G Moulton; "Chain-Reference Bible." Thomson's Chain Reference Bible; "The Cyclopedia by Frank Charles Thompson" and the "Holy Bible" translated out of the original tongues and with the authorized King James the Furst: "The Holy Bible" containing the Old and the New Testaments Diglott Version in Latin Vulgate; and "The Bible," an American standard edition of the Old and the New Testament translated by J M Powis Smith and Edgar J Goodspeed.

There is also a book which contains facsimile leaves from the Gutenberg Bible.

A poster on the bulletin board urged the reading of Betty Wells every day as a "fountain of strength" and a "source of inspiration."

Twin Troubles

fred and Virginia Anthony of Palm Beach, and the Johnson twins from Quincy, Betty Wells and Marian.

Being a double has its humorous aspects as well as its puzzling ones. The Pinchers told of the embarrassment when a friend from Duke University came to visit Dorothy. It had been two years since she had last seen her, and his arrival she eagerly opened the door and gave him the walk nonchalantly by and hug her sister Dora.

Another unsuspecting male also fell victim in a plan of Myra and Moira Lang. Myra had made the date and although the boy had been with her on previous occasions he never knew he was dating the other twin, Moira. The confusing conversation involved can easily be imagined.

All the girls claim that teachers are more lenient and are forever confusing them. They always try to speak to every second person them, but if some day in return for a hearty "Hello" you receive a puzzled look, you know that a friend — it is just another ball game.

Shape of Florida Is Idea for House

In the "Letters to the Editors" column in the October 1 issue of the Life magazine Dr Raymond Bellamy, professor of sociology, suggested a floor plan for a house built in the shape of the state of Florida, similar to the idea submitted in an earlier issue in regard to the state of Texas.

The house is a one-story elongated building with the rooms fitted into the shape of the state of Florida. The laundry and utility room, garage and kitchen run from west to east across the northern part of the state. The dining room, combined living room and bedroom, another bedroom, and a playroom follow in line down to the end of the peninsula. A large court for the bedroom fills in the irregularly shaped tip of the state. There are doors entering from points at Miami, Tampa, St Augustine, and Jacksonville. The idea originated out into Georgia and into Pensacola harbor. The shape of the state of North Carolina prohibits provisions for an overhang for a shade.

Evens Oust Odd

Remembering that Evens had no freshmen this year, the directors of Even demonstration were surprised to see one girl at tryouts who was definitely an upper lever. She had retried out for many of the parts and on the dances, having had even worked out her own routine.

Spotting her as promising material, the girl in charge asked for her name and classification. When she girl said she was a freshman, the director was fearful, but the pursued the point further asking her if perhaps she was a third quarter freshman.

"No, I'm just a freshman," answed the girl. So they tell her that freshmen are Odds and that she needed to be in Even demonstration!

Sociologists Glean New Ideas From Recent Experiences

The members of the sociology department have returned to the campus with new ideas and experiences that they have gathered through their various activities during the summer.

Mrs Margaret C Bristol, assistant professor of sociology, attended the workshop in social work at the Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio in early June. In connection with the Inca Museum on campus, Dr Raymond Bellamy, professor of sociology, visited the Heye Foundation in New York City in early July. Dr Bellamy was selecting certain relics and artifacts from the Heye collection which were to be received in exhange for some Inca pieces. The first shipment of artifacts have already arrived, it contains pottery and worked shells found in Florida Indian mounds.

While in New York Dr Bellamy was the guest of Mr and Mrs Victor Carter, the donors of the Inca collection. Former student of Dr Bellamy's acted as principal guides on the research into night-club life while in New York City.

Immediately after V-J day, Coyle E Moore, professor of sociology and director of social work, and some of his friends from Jacksonville, Plants and Moorersville, North Carolina departed for a Canadian trip. Professor Moore stopped at various Indian mounds around Cairo, Illinois and made observations of corn and grain farming in Iowa, the Dakotas, and the provinces of Manitoba and Saskatchewan. He was in Canada for fifteen days, and he has been reading his notes as well stories of funny incidents that happened to the party on the trip.

Miss Caroline Blue, assistant professor of sociology, taught at the University of Alabama during the summer quarter.

Odd and Even Leaders See Optimistic Future

Practices for four Odd-Even sponsor, are continuing to run on schedule with a hopeful outlook expressed by leaders of the respective teams.

Soccer and hockey leaders are getting new bursts of team energy with the arrival of cold weather to add to their optimistic outlook for the Odd-Even sport season.

The hockey teams, coached by the team sponsors, Miss Calliope Pipalias, Miss Henrietta Greenberg and Miss Margaret Shannon, are playing demonstration games every Friday to review fundamentals and rules. Evelyn Stuckey, Even leader and Nita Nord, Odd leader, are both expecting good scorings from their teams. Evelyn says that all the Evens are encouraged playing having participated in Odd-Even and class games last year. Enough experienced Odds came out to form a viable team, and the freshmen players are capable and eager, stated Nita.

Catherine Gallagher, Even soccer manager and Mimi Fox, coach for the Even team, is saying that her hopes for a Thanksgiving victory are well-grounded. Fury players turned out for practice Friday and the Evens are working on new plays.

Odd prospects were strengthened by a turnout of 60 players Friday. Leader Virginia Polmer stated that practice games between the two teams will be under consideration next week.

Neither Priscilla Clark, Odd leader, nor Carolyn Bourland, Even leader, of archery would make any predictions as to her respective team's prospect for the future, but both will have good material to choose from, they stated. Both Odds and Evens are now practicing regularly and approximately 25 Evens have signed up for practice.

Modern dance practices continued as both Odds and Evens began work for the shadow of approaching Thanksgiving games. Enthusiasm was high amongst the freshmen, 54 of whom have signed up for modern dance. Alice Taft, Odd leader, said, "I think that this is the largest number that I've heard of and we should surely have a good team this year." Wheeler, Even leader, indicated that the Evens, although at present still working on technique, would soon start on their main dance.

Life Saving Corps Entertains Freshmen

Activities Are in Full Sway; Classes Meet Monday

As a part of its initial activities for the new school year, Life Saving Corps is planning a splash party for prospective freshman members of the Corps. I is to be given this evening at 7:30 in the college pool, and the agenda of entertainment will be a short program to be presented by members, water games to be played by all, and refreshments to be served afterwards at the Sweet Shop.

Committees and their chairmen are as follows: Sweep Shop committee, Marjorie Holm; games committee, Anne Horne; comedy committee, Joyce Carre and Nancy MacSwearis; and invitation and decoration committee, Margaret Ann Shackleford.

Senior Life Saving classes begin on Monday night under the instruction of Gladys "Skooks" Lester, president of Life Saving Corps, and Anna Moore with Miss Margaret Stanton as faculty supervisor. Twenty-eight students were enrolled. Those who successfully complete this course will be qualified to serve as guards in the college pool and in any other bathing areas where life guards are needed.

The purpose of the Red Cross in sponsoring these classes is to promote safety in the water for all persons, and to teach such person to save his own life and the lives of others.

Mr Zubrand, Red Cross field representative, from Jacksonville, will be at the college during November to instruct in several Red Cross activities.

The freshman orientation clinic in swimming began on Monday and those signing up as guards or instructors for these classes are reminded of their duties in these capacities.

A business meeting of the Life Saving Corps will be held this week, the exact date to be announced later. The business of the meeting will be the elction of an assistant secretary from the freshman members of the Corps and the discussion of other miscellaneous business.

Let's Dance

Coullion club, an organization composed of the acknowledged good dancers of Florida State College is conducting "Bee" every night in the Student Alumnae building it was announced by Barbara Hazard, president.

Members of the club are looking for students who can lead and follow well at prospective tapees.

One of President Truman's favorite hobbies is to peruse old stamps having to do with the duties of the President of the United States, according to the October issue of Cosmopolitan magazine. One he unearthed recently for states that the President shall fix the fees of all fortune tellers in the Panama Canal Zone.

Above is pictured Florida State College's Westcott building. It harbors classrooms, offices, the post office, college bank book store and numerous other activities vital to the running of a college.

Exchange of Students Urged As U. S. Good Neighbor Aid

Exchange of students between the United States and other countries will go a long way in the post-war world toward cementing good will between this and other nations, in the opinion of leading educators.

Top experts in international relations also agree that to young Americans studying abroad and to foreign students rounding out their educations in the United States will fall much of the responsibility of educating the peoples of the world about one another, according to an article in the October issue of Good Housekeeping magazine.

These international experts seem to feel that heretofore the movies have presented distorted pictures of American life; that diplomats never meet the common people of other nations, and that tourists are too busy hitting the points of interest to bother much about improving relations between the United States and other nations.

Students are admirably fitted to serve as emissaries of good will, is the opinion of Dr. I. L. Kandel of Teachers College, Columbia University, who says:

Students carry with them few prejudices and preconceived notions. They examine a country, a culture, and a people different from their own with open, inquiring minds. If sufficiently mature and if selected by rigid standards from outstanding institutions of learning, even though thousands of miles removed from the restraining influences of home, most students deport themselves, both in and out of the classroom, in a manner to reflect credit on their nation of origin."

THE RECORD RACK . . . . .

The Fall college term, along with new classes, new clothes and the present crop of fresh faces around the campus, also has brought with it a big backlog of the latest record releases which may have been missed during the summer months. Now's the time to stock up a stack of discs to while away the winter nights along fraternity row. And there's plenty to choose from!

Have you kept up during vacation on the new Ellington discs? The Duke, as top form, has released a pair of platters for RCA Victor that display his superb musicianship to the best advantage. "Every Hour On the Hour" is a typical Ellington slow blues tune with a haunting melody that gets an expert treatment from each man in the band. There's an irresistible Johnny Hodges sax solo with a beautifully phrased vocal by Al Hibbler as well on this outstanding release. "Time's A Wastin'," the flipover, is a torrid excursion into the hardcore groove the boys in the band scorch the shellac with searing brass and plenty of solid rhythm. Another disclaimer by the RCA Victor Ellingtonia that deserves special mention is "Ottn, Make Them Roll Their Eyeballs" which has a catchy rhythmic pattern that lingers on long after the disc has stoped spinning. It's a really original and unique novelty number. The reverse side, "Everything But You," is still another blues song in the best Ellington manner with an effective vocal by Joya Sherrill.

Vaughn Monroe has been keeping the turntables revolving at a rapid pace with some fresh new RCA Victor releases in the most tuneful Monroe manner. "Something Sentimental" bids fair to repeat the success of Vaughn's earlier outstanding hit, "Ghost Of Yesterday." Said It Again." The maestro and The Norton Sisters have a colorful lyric pattern to swaying dance tempo. It's platter-mate, "Why Don't You Look Me Over Again By Chi-Chi Hotcha Watcha." is a contagious novelty played at a lively jump tempo. A scorchy vocal highlights this amusing novelty. Vaughn also gives Rossy Carmichael's trick new ditty, "No More Trouiours L'Amour." a solid performance. T h e Carmichael tune is the droll musical picture of a soldier's short and not too happy leave. The turnover, "The Story of Two Clarinetes," is a sad and sentimental tale of a broken romance. Both of these numbers are on the top head of Monroe's current RCA Victor offerings.

Another bandleader out during the summer with a strong batch of current releases due now to whirl merrily on the phonos and juke boxes is Sammy Kaye, on the market with his first RCA Victor album, "Stephen Foster Favorites." The beloved old tunes are dressed in delightfully modern harmonic patterns which brilliantly showcase their sentimental charm. A typically melodious "Swing and Sway" single from the popular Kaye baton is "Promises" coupled with "I'll Be Walkin' With My Honey." It's smooth and mellow Kaye styling with delightful vocals by Billy Williams and Nancy Norman.

There's another RCA Victor release out of the Tommy Dorsey discing of Pine Top Smith's immortal "Boogie Woogie." It's the third for his classic rendition and still the supply can't meet the demand. Otte listening gives the answer. The beat is contagious. It's coupled with a lovely new ballad, "There You Go," featuring Jo Stafford and the romantic voice of Stuart Foster. The Dee's new orchestral version of "Hong Kong Blues" also is a natural for spell-binding listening on RCA Victor's black label. On the reverse of this oriental excursion, The Sentimental Gentleman grieves out with the sweet as only he can on "You Came Along," a beautiful love song superbly showcased in fine Dorsey style.

An interesting new voice on the vocal horizon is that of Betty Jane Bonney. A session with her newest RCA Victor release, "Ho Hum" and "I Can Make You Love Me," will show what a distinctive singing style this attractive young thrush has. It's warm, appealing and intimate charm will make it a prize possession in any dorm.

Two new tunes with unusually appealing melodies, "That's For Me" and "Tomorrow," are played to perfection by Artie Shaw and his band on RCA Victor.

Chapel Hill Meets Women Vet Needs

GREENSBORO, N C. (U P)—To meet the needs of women veterans, the faculty of The Woman's College of the University of North Carolina has set up a Veterans' Education committee, approved certain modification of courses, and provided for a committee on curriculum problems, looking toward further changes.

Important in the plans for meeting the needs of service women is the decision to allow nurses of the army and navy medical corps to obtain a college degree by taking two years of college work, in addition to the nurses' training already received.

It is recommended that this also apply to graduate nurses of approved hospitals who have carried on their profession on the home front during the war, but that in recognizing an obligation to public health nurses, the face the probability of being required to obtain college degrees.

Other possible curriculum changes are the setting up of special pharmacherapy, counseling and recreation courses for women veterans and placing first year foreign language courses on a six day-a-week basis to enable students to begin the entire language requirement in one year.

The Veterans' Education committee is charged with dealing "with all problems relating to the academic placement of veterans, psychological testing, academic and social advising;" with publicizing the program, and with recommending further curriculum changes to meet the needs and interests of women veterans.

The committee on curricular problems will consist of a faculty committee of 20 members, one to be elected by each of the 20 major departments, and a student advisory committee of like number and representation, to be chosen by students majoring in the departments. Each division shall elect a steering committee of five members to coordinate findings and recommendations for the larger committee.

Intramurals Open With Basketball

The 1945 intramural basketball season opened Monday afternoon when the Delta Delta Delta's won over the Alpha Delta Pi's; the Chi Omega's over the Kappa Alpha Theta's; Bryan Hall over Brown and Hall; and Reynolds Hall over the Village.

Tuesday afternoon the games were resumed as the Zeta Tau Alpha's eliminated the Pi Beta Phi's; the Phi Mu's eliminated the Kappa Delta's; Gilchrist Hall eliminated Jennie Murphree Hall; and the Alpha Chi Omega's and the Delta Phi Epsilon's fought to a tie.

The rivalry stepped up a notch Wednesday afternoon with the Zeta Tau Alpha's defeating the Alpha Gamma Delta's, 10-8; the Delta Delta Delta's defeating the Chi Omega's, 11-10; the Delta Zeta's defeating the Sigma K ppa's 13-6; and Reynolds Hall defeating Bryan Hall, 15-7.

Yesterday the competition gained momentum when the Delta Zeta's were triumphant over the Delta Phi Epsilon's 32-4; the Phi Mu's over the Alpha Chi Omega's, 18-8; Gilchrist over the Zeta Tau Alpha's, 31-9; Reynolds over the Delta Delta Delta's, 20-14.

The games will continue today and Monday the finals being played at 4:30.

School Is Moved

Florida High School has been moved from the Demonstration School to Leon High School according to Dr. R. L. Goulding, superintendent of the Demonstration School. Dr Goulding stated that the reason for this was the inability to secure a full and sufficient faculty and the lack of prospect for obtaining one in the near future. The resumption of the high school program will be the acquisition of a complete faculty. Student teachers will now serve in Leon High School and other high schools in the county.

New Jr Officers

Sara Ellen Glenn, Juanita Nord, and Juanita Bowles were elected yesterday to fill the junior class offices of Senate representative, secretary and parliamentarian, respectively, according to the returns of the election held in lower Westcott.

Mary Lou Norwood was elected Chairman of the Junior Mirasvele in the primaries on Tuesday.

INSIDE CGA

ANN CAROLYN ALLISON

Ten students holding ten different offices make up your Executive Council of CGA. This is the group which is the definite link between faculty and students. Because there are so many things which need to be done because it is very easy to fall into the state of lethargy when doing the routine business of an office, we have set up certain aims for this school year. Of necessity they must be general in scope and form.

First of all, to promote a spirit of unity over our entire campus will be our aim. Secondly, we hope to make each student feel a part of the college government through active participation in its various agencies, and to present the Honor Code as a vital part of college living.

To make Executive Council a channel through which the views of both faculty and students may be coordinated and to make the student body conscious of the fact that we are all citizens of the world as well as members of this college community will be another aim.

We think it is important to work closely with the Flambeau in maintaining an informed student body in order to carry out these objectives.

We intend to improve our student government by exchanging ideas with other members of the following organizations: National Student Federation of America, Student Interculegiate Association of Student Government, and Florida Student Government Association.

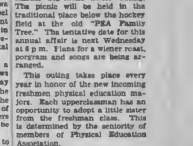
To realize at all times that each member of the student body is an individual is all one of our constant aims.

It seems to be that these objectives cover most of the phases of our campus life. It is a challenge to realize that here are over two thousand people, each possessing individual personality and potentiality. It is inspiring, too, to realize that in all probability they will be the leaders in the local communities. They will be doing that or failing the State and its people for the trust it has placed in their education.

Your officers then can only strive to carry on their activities in such a way as to give to you a satisfaction and a sense of achievement in your growth here —not only in scholarship—but in fairness, participation, and service.

PEA to Hold Meet October 22 at 7:30

Will Elect New Treasurer; Plan Annual Outing



There will be a business meetine of the Physical Education Association Monday, October 22, at 7:30 p m, Evelyn Stucky, president, has announced.

The main purpose of the meeting is to elect a treasurer to replace Candy Jones, who has resigned. There are also several other business matters to be settled, including final plans for the annual Big-Little Sister outing. The picnic will be held in the traditional place below the hockey field at the old "PEA Family Tree." The tentative date for this annual affair is next Wednesday at 5 p m. Plans for a wiener roast, scavenger and scores are being arranged.

This outing takes place every year in honor of the new incoming freshmen physical education majors. Each upperclassman has an opportunity to adopt a little sister from the freshman class. This is determined by the sensitivity of members of Physical Education Association.

Plans for a trip to Camp Flastacowo will also be discussed Monday night at the meeting.

Behind Your Bonds
Lies the Might of America

LIVESTOCK IN KANSAS

Despite the general opinion, livestock, and not wheat, is a chief source of income in Kansas. That state also has the largest broom corn market and is first among all states for flour milling, averaging more than 13,000,000 barrels each year. Such diversified production helps build the wealth of a great nation. The Bonds of that nation are the world's greatest investment.

SPIRIT OF THE WEEK

● EVALUATE, THEN ELIMINATE

Pencils have been sharpened, tennis racquets have new strings, books are dusted off, our hours are reserved at a Soda Shop table—our intentions for a successful college year are good, but our actions must be carefully watched for assurance that we keep on an even keel.

"Join, join, join," cry the organizations. "Come, come, come," beckon the bulletin boards. "Study, study, study," warn the teachers. "Play, have a big time," friends cajole. At the beginning of the school year this "atmosphere" is predominent on most campuses.

Before we sign for any irons in the fire it is wise to stand a safe distance from all the luring activities, gaze upon them, pick out the ones which are the most interesting and beneficial to us, and then weigh them mentally to be sure they don't upset the balance of the duties and responsibilities of our schedule cards.

A true living education is designed to guide us to build satisfactory lives—a life which gives the individual happiness and at the same time is beneficial to society. Satisfactory lives do not stop with the earning of a livelihood; education serves a far more important purpose than merely teaching a vocation. Education must help students to mold a clear-cut philosophy of life, warn us to be skeptical of stories we hear and read—not to be "taken-in" by everything that comes along; and to self reliance of thought which is essential equipment for citizens of a democracy.

This goal, which every one of us should want to attain, can not be reached by attending an interminable series of meetings, although some are helpful and enjoyable. Sitting in the library day after day with books piled high around us will not take us up to the third step. A schedule which contains so many physical activities that there is no energy left to devote to thought is certainly not reaching the goal. A system in which there is no time for hull sessions and chats with friends over a coke is not highly beneficial.

It is clear that the above examples are extreme cases, but in this way it is more easily seen that a happy medium must be established for every person. It is up to the individuals to choose from all the activities a few which she feels will be most beneficial and at the same time give her most pleasure. These should be varied enough to offer recreation and social activity, vocational training and intellectual pursuit.

The point system and organizations committee guide us, but the final analysis is up to the student herself to navigate her affairs as to get the most personal satisfaction of her college years.

● REPERCUSSION

In protest to the state of siege declared last week by Argentina's Vice-President Juan Peron, 30,000 university students left their campuses into battle fields for freedom and democracy. Early in the incident classes were disbanded, but as arrests increased and freedom of speech and assembly were curtailed, a need for stronger protest was seen. Declaring a retaliation strike the students of six universities joined together against the counter-blows of police, drawing the eye of the continent once again to the military regime of Argentina.

At the University of La Plata, students turned 20 blocks in the center of town into a battleground, blocking out the area by smashing streetlights and tripping up mounted police with low-strung wires. Strikers on campus barricaded the university buildings, while engineering students broadcast a denunciation of the military regime over improvised transmitters. As police and firemen rushed the buildings with reinforcements, the students were slowly driven from classroom to classroom by high-pressure fire hoses and tear gas. Throwing benches, chairs, blackboards —anything with which to defend themselves—strikers were finally overcome in the central hall and, with some 50 injured and one killed, were forced to yield their positions.

At the University of Buenos Aires, a similar struggle was under way. When barricaded buildings were surrounded by police, cutting off communications and supply, small groups of women sneaked through guard lines to throw packages of food and cigarettes in the windows and to replace with oranges the disconnected water supply. Repeated attacks on the strike-bound campus were made and finally police succeeded in the capture of some 2,000 students, who were sent to prisons throughout the city. Coed participants were housed in the filthy Asilo San Miguel, a prison for prostitutes and degenerates, from which several inmates had to be released to make room for strikers.

The case of Argentina is an extreme one. It is not often that students are called upon to defend physically the rights and freedoms which their education demands. But this is important in its evidence that no college or university is an entity within itself, a tiny community which follows its secluded way of life when disaster threatens on every side. It is important in its evidence of student realization of the need to fight for rights and freedom and student power when joined together against a common enemy.

● OR FOREVER HOLD YOUR PEACE

"Or forever hold your peace" is a phrase most often connected with white tulle and orange blossoms, which, when it is spoken, gives the disappointed swain his last legal opportunity to recapture his love without divorce proceedings. Here on campus, however, it means that anyone, either student or faculty member, with a desire to get certain sentiments off his chest, has a medium for doing so.

"Or Forever Hold Your Peace" has been a regular column of the Flambeau for this purpose. Freshmen, perhaps, are unaware that it exists, but it does and all contributions are welcomed and accepted regardless of content provided that each letter is signed by its author. It is not a column for the expression of opinion for any one particular student group, and it is not a Flambeau-solicited feature.

With the advent of the quarter system, changes in the cut system, and other innovation in procedures connected with our behavior, there are undoubtedly diversified opinions and questions which still remain unanswered in our minds. It is the purpose of this column to air views and perhaps gain explanations.

The right to express personal opinion on matters concerning us and others like you is yours. You are, or should be, vitally concerned with conditions and situations that exist, because no one can be more directly affected by the aforementioned than you. If changes are necessary or desirable in our community-life here, it is the responsibility of each member of the community to make their opinion known. This column, we believe, offers the opportunity for you to reach the largest number of people with what you think or feel.

There is also another means for expressing your ideas: talking to your representatives to Student Senate. You elected them to represent you. We have only urge you to utilize both of these methods, so let's hear what you have to say.

We express deepest sympathy to Dr and Mrs Doak S Campbell in the recent loss of Mrs Campbell's father, Mr W E Simmons, a resident of Tyrone, Miss.

● FROM ME TO Y'ALL

SHARPIE

Do you have a problem? This department is prepared to give you helpful advice on all difficulties concerning affairs of love, finance, etiquette, studies, and we even promise wealthy for global planners. Just address your letters to Sharpie and put them in the Flambeau box on the campus Mail. Prumpt replies can be expected at no cost or expense to you.

This week's question sent in by an evidently confused and misguided young lassie is simply signed "Bewildered".

Her letter reads, "Dear Sharpie, My problem is that the old cut system is abolished and that we can cut as often as we like, I suppose. Frankly, I am worried. If I do cut classes, will I be expelled?

Poor Bewildered! If you are a freshman, go to classes. If you are an upperclassman, you are in the same position we are. Perhaps the rule should read, "cut as your own risk". When you find out the answer to this one, let us know. We hope we have helped you solve this problem

A girl who must be a BWOC because she is always lesterProminent" asks, "How can find time to do everything I'm supposed to do?"

This is a hard question to answer. First of all, we feel that we should appreciate your honest information. If our readers will not be frank with us how can we help them? This advice department cannot imagine why you lament means when she says she has a lot to do. None of the teachers on campus are prone to assignments, there is plenty of time in the evenings for study, and incidentals and even the most popular girls can find time to record in an hour or so each month! We don't understand inconsistency in a statement like an unusual case.

A freshman wants to know if the following rumor she heard is true Dr Richards was busily engaged with a needle up the mud beside his car when a sophomore boy said, "Struck in the mud?" she asked.

"Oh no!" replied Dr Richards cheerfully, "I'm just here for air and I'm digging a grave for it."

We may have helped you solve our discredit rumors. It so happens that the only statement we can make at this time is that it could have happened.

College Comments . . .

There are those lucky people who have returned veterans roaming around their campus this year and those who haven't. From a recent write-up in the Kernel, the University of Kentucky has enrolled about 400 ex-servicemen, and according to the Campus Chat the vets at North Texas State Teachers College have taken over the presidencies which the co-eds efficiently handled during the "wartime days." Aren't we fortunate—no male competition.

(CPS) Weep no more, coeds—here's good news! College women have nothing to fear, certainly not the prospect of being old maids. A survey made by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company proves that the smarter a woman becomes, the more likely she is to become a so-called "good match." The survey didn't go into details of how to catch the males; undoubtedly they feel that college women know the bows and wherefores of the chase. Let us hope so.

It seems that PSC is not the only college that is adding courses to an already specialized curriculum. Texas State College for Women announced their curriculum expansion included majors in occupational therapy, recreation, and recreational administration. Something new in education . . . now college credit is given one for learning how to recreate.

Here's what: Van Johnson has been asked to judge Alabamian pulchritude for the selection of beauties for the forthcoming Coralle, the University of Alabama's yearbook.

One boy: Describe the new bathing suits.

Big Sister: When properly filled, it is a garment with no hooks but plenty of eyes.

Esther Williams, you know, the girl who swims without getting a single hair out of place, was chosen as Grid Queen of Los Angeles City College. We can imagine she looked almost as good when she appeared on the football field as she did when she taught Van Johnson how to swim in five easy lessons. Incidentally, Esther is a former student of City College.

The Students Speak...

BARBARA WICKAM

Have you noticed how many people there have been in class even with the week-end at G'ville and all the colds? And from the general concensus of opinion this will keep up—either from fear or from interest in the subjects. Upperclassmen don't seem to be inclined to cut and the freshmen can't, so the new cut system seems to be working.

This week the question was "Do You Think There Will Be More Or Less Cutting Under The New System And Why?" You can judge for yourself the reactions.

PEGGY LOU THOMAS, senior

"I think the new system will stop so much cutting because it puts the responsibility on the students and I believe that the students will accept it."

MARGERY POTTER, junior

"I believe that there will be less cutting because now you always know what the teacher will do if you miss class."

GEORGIA MARIAN JAECKEL, sophomore

"There will be less at first because the students don't understand it and don't yet know how they stand under it."

BETTY HUNTER, junior

"It is a very democratic way to abolish the cut system. Cutting is practically abolished now because under this system it is academic suicide."

KIT LAND, senior

"I haven't quite made up my mind yet. If there is less cutting done it will be because the students are afraid to. If there is more done it may be because they haven't gotten used to the quarter system and the speeded up work and cut classes to catch up."

LILLIAN FAGAN, junior

"It will, I think, eliminate the cutting done by the people who cut only because they had a certain number of cuts."

SOPIE WHITAKER, sophomore

"The people who cut before will probably keep cutting and those who are interested in studying will continue to go to class. If people think they can get more out of college by cutting a class let them cut. I do think the system makes us more mature."

BETTY STRICKLAND, junior

"I think there will be less cutting because under the quarter system when you miss a class you miss much material."

MAGAZINE JOTTINGS

By Catherine Nollman

A Service Man Looks at the Peace

Mr Cord Meyer, Jr, who served with the Marine Corps Regiment and who was one of the two aids to Commander Stassen at the San Francisco Conference, has expressed his views on the peace in this article, which is published in the September issue of The Atlantic monthly.

Mr Meyer prefaces his discussion with the statement that "if the San Francisco Charter is to be viewed in its true perspective, it must be considered not only through the eyes of these men who have served on the battlefronts, but also from the true cost of the opportunity presented to the delegates."

"Defense" Not Enough

"It is not a sufficient explanation of the cause of war to say that aggressive undertaking causes had not existed defense would not have been necessary. Therefore, in seeking to destroy the international strife it is not sufficient merely to provide for such means, such as German and Japanese disarmament, by which the ends were achieved.

One of the basic causes of international wars, said Mr Meyer, is the fact that there is no final authority in international society. "Therefore, the only way of attempting to remain politically independent at the same time that they are becoming increasingly more economically interdependent is to resort to war, or some form of arbitration between nations each possessing the right to maintain force for its protection or the ascertainment of its desires." With this condition existing, war is inevitable".

Possible Solution

"If peace is to be at all possible," says the author, "we must abandon the fiction of absolute national states." If the truth is to prevail, subscription to sovereign law has always been the only way by which people could live together in peaceful communities. "The people living within the boundaries of a nation have a higher government the power to decide those issues that are international."

Present Situation

This international government is not accomplished by the United Nations Charter for within the Security Council, which is the agency members hold "the power of veto" over "all the major decisions", says Mr Meyer, "is yet willing to delegate any of its power to any organization over which it does not have complete executive control."

The "world police force" is, in the extreme, ineffective because it is dependent not only upon the decision of its Security Council, which is the executive Council any one of the large nations has the right to veto any action against itself or any nation which it desires to defend. The veto power not only gives the five great nations a control over the Organization which the small nations do not have, but also "evolves certain superiorities of small nations independence because the Security Council can employ their armies and territories" without their consent to the actions of enforcement.

Other of the international organizations set up by the Charter, The International Court of Justice is limited to the interpretation of treaties, to international law, and to the determination of reparations. Even on these matters it can pass its judgments only if both parties agree to submit the case to it, and then only what the Council can only recommended.

For these reasons, Mr Meyer says that "the International Organization is at present as incapable of dealing alone with the basic causes of another war as a fire extinguisher is of questioning a forest fire. The Charter relies for its success upon the willing cooperation of sovereign and independent nations." Yet, says Mr Meyer, this war is justifiable in the sense that our victory gives us the chance to continue the struggle for international reform a more equitable society and a peaceful world.

Despair would achieve nothing "We must," says the author, "support the Charter with all the maximum that is possible today. We must work for its improvement in the light of subsequent effort the Charter may yet become a workable tool for order. There are two prerequisites if government on a world level is to become an adequate reality for this many. First, there must be a clear understanding that the continuation of national egotisms is at the root of our misfortunes. Second, there must be a willingness to meet on the general principles of moral values upon which this government on a world level is to be based."

Guests Entertain Esteren Members

Esteren goats entertained the members of the club at a Hallowe'en a party at the Alpha Gamma Delta House Tuesday night. Games such as Punch and Judy show, goat songs —and a rake which measured two and a half feet by three feet with a green cauldron iced on it.

Even the rainy Wednesday night was sponsored by the goats. They are: goat president, Anne Wilderson; goat secretary, Quinby Madelyn King, Jane Lyles, Margaret Ann Hunter, Mary Ellen Guthrie Jean Koesy, Audrey Perry, Louise Sikes, Ida Lee Renix and Jimmie Moore.

Gladys Lester has been elected to the office of secretary treasurer, which is open by the resignation of Ruth Dismore from school. Sue Bennett is serving as president and Bea Weaver is vice president and goat trainer.

The goats' initiation was made their dramatic entrance at the club's meeting for the year by filing in single file to take their places as seniors in the front seats, which are the last seats in the theaters ring with "Hello Evens."

Practice Begins

Practices for color rush, a feature of the traditional rivalry between Florida State and Florida Gators Monday at 5 p m and continue every afternoon at that hour in the gymnasium, Babe Evans, F club president, announced yesterday.

The annual Thanksgiving races, when Odds and Evens vie for the privilege of hanging their colors on campus buildings, will be sponsored again, this year by F club. Following the early morning color rush, tradition has it that girls must erect the stands all building on which are hung colors of the opposing team.

In This Our Time

By Gloria Reed

The House Thursday voted in favor of a tax relief measure which, if the Senate concurs, will save individuals and business $50,000,000 in 1946. This bill passed the House after the rules committee banned any change in the bill on the floor by stating that only the amendments offered by the ways and means committee could be considered. Also before the bill, if passed by the Senate, will take 12,000,000 income tax payers off the roll. Robert A. Doughton (Dem.- N C) warns that only cheaper government can bring any further tax reductions.

Japanese Affairs

With the Russians taking an active hand, the several occupational policies in Japan are preparing for the coming midwinter elections. Meanwhile Premier Kijuro Shidehara has called approved woman suffrage, lowered the voting age from 25 to 20, disbanded the "thought police" and abolished a law under which some 400 political prisoners had been arrested during the last thirteen years.

The Gromyko mission remains the biggest mystery with American observers. Latest reports report that local leaders are awaiting the return of Japanese exiles who have been in Russia before announcing their plans. The Russian mission to Tokyo, say the Americans, will not give out any information, and in many respects will be withdrawn disappear in the Kremlin. These Americans also say that they have answered all foolish questions, since it is the policy of the United States to deal openly with her allies.

Or Forever Hold Your Peace . . .

Dear Editor:

Today as I walked through the lower hall of what used to be called the Administration building of the Florida State College for women, I saw two signs which made me shudder.

One read:

Vote now!
Booths in lower
WESCOT

The other:

Picnic Saturday
at
GAINES' woods

Now don't misunderstand me, I hold no grief against voting, and I have no objection to picnics. I think both are admirable institutions, but I protest fundamental to American Democracy. What other nation in the world knows so well how to turn voting into a picnic, with hamburgers and hot dogs on the side?

No, it is a far more serious matter that concerns me — one that goes back to the days of Jacob and Esau and the bargaining for birthrights. I refer to that of callina a person out of his right name.

Some fifty years or more ago a charming and generous gentleman became interested in the college at Tallahassee. He is much interested that in his will he would leave the school a goodly sum of money. As a consequence, several years later the Board of Control of State Institutions renamed the Administration building in his honor.

His name? Westcott. James D Westcott. Please note the surname. W E S T C O T T. N O W E S as in Wester, Weskit, or Wesley; but W E S T as in Western, Westinghouse, or Mae West N O C O T as in cot; but C O T T as in Cotton.

And then there is Dr Gamet Scholar, wit, onetime head of the department of classics and general literature at this college. How

Greek-Letter Houses Start Fall Season With New Drapes, Paint and Furniture

New drapes, fresh coats of paint, and chairs flaunting new slip covers are among rengovations at various sorority houses this fall, new girls have been busy painting, redecorating and sewing in order for the year's social season.

Drapers and paint brushes flew at the Alpha Xi Delta house as girls hung new drapes and covered blinds, waxed floors and repainted parts of the downstairs. The living room furniture now includes a new end tables and coffee tables and a new refrigerator has been added to the kitchen.

Painters at the Alpha Delta Pi house spy freshly-painted colors. Both the living room and dining room boast reupholstered furniture and new drapes. Each room has also redecorated her own room.

A water color painting of the Pi Phi lilliary now decorates the newly-painted little living room at the Alpha Chi Omega house, where the furniture exhibits new slip covers. Members have also added new curtains and pillows to the smokers and given several of the bedrooms fresh coats of paint.

New drapes have been hung at the Phi Delta house, where the juke box, living room, and house in general have been given a new coat of paint on the lawn furniture.

The Delta Phi Epsilon members painted their upstairs bedrooms and room decorations when given the "green light" by sorority officials.

Delta Zeta members furnished their own porch and new drapery and upholstery. All the floors in the house were sanded and waxed. The upstairs rooms were painted and new chairs added. The Delta Zeta house furnished them with new linen, a punch bowl, and money for a silver service.

The Kappa Alpha Theta girls have taken up their house because they were going to have a new one built. However, they did some shady and couch covering on the garter.

Also, there was very little improvement on the Kappa Delta house this summer but for a different reason. They had theirs completely redecorated the summer before.

A new porch and a partially finished lawn greeted the returning members of Phi Mu this fall as the table lamps and painted bedroom were the only interior improvements.

Pi Beta Phi sanded and waxed their floors; then added a new border for the stairs. The smoker room was re-upholstered, too.

Sigma Kappa held a contest to see which girls had designed the prettiest room for the year. The son of Aurelia Stewart, Winifred Peters, and Virginia Sapp won the contest. It was selected because the judges, various house girls, thought it both pleasing and comfortable in its arrangement and color.

Zeta Tau Alpha redecorated their entire first floor adding new flowered drapes, lace curtains and venetian blinds to the parlor as well as several table lamps and new upholstery on the furniture. Several new pictures were donated to the house by alumnae, and a large mirror is soon to be added over one of the hall tables. The color scheme is fuschia and green.

Dormitory Teas Begin This Week

The first dormitory tea were held on Wednesday afternoon from 5 to 6 in the respective dormitory parlours.

The Landis tea was under the direction of Elisabeth Ford, newly elected social chairman, whose committee of ten girls acted as hostesses. A musical program was presented during the tea.

Transfer students were honored at the Gilchrist tea which was in the charge of Ann Fleidine, the social chairman. Each transfer was presented a rose with a small name remnant attached.

Honoring the Reynolds junior counselors, a tea was held by the residence counselors of Reynolds, the Misses Allen and Donahue. Louie Illingsworth was in charge of all arrangements. Regular teas in Reynolds will begin next week.

A freshmen tea was held in Jennie Murphree under the direction of Sarah Ellen Glenn. Jane Winfield was in charge of New Hall's first tea this year. Broward's social committee has charge of all arrangements for the regular weekly tea. No teas were held this week in Bryan, the Village or the off-campus houses.

New House-Mothers For Two Sororities

New sorority house mothers are gracing the Phi Mu and Alpha Xi Delta houses this fall as the whirl of campus social life begins.

Mr. Stranger to PSC campus is Mrs Betty Webb of Baltimore, who replaced Mrs H J Caldwell as chaperon at the Phi Mu house. Previously she served for eight years as Alpha Xi Delta house mother, leaving them last year because of illness. Her daughter, the form r Miss Elizabeth Ann Webb, graduated here in 1940 and was elected permanent president of her class.

Mrs Deane Turner, new Alpha Xi Delta chaperone, is having her first social season as a house mother this year. Mrs Turner, of Fort Myers, replaces Mrs Garnett Parks.

Goats Give Party For Spirogira Girls

Spirogira goats honored the members with a party and hike to Games Woods last Friday, complete with fried chicken.

The honorary is sponsoring sings every Monday and Thursday nights in front of the freshman dining hall.

Weekly meetings of the Spirogira members are held at the Spirogira at 9:30-ish, at which time the honored members plan songs and map out campaigns against the Evens.

The officers for this year are: Franny Myers, president; Betty Schwartz, vice-president; Virginia Palmer, secretary-treasurer; and Mary White, publicity manager.

Fashion Flashes

Now that all the trunks which arrived crammed full of the latest in college fashions have been unpacked, this campus resembles a veritable style show . . . one which would do Justice even to Vogue, wiz all of its "out of this world" creations.

Smart new clothes have already made their post-victory debut and and many of them are carrying off top honors on the Florida State College campus from headscarf veil to light flash.

For the 9-to-5 routine, sweaters and skirts are still rated 1A. Smart substitutes for sweaters 'n skirts (but who wants substitutes?) are light-weight wool suits. A good wool suit is a mainstay in any collegeane's wardrobe, not only for daily campus wear but also for weekend frolics.

Speaking of off-campus jaunts, many Tally Ja'ries, tired of higher fashion and fad clothes that go with it, left last Friday to attend the Homecoming weekend at Gainesville. With each went at least one bag jammed full of the good-looking new fall clothes considered to make a hit at any house. For the Saturday morning game, during plenty of undeniably smart wool suits were in evidence, as well as some quite unique wool dresses in enchanting colors. Later, for the buming around and the parties and dancing to Dean Hudson's dreamy music, that "school-girl" look was shot with a bang as the partying-around clothes made their debut. With glamour the order, dressy creepe plus sparkle are just the thing.

For those who remain within the ivied walls during the weekend, sweaters and skirts still lead the list of favorites. Matched ensembles in off-shades are exceptionally smart this year, as are combinations of bright vivid shades. Necklaces of pearls or blosses add the finishing touch to any suit.

Round of Pledge Banquets and Parties Highlight Social Calendar This Week

Banquets and parties are still being given in honor of the pledges of the 14 sororities on campus.

Alpha Delta Pi honored its new pledges on October 10, with a banquet at the Cherokee Hotel. Mary Stallings, chapter president, was toastmistress of ceremonies, and the pledges gave short impromptu skits. Alpha Delta Pi is also planning an after dinner coffee this Sunday night.

Breakfast at the Three Torches Tea Room was given in honor of the Alpha Chi Omega pledges last Sunday morning. Following the breakfast, welcoming speech et were made by Mrs J W Harrell, Alpha Chi house mother; Jane Gaertner, and Gloria Wells. In response to these speeches, Joyce Cain spoke on behalf of the pledges.

Plans are under way for a Delta Zeta fall pledge banquet to be held Monday night at the Cherokee Hotel.

An afternoon tea was held last Sunday at the Pi Beta Phi house. Enjo Gerry, Betty Simmons, Ann Allen, and Olive Fleming were on the arrangement committee. Forty guests attended the tea, including several service men. Entertainment features were a song by Pat Crosby and Pi Phi songs by the group.

Zeta Tau Alpha honored its pledges with a banquet last Friday night at the Cherokee Hotel. While eaters made up the table centerpiece, and each pledge was presented with a box of ZTA stationery. After the banquet, Jackie Belcher led the group in singing some of the favorite chapter songs. Guests attending the banquet were Miss Vella Cleveland, Comptroller and Mrs Lee, Mrs Anna Jane Macklin, and Mr and Mrs H S Bover.

Cardinal and straw-colored flowers decorated the Cherokee Hotel last Monday night when Chi Omega honored its new pledges with a banquet there. Entertainment was presented in the form of poems and rhymes by Louise Lake, Nell McNell, and Nell Clark. Mrs Frank Miller, faculty adviser, Mrs O S Lanier, house mother, Dolly Sutton, pledge mother, and Patty Hill, president, addressed the pledges. A gift was presented to Mrs Lanier, who has been Chi Omega's house mother for 20 years. Appropriate speeches were given in honor of Mrs Lanier and her 20 years' service by Patty Hill and Nell Clark. Town guests present were Mrs Frank Miller, Mrs George Lewis, Mrs Harold Richards, Mrs Robert Jenkins, Mrs W J Oven, Mrs Hill Lace, and Mrs D A Avant. There will also be an after dinner coffee for the pledges and their guest at the Chi Omega house Sunday night.

Alpha Xi Delta members are making plans for their pledge banquet to be held on October 27.

The Kappa Delta terrace was the scene of a pledge supper last Saturday night in honor of new KD pledges. Last night was another eventful night for the KD's as they gathered at the Florida Hotel for their banquet. A toast was presented to each pledge by her "big sister," and favors of KD stationery were given to all the pledges. Jeanne Chapman is the social chairman, and Lois Wilson was in charge of the program at the banquet.

Post-War Planning Is Address Topic

"Post-War Planning of the Florida State Improvement Commission" was the topic of an address by Mr J W Snyder of the commission at the opening meeting of the American Association of University Women for the 1945-46 season, held last night in the club-room of the Student-Alumnae building. In presenting this address, Mr Snyder gave expression to the branch's theme for the current year, "The Human and Natural Resources of Florida."

Mrs Mabel Hodgson, president, presided over the meeting, to which all college graduates eligible to AAUW membership were invited. Miss Marjorie Judy, vice-president, was in charge of the program. A social hour followed the address, planned by Miss Maud Britt, social chairman.

Girls, Alumni Invade G'ville

"If Mohammed won't go to the mountain, then take the mountain to Mohammed" was put into practice last week-end as girls from Florida State College went to "coeducation" since coeducation couldn't come to them.

The occasion was Homecoming and the Florida-Vanderbilt game at University of Florida. An added attraction this year in the fraternity houses was decorations, which were not allowed during the war. "Welcome Alumni" signs decked all available doors and walls and varied life-size paper figures adorned "frat" lawns. One of the most original featured a Gator swallowing a little fat boy, Vandy, and Vandy's leg was seen kicking helplessly (he was electrically wired).

Friday night the band of Dean Hudson, who was formerly a Gator, played for the dance held in the gymnasium and afterwards there were smaller dances in each "frat" house.

Tra dances in the houses were featured Saturday afternoon, most of the houses served supper Saturday evening.

Fall was in the game. During the ball Florida's band paraded and six "coed-ettes" danced by, only in uniform coats and shorts —real shorts—marched up one side of the field and down the other playing "The Old Gray Mare Ain't What She Used to Be." Also during the half, one of the guest speakers pulled a prize game by saying that Florida co-ed was gathered to watch University of Miami—the team that went up caused him to cough and apologize hastily.

After the game tha "frat" boys again had dances and the weekend ended officially.

The girls loaded into busses reluctantly Sunday, tired but more happy than sad, and with fraternity songs all the way to FSC.

Sorority Chit-Chat . . .

Coffees, weiner roasts, and anniversary celebrations are the most popular entertainments at sorority houses this week as the buzz of rushing and pledging has subsided.

Alpha Xi Delta plans a coffee for some friends from the college tomorrow night from 7:30 to 8:30. According to Kathleen Sides, publicity chairman, this will be an informal affair with no planned program.

Alpha Chi Omega also is planning a coffee for their patrons and patronesses this week-end—Saturday at five. Margaret Williams, social chairman, will be in charge of all arrangements. Also, Alpha Chi Omega's celebrated their Founders Day Monday with a joint meeting of pledges and actives. Marjorie Austin, who was in charge of the program, told of the history and founding of the sorority. Those participating in the program were Barbara Wickham, Jessie McCalla, and Margaret Johnson.

Alpha Gamma Delta will have an informal party Saturday night for members and their friends. Katherine Rogers, assistant social chairman, will be in charge of all arrangements. Then Sunday morning the Alpha Gam pledges will prepare their first breakfast for the active members. They will continue this practice until their pledge period is over.

Delta Phi Epsilon celebrated the twentieth birthday of their chapter last Monday night with a "birthday party" arranged by Eileen Murinson. After the serving of a birthday cake, the history of the chapter was read.

A Hallowe'en Party is being planned for October 27 by Kappa Alpha Theta. Also, the Thetas are having a supper Sunday night for the actives' pledges and their guests.

It was an exciting occasion for the Phi Mu's when they attended the wedding of their own Dede Stewart who married Wednesday to Lieutenant Robert E Jacoby at Dale Mabry Field.

Phi Mu also elected Hazel Clarkston as their president at a meeting Tuesday. Other officers elected at the same time were: Claire Bice, vice-president; Bara Jo Woodward, secretary; and Laura Bentley, treasurer.

The Zeta Tau Alpha annual Founder's Day service was held Monday morning at the house. Following the service, the members and pledges enjoyed breakfast and sang sorority songs.

A barn yard party will be held at the Delta Zeta house tomorrow night, according to Alice Walton, publicity chairman. Guests will wear overalls or other rustic costumes and the decorations, supervised by Anne Singleton, will carry out the barnyard theme. June Padsett will head the entertainment committee and Lillian Blackwelder, the committee for planning refreshments.

Air Corps-G'Ville Date Reconversion Sweeps Campus

The familiar trek between Tally and Gainesville is on again. Maybe it's not co-education, but through the traditional lived gates of Florida State College this fall, the University boys are arriving in force.

As students return this year to swell enrollment ranks at Gainesville, "frat" pins and football jargon are again in evidence. Though lingering GI's remain, the sight of a rat-capped boy and his coterie dates is now familiar on campus.

PSC is once more football conscious, and the weekend found many girls grasping the vials of their University "brothers." Meanwhile "We are the Boys from Ole Florida" was heard "on the air" in every hall, chorused by the lasses who once hummed the "Air Corps Song."

In keeping with the new "intercollegiate" trend, fraternity pins have reappeared on Sloppy Joe's this fall and traditional orange football sweaters of the Florida Alligator era rapidly replacing army field jackets in the college girl's wardrobe. Moreover, even a few real cans now vie as headgear with the fatigue hats of last year.

Maybe Florida boys are not enrolling at Tallahassee this year, but, for the weekends at least, PSC's campus is co-educational—almost.

Freshmen to Get WAA Handbook Soon

A handbook on the Women's Athletic Association of Florida State College will be distributed to the freshmen in about two weeks according to Jo Guthrie, president of WAA. This handbook, published last year for the first time since 1928, explains WAA and the various athletic activities on campus to the freshmen.

Jo also announced that practice for color rush will begin Monday. Evens will practice on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday; and Odds on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

Practice for cheerleading began on Landis Green October 15. Practice days are the same as for color rush.

Attention should be called to the fact that swimming will be held second quarter and tennis, third, instead of as previously announced.

Correction Note

The Memoirs of Dr Edward Conradi were published by the College and not by the Alumnae Association, as stated in last week's Flambeau.

Copies of the Memoirs may be obtained by requesting them at thme Alumnae office, according to Miss Louise Gehan, director.

YWCA Service Honors Girls

Program and Drive Plans Are Getting Underway

In candle-lit Westcott auditorium, the Young Women's Christian association held its annual recognition service last night honoring this year's new members.

The ceremony, which is a nationwide YWCA procedure, will start a series of programs and drives which will be sponsored by the club for this coming year.

Dr Anna Forbes Liddell opened the program with the Invocation and Miss Daisy Parker gave the address of the hour.

Jane Gaertner, organist, accompanied the audience in various hymns, among them, "Fairest Lord Jesus," "Edmunds's "Bells Through the Trees," and "Jesus Calls Us." Joyce Carlton sang "The Lord's Prayer."

Margaret Clayton, president of the Y gave a Challenge to Members, in her welcome to new members, and this was followed by a group declaration of the YWCA purpose.

The candle lighting ceremony in which the sisters assisted new members in lighting their candles, climaxed the evening's program. The Faculty Advisory Board and the Student Cabinet lighted their candles simultaneously on the platform.

The Advisory Board then led the group from the auditorium around the fountain in front of Westcott. There the entire club joined in singing "Follow the Gleam." "Taps," which was played by Evelyn Breedlove, ended the service.

The Advisory Board is made up of ten members of the faculty. They are Dr Anna Forbes Liddell, Dr Raymond Bellamy, Dr Robert D Mailer, Dr Paul W Shatkweiler, Mr Earl Vance, Mrs. Myrtle R Johnson, Mrs Melton Ware, Miss Daisy Parker, Miss Vela Cleveland, and Miss Marguerite R Dressler.

Ushers for the evening were Jeanette Zetrouer Doris Sanford, and Mrs. Mildred Brides.

Meldrim Announces Contest Procedures

The Distaff's literary contest for freshmen, including contributions of articles, stories, and poems is now on and will not end until November 5, Winifred Meldrim, editor of the Distaff, announced.

Separate judgement will be given to each of the 3 types The emphasis in judging will be placed more on though and originality rather than technical form says the chief aims of the contest are to make freshmen aware of their literary abilities and to foster individuality, according to the editor. Winifred said. "Under this principal it does not matter if one has ever written before; what does matter is whether one has ever thought before." Any length, any style, and any form selected by the individual is acceptable according to Winifred.

Entries should be typewritten. Have contestant's name and box number on the top, and should be addressed to the Distaff in the campus mail.

Although there is no contest open to upperclassmen, contributions are accepted from them also, Winifred stated. The deadline for these is also November 5.

3 Pianists Appear On Garnet and Gold

The music editors, Anne Townsend Jere Farnsworth and Lucille Wooten, of the "Newspaper of the Air" Garnet and Gold programs played piano solos over last night's weekly radio broadcast.

Sara Norman, news editor was the announcer for the evening's program.

"Girl With Flax In Her Hair," by Claude Debussey was played by Jere Farnsworth; Anne Townsend played, "Dialogue Without Words," composed by Carl Pryer; Chopin's "Waltz Opus 42" was Lucille Wooten's selection.
